True HISTORY of ENGLAND,

FROM THE

VOL. I.

LORD BISHOP of PETERBOROUGH.

MDCCXXVIII.

TO THE QUEEN.

May it pleaſe Your Majesty,

THEY who are converſant in our Engliſh Hiſtories may well obſerve, eſpecially at this Juncture, that the Glory of our Kings in the Happineſs of their People, next to the Providence of God, and their own Royal Virtues, was much owing to the Piety and Prudence of their Royal Consorts.

Hence in many former Reigns, the Queens of England have been very Inſtrumental in promoting and ſecuring the Honour and Intereſt of their Royal Lords, the Peace and Proſperity of the whole Nation, and ſometimes the Repoſe of all Europe.

It is a Pleaſure to relate, how Helena a Britiſh Princeſs was fam'd for eſpouſing the Cauſe of Chriſtianity, and bleſſing our Iſland with the Birth of the firſt Chriſtian Emperor. How Bertha the Wife of King Ethelbert had the Honour of bringing in the Chriſtian Religion among the Saxon Infidels: How Emma the Royal Conſort of Edward the Confeſſor is celebrated for introducing Civility and Learning into the Engliſh Court, as well as for vindicating her own Honour (if Writers feign not) in the ſevereſt Tryal.

Add, that Maud a Daughter of Scotland, by her happy Marriage with King Henry I. united the Saxon and Norman Families, and was long remembred by the common People under the Style and Dignity of Mowd the Good Quene. Her Daughter Maud was ſignalized for being Great by Birth, Greater by Marriage, and Greateſt in her Son and Heir. Another Maud the Wife of King Stephen, led an Army, obtain'd a Victory, deliver'd her Captive Lord, and found[illegible]pital of St. Katharine, now flouriſhing under Your Majeſty's Government and careful Protection of it.

Eleanor Conſort of Henry II. in the Princeſs [illegible] her eldeſt Daughter laid the Foundation of a following Alliance betwixt the Royal Family of England and the Illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover, ſo happily now filling the Britiſh Throne, and giving the moſt effectual Inſurance of a Protestant Succession for the Ages to come.

Eleanor Queen of Edward I. was called the Honour of Womanhood, for her Affection and Fidelity to Him while Prince and King, attending him in his Wars, and helping to guard him againſt Sword and Infection.

Philippa Queen of Edward III. was greatly Inſtrumental in carrying on the Glory of his Reign, by her eminent Piety, Goodneſs, and Diſcretion. She was not only Mother of the greateſt Prince in Europe, but had a noble Train of Royal Iſſue to ſupport the Throne, and adorn the Steps of it: And out of her generous Diſpoſition to encourage Religion and Learning, She took upon her the Foundation of Queen's-College in Oxford, a great Nurſery of Letters and Religion.

Katherine Royal Conſort of Henry V. was of admir'd Beauty and Goodneſs: It was a Part of her Epitaph, that ſhe was a happy Daughter, Wife, and Mother; and a Grandmother more happy: Meaning in her Grandſon Henry VII.

Margaret Wife of Henry VI. with great Magnanimity eſpous'd the Cauſe of her Royal Husband, defended his Rights, fought his Battles, and in the Midſt of Arms provided a Maintenance for Learning and Devotion, in beginning the Foundation of Queen's-College in Cambridge, finiſh'd by the next ſucceeding Queen. The Lady Elizabeth, happy Conſort of King Henry VII. had the Glory of uniting the Roſes and Families of York and Lancaſter, and by her eldeſt Daughter laid the Foundation of uniting England and Scotland, firſt under one Monarch, and then into one Kingdom.

Anne Bullen the beloved Choice of King Henry VIII. encourag'd the beginning of our happy Reformation, and was the Mother of a Queen that brought that glorious Work to Perfection.

Anne the Royal Conſort of King James I. was pious, virtuous, and prudent; a Lover of the Engliſh Nation, and a great Reader of the Engliſh Hiſtory, commending the Studies of it to her domeſtick Servant Mr. Daniel, who under her Protection, publiſh'd one Volume in Folio of the ſeveral Reigns from the Conqueſt to the End of the Times of Edward III. and was allow'd the Honour to dedicate it to the Queen herſelf. She was the Mother of the Queen of Bohemia, whoſe more happy Daughter Sophia, tranſmitted the greateſt Bleſſing to theſe Nations, the Proteſtant Succeſſion; a Bleſſing, which we truſt in God, your Majesty will convey down to all future Generations.

The late Queen Mary, Conſort and Partner of the Crown with King William III. was ſo exemplary in Religion and every Virtue, that our modern Hiſtories will be unjuſt and untrue, if they do not repreſent her as the pureſt Ornament of her Sex and Royal Dignity.

Theſe all loved, honoured, and aided their Royal Huſbands, divided their Cares, augmented their Joys, and greatly contributed to make their Reigns happy, and their People eaſy.

I would not turn our preſent Views toward any melancholy Scene; or otherwiſe I might obſerve, that the Infelicities of our former Princes have been too much owing to the ungracious Qualities, or imprudent Conduct of their Royal Conſorts. The fatal Examples in King Edward II. and King Charles I. (to come no lower) are Hint enough, and it is no ſmall Part of Your Majesty's Honour, that ſuch unhappy Inſtances may be now remember'd without Offence.

I know Your Majesty in Your diſcerning Spirit would diſdain all Reſemblance of Flattery, and the Men of Holy Functions ought, above all others, to avoid the Imputation, the Suſpicion of it. And yet the Juſtice due to good Princes, while they live, will be always ſuſpected to lean that Way, through the Envy of ſome, and the Ignorance of others.

Men may freely commend their Equals and Familiars, without being ſuſpected of any ſordid Aſſentation or Self-Deſign: But when they treat of higher Powers, eſpecially of crowned Heads, there the Paying of a juſt Debt ſhall ſeem to be the Offering of vain Incenſe. As if we could not deſcribe the benign Influences of the Sun, without being charged with the Worſhiping of it.

In the Lives and Characters of Princes, there are but two impartial Judges, their own Conſcience and Poſterity: I humbly refer Your Majesty to both of them, each an even Balance: And though You can feel only the Weight of One, You may ſafely truſt the other. For Poſterity will judge of Characters according to the Facts that ſupport them, when Affection, Envy, Neglect, Awe, Intereſt, and other Seducements are no more. And therefore I leave Poſterity to enquire after Your M[illegible] [illegible] [illegible]ch be made [illegible] [illegible]on; into Your [illegible] [illegible]ate; into Your [illegible] [illegible] and Command in [illegible] [illegible] of Your Royal Family, [illegible] [illegible]our towards Servants and Subjects [illegible] [illegible] and Diſcourſes about Learning and all uſeful Knowledge; Your Majesty's eaſy and affable Converſation with all Degrees of People; Your avoiding all Occaſions and Places of Offence: Above all, Your Zeal to our holy Religion, Your Affection to our Reformed Eſtabliſh'd Church, Your ſtrict Regard to Virtue and Good Morals, and all Decency of Behaviour, Your liberal Bounty to the many Objects of Compaſſion, among others, to the Widows and Orphans of the poorer Clergy: Theſe and other diſtinguiſhing Acts and Deeds of Piety, Wiſdom, and Beneficence will be the only faithful Guide and Rule to our Hiſtorians, in another Age or two, to give and prove Your Majesty's Character, when Flattery, or Envy, or Intereſt, or Diſappointment, ſhall have no Manner of Influence upon them: Nothing but true and [illegible] Allegations.

May Your Majesty long reign in the Favour of God, in the Heart and Affections of the King, in the moſt dutiful Reſpects of all Your Royal Issue and Relations; in the Love and Veneration of all faithful Subjects and true Friends of Religion, Loyalty, and Proteſtant Intereſt. And under the continued wiſe and happy Adminiſtration of The King, may Your Majesty live long in Health, Honour, Peace, and All Proſperity: May You delight in the Bleſſing of Childrens Children, and at laſt enjoy an Immortal Crown. So prayeth,

Your MAJESTY's

Moſt Faithful Servant

And Daily Oratour,

March 1, 1727-8.

THE PREFACE.

THE common World will judge, that it has much more of Reputation to be an Author, than to be a bare Collector: And this will be a ſtanding Reaſon, why the Multitude of Writers ſhall aim at the more creditable Name, and why ſo few ſeem willing to ſubmit to that lower Character. But however, to write for Praiſe and Popularity is one Thing, and to write for Publick Uſe and Service is a different Thing: The firſt indeed is more natural, the latter has ſomewhat of Self-Denial and Mortification in it.

The Author has not only the Pleaſure of hunting after the Applauſe of others, but he enjoys a quicker Taſte of pleaſing himſelf, being at Liberty to indulge his Invention, his Judgment, his Fancy, Wit, Oratory, or any other prevailing Talent in him: While the dull Collector is confin'd to the ſort of mechanick Drudgery, to the running, ſtooping, ſearching, poring, picking out, and putting together, a Maſs of Authorities; and often reviſing, collating, and transferring of them, without being able to bring them ſoon into any regular Form and Faſhion. As inglorious, as for the Day-Labourer to be throwing up an Heap of Stones and Rubbiſh, while the noble Architect alone has the Satisfaction and Credit of raiſing and perfecting his own Model.

And yet in compiling any Hiſtory fit to be read, the proper Materials are to be ſought out with Diligence, and before they are compacted, they muſt be examin'd, compar'd, corrected, and adjuſted in due Order, and mark'd out for the reſpective Uſe and Application of them. And therefore the dry Collectors of original and authentick Matter, ſuch as Acts, Deeds, Records, and other Evidences, do ſomewhat more of Service to the World, to Poſterity at leaſt, than thoſe finer Pens, that upon ſlight Materials ſtrike out a goodly Frame, to little better Purpoſe, than the building a Caſtle in that Place where there can be no Foundation for it.

The moſt early Hiſtories were barely Hiſtorical Matters, were Entries made of plain and ſhort Facts, without any Flouriſh or Illumination to ſet them forth. Such were the firſt Inſcriptions upon Stones and Metals. Such were the Tables of Law, and little more were the Chronicles and Books of Kings among the Jews. Such were the Columns, Pillars, and other Monuments among the Greeks and Romans: Such the Ægyptian Hieroglyphicks; and of like nature muſt have been the Chineſe Memorials, if their Pretenſions to ſo many paſt Ages are true. However, in all thoſe primitive Ways of Writing, the Names of Perſons and Places, and Actions and Times, were thought enough to tranſmit the perpetual Notice of them. And this Simplicity of conveying down the Truth in the moſt compendious Way, gave more Teſtimony to Facts, than did ſome Volumes of After-Ages.

The firſt Corruption of Hiſtory was the abounding Senſe in Writers, by dilating and expatiating on their ſubject Matter, by adding Circumſtances, drawing Conſequences, offering their own Conjectures, and in many other Ways indulging their own Invention, and making up a Story inſtead of relating it. With this Liberty they form'd Speeches, Letters, Anſwers, and by the Powers of Fancy created Characters of Men, and Images of Things. This Art entertain'd and amus'd the Vulgar, this rais'd the Attention, and mov'd round the Paſſions, and gave Surprize and Delight, inſtead of Information and Knowledge of the Truth.

And when it was found, that theſe Fables pleaſed the People, no Wonder that the Generality of Hiſtorical Writers fell into that broader ſmoother Way, and drew the Multitude after them, to ſhew them new Scenes of Life, and a Stage of wonderful Actors. Hence came the Heathen Gods and Heroes, and the Monkiſh Saints, and by Degrees all manner of Figments and Apparitions, and whatever the Superſtition and Craft of Leaders could thruſt upon the Weakneſs and Credulity of Mankind. Hence came the moſt extravagant Characters, the moſt incredible Exploits, and all the ridiculous Miracles of the Church of Rome. Hence came ſeigned Orations, Poems, Apologies, perſonated Plays, and at laſt Romances, Novels, and every idle Work. A plain Narrative of naked Truth was deſpiſed and rejected, while the Inventor of any Fable took Place of any Relator of Fact, and People lov'd to imagine and believe rather than to underſtand. Our Age and Countrey has ſuffer'd ſadly under this Infatuation: Not only Romances, Novels, and other fulſome feigned Tales have been preferred to true and naked hiſtorical Accounts, but even Voyages and Travels, and the Deſcription of Countries, have been carried into ſuch a ſtrange Impoſition upon the Faith and common Underſtanding of Mankind, that the Patience of Reading them is a Scandal to the preſent Generation.

This Argument would fill up a large Diſſertation on it, but 'tis here only an Occaſional Hint to introduce the Publication of this Regiſter and Chronicle of the chief Facts in Church and State; and to recommend other honeſt Labours of the like kind, towards gathering up with due Care and Pains the genuine Reliques of Time, the original Acts and Deeds, and to place them all exactly in the Order and Connection of one with another. Indeed this Way of throwing Things together may at firſt ſeem to be the making of a rude and indigeſted Heap, but then comes in the Aid of diſtributing and diſpoſing ſuch Materials, as muſt lay the Foundation, and finiſh the Work, in every hiſtorical Attempt. Otherwiſe all fertile Thought and Language are but the outſide Decorations in a Building, to cover a Defect in the true Frame and ſubſtantial Parts of it.

Hence the older Hiſtorians of plain Matter and few Words will to judicious Readers be always preferable (as thought more credible) to the late Tellers of long Stories, who do but exerciſe the Curioſity, or rather the Patience, of thoſe that peruſe them. It has been often obſerv'd, that Facts are ſtubborn Things, and will not yield to the turning and winding of them into any other Shape and Figure than what they naturally appear in. Among our own Hiſtorians, the moſt ancient were the plaineſt, the ſhorteſt, and the moſt ſincere. They ſeem'd afraid to ſpeak more than they had ſeen or heard, or had ſufficient Reaſon to believe; nor would they ſet off thoſe Truths in any Dreſs but that of their own Simplicity and native Beauty. How pure and conciſe were our firſt Annals, and what Dependence on the Veracity of them? But ſince Writers grew ingenious, and ſpun out the Thread of every Matter in the fineſt ſmootheſt Way, we have had very different Repreſentations of the ſame Things; we have been loſt in Doubts and Contradictions, while Truth and Falſhood under the ſame looſe Dreſs are hard to be diſtinguiſh'd.

However, Hiſtorians of all ſorts are but Stewards and Keepers of Account, and ought to bring Vouchers for what they ſet down, if they would be found faithful. And hence it is, that thoſe Writers of our Hiſtory will be always receiv'd with the greateſt Reſpect and Confidence in them, who recite the original Inſtruments and authentick Evidences which they gather'd up at their Time of writing. The Saxon Annals, ſo call'd from being wrote in the vulgar Tongue (publiſhed with great Accuracy by the preſent Biſhop of London, then a young Student at Oxford) were begun and continued by the Monks of Peterborough, who inſerted ſeveral of their own Charters and Deeds, that might have been otherwiſe ſuppreſs'd and loſt for ever. Moſt other religious Houſes retain'd the like Scribes and Referendaries, who compiled a publick Hiſtory, interweaving the State of their own Houſes, and eſpecially inſerting their original Grants and Confirmations. And without ſuch conventual Chronicles and primitive Teſtimonies contained in them, the Hiſtory of ſome remote Times would have been as dark as before the General Deluge. Matthew Paris of St. Alban's will be always valued, yet not ſo much for his own Obſervations, as for the publick Acts and Deeds, Epiſtles, and Reſcripts, which from original Papers he has convey'd down to us. Roger Hoveden is more look'd into for his Collection of Records, than for any other great Pleaſure to be found in him. And ſo in Proportion with all our old Hiſtorians.

Nay, and among the Crowd of modern Authors, thoſe Hiſtorians will hold longeſt in Uſe and Credit, who abound moſt in this Way of interſerting or adding original Deeds and Evidences. Mr. Fox may be called a heavy Writer, but he will be always valued for interſperſing ſo many Papers, as make up the trueſt Acts and Monuments of the Church. Biſhop Burnet's Hiſtory of the Reformation will ſtand ſupported by the Appendix of Records. The beſt Part (though leaſt conſulted) of Brady, Tyrrel, Collier, &c. is the producing ſo many entire Inſtruments and original Papers, that anſwer more Purpoſes than the Tranſcribers could foreſee. The Induſtry and Honeſty of Mr. Strype in that Way is much to be commended: And the ſame fair and effectual Method of Information has been happily purſued by our greateſt Prelates, the preſent LL. Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Biſhop of London. And indeed all hiſtorical Writings without proper Authorities to ſupport and confirm them, are but like the Draught of a Deed without Hand and Seal to it; or as the Propoſal of a Law without any Sanction.

This Collector had labour'd long to come at the Truth of Things in the Chain and Order of the Tranſaction of them: But in the common Books of Hiſtory, he found ſo many Things deliver'd without any Appearance of Authority, and even ſome Things contrary to expreſs Evidence, that might have been eaſily produced againſt them; that he thought himſelf under a Neceſſity of ſearching and examining into original Papers and Records, and to make a Tranſcript of moſt of them, and a Reference to as many as were already printed, and to caſt them all into an exact Calendar of Years, and Months, and Days, and to reconcile the different Computation of them, and fix their moſt natural Order and Coherence with one another. This Labour, not a little difficult, he endeavour'd to digeſt in ſeveral Manuſcript Folio Volumes from the Year 1500. to near the preſent Times, which may be hereafter an Index and Help to thoſe that ſhall attempt more ſtudiouſly to improve them for publick Benefit. Herein he found ſo much Pleaſure and Satisfaction to himſelf, and upon ſome Applications gave ſo good Information to other inquiſitive Men, that he intended at laſt to give the World a Specimen of this Way of Writing as it were upon Record, or reciting or pointing out thoſe original Authorities that carry their own Weight and Proof along with them.

He was at ſome Uncertainty from what Period to begin: And upon due Deliberation, he found, that the Steps to our glorious Reformation, and the happy Progreſs in it, had been ſo elaborately clear'd and adjuſted by other Pens, and the Teſtimonies of every material Fact ſo fully given, that he thought a Supplement of the Things omitted or miſtaken, would hardly be worth the publick Notice. And then as to the later Civil Broils, and the fatal Event of them under King Charles I. and the Strugglings of the uſurp'd Powers, that ſucceeded and ſupplanted one another; the Preſs in thoſe Days was ſo continually buſy, and the Collections ſince made have been ſo ample and abundant, that though they were never put into a perfect Order of Time, yet the Men of Reading know where to find them, and it would be of the leſs Service to review and repeat them. The ſame may be ſaid of the happy Revolution under the providential Conduct of King William. In ſhort, he perceiv'd, that the Hiſtory of the Reſtauration and Reign of King Charles II. tho' ſo near to us, and ſo full of extraordinary Counſels and wonderful Events, relating to the Life and Reſurrection of our King and Country, the Return and Settlement of our Laws and Conſtitution in Church and State; yet as to the Particulars, it had been more untouch'd and unknown, than perhaps any equal Period of Time, ſince we had any Government among us, ſince we were a civilized Nation, and profeſs'd any Religion. For to explain the Hint before given, the Counſels and Events were ſo uncommon and ſurprizing, and of ſuch vaſt Importance, that ſurely they deſerve the more eſpecial Notice and cloſe Obſervation of all wiſe Men, that would underſtand and know that ſtupendous State of Affairs.

To ſee three Kingdoms overturn'd and broke to Pieces, and the very Fragments of all legal Government and Adminiſtration buried in Ruins and confuſed Heaps of Rubbiſh; and yet on a ſudden to have that mighty Diſſolution repair'd, reſtor'd, and as it were rais'd from the Dead. To ſee a Prince in Exile and Inaction abroad, betray'd by ſome of his few Friends, deſerted or deſpiſed by all Foreign Powers, with neither Ship nor Troop by Sea or Land, and only enough fear'd to be the more hated by his People; to ſee him without Ally, without Aſſiſtance, almoſt without Hope, without a Plot, recalled, reſtored, with infinite Joy to his late Enemies, (that is) to his own Subjects. To ſee the little Cloud of an Army from the North overſpreading, and diſperſing much greater Bodies. To ſee a General not vers'd in Politicks, nor bred in Court, forming a Scheme that he could not himſelf conceive to be practicable, and yet purſuing it with all the Dexterity and Arts of Silence and Reſerve, that it was in a Manner done before it was ſuſpected, and ſtill believ'd by ſome to have been never intended. That Fleets and Armies of the Common-wealth fill'd with Enthuſiaſts, fluſh'd with Blood and the Spoils of Rebellion, ſhould all acquieſce and ſubmit to the common Enemy, as the only Father of their Country. That a Council of State, and Remainder of a Parliament, ſhould be brought into the Meaſures of deſtroying themſelves, when they juſt now dreamt of the greateſt Stability. That ſecluded Members and degraded Lords ſhould be invited to re-enter their Houſes, to move the great Machine that could not poſſibly have ſtirr'd without them. That Wheels within Wheels ſeeming to croſs and interfere, ſhould all tend in a different kind of Motion to the ſame Point. That a League of Allegiance and Protection betwixt a Prince and three Nations, ſhould take up ſo little Negotiation, and be clog'd with no Conditions, that might have retarded the Compact, or laid in Matter for another Rupture. That the mad Enthuſiaſm of ſome, and the vile Hypocriſy of others, ſhould ceaſe to do Miſchief. That the Purchaſers of Crown and Church Lands, and other ungodly Procurers, ſhould ſo patiently depart from their belov'd Poſſeſſions. That the common Soldiers and Seamen who had nothing but Pay and Plunder to ſubſiſt upon, ſhould ſo quietly turn out to ſeek their Bread in unknown Ways. That the Proceedings in Parliament ſhould be ſoon as regular and uniform, as if there had been no Interruption. That the prime Miniſters inſtead of extending their Maſter's Power, or their own Intereſt, ſhould honeſtly place themſelves for a Barrier between the Royal Prerogative, and the Liberties of the People. That a young Prince put into a Capacity of being more imperious and arbitrary than any of his Predeceſſors, ſhould have ſo much good Senſe, and ſo many Avocations, as never to attempt it, or immediately to deſiſt from it. That the late fatal Quarrels about the Militia ſhould be ſo inſenſibly reconcil'd, by aſcribing the ſole Power to the King, and yet leaving the Execution to the Subject.

That a Church overthrown and demoliſh'd, with her Foundations rooted up, ſhould by Degrees ariſe into its ancient Form and Beauty. That the Biſhops ſhould take their Seats in Parliament without Envy or any apparent Oppoſition. That the ſequeſtred Clergy ſhould be reſtored to their Benefices without Noiſe or Tumult. That a Conference ſhould be holden by Authority betwixt contending Parties, with as much Charity and Forbearance, as Right on the one Side, and Poſſeſſion on the other, could reaſonably expect. That an Uniformity in Religion ſhould be eſtabliſh'd by Law of the Civil Powers, and ſettle Peace and Union within the Church, while it was impoſ- ſible to prevent ſome Separations from it. That the Biſhops ſhould not delight in the Rigours of their Authority, nor call in the Aid of the ſecular Arm, as was the Spirit of Archbiſhop Laud, but ſhould mollify the Minds of People by their Prudence and Moderation: That a Convocation of the Prelates and Clergy ſhould act wiſely within their own Eccleſiaſtical Sphere, without raiſing the Jealouſie of the Court, or the Murmurs of the People; and ſhould be ſo far from pretending to new Rights and Privileges, that they ſhould give up the original Power of granting their own Money.

That from the utmoſt Violence and Confuſion, there ſhould ariſe ſuch a Calm and Serenity upon the Face of Affairs, and a more promiſing State of Eaſe and Happineſs, than had ever appeared in any one Reign, not excepting that of Queen Elizabeth: That the Profuſeneſs of Joy upon it ſhould leave any Room to be ſerious: That a King ſo long injured and incenſed ſhould not proſecute any perſonal or private Revenge, but cover all his own Reſentments, and his Peoples Fears, in a publick Act of Indemnity and Oblivion, offer'd and importuned by himſelf: That his vaſt Flood of Wealth and Power ſhould make him neither too cold and negligent, nor too profuſely grateful to his old Friends: That he ſhould receive a diſagreeable Conſort with no Appearance of Diſtaſt, and treat her with Reſpect and Civility beyond and againſt Inclination: That he ſhould bring home great obligations from ſome Papiſts in his Exile, and ſome Inclinations at leaſt to that foreign Church; and yet never openly declare or diſcover his Intentions that Way, but attend all the Ordinances of our Reformed Religion, nay, and prefer thoſe Chaplains before others, who preached and wrote moſt boldly againſt the Corruptions and Frauds of Popery: That a Prince ſo much addicted to Pleaſures and Amuſements, ſhould maintain his Capacity for Buſineſs, and make Application to it, whenever any great Occaſions did require: That our two Univerſities, after ſo much purging out of Loyalty and Learning, ſhould have a ſufficient Number of old orthodox Members to reſtore their Diſcipline and Reputation: That after ſuch a long Suſpenſion of the Laws by new Ordinances and military Power, there ſhould remain a Set of the moſt able Men, to fill the Benches, and attend the Cauſes in every Court: That when ſo many rigid Fanaticks were diſpleaſed at their Loſſes and Diſappointments, and had old Officers, and other conſiderable Malecontents at the Head of them, yet under their Amazements ſhould ſit ſtill; at leaſt be unable to diſturb the Government, unleſs in ſome few abortive Plots, that left a Queſtion whether they were real, or not: Theſe Things, and ſome other Conſequences within the Beginning of the Exerciſe of that Reign, do diſtinguiſh it in a moſt remarkable Manuer, and make it deſerve to be opened and ſet forth in a full View of all the various Circumſtances of it.

For theſe Reaſons the Collector began at January 1659-60. and has given the moſt natural Deſcription of Things tranſacted from that Day, by ſetting them in their firſt original Light, in the Acts and Inſtruments, and other beſt Authorities for every Counſel and Fact, led in ſuch a Chain of Dates and ſucceſſive Times, as ſerves to carry on the Connexion of Cauſes and Events, and the Conſiſtency of Propoſals and Agents, and the Dependence on proper Opportunities and Seaſons, and ſuch other Links to one another, as can alone direct to the ſecret Springs of Conſultation and Action, and be a Maſter-Key to all other Accounts of the ſame Time.

We know and feel, that nothing confounds the Underſtanding and Memory of Readers more, than our Hiſtorians not obſerving the due Chronical Order of dating every Deſign and Enterprize, and all Contingencies whatever; this Omiſſion of the Year or Day, makes ſo many dark Places in thoſe late Hiſtories that have been moſt entertaining, thoſe of my Lord Clarendon and Biſhop Burnet. Once upon a Time is enough for a common Tale; but writing Hiſtory is like drawing up judicial Acts, the Time muſt be ſpecified, or it will not bear the being a Precedent, or the Report of any Credit. Moſt Men of Curioſity and Exactneſs had rather turn over a ſhort Diary, than a copious and immethodical Hiſtory: In this latter indeed, they would read more of the Author; but in the other they find more of the Truth and Connexion of Matters. In ſuch a Series of Things and Times, one Day, as it were, telleth another, and one Night certifieth another.

The PREFACE.

The original Authorities here produced or referred to, are the Declarations, Speeches, Meſſages, Letters, Anſwers, Proclamations, Mandates, Charters, Returns, and other immediate Acts of the King; the Petitions, Addreſſes, Debates, Votes, Reſolutions, Speeches, and other Proceedings in both Houſes of Parliament, [illegible] Convenings, Prorogations, and other Incidents, [illegible] the true Occaſion and Senſe of them; the convening, the aſſembling, ſitting and concluding in Convocations; the Orders of the King in Council upon ſome emergent Affairs; the State of Diſcipline and Learning in the two Univerſities; the Promotions to Biſhopricks, and the Diſpoſition of other chief Dignities in the Church: The Collation and Inſtitution to ſeveral Eccleſiaſtical Benefices: The Articles of Enquiry and Advices in the Viſitations of Biſhops and other Ordinaries: The Letters and Memorials of our Miniſters of State, and other inſtructive Correſpondencies from Abroad and at Home. And becauſe the Bent and Genius of the Age is beſt known in a free Country by the Pamphlets and Papers that come daily out, as the Senſe of Parties, and ſometimes the Voice of the Nation; he has tranſmitted many Paſſages out of 'em as a Word or two in ſeaſon: And at the End of each Month he has given a Catalogue of the Books and Papers publiſhed within or near that Time, which help to make up the moſt lively Picture of the Body Politick.

This one Volume may ſerve for a Specimen of what may be carried on by better Hands. Such Work indeed requires a Multitude of Hands to pick and gather and glean after others: At leaſt the ſingle Undertaker ſhould be able to employ a Set of Fellow Labourers. If this Attempt be found uſeful, it may hereafter invite a Society of Men to join in it. Or it may encourage a Government to ſupport the Man who ſhall dare to take the Burden upon his own Shoulders. Mr. Rymer did little but direct the tranſcribing of Publick Acts, Leagues, Letters, &c. and the digeſting of them in order of Time; and yet had a conſtant Support and Reward for every one of thoſe admirable Tomes, that ſo much illuſtrate our Engliſh Hiſtory, and have taught Foreigners to be exact in it. And happy the Time to come, when ſome Publick Spirit ſhall promote a new Edition of that Work to be ſupplied with a Plenty of other Inſtruments and Originals remaining under each Year, with a Thread of Marginal Notes, to ſhew the Uſe and Application of every Act and Deed, in confirming the Authorities, correcting the Errors, reſolving the Doubts, and ſupplying the Defects and Omiſſions in our moſt Claſſical Hiſtorians. Then alone will our Engliſh Hiſtory be made perfect; and that will be the Honour of an Age and a Nation.

The preſent Collector work'd for nothing but his own Amuſement, with ſome Eye upon the Publick Service. He has omitted many Things: It is not in the Nature of Collections to be made perfect. He cannot propoſe the Publication of above one Volume more in his declining Life: But he hopes to leave his Manuſcript Collections in ſuch Hands, as will not grudge the Uſe of them to any honeſt Man, who ſhall ſeem inclin'd and qualified to put them in Order and improve them. In the mean Time, he commits this Volume to the Mercy of the World, and prays for a Bleſſing on the impartial Reader.

JANUARY 1659-60. 11 Car. II.

SUNDAY Jan. 1.

The Year begins with the opening a Way to the King's Reſtauration, by the March of General Monk out of Scotland.

See Life of General Monk by Dr. Gumble, by Dr. Price, and by Dr. Skinner, all in 8vo. And Account given by his Brother Clarges, at the end of Sir R. Baker. Life of Dr. Barwick, Engl. 8vo. p. 222.

THE March of General Monk, in Concert with the Lord Fairfax and other Engliſh Friends, from Scotland towards London, in profeſs'd Favour of covering the Parliament from the Force of the Army; paſſing the Tweed this Day with ſix Regiments of Foot, followed the next Day by four Regiments of Horſe, in order to advance towards Lambert, who had ſuperiour Forces to oppoſe in and about Newcaſtle.

Who yet conceal'd his Intentions; and had refus'd all Correſpondence with the King or his Friends.

General Monk conceal'd his Intentions with the utmoſt Secrecy and Reſerve, not admitting his moſt truſty Friend Colonel Clobery, nor even his own deareſt Brother into the deep Secrets of his Heart, and abſolutely declined receiving from his Majeſty a Letter ſent to him, or any other Meſſages whatſoever: For he learn'd not only from the Falſhood of thoſe Enthuſiaſtick Officers that hitherto almoſt filled his Army, and were thoroughly inſtructed in Cromwell's Arts and Deceits, but alſo from the clancular Slyneſs of ſome, who deſired to be thought as much in the King's Intereſt as any, that no Mortal was to be truſted raſhly. —The utmoſt he would promiſe to any Man living, was, that he would oppoſe the ravaging Tyranny of ſome who lay in wait to deſtroy the Liberty of the Common-wealth, and trampled upon the Authority of the Parliament.

Declaring only for the Liberty of the Commonwealth, and the Authority of the Parliament.

MONDAY Jan. 2.

The Court at Bruſſels had no Correſpondence with any depending on General Monk, but Colonel Clobery and Mr. Otway.

And had yet no Hopes of Monk himſelf.

A Letter from Chancellour Hyde to Mr. John Barwick in London, dated Bruſſels, January 12, 1660. N. S.

—I ſend you herewith two Letters from the King to your two Friends, which is all that his Majeſty can think of in order to Monk: Since he knows there is a Letter for him from the King, and has no mind to receive it, he would have the ſame Shyneſs or Perverſeneſs, if there were another ſent, or any Meſſenger employed to him. It is ſtrange he, nor any of his Friends, ſhould not let the King know of their Purpoſes, if indeed he has any good Purpoſes towards his Service. The whole Dependance the King hath of any Good from him, is from your Negotiation, and therefore the Service cannot be valued enough: And I hope you will perſuade Mr. Otway to purſue it effectually.

Redman gone to Ireland to prepare an Intereſt there.

The King is glad Redman is gone for Ireland, where ſomewhat will be done, when the Work is begun in England: Otherwiſe I do not ſuppoſe that much can be done there to any Purpoſe. I do not underſtand Ludlow's Part in this Buſineſs, nor to which Party he is inclined———

January 1659-60.

The K[illegible] Friends [illegible] Hopes [illegible] the Confu[illegible] Army.

But were afraid of [illegible] of a Parliament [illegible] again.

And a Damp thereupon [illegible] on the Spirits of all the [illegible] Party.

Upon Conſideration of the [illegible] fered to me, ſince it [illegible] and to [illegible] well to [illegible] Di[illegible] from [illegible] Moment of the Court of [illegible] Care ſhall be taken, when the [illegible] Temper may appear to a [illegible]. I cannot enough wonder that many [illegible] reaſonably believe, that it was [illegible] as it was poſſible, and to keep them [illegible] from [illegible] Activity againſt a Power, which was unqueſtionably able to ſacrifice them to its Jealouſy or Diſpleaſure: I ſay, I wonder that theſe very Men, who I preſume are ſtill entire in their Principles, ſhould not now think it ſeaſonable to conſult together, how to make the right Uſe of theſe Diviſions and Diſtractions, and by conferring with other Perſons of Honour and Quality (who have been of other Parties, and are now ſufficiently puniſhed for having been ſo) find a Way how to provide for their own, and their Country's Security and Happineſs; and to prevent that ſharp Remedy, which in curing the Diſeaſe may kill the Patient. I do heartily wiſh that our ſick Friend (who I hope hath by this Time recover'd a good Degree of Strength) were now in London, as well for temporal as ſpiritual Conſiderations; and I believe he would find Opportunity to do Good with ſome Perſons, who are never to be approached but by Men, if not of their own chuſing, yet of thoſe in whom they have entire Confidence.

Poſſibly meant of the King's returning with a Foreign Power.

Biſhop of London or of Sarum.

Since I writ this, I have received your's of the fixteenth, which ſhould have come to me the laſt Week; and by Letters of a later Date, I find ſo great a Change in all your Affairs, that I know not what to ſay. But if the Rump be re-eſtabliſhed, and with that Reputation and Triumph it ſeems to carry with it, we have miſtaken our Meaſures, and are for the preſent caſt further back than we had Reaſon to fear, and muſt look about us 'till we can ſee more Light; but I have yet ſome Hope from the Temper of the City, which ſee their Slavery again at the Door, and from the Deſpair of Lambert, and thoſe who have adher'd to him, of all which we ſhall ſee the Effects very quickly, as I believe you do at this Time ſee the utmoſt that can be expected from either.

The Rump re-eſtabliſh'd was an ill Change of Affairs, that caſt back the Hopes of the Royal Party.

Yet they depend on the Temper of the City, and the Deſpair of Lambert and his Army.

Give me Leave in a Word, before I conclude, to aſk you a Queſtion concerning a young Gentleman, the Son of a good Father, Mr. Wickham, a Fellow of King's Colledge in Cambridge: I have ſeen him, and then he accidentally mention'd you, as a Perſon to whom he was known; and ſeemed to know, that you held Correſpondence with me: I have never ſince heard from him, I pray, let me know what your Opinion is of him, and where he is. Since this was writ, which I intended Mr. Alleſtrey ſhould have brought to you, the King hath received your's of the nineteenth of December, to which there is no Occaſion to reply; ſince my Lord Mordaunt, who takes the Charge of this, can enlarge upon all Particulars. Mr. Alleſtrey ſtays to be ſent upon the next Occaſion. The King's Letter with A upon it [is for Mr. Otway,] the other for his Friend Colonel Clobery. You will diſpoſe of them accordingly. I am, Sir,

Dr. Tobias Wickham, inſtall'd Dean of York, Mar. 31. 1677. he had been Fellow of Trinity-Hall in Cambridge, and one of the Proctors of that Univerſity in 1649. He died Anno 1697. I ſuppoſe at York, and was interr'd in that Cathedral, Son of Hen. Wickham, D.D. Rector of Bedall and Bolton Percy in Yorkſhire, Prebendary of Southwell, and Archdeacon of York, and Chaplain to Ch. I.

The Lord Mordaunt was John ſecond Son to John firſt Earl of Peterborough. He was, in reward of his Loyalty, by Letters Patent Jul. 10. 11 Car. II. created a Baron, Lord Mordaunt of Rygate; and on the Death of his elder Brother Henry Earl of Peterborough, ſucceeded to that Honour, &c.

Mr. Otway was now going into Scotland to Colonel Clobery.

Appendix to the Life of Dr. Barwick, 8vo. No. xix.

The Perſon * through whoſe Hands this comes to you, hath enough informed me of your great Affection and Zeal to my Service, and of the Pains you have taken to advance it, of which you may be confident I have the Senſe I ought to have.

I have writ to your † Friend, which you will deliver to him, and uſe your Intereſt in him, that he may take my Buſineſs to Heart, and purſue it with his utmoſt Induſtry and Dexterity. I hope the Iſſue will be good for us all; and you will find that I can never forget your Part, and that I ſhall always be

Your affectionate Friend,

† Colonel Clobery.

On the backſide of the Copy which was given me of this Letter, and ſeems to have been taken many Years ſince among other Minutes relating to this Gentleman's great Services, it is obſerved that he made it his Buſineſs ſeven Years together to bring over his two Brothers in Law to the King's Intereſt; and that the whole Deſign of Monk's Army coming againſt Lambert, and Redman's joining Monk with the Iriſh Brigade then lying in Yorkſhire, was laid and contriv'd at his Chambers in Gray's-Inn, between him and his two Brothers in Law, without the Privity of any one but Mr. Barwick.

The ſignal Services of Mr. Otway, afterward Sir John Otway.

Note of the learned Editor of the Engliſh Life of Dr. Joh. Barwick, 8vo. p. 474.

The other Changes and Fluctuations had ſtill adminiſtred ſome hopes to the King, and the daily breaking out of new Animoſities amongſt the chief Miniſters of the former Miſchiefs, diſpoſed Men to believe that the Government might at laſt reſt upon the old Foundation. But this ſurprizing Reſurrection of the Parliament [Dec. 26. 1659.] that had been ſo often exploded, ſo often dead and buried, and was the only Image of Power that was moſt formidable to the King and and his Party, ſeem'd to pull up all their Hopes by the Roots, and was interpreted by that Party as an Act of Providence to eſtabliſh their monſtrous Murders and Uſurpation. And it may be juſtly ſaid, and tranſmitted as a Truth to Poſterity, that there were very few Men who bore a Part in theſe Changes and giddy Revolutions, who had the leaſt Purpoſe or Thought to contribute towards the King's Reſtauration, or who wiſh'd well to his Intereſt; they who did ſo being ſo totally ſuppreſſed and diſpirited, that they were only at a Gaze, what Light might break out of this Darkneſs, and what Order Providence might produce out of this Confuſion. This was the true State of Affairs when the King returned from Fuenterabia to Bruſſels, or within few Days after; and therefore it is no wonder that there was that Dejection of Spirit upon thoſe about his Majeſty; and that the Duke of York, who ſaw ſo little hope of returning into England, was well pleas'd with the Condition that was offer'd him in Spain, and that his Servants were impatient to find him in Poſſeſſion of it.

The Royal Party utterly diſpirited.

And the King and his Family brought unto Deſpair.

The Rump had created a Council of State to conſiſt of twenty one Members of the Houſe, and ten who were not Members. The Names of the twenty one Members were

The Quorum of this Committee of State to be nine, of which ſix Members of Parliament, their Continuance till the firſt of April 1660.

The Houſe took into Conſideration the Act for the Council of State with Inſtructions, and paſſed the ſame.

The Houſe ordered a Bill to be brought in to enjoyn all Members that now ſit, or ſhall ſit in Parliament, to take an Oath of Renuntiation of the Title of Charles Stuart, and the whole Line of the late King James, &c. read the firſt Time Jan. 3.

An Oath to renounce the Title of Charles Stuart, and the whole Royal Family.

Reſolved, that all Officers who were in Commiſſion on the eleventh of October 1659, and all other Officers and Soldiers in the late Defection and Rebellion, who have already ſubmitted, and ſuch as ſhall hereafter ſubmit themſelves, and have returned, or ſhall return to their Duty and Obedience to the Parliament before the ninth Day of this inſtant January, ſhall be and are hereby pardoned and indemnified for Life and Eſtate: Provided that this Vote ſhall not extend to the pardoning of wilful Murder.

And it is Ordered, that all ſuch of the ſaid Officers and Soldiers, who ſhall ſo return to their Duty and Obedience to the Parliament, ſhall be diſpoſed of by the Council of State, Commiſſioners for Management of the Army, or General Monk.

Reſolved, that John Lambert, Eſq; ſhall be included in this Vote.

Ordered, that it be referred to the Council of State, to ſee that this Vote be put in Execution.

The Order of Parliament ſo entirely ſtript Lambert of his Army, that there remain'd not with him above one hundred Horſe: All the reſt return'd to their Quarters with all Quietneſs and Reſignation; and himſelf was ſome time after committed to the Tower. The reſt of the Officers of the Army, who had been formerly caſhier'd by the Parliament, and had reſum'd their Commands that they might break it, were again diſmiſſed from their Charges, and committed Priſoners to their own Houſes. Sir Henry Vane and divers other Members of the Houſe, who had concurred with the Committee of Safety, were likewiſe confined to their own Houſes. So that the Parliament ſeem'd now again poſſeſſed of a more abſolute Authority than it ever had been, and to be without any Danger of Oppoſition or Contradiction.

All the Garriſons had now ſubmitted to the Parliament, who thereupon took all poſſible Care to gratify the Officers and Soldiers, to keep them in the better Obedience to them.

A Letter from Colonel Overton from Hull of the thirty firſt of December was read in the Houſe. Referred to the Council of State to ſee the Garriſon of Hull well provided for. Reſolved, That the Money received from the Commiſſioners of Exciſe by Colonel Overton, to ſupply the Neceſſities of the Soldiers in Hull, be allowed upon Account.

A Letter from Colonel William Lockhart, Governour of Dunkirk, of the thirty firſt of December, was read in the Houſe, expreſſing the joyfil and acceptable News of the Parliament's re-ent'ring upon the Exerciſe of their Authority, — and how extraordinary and almoſt miraculous the Workings of God have been in bringing back their laſt Return, and how happily advantageous it is likely to prove to all the three Nations. —I thought the great Importance of this happy Day would have its Effects upon the Spirits of our Enemies round about us, as well as upon our own, though in a different Manner: And therefore to expreſs our Joy, and to intimate unto them the juſt Cauſe of their Sadneſs, I have this Night ordered all our great Guns, both by Sea and Land, to proclaim our Exaltation and their Diſappointment. The March of Gen. Monk: His Receipt of a Letter from the Speaker, without Order for coming to London.

Life of General Monk by Dr. Skinner, 8vo, p. 181.

General Monk had took up his firſt Night's Quarters at Wellar in Northumberland; where, late in the Night, he received a ſhort Letter from the Speaker, dated Decemb. 27, informing him of their Return again to the Government, with ſome Acknowledgment of his Prudence and Fidelity in their Service, but not one Word of Order for his March towards them; which though he prudently conceal'd, yet it did inwardly diſpleaſe him. But his greateſt Surpriſal was from their ſo ſudden Return into Power, when having now ſo conſiderable an Army which had ſubmitted to them, it would lead them into a leſs Dependence on himſelf, and before he could march to them, they would have ſo ſhifted Commiſſions in Fleetwood's Army, and fix'd them into ſo perfect Obedience to the Parliament, as he ſhould not be able to play them that Game, which he had intended when he got well into London. But that the Juncto might be told how welcome their Letters were to him, he commanded they ſhould be read next Morning at the Head of the Regiments, being drawn up in the Snow; and to keep themſelves warm, they made loud Acclamations for the Reſtauration of their Maſters, reſolving that they would march onwards, and have the Satisfaction to ſee them in their Seats.

Conceal'd and ill reſented by him.

He marches on with cold Entertainment.

Gumble's Life of Gen. Monk, 8vo, p. 198. and Skinner, p. 181.

On Jan. 2. the General kept on his Way towards Morpeth; but becauſe it was too long a March for his Army in ſo deep a Snow, he ſtaid at a Village in the Mid-way for a Night, and took up his Quarters (which were worſe than thoſe in Coldſtream) at the Vicar's Houſe of the Pariſh. — The Miniſter was repreſented to be an honeſt Man, but either that was Faſting-Day with him, or elſe he wanted one Qualification of a good Paſtor, to be given to Hoſpitality; the Houſe was not ſtor'd for a General's Quarter, &c.

The Eye Witneſs Mr. Gumble, in Life of Monk, *p.*199.

This Night, Jan. 3. he quarter'd at Morpeth. In the Way he was entertain'd with his whole Train by an honeſt old Knight at his Houſe, very kindly and nobly; and at Night the High Sheriff of Northumberland, with all the principal Gentry of that County, attended him, and were entertained by him very magnificently.

His Chaplain had privately ſounded his Intentions, and thought him fully diſpos'd to ſerve the King.

See Life of D. of Albemarle by Dr. Price, 8vo.

Juſt before his March from Coldſtream, his other Chaplain, Mr. Price, having no Opportunity in the Day-time of private Acceſs to him, took Occaſion by the Help of a Corporal, who that Night commanded the Guards, to enter his Chamber about two in the Morning, where he found the Door only latch'd, and the General, being weary of his narrow uneaſy Lodging in his Bed, was ſleeping in his Clothes, having laid himſelf down on a Form, and reſted his Head on the Side of the Bed, with a Fire and Light in his Room. At his Approach, the General (who was never a ſound Sleeper) preſently awak'd, and enter'd into much ſecret Diſcourſe with him; who freely repreſented to him, how much his Obligation and Safety were equally concerned, in complying with the Deſires of the better Part of the Nation, by endeavouring their Settlement according to the ancient and known Laws. To which the General reply'd, That he very well knew what he would have, nor ſhould he be wanting therein, ſo ſoon as he could find himſelf in a Capacity of Effecting it, of which he had now ſomewhat more Hopes than formerly. And then kindly taking him by the Hand, very ſolemnly and devoutly told him, By God's Grace I will do it. His Chaplain then took the Boldneſs to let him know how much he had diſoblig'd a great Part of the Nation, and contracted his own Intereſt into a narrower Compaſs, by declaring ſo ſtrictly for the Parliament as it ſate, October 11. To this the General anſwer'd with ſome Earneſtneſs; You ſee what People they are who are now about me, by whoſe Advice and Direction ſeveral Things are tranſacted and written. There are Jealouſies enough upon me already, and the leaſt Appearance of any Diſlike would make them greater. But though (as he told him) he had been paſſive in allowing ſome Proceedings, yet he was reſolved not to act by them. This put an End to the Diſcourſe, and his Chaplain, craving Pardon for this Interruption, left him to the remaining Part of his Repoſe. —Hence the impartial Reader may diſcern the Envy and Prejudice of their Opinions, who have thought that General Monk did govern his Reſolutions by the Events that fell in his Way, without endeavouring to bend and incline thoſe Events to a Compliance with his own Reſolution.

Admiral Mountague afterward Earl of Sandwich, an intimate Friend of Monk, did believe that his Stay in Scotland, was to wait for an Opportunity of ſerving the King.

MS Journal of Sir Edward Mountague in September 1659. Fol.

I have ſpoken (writes Mountague in his Journal) with one that was at London in the moſt intimate Councils about pulling down Richard, and am aſſured that General Monk was applied to in Scotland to ſtick unto Richard, and was offered to have twenty thouſand Pounds per Annum ſettled upon him; and he would not be engaged, but ſent Word, that the ſaid Revenue would do Richard more Good than his ſticking to him. Further I am aſſured, that notwithſtanding the aboveſaid, yet Richard's Party wanted not Power to have ſuppreſſed Fleetwood and Deſborough, and over-ruled the Army; but then it muſt have been by the Lord Falconberg, the Earl of Carliſle, myſelf, Colonel Ingoldſby, and others, who they thought would certainly bring in the King; which at that Time they choſe to ſhift off unto the very laſt Extremity. Then they let in Vane and Haſlerigge, Nevil and other Common-wealth's Men, upon fair Promiſes from them not to overturn the Government; but they proved perfidious, and brought in the Rump, which Inconvenience might have been prevented, if Richard had not diſſolved, but prorogued, his Parliament for a few Months. For that Parliament had much of the Intereſt of the Nation in it: And though the Rump ſhould have got into the Saddle, yet that Parliament Intereſt would have procur'd it to meet again in deſpite of all Oppoſition. So as the Diſſolving that Parliament is held the great and fundamental Error of that Alteration of Government.

A pretended Letter of General Monk before his leaving Scotland to the King, offering and promiſing to ſerve him.

Mr. Toland ſaid, he had the Letter, but does not tell us whether Original or what Copy.

Nor does he produce the full Tranſcript of it.

London, 1714. 8vo. p. 37.

The well known Writer of the Art of Reſtoring; Or the Piety and Probity of General Monk, is bold to ſay, Notwithſtanding my Lord Clarendon affirms, that the General wrote nothing to the King from London; yet which determines the Matter at once, (and which determined me) I have a Letter he ſent the King from Edenborough, juſt upon his March into England, and I believe it was carried by the Gentleman that Ludlow affirms was ſent to him into Scotland by the King. It is not a little remarkable, that this Letter contains in Subſtance the very ſame Propoſitions which my Lord Clarendon acknowledges Monk had ſent the King, in a verbal Meſſage by Sir Richard Greenvill.

And therefore tho' he profeſſes he has no reaſon to ſuſpect its being genuine; yet he allows it to be poſſibly ſpurious.

And it ſeems to be his own Invention, to ſet forth what he calls the Diſſimulation, Treachery and Perjury of Monk, and of the late Miniſter, whom he calls Sir Roger, writing a like Letter to the Court of Hanover.

The Letter as produc'd by Mr. Toland.

I queſtion not, but your Majeſty is very well knowing of the Power which for ſome Years paſt I have had in governing the Engliſh Army here in Scotland; which Power, when I had once obtained, I did reſolve (as much as in me lay) to keep, until a fit Time and Opportunity ſhould offer itſelf, that I might employ it for the Glory of God, and the Good of your Majeſty, whoſe faithful Subject I humbly acknowledge myſelf to be. —I had never a better Opportunity of doing my Country Service (in freeing them from their Egyptian Bondage, as I may term it) and in reſtoring the Crown to the right Owner thereof; which if poſſible to be done, ſhall be done with as much Care, Safety, and Diligence, as God ſhall enable me, and that with as little Wrong as may be, either to King or Subject. —I ſhall trouble your Majeſty with little more at preſent, but to let you know that my Hopes are, that you would be pleas'd to have that Confidence in me, as not to credit any Rumour or Reports, that may ſeemingly contradict what I have herein propoſed; for as for that, I would have your Majeſty be confident, that I ſhall not value neither the ill Will, nor yet look upon the Favour of any, who ſhall appear in Oppoſition to a Thing that I have ſo really purpoſed; ſo long as God and my Conſcience perſuades me, that in ſo doing I ſhall accompliſh a good Work, both for his Glory and my Country's Good. And yet I think fit to carry as fair a Correſpondence as I can, with thoſe that have taken upon them the Authority in England. To that end I have Thoughts of going to London ſuddenly, that I may ſee their Actings, and order Things there ſomewhat for my Advantage.

If this Letter be genuine as (ſaith the Relator of it) I have no Reaſon to ſuſpect the contrary, then it will only follow, that either my Lord Clarendon did not know every Thing, or would not tell all he knew: And if it ſhould be ſpurious (as poſſibly it may) yet ſince all the reſt of the Letters are inconteſtably authentick; ſo Monk's Diſſimulation, Treachery, and Perjury are like to remain unparallell'd in Hiſtory.

A Letter from the Regiment of Foot in the Iriſh Brigade, near Beadle in Yorkſhire, brought up by Captain John Jeacock, was read in the Houſe.

Mr. Speaker,

This Day the Regiment of Foot that came lately out of Ireland, unanimouſly declared, both Officers and Soldiers, for the Reſtoring of the Parliament of England lately interrupted; and we are now upon our March Day and Night, until we be clear of the Quarters of the reſt of the Forces. The Iriſh Horſe and we have quartered at a Diſtance of late, by which Means we have had no Concurrence with them, but we daily expect to hear of their declaring the ſame alſo, &c.

Captain Jeacock, the Meſſenger, was called in, and being at the Bar, made a Relation to the Parliament of the Proceedings of that Brigade ſince the late Defection, and of their declaring for the Parliament: And it is referred to the Council of State to recompence the Meſſenger, and other faithful Officers with Preferment according to their Merit.

Several other Declarations ſent up to the Parliament from the Officers and Soldiers in their Country Quarters; particularly from Major Unton Crook, and his Troop of Horſe at Warmiſtre in the County of Wilts, that they would pay no Obedience to any other Government over theſe Nations, but that of a free regulated Common-wealth, and that they do renounce and profeſs againſt any King, ſingle Perſon, or Houſe of Peers, and particularly againſt Charles Stuart, and his Family.

Mercur. Polit. by Order of Parl. Nº. 601.

Whitehall, Jan. 4. This Night came a Meſſenger with Letters from General Monk, who was at Kelſall in Scotland, wherein is ſignified the continued Reſolution and good Condition of his Army for the Parliament, intending to march on, in caſe the Forces in the North ſhould not conform to the Commands of Parliament.

Of which Diſperſion and Submiſſion they give their own Account.

The ſame Meſſenger giveth an Account of this great News: That as he came on the Road by North-Allerton in Yorkſhire, he found Major General Lambert was here with only about fifty Horſe, the reſt of the Forces having ſubmitted and declared for the Parliament, as himſelf alſo hath done; and the Forces all are diſperſed into ſeveral Quarters, expecting what Order will be ſent from hence for the diſpoſing of them for the Service of the Common-wealth. The ſame Meſſenger coming alſo by York ſaith, that the Lord Fairfax being there with about 2 or 300 Horſe, and Colonel Lilburne likewiſe with ſome Troops, had both of them declared for this preſent Parliament, together with the City of York itſelf. So that by the good Hand of God, the Affairs of the Commonwealth in all the three Nations are in a miraculous Manner reduced to a quiet State (as it were in an inſtant) under the Obedience of the Parliament.

And triumph in having the three Nations reduced to their Obedience, in a miraculous Manner.

The ſurrendry of York to the Lord Fairfax is beſt related by Colonel Philip Monckton, a Royaliſt and chief Agent in it.

MSS. Papers of Sir Philip Monckton in the Hands of his worthy Grandſon Joh. Monckton of Yorkſhire, Eſq; Surrendry of York to Lord Fairfax related by an Eye-Witneſs and chief Agent in it.

While General Monk was ſtirring in Scotland, he ſent a Letter by Mr. Thomas Clarges to Mr. Bowles of York to get that City for him (this Letter was in effect to my Lord Fairfax) who gave Mr. Bowles order to communicate it to myſelf, and to deſire the Concurrence of my Counſel in carrying on the Deſign to effect the General's Deſire. He withal told me, that there were ſome things that made them ſcruple at the Undertaking. As firſt, they did fear that his Majeſty's Party would not be reconciled to them, if by this Undertaking they reſtor'd his Majeſty. The next, that if they fail'd in the Surpriſal of the City, they had no place of Retreat. To the firſt, I told him, that I hop'd his Majeſty's Party would be govern'd by Reaſon, &c. As to the next; I told him, he need not fear of Succeſs: For Lambert was under that influence of Popery, and had ſo many Papiſts with him, that God would certainly deſtroy him; and although the Attempt was ſeemingly hazardous, yet I would willingly engage all that was dear to me, with them in the Undertaking, in Confidence that God would confound him.

After this he told me, that the Lord Fairfax deſired me to engage Sir Hugh Bethel on his Majeſty's Account: Upon which I ſent Cornet Bacon to Sir Hugh Bethel, to acquaint him with what my Lord General had deſir'd, and what the Lord Fairfax did intend as to the getting of York: And although I had not Commiſſion from the King to aſſure him, that by reſtoring of him, he ſhould not loſe thoſe Lands he held of the Crown (which by his Service in joining with my Lord Fairfax he would well deſerve, and better) yet to free him from any ſuch Apprehenſion, I would give him as much of my own Eſtate in exchange: He moſt generouſly return'd me Thanks for the Proffer, and ſent me Word, that he would not only adventure that, but all that he had to reſtore the King.

Lambert for Quakers and Papiſts.

To animate Mr. Bowles and thoſe he conſulted with, I told them, that whatever were the Diviſions and Differences heretofore among Proteſtants, it concern'd them now to lay aſide all their Animoſities, and unite both Hearts and Hands to preſerve themſelves; for Lambert would draw the Quakers into his Army as ſoon as he could, and under that Notion the Papiſts would come in amongſt them; and then all eminent Proteſtants both for King and Parliament would be ſeized on, under a new Notion of the diſſatisfied Party: After which Lambert would declare himſelf both King and Papiſt, and by that, and his ſecuring the eminent Proteſtants, cut off all the King's Friends both at home and abroad.

The [illegible] had given out their Orders (ſeveral of which were intercepted) for a [illegible] at Colonel Lilburne's Houſe in the New Park near York, upon the [illegible] (as they call it) where it was ſuppoſed there would have been a [illegible] Appearance, for they ſhould have come not only from all the [illegible] Counties of Yorkſhire, Durham and Lancaſhire, but even as far as Norfolk. But they were luckily prevented by the Riſing of the Lord Fairfax upon the third of December. My Lord thought it fitter for me to ſtay with Mr. Bowles, and adviſe with him upon all Occurrences, than to riſe with him, becauſe of the Name of an old Cavalier, and to give him what Aſſiſtance I could. In order to which I ſent twenty Men well mounted and arm'd to join with Sir Hugh Bethel's Body, under the Conduct of my Couſin Captain Edmund Monckton.

York commanded by Col. Lilburne.

Upon my Lord Fairfax his ſending of Mr. Bowles Word, that he would appear before the City by twelve a Clock upon New-Years-Day, he adviſed him to attain the Poſtern-Gate upon the ſouth Side of the River, and that they would have ſome Muſqueteers in Sir Thomas Widdrington's Houſe on the north Side of the River, that ſhould ſcour the Line, ſo as his Men might ſafely come to the Gate and force it. That Lord came before the Town at the Time as prefix'd: Upon his drawing down, Lilburne, who then commanded the Town, cauſed the Gates to be ſhut, and diſpoſed every Man to his Poſt, and cauſed Patroles of Horſe perpetually to cavalcade the Streets.

After my Lord had been before the Town two hours, and did not attempt it (as was adviſ'd) Mr. Bowles, who upon my Lord's Appearance had been menaced by a Patrole of Horſe, that if he ſtirred out of his own Houſe, he ſhould dye, came by Sir Thomas's Houſe, and gave me a Signal to follow him to a Garden where they uſed to converſe. Mr. Bowles ſaid, he wondred that my Lord did not attempt to enter, and aſk'd me what I thought of it: I told him that it was to be feared, that if the Enemy had not ſome Diverſion made by the Citizens, the Lord Fairfax would not be able to enter, before Lambert would arrive, who was marching with all the Speed imaginable.

Mr. Bowles deſired ——— to ſend to the Citizens to riſe, which he did; they ſent me Word they were ready, but that they would not riſe, unleſs I would head them: I told the Citizens whom they ſent to me, that my Appearance might be a Diſadvantage to the Service, for the Enemy might hap to ſay, it was a Cavalier Deſign for my being with them. But they being poſitive that they would not riſe without me; I told them, they ſhould find me in the Minſter, for there was a Neceſſity that they muſt riſe, and therefore let them repair thither upon the Tolling of the great Bell, and I would diſguiſe my being with them as well as I could.

When I had ſtayed a little with my Wife, I got a Horſeback, and went to the Port, where I found the Captain of Horſe and Mr. Martin Liſter (Lambert's Brother-in-law) going with a Paper of Terms to my Lord Fairfax, upon which my Lord's Party was admitted within few Hours, and Mr. Liſter went immediately away to Lambert, who was that Night at Rippon with his Army of Foot, from whence he ſent a Body of Four hundred Horſe to reinforce the Garriſon, which came to the Gates of the Town about two of the Clock in the Morning, and gave an Alarm to thoſe of my Lord's Party in the Town, but could not enter: For although Lilburne's Garriſon was in Town, thoſe that my Lord ſent in command kept Guard, and the next Morning turned Lilburne and all his Horſe out of Town: As ſoon as Liſter came to Lambert, and told him what had happened at York, he diſguiſed himſelf and left his Army. So the General came from Coldſtream with his little Army to York undiſturbed.

Confirmation of the Suſpicion of Lambert being now a Papiſt.

The Reflections before made on Lambert being a Papiſt, and having ſeveral Papiſts in his Army confirmed by other Authorities.

The Night before we came to Morpeth, we had good Quarters, and were contented with what the Houſe afforded. This Gentleman was of the Romiſh Religion, and informed us that Lambert's Forces had quartered there, and told us plainly, He had rather they ſhould have prevailed. We had learned ſo much of good Manners, as not to be angry with him in his own Houſe, or for his private Opinion.

Peter Talbot, afterward a titular Biſhop in Ireland, at the Funeral of Oliver Cromwell, walked in a mourning Cloak amongſt the Mourners: And upon General Monk's riſing in England to bring in our gracious Sovereign, this ſaid Peter Talbot went in Company with the then General Lambert to oppoſe the Duke of Albmarle's Deſigns: For theſe his good Feats, the Pope made him titular Archbiſhop of Dublin. Dean King's Wife, Mrs. Sarah King, can teſtify this for a true Narrative, if examined, and is yet living.

The King's Court at Bruſſels had yet no Eye towards the North; and ſeem'd to think nothing of Monk or Fairfax; but amus'd themſelves with the Hopes of Sir Thomas Middleton in North-Wales, and Lord Newport in Shropſhire, Append. to the Engliſh Life of Dr. Barwick, No. xxi.

A Letter of Chancellour Hyde to Mr. John Barwick, dated Bruſſels, January 14, 1660. N. S.

SIR,

If my Lord Mordaunt be arrived (as I hope he is) you have received an Anſwer to all I had upon my Hand from you; and ſince his Departure I have not heard from you. This is only to ſend (which was not ready when he departed) the Commiſſion for Sir Thomas Middleton to be Commander in chief of the Counties ſhire, and were even afraid that they two would not agree in their Meaſures.

Francis eldeſt Son of Sir Richard Newport of High Ercall in Shropſhire; for his Services to King Charles I. was created a Baron Lord Newport of High Ercall, 14 Caroli Oct. 1642, and dying Feb. 8. 1650. at Moulins in France, was ſucceeded by this Lord Francis, after the Reſtauration made Comptroller, and then Treaſurer of the King's Houſhold; Viſcount Newport, 27 Ch. 2. and Earl of Bradford, 1694.

Counties of North Wales. [illegible] concerning Shrewsbury, [illegible] Commiſſioners to aſſiſt. If it were [illegible] that whole County likewiſe under [illegible] that will ſuit with good Acceptance of my Lord Newport, and the reſt [illegible] Commiſſioners of that County is not hard to gueſs; and yet no doubt they will be glad of any ſure Way to take Shrewsbury, and to have ſo good a Neighbour in North Wales as Sir Thomas Middleton. Therefore there is no other Way to prevent all Jealouſies and Miſtakes, but by bringing my Lord Newport or Andrew Newport and Sir Thomas Middleton together, who will eaſily agree and proſecute any noble Deſign, and ſecure one another. And this Mr. Rumbold and you will eaſily bring to paſs. We keep Mr. Allesbury for a few Days, for the next Diſpatch after the next Letters. God keep you, and Sir,

Your moſt affectionate Servant,

THURSDAY Jan. 5. The Rump think themſelves ſecure of Ireland; and thank the Officers who had put the Army into their Hands.

Mercur. Polit. by Order of Parliament, No. 602. p. 1009.

The Houſe referred it to the Council of State to conſider how the Civil Power and Authority may be ſettled in Ireland, and to conſider how the Army in Ireland ſhall be governed.

The Houſe approved of what hath been done by Sir Hardres Waller, Sir Charles Coot, Colonel Theophilus Jones, and other the Officers of the Army in Ireland for the Service of the Parliament; and that the Thanks of the Houſe be given them for their good Service, to be ſigned by the Speaker, and ſealed with the Seal of the Parliament.

And now fearing no Oppoſition, they declare againſt admitting the ſecluded Members; however the Voice of the Nation without doors.

Reſolved, That upon the whole Matter of the Report touching abſent Members, the Parliament doth adjudge and declare, that the Members who ſtand diſcharged from voting or ſitting as Members of this Houſe, in the Years 1648 and 1649, do ſtand duely diſcharged by Judgment of Parliament, from ſitting as Members of this Parliament, during this Parliament: And it is ordered, that Writs do iſſue forth for Electing of new Members in their Places.

Gumble's Life of Monk, 8vo, p. 203.

General Monk was received at Newcaſtle with much Love and Honour, being met with great Multitudes of the common People upon the Road, before he entred into the Town, with great Acclamations, and railing upon Lambert, and crying up Monk to his Face, that he looked like a General.

Dr. Skinner's Life of Monk, 8vo, p. 182.

Lambert had long kept his head Quarters here at Newcaſtle, but he quitted them about the ſame Time that General Monk began his March from Coldſtream. For the ſame Meſſenger that brought to General Monk at Wellar the Letter from the Juncto, with the Account of rheir Reſtoration, left alſo their Orders at Newcaſtle, commanding the Army preſently to quit their Station there, and return directly to thoſe reſpective Quarters, which were aſſigned them by the Parliament before their Interruption.

Lambert deſerted by his Army.

Lambert's Army was in a fair Way of diſſolving themſelves before thoſe Orders arrived. But ſo ſoon as the Soldiers heard that Fleetwood's Forces in London had deſerted their General, and ſubmitted to the Juncto, they were reſolved not to be exceeded by their Brethren in the Ways of Treachery and Falſehood; and therefore preſently all ſubmitted themſelves to the Orders of the Juncto, without expoſtulating one Word in behalf of Lambert their Leader, or once drawing a Sword for him; but ſhifting away to their ſeveral Quarters, they left him naked and deſtitute to the Cruelty of his Fortunes. He had been in the Head of an Army good enough to have fought them both; ſo that it was greatly admired he did not ſtay and charge General Monk in his March forward, or turn back upon the Lord Fairfax and his Forces, whom he might more eaſily have dealt with, before the Northern Army could have advanced to their Relief.

The Hopes and Fears of General Monk inclining to reſtore the King appear beſt from the Letters of his Majeſty, and his firſt Miniſter Chancellour Hyde.

No Correspondence with Scotland, but by Col Clobery, who was there inclin'd to the Royal Cause, but it does not appear that he yet dar'd to propose it to Gen. Monk.

— I know not what to say more of your Friends in Ireland and Scotland, the last whereof, I hope, may be of present Use; and a new Revolution may give the other an Opportunity to do what he intended. — We are not out of Apprehension, that any single Person chosen for the Government, may not, upon these general Rumours of Plots, do our Friends more Mischief in four and twenty Hours, than the Parliament and Council of State have done since their sitting: Therefore it will be no Wonder if the King be ready to do any thing in his own Person he shall be advis'd to by his Friends, or thinks necessary for their Preservation, upon which his own Interest so much depends. I wish you all Happiness, and am very heartily

Appendix to the English Life of Dr. John Barwick, N°. xi. p. 433.

S I R,

—— the King is very well satisfied with the Account you have given him, and takes himself to be very much beholden to your Friend, who, in the Trouble he is in himself, takes his Business so much to Heart. His Majesty desires him to prosecute that of Scotland with as much Vigour as he can; and if Monk will resolve to declare for him, his Majesty will so fully trust him, as to be with him in his own Person. And he hath Reason to be confident, that he shall not find many considerable Enemies in the North of England. You may assure your Friend that he and his Friend shall find their full Accounts with his Majesty. The other Business of Ireland, I perceive, must attend some new Revolutions, which probably may be at Hand. —— I am, Sir,

If Monk will declare for his Majesty, he would so fully trust him as to be with him in his own Person.

Mr. Otway. Col. Clobery.

Your affectionate Friend,

HYDE.

A Letter of Chancellour Hyde to Mr. John Barwick, dated Brussels October 17, 1659.

Ib. Append. N°.xiv. *p.*451.

—— I hope that you continue your Solicitation with your Friends (and they their Zeal) both in Scotland and Ireland: And without doubt, if there be a good Disposition there, they shall be visited from abroad with such Assistance, as may encourage them. And if Monk can be brought to any Frankness, and will give any Encouragement to it, I doubt not but the King, or one of his Brothers, will be able to go to him, or near his Quarters, with a considerable Power: But it were well he would express himself, that he may be depended upon.——

Monk could not be yet brought to any Frankness, or so to express himself that the King might depend upon him, and come himself, or send one of his Brothers to him.

Your very affectionate Servant,

HYDE.

A Letter of Chancellour Hyde to the same Friend, Mr. Barwick, dated November 21, 1659. Brussels.

Ibid. Append. N°.xv. *p.*453.

—— I am sure I need not bespeak your Care in this Conjuncture, which requires it, for the Negotiation with Monk; nor could there be any Danger in the other Design of interfering; and you well know, your Friend did always wish, that it might first be proposed to him by another. Mr. Rumbald will be able to inform you from Time to Time, what Progress is made the other Way; and so you will easily help one another. I do confess to you, this Engagement looks as if he had somewhat else in his Mind, than to vindicate a Power that is not in Being. However, that only can be the Purpose of Sir Arthur Haslerig. I do hope this Change may restore your Friend in Ireland to Power again,

Col. Redman.

Sir Arthur Haslerig was one of the famous five Members of of the House of Commons, whom the King had demanded as Traitors. He was now a considerable Commander in the Parliament Army, and one of the Chiefs of the Independant Republican Party. Hopes that Clobery intrusted and prefer'd by Monk, would prevail with him to declare for the King, which might make him superiour to Lambert.

Col. Clobery.

again, however, that he will have an Opportunity [illegible] he hath a Mind to. —— I find in the [illegible] of Monk's [illegible] your Friend mentioned as a particular Councellor of his, and preferr'd by him; which I am heartily glad of, and hope that he will by Degrees prevail with the other so to declare himself, that he may be easily superiour to Lambert in Numbers, which yet I doubt he is not. I wish either of them had once done any of those Actions, as would make them irreconcileable to each other, and that some Blood were spilt between them. I am persuaded, the King is by this Time with his Face this Way, &c.

Colonel Clobery sent up by Monk to treat of an Agreement with Lambert, gives fresh Hopes of disposing Monk to the King's Interest.

Col. Clobery.

—— I cannot but be very glad, that your Friend is one of those who is sent up from Monk to treat, because you will be able to make such Impressions in him, as may both dispose him, and enable him to dispose Monk; who if he be well inclined may be sure of Assistance, before he can be compelled to fight. And I cannot but hope, that some Account is given from him to the King himself; though you and I do not know of it. I will be sure to write to morrow for those two Letters to your two Friends, and I believe I shall know the next Week, the very Day when the King will be here. And I may tell you, his Majesty is very much deceived himself, if both Crowns are not fully resolved to assist him. ——

Colonel Clobery and Mr. Otway.

The two Crowns of France and Spain were to assist the King, if not happily prevented.

A Letter of Chancellour Hyde to Mr. John Barwick, dated December 5, 1659.

Append. No. xvii. printed Oct. 5. but the Contents prove it Dec 5.

Still a Question whether Monk hath any Inclination to serve the King.

—— I am still in hope (though only upon the Reason of it) that if Monk hath any Inclination to serve the King, he finds some Way to inform his Majesty of it; and then he would in Time receive any Assistance or Countenance he can wish, even by the King's own Presence, or his Brother's: And I am confident he will receive all the Encouragement that France can give him. I am of the Opinion, his Majesty will be here the next Week, or very soon after. I do not think any of our Friends will rise, 'till they have some Countenance from one of the Parties; and I observe by what you say, that Monk is much less Master than I thought him to have been of his own Army; yet he may quickly make himself stronger, if he take the right Way; whereas methinks, otherwise he stands in a very fair Way speedily to be broken, and his own Army will give him up. I confess I do not like the present Posture he is in. And this Agreement, how extravagant a one soever it be, will have for some Time the Reputation of a Settlement, 'till some new Breach appears, which should be hastened all that is possible. I know not what to propose; and I perceive very well, that you are very vigilant to do all that can be done: And you are a better Judge of that, than I can be at this Distance. How comes it to pass that Tinmouth was not possessed by Monk, if Sir Arthur Hasterig had the Command of it, who, I suppose, is with Monk? However, I am sure he cannot be compelled to fight, if he hath no mind to it, and may break Lambert's Army, if it shall press him. —— Do not Sir Henry Vane and Major Galoway act with the Committee of Safety, as much as any? Which I ask, because I have seen a Letter, as if they had taken some Offence, and refuse to bear a Part in the Government, and that Fleetwood is neither satisfied with Monk nor Lambert. I hope we shall shortly see more clearly through all. I have not Time at present to add more, but that I am very heartily, Sir,

Monk not enough Master of his Army, and unless he make himself stronger, by taking the right Way, is in Danger to be broken, and given up.

The Chancellour is afraid of an Agreement between him and Lambert.

Tinmouth had declar'd against Monk, whose best way was to break Lambert's Army without fighting.

Vane, Galoway and Fleetwood were all discontented.

Your most affectionate Servant,

Received Dec. 19. HYDE.

Amidst the dubious Hopes and Fears of the King and his Friends concerning the Inclinations of General Monk, the usurping Powers had stronger Jealousies of him, and dreaded his Intentions of Bringing in the King, upon his first Motions towards England.

Whitlock now Keeper of the Seal, delivers his own and others Opinion, that General Monk made artful Delays to get Time, and be the better prepar'd to execute his Design of bringing in the King.

Whitlock's Memoirs, Fol. p. 690. b.

Upon Monk's March from Edenborough towards England, Nov. 28, 1659. he sent Letters to Fleetwood full of Complements and Expressions of his earnest Desire of a speedy Settlement of the present Differences: And because he perceived, in the Agreement signed by Fleetwood, that there are some Things remain there untreated of, and unagreed upon; it was the Resolution of him and his Officers to add two more to the Number, and to have Conference with the like Number to be appointed here, to put a final End to the Business, which he desired might be as soon as possible.

Upon Consideration of this Letter, some of the Committee declar'd their Opinions, That this was only a Delay in Monk to get Time, and be the better prepared for his Design of bringing in the King, and to bring the Army here and their Party into more Streights for want of Pay, which he had got for his Forces. And therefore advised to fall upon Monk presently, to bring the Matter to an Issue, before his Soldiers were confirmed, and Fleetwood's Army discouraged. But this Advice was not taken, but a new Treaty consented to by Commissioners on each Part to be at Newcastle.

January 1659-60.

So again many ſuſpected Monk's Deſign.

Decemb. 24. 1659. Intelligence of Alarms taken by Monk's Forces; and that he had taken many Scots into his Army: And that Newcaſtle was reſolute for Fleetwood's Party; and that they ſuſpected Monk's Deſign to be, to bring in the King. ——

And eſpecially Whitlock all along ſuſpected that Deſign of Monk.

Decemb. 22. 1659. These Paſſages [of great Diviſions and Deſtructions in City, Country, Army, &c.] perplexed Whitelocke, as well as others, if not more; he all along ſuſpecting Monk's Deſign. The Lord Willoughby, and Alderman Robinſon, Mr. G. Brown, Mr. Loe, and others came to him and confirmed his Suſpicion in this Particular; and propounded to him to go to Fleetwood, and to adviſe him to ſend forthwith to the King at Breda [Bruſſels] to offer to bring him in upon good Terms, and thereby to get before-hand with Monk, who queſtionleſs did intend to bring in the King. Whitelocke upon ſerious Thoughts of this went to Fleetwood, and they had a long private Diſcourſe together; wherein Whitelocke told him, that by the Deſire of his Brother Sir William Fleetwood, and of the Lord Willoughby, Mr. G. Brown, Alderman Robinſon, Mr. Loe, and others, he was come to diſcourſe freely with him about their preſent Condition, and what was fit to be done in ſuch an Exigency as their Affairs were now in; that it was more than evident that Monk's Deſign was to bring in the King, and that without any Terms for the Parliament Party; whereby all their Lives and Fortunes would be at the Mercy of the King and his Party, who were ſufficiently enraged againſt them, and in need of repairing their broken Fortunes.

And would have put Fleetwood upon the ſame Deſign, to have been beforehand with Monk.

The Inclinations of the People were for reſtoring the King.

That the Inclinations of the Preſbyterian Party generally, and of many others, and of the City, and moſt of the Parliament's old Friends were the ſame Way; and a great Part of the Soldiers: And that thoſe here were revolted from Fleetwood, as thoſe in the North under Lambert; and thoſe at Portſmouth and other Places.

That Monk would eaſily delude Haſlerigge, and the reſt of the old Parliament Men, and that all the incenſed Lords and ſecluded Members would be and were active in this Deſign: So that Whitelocke ſaid, the Coming in of the King was unavoidable; and that he thought (ſeeing that muſt be) that it was more Prudence for Fleetwood and his Friends to be the Inſtruments of bringing him in, than to leave it to Monk. For by this Means, Fleetwood might make Terms with the King for Preſervation of himſelf and his Friends, and of that Cauſe in good Meaſure in which they had been engaged; but if it were left to Monk, they, and all that had been done, would be left to the Danger of Deſtruction.

His coming in would be unavoidable.

More prudent for Fleetwood to do this Work himſelf, than to leave it in the Hands of Monk.

Whitelocke therefore propounded to Fleetwood —— That he ſhould immediately ſend away ſome Perſon of Truſt to the King at Breda [Bruſſels] to offer to him his and his Friends Service to the Reſtoring the King to his Right, and that upon ſuch Terms as the King ſhould agree upon. And for this Purpoſe to give Inſtructions to the Party, whom Fleetwood ſhould ſend upon this Affair. Fleetwood then aſked Whitelocke, If he would be willing to go himſelf upon this Affair? Who anſwered, That he would go, if Fleetwood thought good to ſend him. And after much other Diſcourſe to this Effect, Fleetwood ſeem'd fully ſatisfied to ſend Whitelocke to the King, and deſir'd Whitelocke to go and prepare himſelf forthwith for the Journey: And that in the mean Time Fleetwood and his Friends would prepare the Inſtructions for him; ſo that he might begin his Journey this Evening or to morrow Morning early.

Whitlock had perſuaded General Fleetwood to ſend him to the King upon that Errand; and was preparing for it.

Whitelocke going away from Fleetwood, met Vane, Deſborough, and Berry in the next Room coming to ſpeak with Fleetwood; who thereupon deſired Whitelocke to ſtay a little: And Whitelocke ſuſpected what would be the Iſſue of their Conſultation: And within a Quarter of an Hour, Fleetwood came to Whitelocke, and in much Paſſion ſaid to him, I cannot do it, I cannot do it. Whitelocke deſired his Reaſons, why he could not do it? He anſwered, Theſe Gentlemen have remembered me, and it is true, that I am engaged not to do any ſuch thing without my Lord Lambert*'s Conſent. Whitelocke* reply'd, that Lambert was at too great a Diſtance to have his Conſent to this Buſineſs, which muſt be inſtantly acted. Fleetwood again ſaid, I cannot do it without him. Then Whitelocke ſaid, you will ruin yourſelf and your Friends: He ſaid, I cannot help it. Then Whitelocke told him, he muſt take his Leave, and ſo they parted.

But was ſtopt by the Influence of Vane, Deſborough and Berry.

Who perſuaded Fleetwood, that he could do nothing without the Conſent of Lambert.

In all the Tergiverſations of the Soldiers, General Fleetwood had remain'd ſtill in Conſultations with the Committee of Safety; and when any Intelligence was brought of any Murmur amongſt the Soldiers, by which a Revolt might enſue, and he was deſir'd to go amongſt them and confirm them, he would fall upon his Knees to his Prayers, and could hardly be prevail'd with to go to them. And when he was amongſt them, and in the Middle of any Diſcourſe, he would invite them all to Prayers, and put himſelf upon his Knees before them: And when ſome of his Friends importun'd him to appear more vigorous in the Charge he had, without which they muſt be all deſtroy'd, they could get no other Anſwer from him, than that God had ſpit in his Face and would not hear him.

This confirms the Character of Fleetwood, given by Lord Clarendon.

Ld. Clarend. Hiſt. Fol. Vol. III. p. 551.

Edmund Ludlow the Regicide and profeſs'd Republican is poſitive, that General Monk upon his firſt advancing out of Scotland came with an Intention to reſtore the King.

Ludlow had the ſame Opinion of Monk's Intentions for the King.

The Commiſſioners that had been appointed by Colonel Monk to treat with thoſe of the Army, had no ſmall Part in promoting this Diverſion of the Forces of the Army: Yet to colour their Deſigns, they endeavoured at the ſame Time to lay aſleep the Wallingford Houſe Party, and to make them believe, that they designed nothing more than [illegible] fice, they caused them to [illegible] reduce Monk and his Party, who were [illegible] Forces of the Army, either for Number, Experience, or Unanimity. [illegible] by his solemn Protestations and publick Declarations of all their Resolutions to adhere to the Parliament and their Cause, against a King, single Person, or House of Peers, he had deluded divers of those who were at a Distance from him, and who from their Enmity to the Faction of the Army, were ready to trust any that might probably rescue them from that Servitude; yet those who approached him nearer, and understood him better, finding him on all Occasions to encourage the most Vicious, and to prefer Men of monarchical Principles, tho' of the most scandalous Lives, to all the Offices that became vacant, saw so clearly into the Drift of his Design, that most of the Officers who had any Sense of Religion, or common Honesty, abandoned him, and joined themselves to Colonel Lambert, &c.

i. e. Men that were not Army Saints.

Sir Henry Vane had the same Opinion of Monk.

Ib. p. 750.

Of this Sir Henry Vane was very sensible, and gave both Army and Parliament for lost, when they began to treat. But the chief Officers of the Army, having already parted with their Honesty by driving on their own private Interest, were now resolved to shake Hands with their Reason also, and sent down to Scotland one Dr. Clarges, Brother to Monk's Wife, and a known Royalist, with a Commission to persuade him to an Accommodation with them, &c. — His Deportment was so visible, that Colonel Martin in the Parliament House resembled him to one, that being sent for to make a Suit of Cloaths, brought with him a Budget full of Carpenter's Tools; and being told that such Things were not at all fit for the Work he was desired to do, answered, It matters not, I will do your Work well enough I warrant you.

Ib. p. 810.

And so had Harry Martin.

And Ludlow told it to his Face.

Ib. p. 820.

After Monk's coming to Whitehall, Ludlow paid him a Visit; and says he, I then told him, that I had met lately with one Mr. Courtney, who said he was his Relation; and having drank too much at the Inn where I lay, in my Way to London, boasted that his Cousin Monk would do great Things for the King, &c.

This Day was read in the House a Letter from General Monk to the Speaker, dated from Coldstream, Dec. 29, 1659.

A Letter of General Monk to the Rump, in a Style agreeable to them.

Right Honourable,

I receiv'd yours of the 22d Instant, and desire to return to our good God hearty Thanks, that he hath been pleased to own, and appear for his People in such glorious Instances of Mercy and Deliverance. I bless the Lord, I never doubted of his Presence and Success in this Undertaking, being so righteous a Cause, and had long since put it to God's Determination, but upon Advertisements from Friends in England, that if I could continue here without engaging till the first of January, the Work would be done without Blood.

Denies a second Treaty with Lambert; tho' an Overture for it.

I cannot but admire upon what Intelligence you should be persuaded of a second Treaty: Indeed I was forced to make use of such an Overture to remove the Commissioners from London, whom I cannot but blame for receding from their Instructions; but I hope they will give you a satisfactory Account of their Proceedings. Yet I acknowledge that I could not but resent their Carriage, having secured one of them for betraying their private Instructions, of which I doubt not but you have been fully informed.

My last Answer to the Lord Lambert, who sent several Messengers to invite me to a second Treaty, was, that I could not treat without Authority from the Commissioners for the Government of the Army, and to that end desired a Pass for the same Messengers to go to Portsmouth, to receive their Commands and Instructions; who was returned back with this Answer from Lambert and the Council of Officers, that they could not consent thereunto; and since that I have not heard from them.

His Army on the Tweed at their Service.

I have your Army (I bless God) upon the River Tweed, within three Hours ready to be drawn together, and they are very chearful and unanimous, willing to endure any Hardship for your Service.

He perseveres in his good Principles.

——— I believe that you never doubted of my persevering in those good Principles I declared for, and that I should comfortably have suffered (if the Lord had pleased to frown upon us) in this most righteous Undertaking. I have made ready to march, but am unwilling to hazard your Justice and Authority upon a Fight, when it may be done with more Security. I shall attend your further Command, and desire the Lord to bless your Forces and Counsels, and to restore you in your just Authority; which is both the Prayer and Endeavour of

Ready to march, but for their Sakes unwilling to fight.

GEORGE MONK.

P. S. I thought fit to acquaint you, that my Lord Warreston hath endeavoured to stir up the People of this Nation as much as he could against your Interest, &c.

Order for Thanks, and Desire to march up to London.

It is Ordered, that Letters of Thanks from the Parliament be writ to General Monk, acknowledging his faithful Service and high Deservings; and that he taking Care for the Safety and Preservation of Scotland in his Absence, be desired as speedily as he can to come up to London. Which Letter is to be signed by Mr. Speaker, and sealed with the Seal of the Parliament.

General Monk wrote an Anſwer the ſame Day to the Citizens of London, dated Newcaſtle, Jan. 6. expreſſing his Hopes that ſuch a glorious City, that had redeem'd themſelves from Slavery at the Price of ſo much Blood and Treaſure, and had been the great Inſtruments in the Hand of God for the carrying on the Work of Reformation, and bringing three Nations out of the Captivity of Tyranny and Arbitrary Government, could never conſent to ſuch illegal and unjuſt Proceedings; [meaning the Army's turning out the Parliament] and promiſing that he and the Forces under his Command, would to the utmoſt of their Power defend the Freedom of ſucceſſive Parliaments, the Liberties Spiritual and Civil of theſe Nations, encourage in their Stations the godly and learned Miniſters; and that they ſhall continue faithful in this good Cauſe, that the Nations may be ſtabliſh'd in a free Commonwealth, and the Army kept in due Obedience to the civil Authority.

S I R,

Having been ſolicited by divers Gentlemen of this County, both Parliament Men, Commiſſioners of the Militia and others, to try what Forces we could raiſe as Volunteers, for the oppoſing of the Forces under the Command of the Lord Lambert, who had impoſed upon our County both free Quarter and Seſſments, and for the reducing of the City of York, which was then garriſon'd by Part of his Forces; upon Conference with them, together with Major Smithſon and Captain Strangwayes, and ſome other Officers of the Army that were well affected to you, we did appoint upon Friday the thirtieth of the laſt Month to rendezvous in ſeveral Places, &c. We have this Day taken in York, and now underſtanding that the Lord Lambert hath ſubmitted, we conceive there will be no further uſe of us; and do therefore intend (after a Day's Refreſhment of our Men) to ſend them home. And we deſire you to be aſſured, that what hath been done, was only in Order to your Service.

And make an Apology for the Duke of Buck. being with them.

——— I am much troubled, that the Perſon which it ſeems is ſo well inſtructed in all Particulars, is not yet come to us: I hope he hath met with no ill Accident, and his Arrival is moſt impatiently longed for. I have a full Joy for the Recovery of your ſick Friend, and am willing to flatter myſelf that the Time is drawing on, that we may enjoy each other; and ſure if ſome of his Friends did not think ſo, it would be impoſſible they ſhould ſo much neglect an Affair of Importance, which you and he will well underſtand by this Inſinuation. I do wiſh that your other moſt reverend Friend (who hath expreſſed ſo much Indulgence to my laſt Suit, and to whom you are to repreſent all the Regard of this Place) knew what hath been done here towards it, and what Importunity hath been uſed from hence, how ineffectually ſoever. And it is great Pity that ſome honeſt diſcreet Perſon is not ſent over, which we have ſo often begged, who might let us know the clear Thoughts of our Friends there, and carry back poſitive Directions from hence. This Letter may be ſo long upon the Way, that it will be to no Purpoſe to ſend you any News, but what may be the ſame a Month hence. And therefore I ſhall only tell you, (that you may not believe that we have laid aſide the Thoughts of Books, and all good Learning) that Dr. Creighton hath been theſe many Months in preparing the Hiſtory of the Council of Florence in Greek, which he tranſlates into Latin from a Copy which will be judged very authentick, and ſure will be a Work very welcome to the World; it will be ready for the Impreſſion at Leyden within theſe twenty Days. And now I am ſpeaking of Books, pray tell me, what Melancholy hath poſſeſſed poor Mr. Thorndike, and what do our Friends think of his Book? And is it poſſible that he would publiſh it, without ever imparting it or communicating with them? His Name and Reputation in Learning is too much made uſe of, to the Diſcountenance of the poor Church; and though it be not in his Power to be without ſome Doubts and Scruples, I do not know what Impulſion of Conſcience there could be, to publiſh thoſe Doubts to the World, in a Time when he might reaſonably believe the worſt Uſe would be made, and the greateſt Scandal proceed from them. I wiſh you all Happineſs and am

SIR,

Receiv'd May 31. S. V. Your moſt affectionate Servant.

A Letter of Dr. John Barwick to Mr. Chancellour Hyde, dated June 21. 1659.

Appen. to Eng. Life of Dr. Barwick, N°. vii. p. 400.

The Cypher ſent over in a late Letter from Chancellor Hyde to Dr. Barwick.

I cannot more reaſonably preſume of doing ſome good by it, than by making uſe of the firſt Fruits of it in the Service of God and his Church. And firſt in tendering the moſt humble Submiſſion of the reverend Fathers of it to his ſacred Majeſty by your Lordſhip's Mediation, and their dutiful Acknowledgement of his pious and princely Care of her: And next in preſenting their humble Thanks to your Lordſhip, for the many good Offices you have done for her. And in this Rank, the Biſhop of Ely and the Biſhop of Saliſbury deſire to have a particular mention, as being more particularly obliged to your Lordſhip for your particular Expreſſions to them. The grand Affair of the Church is ſtill in Motion towards that happy Concluſion, which his ſacred Majeſty is ſo piouſly zealous for, with what ſpeed may reaſonably be uſed in a Matter of ſo great Importance and Difficulty. The Liſt of Names and Places which his Majeſty was pleaſed to ſend, hath much facilitated the Work in ſeveral Inſtances; for thereby are cut off all Occaſions of Diſpute in relation to the Number, Perſons, and Sees. And as for the manner of Proceeding in that great Work, your Lordſhip is humbly deſired to aſſure his Majeſty, that they have adviſed with the beſt Council at Law this Place affords, not only in order to the ſecuring of the Work and their own Perſons, but alſo for the Defence of his Majeſty's Prerogative from the leaſt Hazard of any Infringement which they always intended, and ſtill reſolve to preſerve

In a Supply of the vacant Sees by a Conſecration of new Biſhops.

For which his Majeſty had ſent over a Liſt of Places and Perſons nominated by him.

And they had advis'd with Council, how to conſecrate them in the ſafeſt Manner.

Conſiſtent with the royal Prerogative, and the Uſage of the primitive Church.

The very Being of the Church depending on the Succession of Bishops.

The Bishops of Ely and Sarum chiefly intrusted in this Affair, Objections had been made of the Difficulty of the Work in such bad Times.

ſerve inviolable: And that being done, they are fully aſſured of his Majeſty's Piety and Goodneſs in giving way, that this great Affair (upon which not only the Security, but the very Being of this Church may poſſibly hereafter depend) may be tranſacted in ſuch a Method, as may beſt ſtop the Mouths of all Adverſaries, and be moſt agreeable to the Canons and Practice of the primitive Church (eſpecially in the firſt four general Councils) and give the greateſt Security to the Perſons of all that ſhall be concern'd in it (either as Conſecrators or Conſecrated) from any Perſecution that may poſſibly be raiſed againſt them for it, in Caſe it cannot be concealed. I perceive by ſeveral Paſſages of your Lordſhip's late Letters, what an high Eſteem you have of the Biſhop of Ely, and the Biſhop of Saliſbury, in this Cauſe; and to ſay nothing of the reſt, I can aſſure your Lordſhip, that ſince the heavy Burthen of ſoliciting this Buſineſs was impoſed upon me, nothing hath either been acted or deſigned, but by their full Approbation; nor any thing omitted, which they thought neceſſary: So that all the Delays which have intervened, have proceeded from the Difficulty of ſo weighty a Work in ſo bad Times, and will be taken off as ſoon as poſſibly may be.

And different Apprehenſions in the Biſhops themſelves.

The beſt Expedient among the ſeveral Propoſals.

I have herewith ſent your Lordſhip, an Extract out of the laſt Letter I received from the one of them (that I may give your Lordſhip ſome better Aſſurance than my bare Word, what their Apprehenſions are as to this Particular) for it fully agrees with what I found to be the Senſe of the other upon ſeveral Diſcourſes, excepting only that Paſſage of the Unſeaſonableneſs of the Time. It was occaſioned by what your Lordſhip commanded me to ſignify to him (which I did in terminis) together with what I could collect from the Diſcourſe of Mr. Alleſtrey, was your Lordſhip's Senſe upon the Caſe. There is nothing in it which your Lordſhip will not ſee to the Bottom without my Commentary, excepting that Paſſage—— But for the Manner propoſed, &c. and the Expedient thereupon which I mentioned to him. And to clear this, I muſt beg your Lordſhip's Patience, firſt to hear what I collected from the Meſſenger's Diſcourſe, and then what I propoſed by way of Expedient.

The old Way of capitular Elections not practicable.

Some therefore for Collation by the King, without Conge d'Elire, as in Ireland.

Or for Collation by Vertue of a Lapſe to the Crown, upon Non-Election in the Chapters.

Which yet might impair the royal Prerogative.

The Biſhop of Ely's Opinion, againſt the Collation to Biſhopricks:

And thinks the Liberty of electing ought to be reſtored to Ireland; upon his Majeſty's Reſtoration.

For the former, (if I miſtook not) I conceive your Lordſhip's Senſe was, that the Proceeding ought to be by a Mandate from his Majeſty to any three or four Biſhops by way of Collation, upon the Lapſe for the Dean and Chapter's Non-Election: And that your Lordſhip grounded this Method, 1. Upon his Majeſty's Prerogative; 2. Upon a former Conſultation with the Biſhop of Ely; And 3. Upon the conſtant Practice in Ireland: In all which Particulars I ſhall give your Lordſhip a faithful Account of the Senſe of our beſt Friends here, and then ſubmit the Matter to your Lordſhip's ſecond Thoughts. Firſt, it is the Opinion of them all, that the Suppoſal of a Lapſe would more impair the King's Prerogative, than the Collation could advance it; becauſe it would preſuppoſe a Power of Election pleno jure in the Deans and Chapters, which they have only de facultate Regia. And for them to petition for ſuch a Licence would be as difficult, as to elect if they had it; many of the Deans being dead, ſome Chapters extinguiſhed, and all of them ſo diſturbed, as they cannot meet in the Chapter Houſe, where ſuch Acts regularly are to be performed: And beſide this, ſuch Petitions were never attempted till the King's Pleaſure was intimated to them, that they might petition, which was the Cauſe of the long Vacancy of ſome Biſhopricks. 2. For the Biſhop of Ely his own Anſwer is, that what he delivered as his Opinion in the former Conſultation, was to ſupply thoſe Defects that could not be avoided in capitular Elections (ſuppoſing always the Neceſſity of ſome Election, according to the conſtant Practice of the whole Church of Chriſt) and that ſince he conſidered the Method now on Foot, he is clearly of Opinion, it will conſiſt as well with his Majeſty's Prerogative, and much more with the antient Canons of the Church. And 3. for the Practice in Ireland, the ſame reverend Perſon's Reply to me was, that he did not more deſire to live to ſee his Majeſty's Face for any other Cauſe, than that he might become an humble Petitioner, that the like Liberties might be reſtored to the Church of Ireland which are continued in England; which would be a great Honour to his Majeſty here, and a greater Happineſs hereafter. And if your Lordſhip pleaſe to appoint any to turn over Binius (Tom. 3. to Page 332. of the Paris Edit.) you will find the Senſe of that famous Council of Chalcedon as to the Particular, in a Caſe not only reſolved by the Fathers, according to the Laws of the Church, but judged by the Emperor's Commiſſioners in that Council, to ſtand in Force for future Practice. And this is one of thoſe four Councils, which were always held of greateſt Veneration in the Church, and are ſtill ſo much countenanced by the Laws of England.

The Expedient of a royal Commiſſion to the Biſhops of each Province, to elect and conſecrate fit Perſons, for every void See.

The Biſhops to certifie, and the King to ratify and confirm.

Now for the Expedient mentioned in my Letter to D. T. it was, that his Majeſty would be pleaſed to grant his Commiſſion to the Biſhops of each Province reſpectively, to elect and conſecrate fit Perſons to ſuch and ſuch Sees, either Aſſembled in provincial Council, or otherwiſe, as they ſhould find moſt convenient, (his Majeſty ſignifying, as he hath done, his Pleaſure concerning the Places and Perſons) with ſuch diſpenſative Clauſes, as ſhould be found neceſſary upon the Emergency of the Fact; which Commiſſions may bear Date before the Action, though all Contingencies which may be neceſſary to be diſpenſed with, cannot be ſo clearly foreſeen, as to have them drawn up, till the Thing be done: And then afterward upon Certificate and Petition, to have his Majeſty's Ratification and Confirmation of the whole Proceſs; and the Regiſter to be drawn up accord-

Yet Doubts and Queſtions will ariſe, to be ſatisfied by ſending over a fit Perſon to the King.

accordingly by the chief [illegible], who may take the [illegible] up the Record there. And if this ſeem reaſonable to your Lordſhip for the Preſervation of his Majeſty's Prerogative, it would be one of the greateſt Obligations you can lay upon the Fathers and Sons of this poor Church, to ſatisfy his Majeſty in the whole and every Branch of it. I know, when I have wearied your Lordſhip with this tedious Diſcourſe, there may be ſeveral Doubts and Queſtions raiſed upon it, which I hope I could give more clear Satiſfaction unto, if I were preſent. And therefore I humbly deſire, that the Merits of the Cauſe may neither depend upon this Diſtance of Place, nor the Haſte I write in, and leaſt of all upon the Inabilities of the Manager of it. I hope your Lordſhip's candid Interpretation of all Things, will make this Letter ſupply the Want of ſending ſome Perſon to give an Account of this Affair, and perhaps him who is moſt unfitting in ſeveral Reſpects for ſuch an Employment, and who, to the beſt of his Power, will not be idle (as Occaſion is offered) though he be excuſed in this Particular.

The King had not yet named a Perſon for the See of Carliſle.

Some regard to be had to the keeping a Balance between Oxford and Cambridge Men.

I have no more to add upon this Account, but only that ſeeing none is yet nominated for Carliſle, it is the Biſhop of Ely's Opinion (and his Pleaſure I ſhould ſignify it as ſuch) that your Lordſhip may do his Majeſty good Service in minding him, that it hath been always the Prudence of our former Princes, to keep ſome Equality of the Balance between the two Univerſities (cæteris paribus) for the general Encouragement of Learning, whereunto his Majeſty may ſtill caſt in a Grain in the Nomination to this Place, (if ſo it be his Pleaſure) which otherwiſe, he obſerveth, will be overpoiſed, when he conſiders, both who are already in the Stock, and who are deſigned for the Supply. I muſt add his Proteſtation, that this is ſaid without Inſinuation of any particular Perſon, which both he and the reſt deſire may proceed freely from his Majeſty's Choice: And they bleſs God for his Majeſty's Care and Prudence in making Choice of ſo many worthy Perſons for that great Burthen of the Government of the Church, and the ſettling the Affairs thereof, when it ſhall pleaſe God to vouchſafe us ſo great a Mercy.

The next Care was, for the Diſpoſal of Deaneries to worthy Perſons.

Deaneries of Weſtminſter and Chriſt Church.

One Thing more I muſt acknowledge, Mr. Alleſtrey ſignified to me as your Lordſhips Pleaſure, that I would ſend your Lordſhip Precedents of the Patents for the D. of W. and Ch. Ch. And I had not omitted it, if he had not promiſed me a Copy of the latter from Oxford, which I have not yet received: When it comes, I hope I ſhall ſupply the other from the Rolls, or if it comes not, tranſcribe them both, if there be any Difference (for I gueſs they may there be had) and ſend them upon ſome other Opportunity. In the Interim, and ever, I am.

Indiſpoſition of the Biſhop of London a great Hindrance.

Biſhop Juxon of London.

For the Buſineſs of the Church, the continued great Indiſpoſition of B. L. (a Perſon very uſeful every Way) makes a new Difficulty in it. I am very much urged by ſome of the reſt to take a Journey to him, which I am very loth to do at this Time, when there may be other Uſe of me here. They are deſirous the Chaſm of Carliſle may be ſupplied while other Things are preparing. It will be a hard Work to do it as it ought. I have made ſome Enquiry into Matters of this Nature, the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, and find it no Phraſe of Courſe in the Statute (8 Eliz. c. 1.) when they ſpeak of the great Caution was then uſed, for which they refer to the Records. ——

—— I ſhould be glad to hear that you had prevailed with the young Gentleman to beſtow ſome of his Time upon Leviathan. And I beſeech you preſent my humble Service to his Father, upon whom no Man looks with more Reverence; and I pray God that his not being at Liberty, be not the Cauſe that nothing is done in the Buſineſs of Ordination. I am ſure the King can do no more in it, and is exceedingly afflicted, that they who can, do not, when they know his Majeſty's Pleaſure ſo particularly in all Things concerning it. I pray tell me whether my Lord of Ely doth not think, that my very good Friend Dr. Coſins ‡ hath proceeded farther than he needed to have done, upon any Provocation Mr. Fuller could have given him. The Prudence of the General in continuing cautious and cloſe, and ſending his Letters by his own Chaplain, as moſt likely in Silence to learn the Motions of others.

Mercur. Polit. p. 1018.

A Letter from General Monk from Woller of the third of January 1659. was read in the Houſe. Ordered, that the ſaid Letter be referred to the Council, and that the Council of State do alſo take into Conſideration ſome Recompence for the Meſſenger.

Life of General Monk by Dr. Gumble, 8vo.

The General ſent Letters by his Chaplain Mr. Gumble, to the Speaker of Parliament, to the Council of State, and to the Commiſſioners of the Army, with Copies of his Letters to the Lord Mayor and Common Council of London, all in cautious and general Terms, without the leaſt Intimation of any other Deſign, than that of ſerving the Parliament, and ſecuring the preſent Adminiſtration. His chuſing ſuch a Meſſenger was to remove thoſe Jealouſies which ſome of his Faction had entertained, and to be the better informed of their Motions, and who among them had the greateſt Intereſt and Power.

his Majeſty had a ſecret Correſpondence with ſome principal Officers in his Army, who were much truſted by him, and had promiſed great Services; and it was preſum'd that they would undertake no ſuch perilous Engagement without his Privity and Connivance. —— The Truth is, thoſe Officers had honeſt Inclinations, and as wiſe Men had concluded, that from thoſe frequent Shuffles, ſome Game at laſt might fall out, that might prove to the King's Advantage, and ſo were willing to beſpeak their own Welcome by an early Application, which in regard of the Perſons truſted by them, they concluded would be attended with no Danger. But it never appear'd they ever gave the General the leaſt Cauſe to imagine they had any ſuch Affection; and if they had, 'tis likely they had paid dearly for it. And it was the King's great Happineſs, that the General never own'd his purpoſe to ſerve his Majeſty, till it fell to be in his Power, and indeed was the beſt Thing in his Power to do. If he had declar'd his Reſolution ſooner, he had been deſtroyed himſelf; the whole Machine being ſo infinitely above his Strength, that it could be only moved by a divine Hand; and it is Glory enough to his Memory, that he was God's Inſtrument in bringing thoſe mighty Things to paſs, which undoubtedly, no one Man living had of himſelf, either Wiſdom enough to foreſee, or Underſtanding to contrive, or Courage to attempt and execute.

Lord Clarendon's Hiſtory, Fol. Vol. III. p. 553.

Had he betray'd his Deſign he had fail'd in it: Better to ſeem a paſſive Inſtrument in the Hand of God.

If any ſhall object, why he did no ſooner make Addreſſes to the King, he was too wiſe to truſt his Life and Fortunes in the Hands of many indigent Courtiers, and knew too well how many there were ſecret Penſioners to the uſurped Powers. He was not ignorant that an Addreſs from him to the King of that Nature, to promiſe his Endeavour of his Reſtitution, would not long have been kept within the Cabinet, but crept abroad among the little Spies and Intelligencers, and flew over into England, to bring his Ruin along with it, and a Diſappointment of his intended Service.

And his own Chaplain gives another good Reaſon of his not correſponding with the King, viz. his not daring to truſt any of the needy Courtiers.

Ordered that the Buſineſs touching Members of Parliament againſt whom Matters are objected, be taken into Conſideration this Day ſe'nnight.

Mercur. Polit. by Order of Parl. p. 1019.

A Bill diſabling Perſons to elect, or to be elected, was this Day read the firſt Time, and to be read again to Morrow Morning.

And model an Army of their own.

The Houſe appointed to Morrow Morning, to take into Conſideration the Settlement of the Officers of the Army.

And this Name of a Parliament did ſtrike ſuch a Terror abroad, that the Miniſters of France and Spain, who had intended to aſſiſt the King, and probably were under ſecret Articles or Promiſes ſo to do, ſeem'd now to drop their Deſigns, and ſeek for new Alliances with this new Commonwealth.

While the Diviſions had continued in the Army, and the Parliament ſeem'd entirely depoſed and laid aſide, and no Body imagin'd a Poſſibility of any Compoſition without Blood; the Cardinal of France, and the Spaniſh Miniſters, ſeem'd ready and prepared to advance any Deſign of the King's. But when they ſaw all thoſe Contentions and raging Animoſities compoſed or ſuppreſſed, without one broken Head, and thoſe very Men again in Poſſeſſion of the Government and Army, who had been ſo ſcornfully rejected and trampled upon, and who had it now in their Power, as well as their Purpoſe, to level all thoſe Preheminences which had overlook'd them, they look'd upon the Parliament, as more ſecurely ſettled againſt domeſtick Diſturbances, and much more formidably with reference to their Neighbours, than it had been under Cromwell himſelf; and thought of nothing more, than how to make advantageous and firm Alliances with it.

their Army, and to have no Man in any such Extent of Command, as to be able to controul their Councils. Then his Majesty judges they were jealous of Monk's Fidelity, how much soever they courted him at that Time, and therefore he would think himself obliged to provide for his own Safety and Security.

The Houſe agreed upon a Commiſſion conſtituting Colonel Morley Lieutenant of the Tower. —— And approved of Colonel Unton Crook to be Colonel of the Regiment of Horſe late Colonel Berry's. —— Colonel Walton appointed Colonel of the Regiment late Colonel Morley's: And Sir Anthony Aſhley Cowper to be Colonel of that Regiment of Horſe late the Lord Fleetwood's.

In the late Changes and Convulſions, the City of London *had been the greateſt Sufferers, and were the moſt deſirous of a legal Settlement. To Day the Sword-Bearer (formerly ſent from the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Council of the City of London, with a Letter to General Monk) returned home, having met his Excellency at Morpeth, where he delivered his Letter, and was very civilly treated by him; then accompanying his Excellency to Newcaſtle, thence to Durham; he there left him on his March towards London, having received a Letter from him, in anſwer to that he delivered; in order whereto, a Common-Council will be held this Thurſday, to whom it will be communicated.

Monk in the mean Time is repreſented as coming up only to attend the Parliament.

By a Letter from Newcaſtle, dated 6 Jan. it is certified, That General Monk being advanced into England to come hither in Perſon, and attend the Service of the Parliament, he arrived that Day in Newcaſtle; that the Day before three of his Regiments marched through that Town; and the reſt of the Forces which he brought from Scotland are following, the whole being between five and ſix thouſand, whereof three Regiments are Horſe. His Lordſhip is ſuppoſed to be this Night at or not far from York, and it is expected he will within ſeven or eight Days be here.

The Cavaliers began to grow ſanguine.

The Hopes of the Cavaliers upon this Occaſion were ſo luxuriant, that ſome durſt pray for his Succeſs, others not only drink his Health but the King's too, and that publickly. Nay, he had not marched many Days from his cold Quarters on the North of Tweed (his March being without Orders too) before the Sound of Bells that welcomed us into England, had filled the Ears even of his very Officers with the Noiſe of Jealouſies and Apprehenſions, touching the end of his making this long Journey. And though they had learned the Duty of Soldiers not to mutiny, no nor ſo much as to expoſtulate with him; yet it was evident that ſeveral of them deemed there was more in the Action than did openly appear.

The King's Intereſt lay moſt in the Weſt, and the Gentry were there thought inclinable to riſe. Colonel Crook ordered to march with his Regiment and ſecure thoſe Parts.

By Letters out of Cornwal it is ſignified, That lately there were ſome Perſons which gave Occaſion of ſuſpecting ſome Deſign on Foot to work Diſturbance, but upon Information brought them, that the Parliament was re-ſitting, all is quiet again, and the Gentry are reſolved to aſſiſt in preſerving the Peace. Nevertheleſs, Colonel Unton Crook is ordered to march with his Regiment into the Weſt, and quarter there, to have an Eye to the Peace and Security of thoſe Parts.

THURSDAY, Jan. 12.

It was now too late for the Houſe to put the General out of Humour: And therefore however jealous, they receive his Meſſenger and Letters with all ſuitable Reſpects.

The Meſſenger [Mr. Gumble] who brought the Letter from General Monk, being at the Door of the Houſe was called in, and being at the Bar, made a Relation of what General Monk had given him in Charge. —He was ordered an hundred Pounds for his Pains and Travel, and is to be conſidered for Preferment. The Particulars related by Mr. Gumble are referred to the Council of State.

Mercur. Polit. 4to.

And order an Act to indemniſy him, and to ſupply him with Money, to keep him and his Army their humble Servants.

Reſolved, That the Parliament doth juſtifie and approve of what General Monk hath done, and in his marching into England, and all other Things by him acted and done in order to the Service of the Parliament. Ordered, That an Act for juſtifying and approving of what General Monk hath done be brought in accordingly. And the Committee of Inſpections are to call the Treaſurers to Account for the 20000 l. aſſigned to the Forces in Scotland, and to conſider how Monies may be provided for preſent Supply of the Forces under the Command of General Monk.

If my Lord Mordaunt be with you, you have received the King's two Letters for your two Friends, and I long very much to hear, what they both think of Monk, who I hope hath not with this Formality diſclaimed the King at the Head of every Regiment, as I hear Sir Arthur Haſlerig reports.

The Gentry in Northamptonſhire had been well diſpoſed to riſe for the King, diſcourag'd by the Rump re-poſſeſſing the Houſe and Name of Parliament.

And if they continue to ſit would make a formidable Republick.

I ſhould be glad to find that our Friends in Northamptonſhire have done themſelves no harm by their late Motions, and that as many honeſt Men get into the Houſe upon the new Elections, as is poſſible. Theſe quick Revolutions without a broken Head do aſtoniſh all People abroad. That if the Rump ſit at any Time without new Confuſion, it will get Reputation abroad, and be acknowledged by their Neighbours as a ſettled Republick. The King left an Acquittance with Sir Thomas Bond for the two hundred Pounds, but ſince you deſire a diſtinct Acquittance for each Sum, I ſend them here to you, and you may make uſe of the other upon another Occaſion. I pray remember me very kindly to Mr. Cholmeley, as my good Friend, of whom I have a great Eſteem.

Moſt of the King's Friends were in a very low Condition.

Grig. Palden laments his Condition to me, which I know not how otherwiſe to remedy, than by recommending him to you, as I have formerly done; preſuming that when you have Money, you will aſſiſt him. I would fain hear that our ſick Friend is perfectly recovered. God ſend us once well to meet. I am ever, Sir,

The Coming of the General to York, after the diſperſing of Lambert's Forces.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, 8vo. p. 189.

General Monk arrived this Day at York, where he took up his Quarters for five Days, and by his own Authority modell'd and diſpos'd of ſuch Forces as he found in the Country, that had belong'd to Lambert, whoſe Regiment of Horſe he gave to Colonel Bethel, as a Reward of his Service in joining with the Lord Fairfax; and the Regiment which had been Lilburne's he diſpos'd to Major Smithſon, and made him Colonel of it, he having brought it off to the Lord Fairfax and his Party. During his Stay here, he received a Viſit from the Lord Fairfax, with whom he had much ſecret Diſcourſe, and they din'd together privately in the General's Chamber, while the Officers and Attendants were entertained publickly. The ſame Night Mr. Bowles, who was Chaplain and Agent to the Lord Fairfax, was directed by his Lordſhip to confer with the General, and was privately with him 'till after Midnight; repreſenting to him the Inclination of the Country, and the Force that would be in Readineſs to join with him, if he would ſtay with them there, and at York declare for the King. But the General who very well knew, that ſuch an Attempt would preſently turn all the different Parties in union againſt him, and that his own Army was not yet enough refin'd in their Principles and Temper to engage with him in ſuch an Adventure, would by no Means admit of the Propoſal. —— Here he received Orders from the Juncto to keep on his Way to London, —— being jealous of his Stay in that County. —— He had already caſ'd one of his Officers here, who had adventur'd to ſay, General Monk will at laſt let in the King among us; and to remove all Umbrage and Apprehenſion from among them, he reſolved here to leſſen his Army, and from York ſent back Major General Morgan, with two Regiments of Horſe and Foot to take Care of Scotland.

Lord Fairfax had made way for him, and comes to viſit him, bringing his Chaplain Mr. Bowles to confer with him.

But the General thought it not ſafe to hear of any Motion for the King.

And caſ'd an Officer for ſaying, the General would let in the King.

Mercur. Polit. by Order of Parliament, No. 603. p. 1024.

The Speaker being in the Chair acquainted the Houſe, that he was much indiſpoſed in his Health, and therefore prayed, that for his Health Sake he might have Liberty to retire for ten Days.

Ordered, That in reſpect of Mr. Speaker's Indiſpoſition of Body, he have Liberty to retire himſelf for ten Days, for the neceſſary Recovery of his Health; but if his Health do permit, that he attend the Service of the Parliament ſooner, —— and that Mr. Say be appointed Speaker pro Tempore.

The Great Seal delivered into the Cuſtody of Mr. Speaker Lenthall.

Ordered, That the Great Seal of England be delivered into the Hands of William Lenthall, Eſq; Speaker of the Parliament, and that he keep the ſame in his Cuſtody, until the Parliament takes further Order.

Commiſſions in the Army given to the King's Judges, and other deſperate Offenders.

Commiſſions given out to Sir Arthur Haſlerigg, Colonel Valentine Walton, Colonel Matthew Alured, Colonel John Streater, and to ſeveral other Officers.

Dr. Price's Reſtoration of the King, 8vo Ep. Ded.

This was done out of Jealouſie of Monk; for the Parliament did not well reliſh his haſty March. Yet they could not in Gratitude refuſe him and his Army the Liberty of a Viſit: And beſides, ſhould they by expreſs Orders remand him back to his Scotiſh Quarters, they could not be aſſured of Security at Home for the future, becauſe the Engliſh Army being but newly returned to their Duty, did not appear to be faſt and well confirmed: They fearing that Ambition in their Officers was rather laid aſleep than extinguiſhed. And indeed they did

He is by this Time ſuppoſed to be at or near Newark. Several of the Forces he hath diſpoſed in the North, for Security of thoſe Parts; and he marcheth hitherward with threeſcore and ſix Companies of Foot, and two and twenty Troops of Horſe, to attend the Service of the Parliament.

From Bruſſels they adviſe, That the Princeſs of Orange and her three Brothers have been highly treated here by the Marquis of Caracena. The Train of that Family increaſeth from ſeveral Parts of Flanders and the United Provinces. The Prince of Condé, when he went hence, made them many large Compliments of Service; the Great Ones of this Court have by Turns feaſted them, and all the Talk now in this City is of the great Hopes they have in England.

A Declaration of the Gentry of the County of Devon, at their Quarter-Seſſions held at Exeter, ſent up by Mr. Bampfield, to be delivered to the Speaker, January 14.

The Devonſhire Declaration for recalling the ſecluded Members.

It was deliver'd to the Speaker at the Rolls by Tho. Bampfield, Eſq; Recorder, Jan. 17.

We the Gentry of the County of Devon, finding ourſelves without a regular Government after your laſt Interruption, deſigned a publick Meeting to conſult Remedies, which we could not ſo conveniently effect 'till this Week at our general Quarter-Seſſions at Exon, where we found divers of the Inhabitants groaning under high Oppreſſions, and a general Defect of Trade, to the utter Ruin of many, and Fear of the like to others (which is as viſible in the whole County) that occaſioned ſuch Diſorders, that were no ſmall Trouble and Diſturbance to us, which by God's Bleſſing upon our Endeavours, were ſoon ſuppreſſed without Blood. And though we find ſince our laſt Purpoſes an Alteration in the State of Affairs by your re-aſſembling at the Helm of Government, yet conceive that we are but in part redreſſed of our Grievances; and that the chief Expedient for it will be the Re-calling of all thoſe Members that were ſecluded in 1648. and ſat before the firſt Force upon the Parliament; and alſo by filling up the vacant Places; and all to be admitted without any Oath and Engagement, previous to their Entrance. For which Things if you pleaſe to take a ſpeedy Courſe, we ſhall defend you againſt all Oppoſers and future Interrupters, with our Lives and Fortunes. For the Accompliſhment whereof we ſhall uſe all lawful Means, which we humbly conceive may beſt conduce to the Peace and Safety of this Nation.

And filling up the vacant Places.

And ſuch Members to be admitted, without any Oath or Engagement.

For the Peace and Safety of the Nation.

Subſcrib'd by the chief Gentry.

This Declaration of the County of Devon was ſubſcribed by above forty of the chief Gentlemen of that County, whereof five were of the Number of the ſecluded Members, viz. Sir Francis Drake, Sir John Northcot, Knights, William Morris, Ellis Grimes, ... Vowel, Eſquires.

A Continuation of the State of Religion among the Biſhops and epiſcopal Clergy, in a Letter from Mr. Chancellour Hyde to Mr. John Barwick, Sollicitor in thoſe Affairs at London, dated from Bruſſels, July 8, 1659.

Life of Dr John Barwick, 8vo, Engl.

The King very deſirous of continuing the Succeſſion of Biſhops.

S I R,

I have received yours of the 20th of the laſt Month, which is exceedingly ſatisfactory to the King in all Particulars. His Majeſty forbears to write himſelf, [illegible], having nothing to add to what he hath formerly ſaid, and cannot wiſh the Buſineſs with reference to the ſeveral Perſons in a better Way than you have put it; only he deſires, that as frequently as you meet with fit Opportunities, you will advertiſe him of the Progreſs you make. And the Truth is, he is not better pleas'd with the general Account of Affairs from any Body, than what you write.

I am ſo fully convinced by your Diſcourſe in the Buſineſs of the Church, that I think myſelf obliged to make ſome Apology for the Obſtinacy I might ſeem to have when Mr. Alleſtrey was here, and to tell you from whence it proceeded. You muſt know that we have always thought this Affair of ſuch a Nature, that it is as neceſſary to make it a Secret here, as where you are: And the Truth is, except it be to my Lord of Ormond, and Secretary Nicholas and myſelf, there is not the leaſt thing of it known, nor upon my Conſcience imagined. It hath been no ſmall Affliction to me, that I have not had any to converſe with, in a Point of ſo much Difficulty, who underſtands more of it than myſelf, which God knows is too little. And that Affliction hath been increaſed by the very poſitive Difference of Opinion, between thoſe, by whom I am very willing to be inſtructed. The Biſhop of Derry was, and I think ſtill is ſo poſitive for the Iriſh Way (which I think he wiſhes introduced into England) that no Way ſeemed ſo ſafe to him, as conſecrating all the Perſons to void Sees in Ireland, and then removing them to others in England, which he thought would clearly elude all thoſe Formalities which ſeem to perplex us. Dr. Coſins (who to my Judgment underſtood the Affair much better, and in no Degree liked the other Way) aſſured me, that he had the Biſhop of Ely's full Approbation of the Form propoſed by him, of which I informed his Majeſty. And upon that Ground and that Foundation we adhered to that Method and Order; much preferring the Biſhop of Ely's Judgment and Advice, in that Point, before any Man's: And upon the ſame Ground his Majeſty is very willing to change, and acquieſce in the Opinion and Reſolution now propos'd; and leaves the whole Diſpatch of it entirely to their Care, both for the Time and the Manner. Only I muſt deſire, that the Form of ſuch a Commiſſion, as is there judged neceſſary, may be ſent us to a Letter, ſince I cannot have any Help here; and then I will be accountable for the Secrecy. I will make another Excuſe to you for that Impatience which [might] appear in me, both in what I have written to the Biſhop of Saliſbury, and what I might ſay to Mr. Alleſtrey, with reference to the Time, and to all poſſible Haſte in the Finiſhing it. I will not mention the Age of the Conſecrators; though it hath put me into many a Fright. But I will tell you a Fancy of my own, which I will acknowledge to you, hath been more the Ground of that Impatience; though it be but a Fancy, and never yet communicated to any Perſon. The late Revolutions in England, and the ſeveral Humours and Diſtempers, and Jealouſies in ſeveral Factions amongſt themſelves, make it a very natural Suppoſition, that there may fall out ſome avowed Treaty with the King; and then the Preſbyterians will not be overmodeſt, in valuing and computing their own Power; though I may tell you, I know them to be as far from Union as any other Party. If I were a Preſbyterian (and they have many wiſer Men, and who know better how to compaſs what themſelves deſire) I would not propoſe to the King to do any formed Act to the Prejudice of the Church, becauſe I ſhould deſpair of prevailing with him; but I would beſeech him to ſuſpend the doing any thing that ſhould contribute to the former Eſtabliſhment, 'till there might be ſuch a mature Deliberation, that the beſt Proviſion might be made to compoſe all Differences: And if I could prevail thus far, I ſhould hope by ſome continued Suggeſtions (which would be ſpeciouſly enough adminiſtred by Perſons of very diſtinct Intereſts) to ſpin out the Time, 'till all the Biſhops were dead: You may eaſily believe, there would be Concurrence enough in ſuch an Overture, from Perſons far enough from Preſbyterians. In a Word, it would be grateful to too many; and not reſolutely enough oppos'd by others, who in Truth mean well, but are not yet convinced of the Miſchief of Compliance in Things which they call ſmall. If any ſuch Overtures ſhall at any Time be made to the King; I doubt not, but he will diſcern the End, and conſequently not conſent to them: Yet I do wiſh in all Events, that the Succeſſion were provided for. And now I have made you my Confeſſor; and if the Conſideration be of Moment, it will prevail with thoſe who can give the Remedy.

The chief Affair muſt be kept as a great Secret, as it really was in the King's Court.

Dr. Bramhall Biſhop of Derry, and Dr. Coſin Dean of Peterborough, divided in their Opinions.

Dr. John Coſin, after Bp. of Durham.

Biſhop Wren.

The Biſhop of Ely's Judgment of the greateſt Weight.

Deſires the Form of a Commiſſion from the King to the Biſhops.

The more need of Expedition, becauſe if amidſt the many Changes, there ſhould happen to be a Treaty with the King, the Preſbyterians would value themſelves upon their own Power; and either inſiſt upon having no Biſhops, or at leaſt no Succeſſion of them.

But to ſpin out the Time till they were all dead.

The greater Reaſon to provide for a Succeſſion.

I pray remember my Service with all imaginable Reverence to my Lord of Ely, and aſſure him, that the King will always return that Candour, Benignity, and Equality to both the Univerſities, which he wiſhes; and I hope all, who ſhall be entruſted by him in that great Affair, will be as juſt and diſpaſſioned in all their Interpoſitions, and look upon them as equal Lights to Learning and Piety, and equally worthy of all Encouragement and Protection. And if at preſent my Lord of Ely will recommend any Perſon to his Majeſty for the Biſhoprick of Carliſle, he ſhall be approved: And if my Lord will tranſmit a Liſt of Perſons to be ſpecially recommended to the King for any Dignities in the Church; I dare promiſe the Perſons ſhall find, that they could not have been better recommended. I know not what more to add, but my hearty Service to your ſick Friend, whoſe Health I pray for, as a publick Concernment. To yourſelf I ſhall ſay no more, but that I ſhall think myſelf very faulty, if I do not ſerve you very heartily; and if you do you will the firſt receive ſome Evidence of the Senſe the King hath of your Service. I am heartily, Sir,

The greateſt Confidence was put in the Biſhop of Ely, Dr. Wren.

In recommending Perſons fit to be Biſhops.

I pray deliver the incloſ'd to Mr. Cooper.

Your moſt affectionate Servant,
Hyde.

The Kirk of Scotland profeſs an entire Confidence in General Monk, but ſend an Agent of their own to attend upon him, Mr. James Sharp, who they think betray'd his Truſt, and became Archbiſhop of St. Andrews.

January 10. Mr. David Dickſon and Mr. Robert Douglaſs, in their Letter to General Monk, had ſignified their entire Confidence in him as to the Affairs of Scotland, and the Neceſſity of one from them to be near his Perſon, to put him in Mind of what is neceſſary, and acquaint them with the State of Things; and they aſk his Paſs for Mr. James Sharp. Before the Receipt of theirs, the General ordered Mr. Auditor Thompſon to write from York to Mr. Sharp, and in his Name he deſires Mr. Sharp to undertake a winter Journey, and come to him at London with all ſpeed; defers the communicating the Reaſons till he be there, wiſhes he may communicate this with Mr. Douglaſs only, becauſe the General does not deſire this to be made too publick.

Wodrow's Hiſt. of the Ch. of Scotl. Vol. I. Introd. p. 6.

And January 16. the General himſelf writes a Letter from Ferry-Bridge to Meſſ. Dickſon and Douglaſs, in the following Words:

The General promiſes to take Care of the Welfare of their Church in Scotland.

I received yours of the 10th inſtant, and do aſſure you, the Welfare of your Church ſhall be a great Part of my Care, and that you ſhall not be more ready to propound, than I ſhall be to promote any reaſonable Thing that may be for the Advantage thereof: And to that end I have herewith ſent you, according to your Deſire, a Paſs for Mr. Sharp, who the ſooner he comes to me, the more welcome he ſhall be; becauſe he will give me an Opportunity to ſhew how much I am a Well-wiſher to your Church, and to yourſelves

A very humble Servant,
George Monk.

Mr. Bowles preaches before the General at York, and in private Converſation preſs'd him to ſtay there, and declare for the King.

We ſtaid at York five Days, one of them being Sunday, and Mr. Bowles gave us a good Sermon in the Cathedral. This Gentleman was the Lord Fairfax's Chaplain, Counſellor and Agitator, and dealt with the General about weighty and dangerous Affairs: One Night above the reſt, keeping him up ſo very late, that upon my entering the Chamber to go to Prayers, I found him and Bowles in very private Diſcourſe, and the General ordering me to go out for a while, but not to Bed. Some Time after Midnight Bowles went away; ſo that then our Servants hop'd to ſleep: But the General ſent for me in to him, and commanded them to ſtay without as before. He took me cloſe to him, and ſaid, What do you think? Mr. Bowles has preſs'd me very hard to ſtay here and declare for the King, aſſuring me, that I ſhall have great Aſſiſtance. I ſtarted at the Boldneſs of the Propoſition, and aſked him whether he had made Bowles any ſuch Promiſe: He anſwered me, no truly I have not, or I have not yet: For I found him a little perplexed in his Thoughts. I told him a Paſſage, that when Guſtavus King of Sweden enter'd Germany he ſaid, that if his Shirt knew what he intended to do, he would tear it from his back, and burn it. My Application of it to the General, was deſigned to intreat him to ſleep between this and the Walls of London, and when he came within them (which I doubted not would be very ſhortly) then to open his Eyes, and conſider what he had to do.

Dr. Price's Hiſtory of the King's Reſtoration, 8vo. p. 75.

But the General would make no Promiſe of that kind.

Only was to keep his own Counſel.

The Parliament ſend two of their Members moſt averſe to the King, as Meſſengers to General Monk, and Spies upon him; Scot and Robinſon.

The Houſe ordered, that Mr. Scot and Mr. Robinſon be deſired to go to General George Monk, to congratulate with him from the Parliament, for the good Succeſs the Lord hath given to his Endeavours, and to let him know the Senſe they have of his great Service: And that Care is taken by the Parliament for providing Money for his Officers and Soldiers, who are to carry with them a Letter of the Houſe ſignifying ſo much: And that the Parliament are glad to hear of his repairing to London, according to the Deſire of the Parliament. Which Letter was agreed upon, and ordered to be ſigned by William Lenthall Speaker, and ſealed with the Seal of the Parliament.

Mercur. Polit. by Order of Parliament, 4to, p. 1034.

Some Priſoners releas'd on condition of not oppoſing the Parliament.

In a Committee for the Releaſe of Priſoners committed ſince the Interruption of Parliament, Mr. Thomas Bunch and divers other Perſons committed to Lambeth-Houſe contrary to Law, were diſcharged upon their ſubſcribing the Engagement following, viz. We do hereby promiſe, that we ſhall not henceforth engage in any Matter, Act, or Action againſt the preſent Parliament, or Peace of the Commonwealth.

Ibid. p. 1033.

The Council of State are alarm'd from the City with Fears of Plots and Inſurrections.

This Day the Council of State having Information of ſome dangerous Deſign on Foot, upon the Peace and Safety of the City and Commonwealth, by diſcontented Perſons of ſeveral Parties; the greateſt Part of this Night was ſpent in Conſultation concerning the Means of Security: And next Morning in purſuance of the Reſolutions now taken, the Forces of the Army which are quartered hereabouts, being ſeventy eight Companies of Foot, and twenty two Troops of Horſe, marched into the City, and were in ſuch Manner drawn up, and afterwards diſpoſed upon Guards, as might beſt conduce to common Safety.

They ſuffer Advices to be publiſh'd from Bruſſels, of the Scotch King and the Scotch Court there, to repreſent them weak and contemptible and vain in their Hopes.

Letters from Bruſſels Jan. 26. N. S. tell us, the Marquis of Caracene hath Bills of Exchange for a conſiderable Sum remitted out of Spain, for pay of the Soldiery to be diſbanded, &c. A conſiderable Sum is remitted likewiſe for the Supply of the Scotch King, and the upholding his Court, which is now in greater Splendor than formerly was, ſince his coming into this Country. His Followers lowers increaſe from ſeveral Parts, but are not much ſeen about his Court. Of the fugitive Engliſh, Scots and Iriſh, he and his Brother can muſter about three Thouſand: Which are all that are left of the whole Number in the Spaniard's Service, in whoſe Name and upon whoſe account they are ſtill retained.

That Chancellour Hyde and his Maſter, had promis'd all Offices and Places.

That Biſhops were upheld and their Numbers fill'd up; and they with the Deans and Chapters would claim their Lands from the preſent Purchaſers.

The Scotiſh Court here is very frolick, and do talk (as they have done formerly) great Matters of England. Sir Edward Hyde (whom they call Chancellour) is the prime Man in Favour and Counſel, and manageth all the Correſpondencies which they have in England, Scotland, or Ireland, diſpoſeth of all Monies, preferreth whom it pleaſeth him; but the Preferments conſiſt principally in Hopes and Promiſes, by which Means all manner of Offices are pre-diſpoſed, ſo far as his Maſter and he are able to diſpoſe of them. Yea, the very Number of Biſhops is upheld, and ſhould he return, the Deans and Chapters too would be found too to have a Fling at the Purchaſers. They are arrived at a very great Confidence, a Quality they have never wanted, yet have hitherto never had Succeſs.

The King in his low Condition, encourag'd his Friends to act and write for him.

And gave Money to Monſ. P. du Moulin, for reprinting his Book at Paris in Defence of the Royal Cauſe.

Dr. Peter du Moulin's Reply to a Perſon of Honour, 4to. 1675. p. 10. and 40.

Milton's wicked Book againſt the King and Martyr Charles I. in a fluent and florid Stile, was entertained by Friends and Foes, that were Lovers of human Learning both in England and France. I had for my Part (ſaith Dr. Peter du Moulin) ſuch a Jealouſie to ſee that Traytor praiſed for his Language, that I writ againſt him Clamor Regii ſanguinis ad Cœlum. ——— His Lordſhip has call'd me plainly a prating Fool; but I was not held ſuch by the King and his Council, when a French Book of mine in Defence of the Royal Cauſe, was brought to his Majeſty in Paris, by the very reverend Dr. Coſins, two Months before his Majeſty's happy Reſtoration. The Book was judged ſo appoſite for the Intereſt of the King's Affairs, that (being out of Print, for it was printed eleven Years before) his Majeſty commanded it to be reprinted in Paris, and gave ſixteen Lewiſes for a new Edition; a great Sum for his Majeſty to ſpend upon a Book.

TUESDAY Jan. 17.

The Rump purge their Houſe of ſuſpected Members; expell Colonel Sydenham, and ſuſpend and impriſon Major Salway.

Mercur. Polit. 4to. p. 1034.

The Parliament according to former Order took into Debate the Buſineſs touching Members of Parliament, againſt whom Matters are objected. Reſolved, That Colonel Sydenham be diſcharged from being a Member of this Parliament during this Parliament. And that Major Salway be ſuſpended from ſitting in the Parliament, and be ſent to the Tower, there to remain during the Pleaſure of the Parliament.

The Houſe agreed upon a Draught of Letters-Credential for George Downing Envoy extraordinary from the Parliament to the Lords the States-General of the United Provinces.

And fail not to repreſent General Monk and his Army, to be in perfect Obedience to the Authority of this Parliament.

Ibid. p. 1036.

This Week by ſeveral Letters of General Monk to the Parliament, his Lordſhip hath ſignified the Proceedings of himſelf and the Parliament's Army under his Command; as alſo what Courſe he hath taken to model the Forces that are with him in ſuch a manner as may render them moſt ſerviceable; and that he hath thereby reduced them to a fit Temper of Obedience to the preſent Authority of Parliament, confirming the ſame by many large Expreſſions of Aſſurance. And that he maketh all convenient Speed in his March toward London.

Dr. Price's Hiſt. of the Reſtorat. 8vo. p. 82.

Auditor Thompſon from London found us at York, and brought Orders from the Parliament to march towards them; the General expected them ſooner; in the Remainder of the General's March, Thompſon was entertained by him as one of his Counſellors.

The March of the General from York to Mansfield

Life of General Monk by Dr. Skinner, 8vo. p. 190.

General Monk before he marched from York left there a Regiment under the Command of Colonel Fairfax, who being a Native of this County, and very well ally'd and eſteem'd among them, was the moſt proper Perſon to be entruſted with the Care of the City, and the Safety of the County. And now having reduced his Army to four thouſand Foot and one thouſand eight hundred Horſe, he went out of York about January 16, and march'd through the reſt of the County 'till he came to Mansfield in Nottinghamſhire, January the 18th.

His Chaplain Mr. Gumble returns to him from London, and gives him a full Account of his Negotiations there; and of the preſent State of the Parliament, Council, and City.

Mr. Gumble had before kept a Correſpondence with Secretary Scot, of whom he was known when he was Vicar of Wickham in Bucks.

Dr. Price's Hiſtory of the Reſtoration, 8vo. p. 35.

Gumble's Life of Gen. Monk, 8vo. p. 204.

At this Stage his Chaplain and Meſſenger to the Parliament, Mr. Gumble (whom he had diſpatch'd away from Newcaſtle to London) came back to him after three Days Stay in the City, and gave him a particular Account of his Meſſage; that he deliver'd all his Letters according to his Inſtructions; that he had been very ſtrictly examined concerning him, by the Members of Parliament, but moſt particularly by the Council of State. He informed him that ſeveral among them had a very entire Confidence in him, but that among others he was ſuſpected to have ſome concealed Deſign for bringing in the King; which was confirmed by the confident Expectation, which the diſaffected Part of the City had of his Approach. He then acquainted him with the Diviſion in the Council, between those who had taken the Oath [illegible] Enemies, and others that had refused it, and that [illegible] that he, the General being nominated a Member of that Council, (whereof there were thirty one) there would be strong Applications made to engage him in their several Parties. He informed him also that Scot and Robinson, two Members of the Parliament, and of the Council of State, were upon the Road to meet him; that they were sent as Espials upon his Actions and the Temper of his Army, and that having themselves taken the Oath of Abjuration, they would presently be very earnest to engage him therein.

Dr. Price's Restoration of the King, 8vo. 1680. Epist. Dedic. to the Earl of Bath.

Yet General Monk under all this Cover is reported by his own Chaplain to have brought from Scotland his Design, if possible, to restore the King. And for Proof of it his said Chaplain appeals to the Knowledge of Sir John Greenvill, then Earl of Bath, in these Words: Your Lordship may possibly still remember that upon the first introducing of Mr. Nicholas Monk and myself into the King's Presence, you were pleased to assert his Zeal and Readiness to serve his Majesty, and in what Instances he had done it, particularly mentioning his Journey to Scotland, and his Negotiation with his Brother there, as being undertaken upon your express Commands. For he was then the Parson of your own Parish of Kelkhampton in Cornwall, which is a Living of about 300 l. per Ann. and this you had freely bestowed on him without any other Symony, than an Obligation from him to serve the Publick, whenever you had Occasion to make Use of him, you having even then an Eye upon his Brother in Scotland, whom your Family had obliged likewise. Now Mr. Monk at his first Hour of coming to Court, was so just to me, as to inform the King in your Lordship's Presence, that he imparted his Message, and communicated the Concerns of so important an Affair, to me, his Brother's Domestick Chaplain at Dalkeith, and that he found I entertained it willingly, and was careful and faithful in it, &c.

Upon this and other evident Signs of the loyal Inclinations of General Monk, his said Chaplain in the same Epistle complains, that many politick and some spiteful Infidels there are, who will needs look upon General Monk's Design to restore the King as a Post-nate Juggle, fram'd on purpose to salve his Honour, and not to serve the Ends of Truth. — But loyal he was even above the Temptation of Sovereignty itself, &c. See Dr. Price, ib.

Ibid. p. 5.

Sir John Greenvill by an express Messenger, with a Letter in Cypher, directed to Chancellour Hyde at Brussels, proposed the sending of Mr. Nicholas Monk to his Brother in Scotland, which was allow'd; the King leaving the whole Management of the Business to the Secrecy and Prudence of Sir John.

Divers Officers of the Army in Ireland attended the House, and deliver'd a Letter from Sir Hardress Waller and Council of Officers, to signify that the Army there by the extraordinary Providence of God were brought over to the Parliament's Service, and were ready to obey their Commands. And they deliver'd Articles of Impeachment against Colonel John Jones, Mr. Miles Corbet, Colonel Matthew Thomlinson, and Lieutenant General Ludlow, which were read, and those Persons ordered to be suspended from all Powers formerly given to them, and to attend this House to answer their Impeachment of High-Treason.

A canting Declaration from Ireland, by the Regicides and their Partners, who adher'd to the Rump.

The signal Turns of God's Hand challenge of right our signal Observation and Improvement that we may express in our Heart and Life the due Counterpaine of his various Dealings. Providence of late hath wrought Wonders of Mercy, as in these Nations, so particularly in this City and throughout this Land. The Lord hath remember'd us in our low Estate, because his Mercy endures for ever. Who is so great a Stranger in our Israel, that observed not the dreadful Symptoms threatning Ruin to our Religion, and all our Liberties sacred and civil? Hath not God saved us with a Notwithstanding, by the late Dispensation of his gracious Appearances in our greatest Streights and Perplexities? Were not the Mountains of sinful Provocations and strong Oppositions raised up to their Height, to obstruct the great Work of Reformation, so happily begun, and so solemnly engaged for amongst us? Had not the Romish Emissaries and Engineers of Darkness prevailed for to divide and distract, to delude and destroy us? Were not the Hopes of our Common Enemy exceedingly raised up, gaping for the Confusion and Dissolution of Christ's Interest and People in these Nations? Had not the Powers and Policies of Hell prevailed far, and laid the very Necks of Magistracy and Ministry upon the Block of direful Anarchy and arbitrary Rule? Were not all Foundations, religious and politick, so put out of Course in all Relations, as to threaten eminent Ruin both to Church and State? Which Ordinance of God was not slighted, opposed, maligned, and scorned by specious Pretences and strong Delusions? Were not God's own People very deeply guilty of Apostacy and Hypocrisy, of Unfaithfulness and Breach of Covenant in all Relations? Were we not all ready to devour one another by sinful Mistakes and woeful Miscarriages, whilst our ill Neighbours were laughing at us, and combining against us? Did not unclean Spirits range and rage amongst us, possessing many, foaming out their Shame, torturing Souls and all Societies with deadly Convulsions? Were not our Distempers, personal and publick, grown so inveterate, so complicate, and so multiplicious, that our best Physicians could do little else than pity and bewail our expiring Liberties? Was not the Name of Christ, Assuming to themselves the Title of the Israel and the People of God.

The King the Common Enemy.

Confess themselves guilty of Apostacy and Hypocrisy,

And make their chief Adversaries the Anabaptists to have had strong Delusions, and the very Devil in them.

And all muſt have ended as in Germany and Munſter, if God had not ſtopp'd thoſe fanatick Spirits.

For which they admire and rejoice.

Chriſt, and whatſoever was dear unto his People, ready to be made the Scorn and Prey of our ill Neighbours? Were we not haſtening to the ſad Cataſtrophe of the German Tragedy, and Munſter Deſolations, procured by the like fanatick Spirits, which then obſtructed Reformation Work? What Cauſe then have we to admire the miraculous Patience and Bounty of our God, that have made us now the living Monuments of undeſerved Mercy? Should we not adore and celebrate that Good-will of his, who dwelling in this Buſh, hath thus prevented the Conſumption thereof? He that is our God, now appears indeed to be the God of all Salvations, to whom belong all Iſſues from Death, &c.

Mercur. Polit. by Order of Parliament, No 604.

This Day the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City being aſſembled in Common-Council agreed upon certain Perſons, viz. Alderman Fowke, Alderman Vincent, and Colonel Bromſield, to be ſent to General Monk in the Name of the City, to congratulate him touching his good Succeſs, and to preſent him the hearty Thanks of the City, for his Reſpects towards them in particular, &c. who began their Journey the next Morning.

Clarges goes down to wait upon his Brother-in-Law General Monk, to inform him of the Diſpoſition of the People and of the Army.

Appendix to Sir Rich. Baker's Hiſtory, writ or directed by Sir Thomas Clarges, p. 701.

From Mansfield the General advanced this Day to Nottingham, where he was ſeaſonably met the Day following by Commiſſary Clarges, who had privately haſtened down to him with a further Account of the Affairs in London and Weſtminſter; and what Hopes or Jealouſies were entertained concerning him among the different Intereſts and Parties. He informed him that the Forces then in the City were much greater than his own, and commanded by ſuch Officers as were declar'd Enemies to him, except Morley and Fagg.

Daily Addreſſes to the General.

Many Addreſſes were daily made to the General, yet none for the Reſtauration of the King, but generally for the Re-admiſſion of the ſecluded Members, and ſome for a free Parliament; to all which he gave eaſy and undetermined Anſwers.

A Propoſal for implicite Faith and Obedience to the Parliament, in every Thing but the bringing in Charles Stuart.

Dr. Price's Hiſtory of the Reſtauration, 8vo. p. 83.

While the General made a Hault at Nottingham to bring up the Rear of his Army; here our Counſellors had Leiſure to fall into Debates. Amongſt divers other Projects, a Subſcription was propounded, that we ſhould be obedient to the Parliament in all Things, but the bringing in of Charles Stuart. But this was as ſubtilly oppoſed, and at laſt was waved.

The prudent Anſwers made to the Addreſſers.

Clarendon's Hiſtory, Fol. Vol. III. p. 555.

The principal Perſons of all Counties through which the General paſſed, flock'd to him in a Body with Addreſſes to this Purpoſe. —— He received all with much Civility, and few Words; took all Occaſions publickly to declare, that nothing ſhould ſhake his Fidelity to the preſent Parliament; yet privately aſſured thoſe, who he thought it neceſſary ſhould hope well, that he would procure a free Parliament. So that every body promiſed himſelf that which he moſt wiſhed.

The great Jealouſie of the Rump upon the Conduct of General Monk.

The Parliament was far from being confident that Monk was above Temptation: The manner of his March with ſuch a Body, his receiving ſo many Addreſſes from the People, and his treating Malignants ſo civilly ſtartled them much; and though his Profeſſions of Fidelity to the Parliament, and referring all Determinations to their Wiſdom, had a good Aſpect towards them, yet they feared that he might obſerve too much how generally odious they were grown to the People, which might leſſen his Reverence towards them. To prevent this as much as might be, and to give ſome Check to that Licenſe of Addreſſes and Reſort of Malignants, they ſent two of their Members of moſt Credit with them, Scot and Robinſon, under Pretence of giving their Thanks to him for the Service he had done, to continue and be preſent with him, and to diſcountenance and reprehend any Boldneſs that ſhould appear in any Delinquents. But this ſerved but to draw more Affronts upon them; for thoſe Gentlemen who were civilly uſed by the General, would not bear any Diſreſpect from thoſe of whoſe Perſons they had all Contempt; and for the Authority of thoſe who ſent them had no kind of Reverence. As ſoon as the City knew of the deputing thoſe two Members, they likewiſe ſent four of their principal Citizens to perform the ſame Compliments, and to confirm him in his Inclinations to a free Parliament.

Scot and Robinſon were civilly treated by Monk, but affronted by the Gentry.

Mr. Speaker delivered Commiſſions to ſeveral Officers of the Army who were called into the Houſe on that Occaſion. Colonel Okey for a Regiment of Horſe; and in it to Major Richard Wagſtaff, Captain Henry Cleer, Captain Thomas Crowther, Captain Richard Ward, Captain Richard Lindſey for the ſeveral Troops. The Houſe approved of the Officers in Colonel Eyre's Regiment of Foot; in Sir Anthony Aſhley Cooper's Regiment of Horſe; in Colonel Rich's Regiment of Horſe; in the Regiment of Colonel Fitch, and of Officers for the Iſle of Man. The Houſe likewiſe approved of Mr. Thomas Margetts to be Judge Advocate of the Army in England, and of Captain Diſher and Captain Richard Merris to be Adjutant Generals of the Army.

A Letter of the Quakers, to the Cavaliers, upbraiding them with their Spirit of Pride and Oppreſſion, which had ſince entered into their Enemies, and would ſoon confound them.

A Viſitation of Love to the King, 1660. 4to, p. 4.

The Quakers began to conceive that the March of General Monk might tend to diſſipate the preſent Powers, and to reſtore Charles the King. Wherefore about this Time they publiſhed a Letter written in the tenth Month 1659. They thus expreſſed themſelves to the old Cavaliers.

The very ſame Spirit of Pride and Oppreſſion is entered into them [your Enemies] and now lives in them in as high a Meaſure as ever it lived amongſt you; and their Iniquities are well nigh finiſhed, and the Lord will one Way or other correct and reprove them, and they ſhall be dealt with in like manner, as they have dealt with you; for they were no more than a Rod in the Hand of the Lord for a Seaſon, and they muſt alſo be broken and caſt into the Fire: And whether the Lord may ever make Uſe of you to reprove them, as he did of them to reprove you, this I determine not, but leave it to him who can do whatſoever he will by what Inſtruments he pleaſeth. It is true, you have made many Attempts to be revenged upon them, but you have not hitherto proſpered; but could you be humbled and come in to the meek Spirit of the Lord, then might you proſper, but hitherto the Lord hath always defeated you, and bowed you down under a People as unworthy as others, but their Time will come to an End; and ſubmit unto the Will of the Lord in what is come to paſs, and ſeek not Vengeance to yourſelves, and then the Lord will avenge your Cauſe, for the Iniquities of your Adverſaries are ripe. —— And Charles Stuart muſt either be converted to God, and ruled by him, or elſe he can never rightly rule for God in this Nation: Though this I believe, it is not impoſſible, but that he may be a Rod upon them that once ſmote him, and their Oppreſſions and Ambitions may receive a Check through him, &c.

As if they had foreſeen and propheſied the King's Return.

Ibid. p. 5.

Theſe Things were written in a Letter to all the People of your Party, long before there was any viſible Appearance of that which is now come to paſs; whereby it doth appear, that theſe Things in a great meaſure were foreſeen and propheſied of, and it was believed as a thing very poſſible, that thus it might be as is already come to paſs. And as for Viſions, they are for an appointed Time, there is a Time to ſee, and a Time to ſpeak what is ſeen, and revealed Things belong to us, and when we declare them, then you may take Notice of it.

The laſt Letters from General Monk give an Account of his ſeveral Marches, and of his Reſolutions of future Service for the preſent Parliament, deſiring to receive the Commands of the Houſe, how their Forces under his Conduct ſhall be diſpoſed and quartered, when they ſhall be advanced near London, for the beſt Advantage and Safety of the Common-wealth. It is ſuppoſed that his head Quarter will be at St. Alban's, on Thurſday or Friday next.

The General had been very artful and ſucceſsful, and had no great Difficulty remaining on him, but how to get out Fleetwood's Army from the City and bring in his own.

His Commiſſary Clarges adviſ'd the beſt Method, and drew up a Letter to the Parliament, to be ſent in due Seaſon.

See a Copy of this Letter drawn up by Clarges, upon a Conference with Monk in the Appendix to Sir Richard Baker, Fol. p. 701.

Hitherto the General had brought all his Buſineſs into ſo good a Poſture, that now his next and greateſt Concernment was to ſhift Fleetwood's Army handſomly out of the City, and without Impediment or Jealouſy to bring his own in. To this end, before the Arrival of Scot and Robinſon, he entered into a Conſultation with ſuch Perſons about him, as he could beſt truſt: Where it was reſolved, that a Letter ſhould be drawn up to the Parliament giving them an Account of his March, and the Number of his Forces with him; and becauſe thoſe Regiments now in the City had ſo lately been in Rebellion againſt the Parliament, and were not yet entirely ſettled and reduced, he was very unwilling his own dutiful and orderly Forces ſhould mix or converſe with them: He therefore beſought them for their own Safety, that thoſe Forces under Fleetwood ſhould be remov'd to diſtant Quarters in the Country, except the two Regiments of Colonel Morley and Colonel Fagg, who had continued in their Duty to them, which with his own Army, would be ſufficient to maintain the Guards to the Parliament, and ſecure the City. But this Letter was not thought ſeaſonable to be ſent, till they were advanc'd near to London, ſo that they ſhould not dare to deny them, nor have time enough to oppoſe his Entrance.

A Continuation of the Affairs of the Church and Clergy, in a Letter from Chancellour Hyde, ſuperſcrib'd for Mr. B. [Barwick] dated Bruſſels 25 July 1659.

Appendix to Dr. Barwick's Life, Engl. 8vo, p. 429.

The reverend Mr. Barwick had recommended to Mr. Wren to anſwer the pernicious Leviathan of Mr. Hobbs, from which Mr. Wren excus'd himſelf as inſufficient, and would have had it undertaken by ſome profeſs'd Divine.

—— I hope it is only Modeſty in Mr. Wren, that makes him pauſe upon undertaking the Work you have recommmended to him: For I dare ſwear by what I have ſeen of his, he is very equal to anſwer every Part of it; I mean every Part that requires an Anſwer. Nor is there need of a profeſs'd Divine to vindicate the Creation from making Man a veryer Beaſt, than any of thoſe of the Field; or to vindicate Scripture from his licentious Interpretation. I dare ſay he will find ſomewhat in Mr. Hobbs himſelf, I mean in his former Books, that contradicts what he ſets forth in this, in that Part, in which he takes himſelf to be the moſt exact, his beloved Philoſophy: And ſure there is ſomewhat due to Ariſtotle and Tully, and to our Univerſities, to free them from his Reproaches; and it is high Time, if what I hear be true, that ſome Tutors read his Leviathan, inſtead of the others, to their Pupils. Mr. Hobbs is my old Friend, yet I cannot abſolve him from the Miſchief he hath done to the King, the Church, the Laws, and the Nation: And ſurely there ſhould be enough to be ſaid to the Politicks of that Man, who having reſolved all Religion, Wiſdom and Honeſty, into an implicite Obedience to the Laws eſtabliſhed, writes a Book of Policy, which I may be bold to ſay, muſt be by the eſtabliſhed Laws of any Kingdom or Province in Europe condemn'd for impious and ſeditious; and therefore it will be very hard, if the Fundamentals of it be not to be overthrown. But I muſt aſk both yours and Mr. Wren's Pardon for enlarging ſo much, and antedating thoſe Animadverſions he will make upon it.

The Leviathan read and expounded to Pupils in the two Univerſities.

Tho' to be condemn'd thro' all Europe, for an impious and ſeditious Book.

The Biſhop of Ely again deſir'd to recommend a Perſon to the See of Carliſle.

For the Matter of the Church, I can add nothing to what I ſaid to you in my laſt: And if my Lord of Ely will recommend a Perſon to the See of Carliſle, he will be added to the reſt by the King.

Your very affectionate Servant,

Receiv'd Nov. 10.

A Letter from Mr. Chancellour Hyde, ſuperſcrib'd for Mr. Burges [Barwick] theſe. Dated Bruſſels July 28. 1659.

The Chancellour deſires to know of Mr. Barwick what Preferment in the Church would be moſt agreeable to him.

Ibid. Append. p. 433.

——— I thank you for the Precedent, and ſhall expect the other as ſoon as you can. I am afflicted that our ſick Friend finds not his Health comes on faſter. I want Advice from ſome, what Dignity in the Church would be moſt ſuitable to your Acceptation, and in what Country you would wiſh it to lye; for the King hath given me a Charge concerning it, and I am not enough inſtructed: I pray help me in it. I have not Time to add more than that I am

Your moſt affectionate Servant,

Hyde.

You muſt never forget my Service to my Lord of Ely, and if he pleaſe to recommend ſome of his Friends to the King, they will find the Fruit of it in all Ways.

Receiv'd July 24. 1659.

A Letter of John Barwick to Mr. Chancellour Hyde at Bruſſels, dated Sept. 14. 1659.

Thanks in the Name of the Church to his Majeſty, and to his prime Miniſter, Ibid. Append. N°. xii. *p.*435.

For ſettling the Method of conſecrating new Biſhops in England.

This is the ſecond Part of my Taſk, and relates to the chief Thing in my Intention, the Buſineſs of the Church; concerning which your laſt hath given ſo full Content to thoſe, that really mind it, and rightly underſtand it, that I am by them commanded to return their humble Thanks to your Lordſhip, and their moſt Submiſſive Duty by your Mediation, to his ſacred Majeſty. It is the greateſt Evidence of God's Favour to this poor Church, that ſhe hath a nurſing Father of ſo great Piety and Candor; and not the leaſt, that he hath a Miniſter of ſo much Fidelity and unbiaſs'd Affections for her Good, in every Reſpect: And it would be a very great Shame and Sin too for us, that have the Opportunity for it, if we do not upon every Occaſion humbly propoſe ſuch Things, as may give you a true Information how that may be beſt obtained, which is ſo piouſly intended.

A Work to be promoted with all Zeal and Expedition.

I much honour thoſe two reverend Perſons, whom you conſulted in this great Affair; and if it would not be tedious as well as ſuperfluous, I could give you yet a fuller Inſight into the Grounds of our Method, as it differs from theirs, that you may not rely upon the Authority of any Man, farther than you ſee his Reaſons. But his Majeſty being already ſatisfied, and the Method approved on by your Lordſhip, my Labour will be more uſefully beſtowed, in endeavouring to promote the Work with all poſſible Speed, for thoſe weighty Reaſons mentioned in your laſt; though you are pleaſed to ſtile them no better than Fancies.

The Biſhops to be quickened in it, for fear of being taken off before the Work be done.

In July laſt I went a Circuit among ſome of thoſe, on whom the Work doth chiefly depend; and I found them very ready and willing to advance it, but in good Hopes there would be no need of this intended Method. I hope they are ſtill of the ſame Mind and Affections; ſeeing the ſame Reaſon that damps thoſe Hopes, makes the Work more neceſſary; and I am ſure nothing ſhall be wanting on my Part to ſerve them in it: And I beſeech your Lordſhip, as Occaſion ſerves, to lay as many and ſtrict Commands upon me from his Majeſty as you pleaſe, to quicken them in it: For I fear this Winter will go hard with ſome of them that may worſt be ſpared in the due Performance of ſuch a Work.

And yet of the Perſons nominated by the King, it was fear'd that ſome would decline it.

Secretary Nicholas.

This Dr. Francis Manſell hath his obſtinate Refuſal of the epiſcopal Dignity, mention'd in his Epitaph in Jeſus College, where he was interr'd; Infulas Epiſcopales —— non ſemel oblatas, ſerio tremuit, obſtinatius refugit.

Dr. Manſell Principal of Jeſus College in Oxford, who died almoſt 80. on May 1. 1665.

In my laſt I deſired ſome Aſſiſtance and Inſtructions, as to ſome Particulars, that concern the Perſons nominated for Biſhops; but I was then in ſuch Haſte, as I could not give you my Reaſons for it. I hope you have ſome good Aſſurance, that all of them will undergo that great Work; and yet it is diſputable among ſome of us here: For I believe, all of them underſtand the Weight of the Burthen ſo well, as not to make it the Object of their Deſire; tho' I know withal, that ſeveral of them are reſigned for any Service of the Church, whatſoever the Conſequences be. Thoſe that either are of great Years, or have great Dependencies of Wife and Children upon them, have the ſtrongeſt Temptations to the contrary; and I could inſtance in ſome, with whom it is thought they may prevail; but how well thoſe Thoughts are grounded, I know not. I doubt not, but S. N. underſtands his Brother's Mind, and you from him: But otherwiſe ſome here are in doubt, what he will do in this Caſe, as Things now ſtand; being a Perſon of much Prudence and Caution. There is another, whom I alſo much reverence, D. M. whoſe Years and Modeſty are ſo great, as it is thought by thoſe that know him better than I, he will rather chuſe a private Life. And it were great Pity to caſt ſuch a Load upon him againſt his Will, now when he is come to that Condition, as to need a Coadjutor, if he were already in the Office: His Sight is almoſt quite gone, and his Infirmities otherwiſe ſo great, as he can hardly come up hither to receive Conſecration, which is but the Preface to his Work. For theſe and the like Reaſons, I am encouraged by thoſe that foreſee Rubs before they come, to deſire your Lordſhip to ſend ſome more Names from his Majesty, to supply such possible [illegible], if they should fall out in these or any other Persons already named.

The great Care to get Biſhops for Carliſle, and the Iſle of Man.

But however, I beſeech you by the firſt Opportunity to ſend the Name of a fit Perſon for Carliſle, for till then the Work muſt lie at a Stand; and the Biſhop of Derry (upon whom the canonical Diſpatch of it, as to that Election, wholly depends) is infirm, and cannot live long. And farther I muſt beſeech your Favour, to ſignify his Majeſty's Pleaſure concerning the Supplying of the Biſhoprick of the Iſle of Man, which is in the Province of York: For though the Nomination of the Perſon belongs to the Earl of Derby, who deſires it may be done, and refers it wholly to them, now that the Perſon hath refuſed it, to whom he proffer'd it; yet they will hardly do it without his Majeſty's Leave; and it is thought neceſſary to ſupply as many Places as may be within that Province, conſidering how ſmall the whole Number is, if they were all full.

A Reſolution to find out Men for Dignities, not Dignities for Men.

The Biſhop of Ely refuſes to recommend to any Dignity.

My Lord of Ely returns all dutiful Acknowledgments to his Majeſty, and his humble Service to your Lordſhip: I perceive you miſunderſtood him, as to the Poizing the Number between the two Univerſities; for he never ſuſpected his Majeſty's equal Favour to both; nor thought him worthy of the Office of Biſhop, that is not of the ſame Temper: But however, he has obſerved it as a good Encouragement to Learning, when young Students could recount ſuch and ſuch Biſhops of the ſame Univerſity or College with themſelves. It is not now indeed ſo conſiderable; ſeeing the Rule of Æneas Sylvius, which was always good, is now indiſpenſably neceſſary, Non hominibus dandas eſſe Dignitates, ſed Dignitatibus Homines: And for this and other Reaſons (with all dutiful Thanks) the Biſhop of Ely deſires to be excuſed, as to the recommending of any Perſon either to Carliſle or any other Dignity; though he will not omit his Prayers, that God would direct his Majeſty always for the beſt, and at this Time more particularly, when the Settlement both of the Church and Univerſities is like to have ſo great an Influence, not only upon the Souls of Men, but alſo upon his Majeſty's Government, to all future Ages. I have heard him ſay, (and I know another of the ſame Temper) that he never was Suiter for any Place in the Church; and I have heard others ſay both of him and Biſhop Andrews before him, that neither of them ever gave any to any that were. It has been too common a Miſtake to diſpenſe ſuch Places by Favour and Affection, and call them Preferments, and look upon them as Rewards, which are indeed (eſpecially now) only new Obligations to a far greater Work, and a much greater Charge upon our laſt Account. The Iniquity of theſe preſent Times hath rectify'd this Error in many: And it is the Opinion of ſome Churchmen of the greateſt Underſtanding and Foreſight among us, that for one Age none can poſſibly have Occaſion to fall into it again, though all other Things ſhould anſwer our Deſire. The whole Revenue of the Church, (ſuppoſing, which yet can hardly be imagined, it ſhould return entirely and immediately) will hardly allow Neceſſaries to the firſt Incumbents, by that Time the Churches are made fit for God's Service, and the Houſes for Man's Habitation; ſo that the Straw will be wanting, and yet the Tale of Brick muſt be multiplied ten fold. I beſeech your Lordſhip, excuſe this Digreſſion. Theſe are not my Thoughts only, but alſo of the greateſt Maſters of Reaſon of our Tribe in this Place, which your former Candor hath given me the Boldneſs to repreſent unto you, in order to the Good of the Church; and whoever of us thinks otherwiſe, will (I fear) either fall ſhort of his Hopes, or fail the Church in his Duty. A publick Spirit was always good in the Clergy, but now indiſpenſably neceſſary.

No ſuing for any Places in the Church, nor giving Places to any that ſue for them.

The ruinous Condition of Churches in England, would not afford Neceſſaries to the firſt Incumbents of 'em.

Precedents for the Grant of Deaneries by the King.

I have now ſent you the Precedents for the Grant of Deaneries, which have been ſo long expected: And I have purpoſely ſought out thoſe that are of the moſt different Nature: And yet they differ ſo little, as I might have referred you to that I formerly ſent. Some little verbal Differences there are, and the Clauſe of Habendum is tranſpoſed in that for Weſtminſter; but which is beſt, your Lordſhip may judge: For my part, I take them rather to be caſual Slips, than any Difference in the Precedents, excepting only the Title, by which every Church is incorporated, and the Name of the laſt Incumbent; both which it would be very convenient to obſerve in all Grants of this Nature; and yet I find it not ſo neceſſary, but that one or both are omitted in ſome Precedents, eſpecially thoſe granted of late at Oxford. If the laſt Incumbent be to be named, it will occaſion a Queſtion as to ſome Churches now void, Whether he that had the Grant under the Seal, but never any Inſtallment, nor ſo much as Inſtitution from the Biſhop, ſhall be reputed the laſt Dean. For inſtance; Dr. William Fuller, Dean of Ely, had the Grant of the Deanery of Durham, which was void by the Death of Dr. Gualter Balcanquall; but never took Inſtitution to it; becauſe he would not quit the Deanery of Ely. Now ſuppoſing the Plenarty of the Church in this Caſe is to be taken from the Inſtitution (as I conceive it muſt; being unqueſtionably ſo in Livings with Cure) then Dr. Balcanquall muſt be reputed the laſt Dean of Durham, and Dr. Fuller of Ely (and not Dr. Beal, who had the Grant of it, but no Inſtitution to it) and ſo in the like Caſes elſewhere, if any be. All that can be objected is a Thing, wherein I think it my Duty upon this Occaſion to give your Lordſhip as clear Information as I can; becauſe there has been a long rooted Miſtake in the Buſineſs. The Objection is, that the Grant is a meer Patent, and conſequently the Deanery is held of the King immediately Jure Coronæ, and not Jure Eccleſiæ, as where there is Preſentation and Inſtitution: To which I anſwer, Non fuit ſic ab Initio. At firſt Deaneries were were elective, as Biſhopricks are upon a Congé d'Elire, (if a common Lawyer miſguides me not) and I think it continued thus till Henry the Eighth's Time, who ſeeing the Pope's Uſurpation upon the Rights of Chapters, by Faculties and Commendams, took the Power from both into himſelf, under the Title of Preſentation; which afterwards (if not at firſt) paſs'd in the Form of a meer Patent. In King James's Time I find them mingled among the other Patents at the Rolls: But in the Time of the late King Charles, they ſtand upon Record among other Preſentations; yet ſtill the Form of a Patent is continued. If I had the abſolute Liberty of the Rolls (as I muſt confeſs, I have had great Civilities from an honeſt Man that is ſtill a Clerk there) I could trace the Buſineſs clearly to the Fountain; but as the Caſe is, all I have ſaid is ſo conjectural, as not to be regarded any farther, than the Grounds here laid will infer; and is not intended to adviſe any preſent Alteration, but merely to inform your Lordſhip, and ſatiſfy his Majeſty in a Matter not uſually taken Notice of, in caſe any Alteration may hereafter be thought convenient. Only I muſt add, that upon diſcourſing the Point with my Lord of Ely, he tells me, the Miſtake has been long obſerved by Archbiſhop Neal, and others; and that they were about to give his late Majeſty a true Information in it, and petition that it might be rectify'd, but were prevented by theſe late Troubles. And it is now the more conſiderable, becauſe there have been ſome ill Conſequences of late drawn from it, which gave me the firſt Hint to enquire into it. For inſtance; Dr. Owen retorted upon Dr. Hammond, that (even upon his own Principles) he had no Dependence at all upon the Biſhop of Oxford. And I muſt confeſs, I wonder'd, when I firſt peruſed the Grant of the Deanery of Chriſt Church, and found not the Biſhop ſo much as mentioned in it, wherein I think it differs from every other Church that is a Biſhop's See. The Truth is (to uſe my wonted Boldneſs) the Biſhop is mentioned ſlightly enough in all other Precedents, but however, (as I take it) in all other Places (unleſs they were collegiate Churches exempt from ordinary Juriſdiction) the Grant was always preſented to the Biſhop, from whom the Dean received Inſtitution, and then was inſtalled by the Canons, or Prebendaries, upon the Biſhop's Mandate. I hear it was thus at Ely; and I find by the Statutes of the Church of Durham (whereof I have a Copy) it muſt be ſo there; and I have no Reaſon to doubt of the reſt: So that the laſt of theſe four Precedents here incloſed (which is the King's Mandate for Inſtallment) was, I think, at firſt intended only for collegiate Churches, which are exempt from epiſcopal Juriſdiction; though now it is iſſued forth for Cathedrals alſo. I have writ it but once over; becauſe mutatis mutandis it will ſerve for all: I had it from an Original, and not at the Rolls; for it ſtands not there upon Record; becauſe it paſſes not under the great Seal, but either a Part of it, or ſome leſſer; being affix'd to a ſmall Label cut off from the Parchment at the Bottom. All that I ſhall need to add, as to the Precedent, is, that where I have abbreviated any thing, it may be ſupply'd from the like Clauſe, in the foregoing Precedent, to avoid unneceſſary Trouble.

Mr. Barwick would make the Deanery of Durham his Choice with Submiſſion to the King's Pleaſure.

If your Lordſhip has received mine of the Eighth paſt, I ſhall need to ſay no more; only it can be no Tautology, to preſent again my moſt dutiful Acknowledgment of his Majeſty's Goodneſs, in that good Opinion he hath of me, and my humble Thanks to your Lordſhip for the great Favours you expreſs continually towards me. If by a Dignity his Majeſty means a Prebend, I have one already; if a Deanery, I think I could be moſt ſerviceable to the Church of Durham; being acquainted with the Statutes and Cuſtoms in part, and having two Livings near it to ſupport it, if there ſhould be need: But if any other Place be thought of more Advantage to this Church in general, or his Majeſty's Service in particular, I ſhall willingly ſubmit to his Command.

The laſt Letter I received from ——

By this tedious Scribble you ſee I had rather create Objections, than not prevent all that poſſibly may be foreſeen. There is yet another, which now comes into my Mind; that in caſe any of the Biſhops, to avoid the Work when it comes to the Puſh, ſhould aſk me how it doth appear, that theſe are the Perſons and Places deſigned by his Majeſty; all I can ſay is, to refer them to Mr. Alleſtrey's Word; unleſs your Lordſhip ſhall be pleaſed to ſend a Liſt of them in this O. I ſpeak not this as though I feared it would be needful, but at all Adventures.

S I R,

—— I ſhall only ſay a Word to you concerning eccleſiaſtical Preferments; that there is no Deanery in England, (Weſtminſter excepted, which his Majeſty hath in Truth deſigned to a Perſon of very known and confeſſed Merit) that the King hath in the leaſt Degree made Promiſe of to any Man, ſo that it will be your Friend's Fault (who I am ſure will not be guilty of it) if you are not very well provided; and if my Lord of Ely had prevailed with you to have taken the Biſhoprick of Man, I am confident the King would not have ſuffer'd you to have continued there long, after your Removal could have been avowed. For the Truth is, the King hath a very extraordinary Senſe of your Merit towards him and the Church. I wiſh you would once ſend the bleſſed News, that that Affair is taken to Heart, and provided for as it ought to be. I did once in ſome former Note of the Editor of the Engliſh Life of Dr. John Barwick, 8vo. p. 205.

Dr. King, Biſhop of Chicheſter, in his Sermon preached at the Funeral of Biſhop Duppa, makes very honourable Mention of the great Care of his Majeſty to preſerve and ſupport the Church, at that Time when in his exil'd Condition he could not well ſupport himſelf. And ſince it is mentioned in no other Author that I know of, but one or two, that had it from Dr. Barwick's Manuſcript Letters, before they were publiſhed, it is much to be wonder'd, that my Lord Clarendon, who had himſelf ſo honourable a Share in that Negotiation, and could have given ſo good an Account of it from his own Knowledge, ſhould not in his Hiſtory have taken the leaſt Notice of a Tranſaction, ſo much for the Honour, not only of the King his Maſter, but of himſelf.

The Rump go on in all the likely Steps of Self-Preſervation, in modelling their own Houſe, the Army, and the Miniſtry, and daily reporting the firm Adherence of General Monk to them; and make a Jeſt of his hearing the Petitions of the People.

Mercur. Polit. by Order of Parliament, 4to, p. 1048.

A Committee proceeded in the Matter referred to them touching Qualifications of Members to ſit and ſerve in Parliament.

Mr. Speaker (the Houſe ſitting) in uſual manner, delivered ſeveral Commiſſions to Officers of the Army, viz. One to Joſeph Cleaver to be Captain Lieutenant in Colonel Eyre's Regiment of Foot; to Jeremiah Campfield to be Lieutenant Colonel, to Chriſtopher Skepper to be Major, and to John Deakin, Edward Bradſhaw, Thomas Aſtell, Cuthbert Carre, Iſaac Hague, and William Goſh to be Captains in the ſaid Regiment; together with ſeveral other Commiſſions, to Officers in Sir Anthony Aſhley Cooper's Regiment of Horſe, and in the Regiment of Colonel Alured.

Ibid.

It is referred to the Committee for plunder'd Miniſters to bring in an Act for the Approbation of Miniſters, before they be admitted into Livings.

The Forces with General Monk have kept their Quarters in their March very cloſe together, and he by the Way hath ſo modell'd them, that they cannot eaſily (if any would) diſobey his Commands. They have been complimented in their March by People of various Tempers, ſome for the re-admitting of the ſecluded Members, others for a free Parliament, the Thing that takes much in theſe Parts among the People; and they have a Hearing, which we ſuppoſe is in Prudence given them, and that is all.

General Monk marches on to Leiceſter, and meets by the Way the two parliamentary Meſſengers or Spies, Scot and Robinſon, to whom he and his Army pay great Reſpect and Submiſſion.

Dr. Skinner's Life of Monk, 8vo. p. 194.

The General having ſtay'd at Nottingham two Days for the Rear of his Army to come up to him, on Monday January 23, marched to Leiceſter, and met Scot and Robinſon in their Way towards him. Much Ceremony and Submiſſion was here render'd by the General and his Army towards theſe two arrogant Commiſſioners of the Juncto; inſomuch that the General, who had quickly taken their Meaſures of that their Stay in the Army, was ſo punctual that his Soldiers were oblig'd upon all Occaſions to pay them greater Reverence than towards himſelf. During their March together, Scot and Robinſon had much Conference with the General upon the late Alterations, and preſent State of Things: And much of their Diſcourſe was full of Apprehenſion and Jealouſy of every body about them, which further confirmed the General, that himſelf was not free from their Suſpicions. They reflected on the late Practice of Fleetwood and Lambert with a very particular Indignation. They fell foul on the City of London for their late Stubbornneſs and Malignancy: And though the Army in Ireland had declar'd their Obedience to the Authority of Parliament, yet they very well knew, that they were not upon the right Baſis. So that the General was now more troubled how to temporize with theſe two Commiſſioners, than ever he had been how to oppoſe all Lambert's Army. But becauſe his grand Deſign was now upon the Anvil for the Removing of Fleetwood's Army out of London, and the Introducing his own, without which all his Travel hitherto would be loſt, he was reſolved ſo far to comply with their Extravagancies, as to give them an entire Aſſurance of him.

They were full of Fears and Jealouſies; talking againſt Fleetwood and Lambert and the City of London, by which Monk underſtood they had a Suſpicion of him alſo.

However to carry his Point, he acted the Part of Compliance with them.

The Rump thinking themſelves ſecurely ſettled, publiſh a ſolemn Declaration for a Commonwealth, without King or Lords.

Juſtifying the late War againſt the King, and glorying in the Succeſs of it.

As the Way to a Commonwealth, and free State of the People of England.

Printed by Order, 1659. 4to.

A Declaration of the Parliament aſſembled at Weſtminſter, ordered forthwith to be printed and publiſhed, Monday January 23, 1659.

The People of England having been neceſſitated to take up Arms in the juſt Defence of the Laws and Liberties againſt the late King: And it having pleaſed God after a long War, and many Battels fought in the Field, ſo to bleſs their Armies, and to bring the War to ſuch an Iſſue, that if they were not wanting to themſelves, they might reap the Fruit of all the Blood and Treaſure exhauſted in that Quarrel, and not only be reſtored to their Freedom for the preſent, but ſecured againſt all the like Attempts for the Future. The Parliament hereupon, as the Truſtees of the People for the Accompliſhing of thoſe Ends, did declare and enact, that the People of England and of all the Dominions and Without King, or House of Lords, or single Person.

That the People may grow up into perfect Freedom.

And be redeemed from vain and superstitious Ceremonies, and corrupt Opinions.

and Territories thereunto belonging should be thenceforth governed as Common-wealth and Free State by the Representatives of the People in Parliament, and that without any King, or Houſe of Lords; judging this not only to be the undoubted Right of the People, but that the Office of a King in theſe Nations, or to have the Power thereof in any ſingle Perſon, as alſo the Houſe of Lords, was burthenſome and dangerous to the Safety and Liberty of the People: And by this Means the Foundations of a publick Intereſt being laid in the Place of that which was only private and perſonal, this People might grow up (through the Goodneſs of God) into perfect Freedom, being governed in the ſupream Power by their own Repreſentatives; and in the executive Power, by their known Laws and Judicatory; the beſt Meaſure and Standard of Liberty: Their Navigation and Trade encouraged and promoted, which in all Monarchies is ſtinted and reſtrained. The true Proteſtant Religion both at Home and Abroad owned and countenanced, which under the former Conſtitution was clogged with vain and ſuperſtitious Ceremonies, and corrupt Opinions touching Faith and Worſhip, impoſed upon all, without any Regard had to tender Conſciences, and the Miniſters of the Goſpel, and the Profeſſors thereof, with Godlineſs itſelf, diſcountenanced and perſecuted.

This Parliament had ſettled the Commonwealth, and all Things before this Time, if they had not been often interrupted.

To this State of Things did the Parliament judge it their Duty to bring this Nation, and the free People thereof, and no Man can reaſonably doubt, but that long before this Time the Parliament (through the ſame good and gracious Preſence that had accompanied their Undertakings) would have accompliſhed their Intentions in theſe Things, and ſettled the Common-wealth upon the Baſis and Foundation aforeſaid, if they had not been ſo often interrupted, and thereby prevented hitherto from doing that, which always was and is the utmoſt Deſire and Intention of their Hearts.

Many Scandals now caſt upon the Parliament; as if affecting arbitrary Power, and being Enemies to the Miniſtry, Univerſities, &c.

Given out to bring back the People to their old Servitude.

And yet the Parliament cannot but take Notice of the Artifices that are uſed to miſrepreſent their Intentions, and to blemiſh their Proceedings before the People, unjuſtly charging them with a Deſign to perpetuate themſelves now ſitting, to ſubject the People to arbitrary Power, and to govern them by Force. And as to Matters of Religion on one Hand, that they are Enemies to the Miniſtry, their Maintenance by Tythes, to the Univerſities and Learning, and Encouragers of fanatick Principles; on the other Hand, that the Parliament is too ſevere, and of impoſing Principles in Matters of Religion; not being ignorant, that thoſe who by theſe Means do induſtriouſly labour to diſaffect the People to the Parliament, are ſuch, who by ſpecious Pretences would firſt put out their Eyes, that they might not ſee the Way to their own true Liberty, and then bring them back again into their old Servitude.

Wherefore the Parliament to vindicate themſelves, declare they will,

The Parliament therefore, to omit nothing in their Power that may undeceive honeſt and well-meaning Men, have thought it neceſſary in this Conjuncture of Time and Affairs, to declare and manifeſt (as they do hereby) what their Intentions are, as to the Government of theſe Nations, with ſome other Particulars relating thereunto; wherein they are reſolved (through the Goodneſs and Aſſiſtance of God) to remain conſtant and immoveable.

1. Perfect the Settlement of a Commonwealth and Free State.

1. That the Parliament will provide forthwith to perfect thoſe Beginnings which are already made for ſettling the Government of theſe Nations, and the People thereof in the Way of a Common-wealth and Free State, without a King, ſingle Perſon, or Houſe of Lords, in ſuch manner, that they may be governed from Time to Time by Repreſentatives in Parliament choſen by themſelves, in whom alone the ſupream Authority of theſe Nations doth and ought to reſide, and by ſuch as they ſhall appoint and conſtitute as Officers and Miniſters under them for the Good of the People, and that the Parliament will make it their Care to form the Army and Forces of theſe Nations in ſuch manner, that whilſt it ſhall be found neceſſary for them or any of them to be kept up for the Safety of the Common-wealth, they may be wholly ſubject and obedient to the Civil Authority.

2. That Proceedings in all Courts of Juſtice ſhall be according to Law.

2. There being nothing more eſſential to the Freedom of a State, than that the People ſhould be governed by the Laws, and that Juſtice be adminiſtered by ſuch only as are accountable for Male-Adminiſtration, it is hereby further declared, That all Proceedings touching the Lives, Liberties, and Eſtates of all the free People of this Common-wealth, ſhall be according to the Laws of the Land, and that the Parliament will not meddle with the ordinary Adminiſtration or the executive Part of the Law: It being the principal Care of this, as it hath been of all former Parliaments, to provide for the Freedom of the People againſt Arbitrarineſs in Government.

3. To have a learned and pious Goſpel Miniſtry, maintained by Tythes; with Augmentations to the impropriated Livings late of the King, Biſhops, Deans and Chapters, and Delinquents not compounding.

3. And that they will make effectual Proviſion for the Countenancing of a learned and pious Goſpel Miniſtry through all the three Nations, and for the Encouraging and Protecting them in the Work of their Miniſtry againſt Diſturbances. And as to their Maintenance, that by Tythes ſhall be continued, it being already eſtabliſhed by Law, and is in itſelf the moſt certain, convenient, and comfortable Way of Maintenance, that in the Judgment of the Parliament can be ſettled. And therefore they do expect and require, that the Judges, Juſtices of the Peace, and others whom it concerns, do take Care, that the Laws touching the ſame, be put in effectual Execution; and for a further Increaſe of Maintenance than hath been anciently ſettled upon preaching Miniſters, the Parliament doth declare, That the Augmentations by the Impropriations of the late King, Biſhops, Deans and Chapters, and Delinquents not compounded pounded for, as likewiſe by Tenths and firſt Fruits, ſhall be continued and ſettled upon the preaching Miniſtry, not to be aliened or altered from that Uſe, and diſtributed in ſuch manner, as they may be applyed to ſuch Places as ſtand in moſt need, that every Place in the Land may have a preaching Miniſter, who may be able to teach the People the good Knowledge of the Lord, and may have a comfortable Livelihood and Encouragement among them. As alſo that Proviſion ſhall be made for due Liberty of Conſcience in Matters of Religion according to the Word of God.

4. To uphold the Univerſities and Schools.

4. The Parliament do declare, that they will uphold the publick Univerſities, and Schools of this Land, and not only continue to them the Privileges and Advantages they now enjoy, but ſhall be ready to give them ſuch further Countenance as may encourage them in their Studies, and promote Godlineſs, Learning and good Manners amongſt them.

5. To reſtore the Decay of Trade.

5. The Parliament being very ſenſible of the great Decay of the Trade of theſe Nations, will apply themſelves to ſuch Counſels and Means, as ſhall be found moſt proper both for the ſpeedy reſtoring and increaſing thereof; judging, that there is no one Thing in the Affairs of State more important to the Welfare, Strength and Glory of a Common-wealth, eſpecially of this being an Iſland, than the Encouragement of Trade and Navigation.

6. And to pay the publick Debts.

6. As to the preſent Burthens which are upon the Nation, the Parliament is very ſenſible therof, and of thoſe extravagant Counſels and Actions, which have ingaged the Nation in ſo great a Debt and Charge, the Guilt whereof will not reſt upon them, though the Danger and Burthen thereof doth. And it is one of the greateſt Cares they have upon them, how to give the People that Eaſe which their Condition calls for, and alſo provide for their Safety, and anſwer the preſſing Neceſſities of the State; which the Parliament hopes in ſome Meaſure to do in a very ſhort Time, in caſe the unreaſonable Diſſatisfactions and turbulent Actings of unquiet Men, do not continue the Charge longer than otherwiſe will be neceſſary.

A Tumult in Exeter.

Mercur. Polit. by Order of Parliament, 4to. p. 1059.

Letters of a Tumult in Exeter, began by the wilder and meaner Sort of People, yet was encouraged by Perſons of a better Rank, who inflamed them to cry out and ſhout for a free Parliament; and to ſeize on the Mail of Letters, &c. But the coming down of Colonel Unton Crook, and the Prudence of the Mayor reduced the People to a calm Temper, in which they remain, being ſatisfied that Mr. Bampfield is gone up to repreſent Things to the Parliament.

It ſeems likely that the two Parliament Commiſſioners Scot and Robinſon were inſtructed to inſiſt with General Monk to quiet the Minds of his Country-men in the Weſt, by ſending them a Reproof for their late Declaration, made in favour of the ſecluded Members and new Elections.

Moſt honoured and dear Friends,

Meeting with a Paper dated at Exon the 13th inſtant, directed to William Lenthall, Eſq; Speaker of the Parliament, and ſubſcribed by divers of my Friends and Relations, purporting the recalling the Members ſecluded 1648. as the beſt Expedient for eſtabliſhing theſe Nations upon a Foundation of laſting Peace, I have taken the Boldneſs from my Relation to ſome of you as allyed, and my affectionate Reſpects to all of you as dear Friends and Countrymen, to repreſent to your Conſideration my preſent Apprehenſions of the State of Affairs here, in order to all our better Satisfactions; wherein I humbly crave your Leave of Freedom without Prejudice.

The Intereſt of all Parties againſt monarchical Government in Church and State.

Before theſe unhappy Wars, the Government of theſe Nations was Monarchical in Church and State: Theſe Wars have given Birth and Growth to ſeveral Intereſts both in Church and State heretofore not known, though now upon many Accounts very conſiderable, as the Preſbyterian, Independent, Anabaptiſt, and Sectaries of all ſorts as to Eccleſiaſticks, and the Purchaſers of the Kings, Queens, Princes, Biſhops, Deans and Chapters, and all other forfeited Eſtates, and all theſe engaged in theſe Wars againſt the King as to Civils, thoſe Intereſts again are ſo interwoven by Purchaſes and Intermarriages, and thereby forfeited, as I think upon rational Grounds it may be taken for granted, that no Government can be either good, peaceful, or laſting to theſe Nations that doth not rationally include and comprehend the Security and Preſervation of all the aforeſaid Intereſts both Civil and Spiritual, I mean ſo far as by the Word of God they are warranted to be protected and preſerved.

Monarchy not to be now admitted.

If this be ſo, then that Government under which we formerly were, viz. Monarchy, cannot poſſibly be admitted for the Future in theſe Nations, becauſe its Support is taken away, and becauſe it is excluſive of all the former Intereſts both Civil and Spiritual, all of them being incompatible with Monarchical Uniformity in Church and State thus expired. That Government then that is moſt able to comprehend and protect all Intereſts, as is aforeſaid, muſt needs be republick, wherefore to me it is no ſmall Doubt, if upon the Premiſes to admit of the Members ſecluded in 1648, were not to obſtruct our Peace and continue our War, rather than eſtabliſh the one, and end the other; in that very many of thoſe Members aſſert the Monarchical Intereſt, together with the Abolition of all Laws made ſince their Seclusion; which, I fear, upon Account of Self-Preſervation both of Life and Eſtate as well as of ſpiritual Liberty, will immediately involve all theſe Nations in moſt horrid and bloody War afreſh; the very

Nor the ſecluded Members.

Apprehensions whereof I confeſs I do infinitely dread, and ſubmit the dangerous Conſequence thereof to your prudent Conſiderations; and the rather ſeeing the Army will never endure it.

Their Wiſdom might be to ſubmit to the Parliament.

Having thus briefly laid before you the preſent Condition of Affairs, let me now entreat you to conſider, whether it were not better to deſiſt from that Paper, and ſubmit to the Proceedings of this Parliament, who have reſolved to fill up their Houſe, determine their Sitting, and prepare a Way for future Succeſſions of Parliament; by which Means being full, and thereby comprehending the whole Intereſt of theſe Nations, they may, through God's Mercy, and all our Patiences, eſtabliſh ſuch a Government in the Way of a Common-wealth, as may be comprehenſive of all Intereſts both Spiritual and Civil, to the Glory of God, and the Weale and Peace of the whole. But if by your Impatiencies they be obſtructed, our Peace will be ſo much the longer a Stranger to us, and we thereby a Prey to ourſelves and all foreign Enemies. Wherefore humbly preſſing theſe upon your ſerious Conſiderations, with all the friendly and affectionate Reſpects and Service to you all, I remain,

Deareſt Friends,

Leiceſter, Jan. 23. 1659. Your very humble and affectionate Servant,

GEORGE MONCK.

Several Members in this dubious Juncture had abſented themſelves, who are ſummon'd to attend the Houſe under the Penalty of 20 l.

Mercur. Polit. Nº. 604.

The Houſe ordered that Colonel Charles Fleetwood, the Lord Whitlock, Mr. Strickland, Mr. Holland, and Colonel Bennet be required to attend the Parliament. And all other Members who ought to give their Attendance do attend the Service of the Parliament this Day ſevennight upon the Pain of twenty Pounds.

Mr. Speaker in uſual manner delivered Commiſſions to ſeveral Officers in Colonel Walton's Regiment.

The Parliament took Care to publiſh a pleaſing Account of their Commiſſioners Reception by General Monk; and thus all the Reſpects paid to him at Leiceſter, were for his Services to the Parliament and the Common-wealth.

Ib. p. 1052.

Adviſed from Leiceſter, Jan. 24. That on the Lord's-Day General Monk was at Nottingham, and having Notice of the Arrival of Mr. Secretary Scot, and Mr. Luke Robinſon in this City, Commiſſioners ſent to him from the Parliament; he immediately ſent them Word, that if they pleaſed to ſtay here, he would within a Day or two be with them. They accordingly ſtay'd here, and yeſterday Evening the two Commiſſioners of Parliament having Word ſent them, that he was coming on towards this City, went forth ſix Miles from hence to meet him. He marched with his own Regiment and a great Train of Officers, and Gentlemen of the County attending him, the Bells ringing in every Town through which he paſſed; the reſt of the Army marched in ſuch a manner as might leaſt burthen the Country. As he paſſed to the Place where he met the Commiſſioners, the Iriſh Brigade being drawn up gave a Volley; and when the Commiſſioners drew near, as they alighted out of their Coach, he riding on Horſeback, at the ſame inſtant diſmounted, and having ſaluted each other with all Demonſtrations of Reſpect and Courteſy, they all three went into the Coach and ſo came hither. All the Bells rung at their Entrance, and the People flock'd to behold them: To manifeſt the Reſpects of this City to this honourable Perſon, the Mayor, with all his Brethren, in their Gowns and Formalities, went and preſented him with a Banquet, and a ſolemn Profeſſion of the high Eſteem they have of his great Services performed for the Parliament and Common-wealth.

Hence the Joy of the People to ſee the Parliament's Friend.

The General expected to be tried with the Offer of the Oath of Abjuration, which his Brother Clarges taught him how to evade.

Philips or Clarges Continuat. of Hiſt. of Sir Richard Baker, Fol. p. 702.

At Leiceſter the General expected to be attacked about the Oath of Abjuration, and was much troubled to think how to divert it. Clarges told him, he had a plain and fair Anſwer to make to them, which was, that he heard many Men of undoubted Integrity had refuſed the Oath, and 'till he came to London to hear the Reaſons on both Sides for the taking and refuſing, he could not reſolve it. This Advice he followed and ſucceeded in it. Scot and Robinſon at their firſt Interview told him, that the Parliament had order'd a thouſand Pounds a Year for ever to be ſettled on him, and appointed them to acquaint him with it, and to let him know the Senſe the Parliament had of his great Services; and that they were providing Monies for his Soldiers, and were glad to hear of his repairing to London.

The Commiſſioners bring a Bribe from the Parliament, to retain the General in their Service, by the Grant of one thouſand Pounds per Ann. for ever.

The Houſe take Care to retain the Militia on their Side.

Mercur.Polit. 4to. p. 1051.

The Houſe referred it to the Council of State to conſider, how the Militia Forces that have been faithful to the Parliament may be paid off for the Time they are employ'd by the Parliament; and that ſuch of the Militia Forces as they ſhall think fit be ſent to their own Houſes, that they be no further Charge to the Common-wealth.

An Addreſs of the County of Berks, delivered to the Speaker by Sir Robert Pye and Major Fincher.

Ibid.

Mr. Speaker acquainted the Parliament, that a Paper was delivered to him laſt Night by Sir Robert Pye and Major Fincher: Whereupon the Houſe reſolved that they be brought to the Bar of the Houſe, and being aſked whether they deliver'd that Paper to the Speaker, they did acknowledge the Delivery and their Hands ſubſcribed to it; who being withdrawn the ſaid Paper was read.

Wherein they loudly complain of inſupportable Grievances and Oppreſſions.

Whereas we the Gentlemen and Freeholders of this County of Berks were generally met together at Abbingdon upon ſome Intimation of an Election of a Knight of the Shire, in purſuance of your Order for the filling up of the Parliament; and that ſome Sollicitations were uſed throughout the County for Voices, and being jealous to be ſurprized therein by any clandeſtine Carriage of the Writ: And whereas at this Meeting it was further taken into Conſideration, that this County have with the reſt of the Nation been deeply ſenſible of many inſupportable Grievances and Oppreſſions of late Days, occaſioned through the Want of a real, ſettled, and regular Government; and in particular that the Commiſſioners for the Militia having formerly charged the Country to provide Arms, which was accordingly done, the ſaid Commiſſioners do yet direct their Warrants for the bringing in of twenty Shillings for every Foot Arms, which we are very confident is beyond the Intent of the Act which impowers them, and are ignorant otherwiſe by what Authority they proceed therein.

And conſulting Remedies they find the beſt Expedient will be, the Recalling of the ſecluded Members, and free Elections to vacant Places, to ſit without Oath or Engagement.

That therefore having ſeriouſly conſulted the Remedies which might be proper for theſe and the like Inconveniences for the future, and by God's Bleſſing reduce us unto a firm free and legal Settlement of our Rights civil and religious; we conceived it to be our Duty towards God and our Country, without any private Ends whatſoever, to declare ourſelves in this Senſe, that we take the moſt ſatisfactory Expedient for it, will be the Recalling of thoſe Members that were ſecluded in 1648. and that before the firſt Force upon the Parliament. And that in the Elections that ſhall be of any other Members in the vacant Places, ſuch due Courſe may be taken, as that the Country may not be any way ſurpriſed or overawed therein; and that the ſecluded Members may be admitted to ſit, without any Oath or Engagement to reſtrain their Freedom in the leaſt.

Wherein we ſhall be ready to defend you and them with whatſoever is deareſt unto us, againſt all Oppoſition; and pray unto Almighty God, for his Aſſiſtance to the happy Accompliſhment of what may beſt conduce to the Peace and Safety of this Nation.

They vote the Paper to be ſeditious, and commit the Preſenters of it to the Tower.

Reſolved, that the Matter contained in this Paper is an high Breach of the Privilege of Parliament, and is ſeditious, and tending to the raiſing of a new War.

Reſolved, that the ſaid Sir Robert Pye and Major Fincher be ſent to the Tower, there to continue, until the Parliament take further Order.

The General's March to Harborough; where the City Commiſſioners met him, and move for a Re-admiſſion of the ſecluded Members.

Continuat. of Baker, Fol. p. 703.

The General had marched Jan. 23. from Leiceſter to Harborough, where he was met by Alderman Fowke, Alderman Vincent, and Mr. Bromfield, Commiſſioners to him from the City of London, who after a congratulatory Speech, fell upon Particulars for the general Settlement of the Kingdom; and Mr. Bromfield in a handſome ſet Speech, after the Enumeration of the ſeveral Calamities it lay under, as the beſt Remedy propoſed the Re-admiſſion of the ſecluded Members, and that the Parliament might be made full and free. Scot was ſo impatient at this, that he took the Words out of the General's Mouth, and would not permit him to anſwer them. He told them, Now the Parliament had ſubjected the military Power to a due Subordination to the Civil, they were free, and that having already given their Judgment in the Caſe of the ſecluded Members, it did not become them to inſiſt on their Readmiſſion. Alderman Fowke endeavoured to qualify what Bromfield had propounded, by ſaying, He conceived they were not obliged by their Inſtructions to deſire the General's Mediation further, than that they might have all their own Members admitted, ſince it was unreaſonable that they ſhould be governed by a Parliament, where they had not their Repreſentatives. This Diſcourſe on all Sides was managed with ſome Heat, and the General was forced to comply with Scot and Robinſon in their Evtravagancies, to preſerve their Opinion of him; which made the Citizens part from him ſomewhat unſatisfied, and ſo they continued, till he ſent Clarges privately to give them a better Underſtanding of his Intention.

Which fir'd Scot and Robinſon, who furiouſly oppos'd it, and would not ſuffer the General to give them any civil Anſwer, but what he privately ſent after them by his Brother Clarges.

The March of General Monk to Northampton.

Continual Addreſſes made to him, which he durſt not freely anſwer.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, 8vo, p. 196.

General Monk had ſet forward Jan. 24. for Northampton, where he met more Addreſſes from the Gentry of the County, for the filling up the Parliament or calling a new one. But the cold Entertainment which the Meſſengers from London had receiv'd the Day before at Harborough, did ſomewhat diſcourage them in preſenting their Petition; till Dr. Barrow and ſome other Gentlemen about the General, advis'd them to go on with their Addreſs, and to be content with ſuch Anſwer as they receiv'd, in Expectation of the future Effect. The General was greatly perplex'd how to anſwer theſe repeated Addreſſes, being very well ſatisfy'd in the Reaſon and Equity of thoſe that brought them. But Scot and Robinſon eas'd him of that Care, for they undertook to anſwer all Comers, leaving General Monk to the Satisfaction of his own Silence, who never lov'd to make long Speeches, nor to hear them from others. But when he was forc'd (in Compliance with the Commiſſioners) to diſoblige thoſe Gentlemen that offer'd theſe Addreſſes, by his Anſwers; yet he would ſtill be careful to make them ſome Amends, by his Countenance and the Kindneſs of his Aſpect towards them.

THURSDAY Jan. 26.

The Rump do all they can to court the Protection of General Monk.

Mercur. publiſh'd by Order of Parliament, N°. 605.

Report was made of a Bill for approving and juſtifying the late Actings of General George Monk, which was read a firſt Time, and ordered to be read a ſecond to Morrow Morning.

They make him Cuſtos Rotulorum for Devon.

Reſolved, that General George Monk be Cuſtos Rotulorum in the County of Devon.

They confirm his Commiſſion.

Reſolved, that the Parliament doth approve of the Commiſſion granted to General Monk by the Council of State, dated 24. Nov. 1659.

And prefer his Chaplain.

Ordered, that it be ſpecially recommended to the Provoſt and Fellows of Eaton-College, that they be hereby deſired to elect Mr. Gumble to the firſt Fellows Place in Eaton-College, that ſhall become void by Death or otherwiſe. He being Chaplain to General Monk, and one that hath done ſpecial Service for the Parliament and Commonwealth.

Ordered, that Colonel Lambert have Liberty to reſide at Captain Baynes his Houſe at Holmby, and that he continue there until the Parliament take further Order.

When

The Northampton Addreſs.

When General Monk march'd from Harborough, Sir John Norris, with many of the chief Gentry in Northamptonſhire welcomed him into their Country; and at Northampton were prepared to attend him with an Addreſs, but were ſo much diſcouraged, that they thought to decline it, till Dr. Barrow requeſted Mr. Philip Howard to proceed in their Intentions, and to aſſure them, that though they had not a ſatisfactory Anſwer, they might be ſure it would produce a good Effect. And ſo the Addreſs was delivered.

To which the General made a very cool and cautious Anſwer.

Whitlock's Memoirs, Fol. p. 695.

Letters to the Parliament gave Advice, that upon General Monk's coming to Northampton with the Parliament's Commiſſioners, a hundred Gentlemen preſented a Paper to him, deſiring him to be inſtrumental for the ſecluded Members, or for a free Parliament, to which he anſwered, that he was but a Servant to the Parliament in a military Capacity, and theſe Things of great and civil Concernment were to be left to the Parliament; and he thanked them for their Reſpects to him.

FRIDAY, Jan. 27.

The Rump, that they might not ſeem too arbitrary in admitting or excluding Members, had ſuffer'd a falſe Return to be depending in the Court of Common Pleas, and tranſmit it to the Court of Exchequer.

Mercur. Polit. 4to. p. 1056.

Ordered in Parliament, that the Caſe between Mr. Nevill a Member of this Houſe, and William Stroude, Eſq; late Sheriff of the County of Berks, touching a falſe Return, heretofore depending in the Court of Common-Pleas, and a Tranſcript of the Record delivered into the Parliament, for their Reſolution therein, be remanded into that Court, and that the ſaid Court do tranſmit the ſaid Cauſe into the Exchequer Chamber, forthwith to be heard and determined there by the Judges and Barons of the Exchequer, and that ſuch Determination ſhall be final.

They take all poſſible Care to eſtabliſh themſelves.

Reſolved to ſettle a Committee for the Army, of which the Quorum to be three; and to proceed in ſettling the Admiralty and Navy.

They purge the Army by change of Offiters, to be their own Creatures.

Ibid. p. 1057.

A Liſt of the Names of Officers in the ſeveral Regiments of Colonel Hacker, Colonel Thomas Fitch, Colonel Smithſon, Colonel George Fleetwood, Colonel Herbert Morley, and Colonel Sir Anthony Aſhley Cooper, being read, the Officers were many of them approved and continued; and new Commiſſions were delivered by the Speaker to ſeveral others.

The General marches on to Dunſtable.

Multiplied Addreſſes to the ſame Tune of reſtoring the ſecluded Members, which the ſitting Juncto dreaded above all Things.

Continuat. of Sir Richard Baker, Fol. p. 703.

The General kept on his March to Dunſtable, and on the Road ſeveral Addreſſes were preſented to him from the Gentry of Buckinghamſhire, Oxfordſhire, Norfolk, and almoſt all Counties, which did all agree in the ſame Matter, viz. for the Reſtitution of the Members ſecluded in the Year 1648, and the filling up the Vacancies in Parliament, or elſe for the calling of a full and free Parliament. All which were anſwered with much Reſpect by him, although he durſt not diſcover his Approbation of their Deſires: And it is very obſervable, that in all the Counties ſo much Caution was obſerved, that no Gentlemen ſigned any of theſe Addreſſes, that had ever been engaged in his preſent Majeſty's, or his Royal Father's Cauſe, nor ſcarce any of the Sons of ſuch.

The Addreſs from Bucks was preſented by Sir Richard Temple; that from Oxfordſhire by the Lord Falkland; that from the County of Leiceſter by George Fawnt, Eſq; Sheriff; and William Boothby, Richard Orton, and Richard Halford, Eſquires; that from Norfolk delivered to the Speaker Lenthall by the Lord Richardſon, Sir John Hobart, and Sir Horatio Townſhend, Baronets; that from Suffolk by Sir Henry Fenton, &c.

The General comes to St. Albans.

More and more Addreſſes to the ſame Effect.

Reſtoring the ſecluded Members.

Which put the Parliament Commiſſioners out of all Temper.

And made Mr. Secretary Scot vaunt and hector.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, 8vo. p. 197.

Dr. Price's Hiſtory of the Reſtoration 8vo. p. 84.

This Day Jan. 28, the General arrived at St. Albans, where he was again beſieged with numerous Addreſſes from ſeveral other Counties of England, agreeing all in the ſame Applications, for the reſtoring the ſecluded Members, or the calling a new Parliament. Scot and Robinſon had all the Way from Leiceſter to St. Albans taken up their Quarters in the ſame Houſe with him; and when they withdrew from him to their own Apartment, they always found or made ſome Hole in the Door or Wall, to look in or liſten (which they had practiſed ſo palpably, that the General found it out, and took Notice of it to thoſe about him, reflecting on their Baſeneſs and evil Suſpicions) that they might more nearly inſpect his Actions, and obſerve what Perſons came to him; and alſo be in readineſs to anſwer the Addreſſes, and to ruſtle with thoſe that brought them. But here they were ſo plainly and ſeverely reprimanded by thoſe Gentlemen that came, that Scot in great Paſſion reply'd, Though his Age might excuſe him from taking up Arms; yet, as old as he was, before this preſent Parliament ſhould be entangled, by reſtoring the ſecluded Members, or by new Elections; he would gird on his Sword again, and keep the Door againſt them.

Mercur. Polit. p. 1060.

This Night News was brought from St. Albans, that the General arrived there this Day about Noon, in the ſame Coach with the Parliament's Commiſſioners, attended by two Regiments of Foot, and one of Horſe, the reſt being upon their March after. The whole that he brings into theſe Parts amount to 1800 Horſe, and 4500 Foot, having diſpoſed others in the North. His Head Quarter is like to continue at St. Albans 'till toward the latter End of the Week, and then his whole Army will be rendezvous'd about Barnet. To morrow being the Lord's-Day Mr. Peters is to preach before his Lordſhip.

Addreſs of Admiral Lawſon to General Monk.

Ibid. 1060.

This Day Vice-Admiral Lawſon with about twenty of his Sea Captains preſented their Acknowledgments to General Monk at St. Albans, who gave them a very courteous Reception, as his old Friends that he had try'd in ſeveral grand Encounters, wherein the Honour and Valour of this Nation was never more ſeen by Sea.

SUNDAY Jan. 29.

Hugh Peters ſent for a Preacher.

Dr. Skinner's Life of Monk, 8vo. p. 198.

General Monk among the reſt of his Interruptions at St. Albans was troubled with a long faſt Sermon from Hugh Peters.

Account of his Sermon by one of his Auditors, Chaplain to the General.

Hiſtory of the King's Reſtoration by Dr. Price, now one of the Chaplains to Gen. Monk, 8vo. p. 86.

Here at St. Albans we ſpent one Day extraordinary at the Church, the famous Hugh Peters, Mr. Lee of Hatfield and another carrying on the Work of the Day, which was a Faſt. Peters ſupererogated, and prayed a long Prayer in the General's Quarters too at Night. As to his Sermon, he managed it with ſome Dexterity at the firſt (allowing the Cantings of his Expreſſions). His Text was Pſalm cvii. ver. 7. He led them forth by the right Way, that they might go to the City where they dwelt. With his Fingers on the Cuſhion he meaſured the right Way from the Red-Sea through the Wilderneſs to Canaan; told us it was not forty Days March, but God led Iſrael forty Years through the Wilderneſs, before they came thither; yet this was ſtill the Lord's right Way, who led his People Crincledum cum Cranckedum: And he particularly deſcended into the Lives of the Patriarchs, how they journeyed up and down, though there were Promiſes of Bleſſing and Reſt to them. Then he reviewed our Civil Wars, our Intervals of Peace, and freſh Diſtractions, and Hopes of Reſt. But though the Lord's People (he ſaid) were not yet come to the City of Habitation, he was ſtill leading them on the right Way, how dark ſoever his Diſpenſations might appear to us.

Canting and Crafty enough.

A Way to Settlement would be round about.

In the dark Ways of Providence.

State of the Church and Biſhops, as repreſented in November laſt by Mr. Chancellour Hyde.

Append. to the Engliſh Life of Dr. Barwick, 8vo. N°. xv. p. 453.

A Continuation of the State of the Engliſh Biſhops and epiſcopal Clergy, in a Letter from Chancellour Hyde to Mr. Barwick, dated Bruſſels Nov. 21, 1659.

The Church without a Succeſſion of new Biſhops, not to be ſaved, but by a Miracle.

—— I know not what to add to what I have ſo often ſaid concerning the Buſineſs of the Church, the Accidents of every Day making the Work more difficult; which if they are not ſenſible enough of, who can only prevent the Miſchief, I hope God Almighty will work one Miracle more for the Preſerving his Church, as he did many for the Eſtabliſhing it. —— I can aſſure you, that the King hath ſo juſt a Senſe of the inevitable Conſequences of the Univerſities being well or ill provided for, in point of Government, that when the Time comes, he will manifeſt his great Care in that Particular, eſpecially concerning Chriſt Church in Oxford; which if I had not looked upon, rather as the Government of a College, and ſo forgotten it as a Deanery, I could have told you the King hath deſigned it to a Perſon who your ſick Friend will tell you, is every Way equal to it. And I do aſſure you, that the King is not more fix'd in any Principle, than in the Belief, that the Church can never be reſtored and repaired by any Expedient, but by the Learning, Virtue, and Reputation of the Church-men: And he will be ſo careful in making that Proviſion, that I have heard him often ſay, that he would abhor that Church-man who would give the leaſt Sum of Money for the greateſt Preferment, and turn away that Servant, who would endeavour to get Money that Way: And I think him as unlike to ſwerve from that Reſolution, as ever Prince was. God ſend our good ſick Friend perfect Health, and preſerve it to my Lord of Ely, that he may live to help in the Repairing of the Ruins that are made: I have no Time to add more.

The King is taking Care for the good Government of the Univerſities.

Dr. Morley inſtall'd Feb. 27. 1660.

And is convinc'd that the Intereſt of the Church, will depend upon the Goodneſs of Church-men.

And ſuch Character only ſhall recommend them to Church Preferments.

Received Nov. 20.

A Letter from Mr. Chancellour Hyde to Mr. John Barwick, dated Bruſſels Nov. 28. 1659.

Appendix to the Life of Dr. John Barwick, Engl. N°. xvi. p. 461.

—— I can ſay no more with reference to the Church, but that if there be nothing hinders it but the Winter, it will be quickly over, whilſt Preparations are making; and yet God knows, it will be almoſt a Miracle, if this Winter doth not take away half the Biſhops that are left alive; and I muſt ſtill lament, that ſome way is not found, that the Biſhop of Ely may be at Liberty; which would carry on this Work more than any Expedient I can think of. Concerning any Aſſurance we have, of any Conſent from the Perſons named, to undergo the Charge deſign'd to them, I can give you no Satisfaction; not knowing that any one of them hath been communicated with to that Purpoſe: And I have always been of the Opinion, that the Method you ſay was obſerved by Biſhop Andrews, and the Biſhop of Ely, is the Right; and if I could help it, if the King were at Whitehall to Morrow, he ſhould never prefer any Man in the Church, who ſought it: And I think I have Reaſon to believe the King is of that Mind. The Care that was taken in the Nomination of thoſe who were ſent to you, was that fit Men might be appointed; nothing being ſo evident, as the Concluſion you alledge,

Preparations for making new Biſhops.

The Winter may take away one half of the few that are left.

The Liberty of Biſhop Wren would promote that good Work.

The King had nominated Perſons to the vacant Sees, yet without Conſent or Knowledge of the Perſons themſelves.

The beſt Way is to prefer no Man that ſeeks Preferment.

The Church to be ſupported by the Merit of Church-men.

In the Nomination of Biſhops, Dr. Laney was left out, and Dr. Sanderſon, and Dr. Nicholas; but in favour to them.

Dr. Manſell was put in, but now to be diſpens'd with, becauſe of his Infirmities.

Dr. Nicholas to be again ſolicited to accept of Conſecration.

If any refuſe, then to conſecrate thoſe that are ready.

The Chancellour deſires a Liſt of worthy Churchmen.

And doubts that even after the King's Reſtoration, the Church will not be repair'd in many Years.

Nay totally ruin'd, if not reſtor'd to greater Luſtre.

No great Danger in the common Diſcourſe, that the King will yield to the Conceſſions of his Father in the Iſle of Wight.

Tho' ſome ſo adviſe and pretend, that the Church ſhall be afterward repair'd.

alledge, that nothing but the great Merit of Churchmen can buoy up the Church; yet upon all the Particulars it was thought, that they were Men like to ſubmit to the King's Determination. And it was always concluded, that ſome Means would be found there, to perſuade them to do their Duties; and ſome Inſinuation, that Dr. Laney would be very unwilling to ſubmit to it, was the Cauſe, that he was left out; as the Conſideration of Age and Diſability to travel, was the Cauſe that Dr. Sanderſon was not named: And we were then informed, that Dr. Manſel was in very good Health, and that he lived ſtill in Oxford. If it be otherwiſe, and that his Age and Infirmities make him unfit, he muſt be diſpenſed with: Secretary Nicholas and I, conſulted together of his Brother; and he was and is confident, that he will depart from the Reſolution which his Fortune and his Inclination might tempt him to, and wholly reſign himſelf to the King's Pleaſure, and therefore, if you pleaſe, let Dr. Henchman acquaint him with it, and know his Mind. As ſoon as the King returns (which will now be I am confident within leſs than twenty Days) you ſhall receive the Liſt in Cypher, under his Majeſty's own Hand, which was delivered by himſelf to Mr. Alleſtry: But methinks, if ſome of them ſhould refuſe, or all of them, to come together, courſe might be taken to conſecrate as many as are ready: But of all this Judgment muſt be made upon the Place. I am ſorry my Lord of Ely will not commend any particular Perſon; but it is abſolutely neceſſary, that by Communication with him, and the other of your Friends, you return hither a Liſt of ſuch worthy Men as are fit for thoſe Charges, and not like to decline them; and of the Number the King may chuſe as he pleaſes. There is indeed too much Reaſon to doubt, that if the Crown were reſtored to Morrow, the Church would not be in many Years repaired; yet I hope it would not be in ſo miſerable a Condition as you ſuppoſe; and that the publick and general Piety of the Nation will contribute to the repairing of thoſe Defacings and Ruins, which the general Madneſs and Impiety hath diſhonoured the Nation with. And truly I am of Opinion, that the Church will be either totally ruined (towards which there is too great a Conſpiracy between Perſons, who agree in nothing elſe) or elſe, that it will be reſtored to a great Luſtre. For all Diſcourſes of the Treaty at the Iſle of Wight trouble me little; though it comes mentioned ſometimes to us by thoſe who pretend no Diſaffection to the Church; and who pretend all ſhall be repaired again afterwards. But as I am confident the King will never endure it; ſo if he ſhould conſent to it, it can never be reduced into Practice, or a Peace be eſtabliſhed in the Kingdom by it, — &c. I am

Your moſt affectionate Servant,

Hyde.

A Letter of Mr. Chancellour Hyde to Mr. John Barwick, dated Bruſſels December 26. 1659.

—— I ſhall not at preſent enlarge upon the Buſineſs of the Church more, than that I am perſuaded, that his Majeſty will not be forward to diſpoſe of thoſe Livings with Cures; having not yet I think made promiſe to any one in England. I pray let honeſt Mr. Thorneton know, that I write to him this Day by the ſame Conveyance by which I received his laſt, which I believe will come to his Hands within few Days after this. Since I writ thus far, the King is arriv'd with us to our great Joy. ——— And this very Minute Mr. Alleſtrey is come to us.

Monday Jan. 30.

The General thought it now Time to ſend away the Letter before drawn up, for the quartering of his Army in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and obliging the Parliament Troops to give Way to them, except the two Regiments of Fagg and Morley.

Lydcott the Speaker's Kinſman, a proper and good Agent in it.

A great Ferment in the Houſe.

Philips or Clarges Continuat. of Sir Rich. Baker's Chron. Fol. p. 703.

At Dunſtable the General had conſulted Major Knight and Clarges, about the filling up the Blanks in the Letter prepared at Nottingham; having had Thoughts to ſend it by Clarges, Knight, or Clark his Secretary: But upon further Conſideration, it was thought convenient not to part with Knight, becauſe his Preſence would be requiſite with his Troops, if any Diſorder ſhould happen upon their March to London: As for Clark he was ſo neceſſary to be with the General, for the iſſuing out Orders, that he could not be ſpared: And for Clarges it was judg'd more expedient, that he ſhould be ſent before, to prepare a Party in the Houſe. So that Lydcott was choſen to be ſent, as one very grateful to the Speaker, to whom he was near ally'd, and Friday was the Day inſerted for his March into London: And upon the next Day's Conſultation, which was Saturday Evening the 28th of January, he was diſpatch'd away: And on Monday the Letter was delivered; which cauſed a long and violent Debate. Haſlerig told them, the Council of State had before agreed, that four Regiments of thoſe in London ſhould march out, and four of the Generals be admitted; but nothing prevailed that he ſaid againſt the General's Letter: So that after a Debate from eight in the Morning to twelve at Noon, the Reſult was in theſe Words:

Their Reſolution upon it.

Monday January 30, 1659. Upon reading of a Letter from St. Albans from General Monk, dated the 28th of January, and two Liſts therein, Reſolved upon the Queſtion, That the Parliament doth agree with the Diſtribution of the Soldiers into Quarters, according to the ſaid Liſts.

Reſolved upon the Queſtion, That it be referred to the Commiſſioners of the Army to ſee the Soldiers forthwith diſtributed accordingly.

The News of theſe Votes welcome to General Monk.

Lydcott returns to the General with the welcome News of theſe Votes, as well might it be ſo to him; for from the Moment of the Execution of them (which gave him the Poſſeſſion of London) he could not but think his Conduct would prove very ill, if he did not reduce the Armies in the three Kingdoms to his Obedience.

The Forces that were to march out of Town were to be made eaſy.

Ordered, That the Committee of the Army and Treaſurers at War do meet together this Afternoon, and take Care to provide Monies towards the Pay of ſuch of the Soldiery, as ſhall be drawn out of this Town to the Quarters appointed for them.

Ordered, That the Soldiers, both Horſe and Foot, that ſhall be drawn out of Town, ſhall have a Month's Pay upon a new Muſter to be made.

General Monk had inſiſted on their Removal.

Lord Clarendon's Hiſt. Fol. Vol. III. p. 555.

From St. Albans the General ſent to the Parliament, that he had ſome Apprehenſion, that thoſe Regiments and Troops of the Army who had formerly deſerted them, though for the preſent they were returned to their Obedience, would not live peaceably with his Men, and therefore deſired that all the Soldiers (except one or two Regiments which he named) who were then quartered in the Strand, Weſtminſter, or other Suburbs of the City, might be preſently removed, and ſent to more diſtant Quarters, that there might be Room for his Army. This Meſſage was unexpected, and exceedingly perplexed them, and made them ſee, their Fate would ſtill be under the Force and Awe of an Army. However, they found it neceſſary to comply, and ſent their Orders to all Soldiers to depart; which, with the Reaſon and Ground of their Reſolution, was ſo diſdainfully received, that a Mutiny did ariſe amongſt the Soldiers; and the Regiment that was quartered in Somerſet Houſe, expreſsly refuſed to obey thoſe Orders; ſo that there were like to be new Uproars. But their Officers who would have been glad to inflame them upon ſuch an Occaſion, were under Reſtraint or abſent: And ſo at laſt all was well compoſed, and Officers and Soldiers removed to the Quarters aſſigned them, with Animoſity enough againſt thoſe who were to ſucceed them in their old ones.

Yet a Mutiny enſued upon it.

Tho' forc'd to ſubmit with ſome Indignation.

The Houſe authorized Mr. Speaker to deliver Commiſſions to ſome Officers of the Army, after the Houſe riſeth.

The Company of Watermen addreſs the Rump.

Reſolved, That the Petitioners have the hearty Thanks of the Parliament, and being called in the Speaker gave them this Anſwer:

And have Thanks from the Speaker.

Gentlemen,

The Houſe hath read your Petition, and they have weighed it, and find in it much more Matter and Subſtance than could have been expected, and much Faithfulneſs in you to the Good and Safety of this Common-wealth; they find alſo much of Truth ſet forth therein. They alſo take Notice of your good Affections, who are their Neighbours, which as ye have always had, ſo now ye have manifeſted to the Parliament. Upon all theſe Conſiderations, the Parliament have commanded me to give you hearty Thanks, and in their Names I do give you hearty Thanks accordingly.

By Richard Baxter, Paſtor of the Church at Kederminſter, with an Epiſtle dedicatory to the honourable Colonel JAMES BERRY, one of the Council of State, [ſpeaking much againſt Toleration and Liberty to be granted by Magiſtrates, he ſays,] Remember in all this, that I ſpeak not againſt a Toleration of godly tolerable Men, Epiſcopal, Preſbyterian, Independent, Anabaptiſt, &c. that will walk in Charity, Peace, and Concord. We ſhall never be well 'till theſe are cloſed. But do we not know that Papiſts have Italy, and Spain, and Germany, and France at Hand to help them? And that if we grant them ſuch a Liberty as ſhall ſtrengthen them and make Way for their Power, we give away our own Liberty, and are preparing Faggots for our own Martyrdom, and giving away the Goſpel, that by Wonders of Mercy hath been 'till now preſerved, and I hope ſhall be preſerved in deſpite of Rome and Hell? Nor yet do I plead for any Cruelty againſt a Papiſt, but for a neceſſary Defence of the Intereſt of Chriſt and the Souls of Men, and the Hopes of our Poſterity. [He complains much of the Contempt of their Miniſters] The Miniſters and Servants of the Lord are railed at by many of them, as formerly they were by the worſt of thoſe that their Hands deſtroyed: And with this dreadful Aggravation, that then it was but ſome that were reviled, and now with many it is all; then it was under the Name of Puritans and Roundheads, and now it is openly as Miniſters under the Name of Prieſts, and Blockheads, and Preſbyters, and Pulpiteers. A London Miniſter, taken to be Mr. Matthew Pool, writes a Letter to the Lord General Fleetwood.

A Letter from a London Miniſter to the LORD FLEETWOOD; ſubſcribed M. P. [commonly underſtood to be Mr. Matthew Pool. At the End is this Advertiſement] I having by a good Providence met with this Letter of my much reſpected Friend, a Miniſter in London, to my Lord Fleetwood, which was delivered to him the 13th of December 1659, and perceiving it to be of very great Uſe to all Perſons in reference to Mens Souls and the Publick, I found myſelf much preſſed in Spirit, out of Love to both, to publiſh it.

Whom he believes to be a Man truly fearing God.

P. 1. You have the Reputation (and I am perſuaded juſtly) of a Perſon truly fearing God, whoſe Errors therefore I cannot judge incurable. —— You may eaſily imagine yourſelf an incompetent Judge in your own Cauſe, there being even in good Men a Proneneſs to abett thoſe Actions they have been once engaged in. —— I hope by the preſent Streights, Diviſions, and Confuſions we are in, God hath awakened you to a more impartial View of your Actions, and opened your Ears to Diſcipline.

He hopes his Eyes are now open to ſee the Sins of Rebellion, Sedition, &c. againſt the Parliament turn'd out by the Army.

P. 2. If your Practices be juſtifiable, it may very well be doubted, whether there be any ſuch Sins in the World, as Rebellion, Sedition, deſpiſing of Dignities, and the like. —— You have made yourſelves Judges of three Nations, making even Parliaments (hitherto reputed the higheſt Judicature of the Nation) give Place to your private Sentiments, and ſtand or fall at your Tribunal. —

Uncovering their Mother's Nakedneſs; and expoſing her to the Dangers of Invaſion from abroad.

P. 3. My Lord, I beſeech you, believe it, I write it with a bleeding Heart. Religion hath received its soreſt Wounds in the Houſe of its Friends. —— You have made England naked to its Shame before our Enemies, you have uncover'd our Mother's Nakedneſs, and expos'd her to the Danger of Foreign Invaſions, and prepar'd the People of the Nation for a Compliance with the very worſt of their and our Enemies. —— There is but one Remedy, that is a Parliament.

THE QUAKER DISARM'D. Or a true Relation of a late publick Diſpute held at Cambridge, by three eminent Quakers againſt one Scholar of Cambridge. With a Letter in Defence of the Miniſtry, and againſt Lay Preachers. Alſo ſeveral Queries propoſed to be anſwered if they can.

The Quakers in the Streets preach againſt Univerſities, Learning, Prieſts and Tythes;

And the Soldiers guard them and defend them.

Preface. —— In May laſt, this Scholar walking over Palace-Yard about his neceſſary Occaſions, chanced to ſee a great Multitude of People over againſt Weſtminſter-Hall compaſſed with Soldiers in Red Coats; drawing near, he heard Whitehead preaching againſt Univerſities, Learning, and Tythes, and the Clergy, and aſk'd ſome of the Red-Coats, whether he might ſpeak a Word? They anſwered, they could not tell. Whereupon he crowded up to Whitehead, and aſk'd him the ſame Queſtion, who ſaid, no, no. Another Soldier that ſtood near him ſaid, hold thy Tongue, or I'll ſtop thy Mouth. So the Scholar held his Peace till W. had done his railing againſt the Prieſts; then the People cried out with one Voice, let the Gentleman ſpeak. Whereupon the Scholar ſtood up, and uſed ſuch Arguments in few Words againſt W. (to which W. ſaid nothing, but another Quaker ſtood up and prayed) that all the People ſhouted.

But upon Auguſt 25. 1659. the ſame Scholar having been all the Afernoon (from one a Clock till four or five) in St. John's College Library, turning over Arabic, and other Manuſcripts, returning home wearied the neareſt Way, unexpectedly ſaw the ſame Whitehead preaching in the Quaker's common Meeting-Houſe: So he went in, deſired leave to ſpeak, and when Whitehead had done, confuted his Doctrine. Next Day conſidering how apt ſilly Women are to be led away Captive by ſuch Deceivers, he ſent this following Note to the Mayor of Cambridge, hoping in the Concluſion to reclaim his Wife who is a Quaker. —— Signed *Chr. The Spirit of Quakeriſm was Blaſphemy, &c.

Your Fellow Soldier,

The Quakers agree with the Papiſts in many Principles.

P. 30. By this we may clearly ſee, that they are in many of their Opinions very Popiſh, agreeing with the Papiſts in all theſe Things; 1. That the Miniſters of the Reformed Churches are not true Miniſters. 2. Nor the Ordinances adminiſtred by them the Ordinances of Chriſt. 3. That a Man is juſtified by the Merit of good Works, and by inherent Righteouſneſs. 4. That the Scriptures ſhould not be read by the Ignorant and Unlearned. 5. That the Church hath an infallible unerring Spirit to try and judge of Scripture itſelf. 6. And as the Papiſts by their Doctrine of the real corporeal Preſence of Chriſt in many thouſand Places at once overthrow (as much as in them lyeth) the Articles of Chriſt's Humanity: So the Quakers deſtroy the Humanity of Chriſt, by denying his being corporeally in Heaven, and affirming that he hath but one Body, which is his Church, and that God manifeſt in Fleſh is to be underſtood in the Saints. Alſo their Opinion that the Magiſtrate is not to meddle with Matters of Religion, unleſs to pull down the Reformed Religion is a plain Point of Popery.

Their Rudeneſs and Inſolence.

P. 31. They will not pull off their Hats, nor bow their Bodies to the greateſt Perſons. The Parliament 1659, appointed a Committee on Purpoſe to hear their Complaints, before which the Quakers ſtood covered, and thou'd and thee'd the Chairmen and Members thereof, to the greateſt Diſhonour of the Authority of England as ever was admitted.

They will not ſwear but againſt their Enemies.

They will not take an Oath before a Magiſtrate or otherwiſe, ſaying, it is unlawful: And yet this Summer 1659, to revenge themſelves of ſome Countrymen about Sawbridgworth in Hartfordſhire for affronting them, they could freely ſwear againſt them, in order to the binding them over to the Seſſions, and rail againſt Sir T. H. a Juſtice of Peace, accuſing him in Print, for not taking the Parliament's new Engagement.

Immodeſt and Obſcene.

The ſame Author adds, P. 32, that they are the moſt immodeſt, obſcene People in the World, next to the late Ranters; if all the Stories were here ſet down, they would make a large Volume.

A naked Female in Chapel before Oliver Cromwell.

I will ſet down but thoſe few which I am ſure I can prove to be true; and that are by many Hundreds known to be true. 1. A female Quaker about four or five Years ago came into White-hall Chapel ſtark naked, while a great Congregation was at the publick Worſhip of God, the Lord Protector O. C. being preſent.

A Maid Servant came into the Parlour ſtark naked.

2. Since then a Relation of mine had a Maid-ſervant that became a Quaker, and one Day at Putney, where his Country Houſe was, and when he had many Friends at Dinner with him, ſhe came into the Parlour ſtark naked, while they were at Dinner, to the Aſtoniſhment, &c.

Having endeavoured (honourable and worthy Gentlemen) to do ſome Right to the Memory of the reverend and renowned Biſhop Brounrig, for his holy Obedience to the Word of God, for his Conformity to his bleſſed Saviour, for his Loyalty to Sovereign Power, for his Love to his Country, for his Compaſſion to the Church, for his Zeal to the Reformed Religion, for thoſe Sighs, Prayers, and Tears by which he encounter'd the Sins and Miſeries of this Nation, &c.

The Reſpects paid at his Funeral.

All ingenious Perſons who are not overgrown with the antiepiſcopal Jaundice, (who have not envious, odious, jealous, and implacable Eyes againſt all Biſhops, and moſt againſt the beſt) will readily ſubſcribe to what I have written. — This induſtrious Biſhop, however he were eclipſed by the fatal Darkneſs of the Times; yet the pregnant Demonſtrations of his Worth were publickly atteſted, as by that Love and Reverence which all good Men paid him while he lived; ſo by that honourable and ample Concourſe of many Eagles to his Corps and Funerals, which were attended by Noblemen, by Gentlemen, by Judges, by Lawyers, by Divines, by Merchants and Citizens of the beſt ſort then in London. Theſe flocked to his Sepulchre, theſe followed the Bier, theſe recounted his Worth, theſe deplored their own and the Age's Loſs of him. —— To your honourable Societies, this reverend Biſhop (next God) did chiefly bequeath and dedicate himſelf, both living, dying, and dead. If he had lived longer you had been that happy Society, which ſhould have been honoured and bleſſed with his Preſence and Reſidence, with his praying and preaching, with his grave Counſel and holy Example. When he dyed it was one of his laſt Deſires, that his Body might be depoſited in your Temple. For him you kindly invited, him you highly honoured, him you civilly received, him you greatly endeared to you, &c.

Invited to be Preacher to the Societies of the Temple.

P. 221. He was about a Year before he dyed, invited with much Reſpect and Civility to the honourable Societies of both Temples, to bleſs them with his fatherly Inſtructions and Prayers, to ſhew the Reality of their Love and Value to his Lordſhip, they not only allowed an annual honorary Recompence to expreſs their Thanks, but they provided handſome Lodgings, and furniſhed them with all Things neceſſary, convenient, and comely for a Perſon of his Worth. —— The laſt Eaſter Term 1659, he came to his Lodgings in the Temple. —— In Michaelmas Term following, his Infirmities began to prevail againſt him, not permitting him to preach in publick, ſave only on the 5th of November, which was his laſt. —— His Will bears Date, as Mr. Thomas Buck his Executor told me, two Years before his Departure. A Will much like that of St. Auſtin, or other primitive Biſhops, not loaden with great and pompous Legacies, but rather with Teſtimonies of a pious, grateful, and charitable Soul. —— He render'd his holy, devout, and precious Soul to God that gave it, the 7th of December 1659, in that vertiginous Year, which after three Overturns ſo reformed the Church and State of England, that there was no Form of legal, civil, and ſettled Government in England, &c.

To go on with purging and encouraging the Miniſtry: Not to advance them to temporal Honours, Dignity, or Power, nor make them Lords Biſhops, to procure Concord among all the Paſtors and Churches in his Dominion, to limit Toleration as well by Execution as by Law: And finally, rejoyceth in the preſent Happineſs of England under his Highneſs Lord Protector, &c.

A bold Eſſay of Loyalty by William Prynne.

The ſignal Loyalty and Devotion of God's true Saints and pious Chriſtians towards their KINGS (as alſo of ſome idolatrous Pagans) both before, under the Law and Goſpel, expreſſed by their private and publick Prayers, Supplications, Interceſſions, Thankſgivings, Well-wiſhes, for the Health, Safety, long Life, Proſperity, temporal, ſpiritual, eternal Felicity of the Kings and Emperors under whom they lived, whether Pagan or Chriſtian, bad or good, Heterodox or Orthodox, Perſecutors or Protectors of them, and likewiſe for their Royal Iſſue, Poſterity, Realms, and by their dutiful conſcientious Obedience and Subjection to them: With the true Reaſons thereof from Scripture and Policy, evidenced by Precedents and Teſtimonies in all Ages worthy the Knowledge, Imitation, and ſerious Conſideration of our preſent degenerated, diſloyal, antimonarchical Generation. Was not he ſometimes Scholar to Maſter B. [Buſby] and afterwards his Uſher at Weſtminſter School? Had he not once a Deſign to ſupplant his Maſter, and was outed himſelf? Are not theſe Sermons calculated think you, to ſerve ſuch unworthy Ends? Doth not he herein endeavour to ſet forth God as a Precedent of ſuch Decrees as he would have others execute? viz. The abſolute Reprobation of a very deſerving Maſter, and the abſolute Election of a moſt unthankful Scholar.

Another bold Attempt of Mr. Prynne in laying open the Good Old Cauſe.

The Republicans and others ſpurious GOOD OLD CAUSE briefly and truly anatomized. To preſerve our native Country, Kingdom, legal Government, Church, Parliaments, Laws, Liberties, Privileges of Parliament and Proteſtant Religion, from Ruin, Scandal, and perpetual Infamy, to reform, reclaim all Jeſuit-ridden, ſeduced Republicans, Officers, Soldiers, Sectaries, heretofore or now engaged in the Proſecution of this miſ-intituled Good Old Cauſe from any future Purſuit thereof, and engage them for ever to abominate it, as apparently tending to publick Ruin, their own temporal and eternal Condemnation, Infamy, our Religion's Reproach in preſent and ſucceeding Ages. By William Prynne, Eſq; Bencher of Lincolns-Inn.

Printed in the Year 1659. 4^to^. p. 18.

P. 15. I ſhall therefore earneſtly deſire all Perſons engaged in this whoriſh baſtard OLD CAUSE now ſeriouſly and ſadly to conſider the deplorable Effects of it.

1. A Juſtification and Verification of all the late King's Declarations, Proclamations, prophetical Prediction, Grounds, Reaſons, Fears, &c.

2. It hath produced a Falſification of all the long Parliament's and Army's Declarations, Remonſtrances, Proteſtations, Vows, Covenants, to the contrary.

3. A Tranſlation from the King's and his Party's Heads and Souls, upon the Army's and ſome of the late Parliament's Heads and Souls, the Guilt of all that Chriſtian Blood ſhed in our inteſtine Wars againſt the King and his Party.

4. A Juſtification or Extenuation of the Popes, Jeſuits, Papiſts moſt treaſonable Poſitions, Principles, Conſpiracies, Practices, Regicides, Powder-Plots againſt our Proteſtant Princes now exceeded by them.

5. An inexpiable Scandal and Infamy to the Profeſſion and zealous Profeſſors of the Proteſtant Religion, &c.

6. A baſe Contempt, Scorn, and Deriſion, Infamy, Diſhonour, even of Parliaments themſelves, &c.

7. A perpetual Diſhonour, Obloquy, Diſgrace, upon the whole Engliſh Nation in all Foreign States, Countries, &c.

8. An indelible Infamy upon the Profeſſion of a Soldier, and the whole Parliament Army, &c.

9. A preſent incomparable Dearth and Loſs of all ſorts of Trade and Traffick, by Land or Sea; a preſent Confuſion and Unſettlement in our Government, Councils, and all publick Affairs; a general Diſcontent, Fear, Deſpondency, &c.

10. A freſh Occaſion and Advantage to all our Popiſh Adverſaries, not only to traduce, deride, reproach, and blaſpheme our Proteſtant Religion, but to combine together in a Holy League, to extirpate it, and all Profeſſors of it out of the World, &c.

O that the ſerious Conſideration of all theſe deplorable Effects might now at laſt effectually work upon the iron Hearts of all Army Officers, Soldiers, Republicans, Sectaries, and others, and bring them to a ſpeedy Repentance of all the Evils they have acted, &c. My Son, fear thou the Lord and the King, and meddle not with Changers, or thoſe who are given to change. For their Calamity ſhall ſuddenly ariſe (as we have ſeen by many late Experiments in the very making and acting of all our late publick Changes) and who knoweth the Ruin of them both?

An hiſtorical Arraignment of the Engliſh Scotified Preſbyterians.

A Hiſtory of the Engliſh Scotified PRESBYTERY. Written in French 1650, and now tranſlated into Engliſh 1659.

1659. 4^to^.

Eſpecially in their inſolent Behaviour to the late King.

——— The Terms to which the King was held, even when the Preſbyterians had the better End of the Staff, (as that he ſhould not diſpoſe of the Militia, of the Offices of the Crown, of his Children, have no negative Vote, &c.) will conclude, that he was only left to his Choice, whether he would be deſtroy'd by his Enemies, or by his own proper Act. For if he condeſcended not to theſe Demands, being then in their Hands that made them; the leaſt he could expect was to be depoſed, and if he granted them he depoſed himſelf. Nay, he that conſiders how all along they ſuppoſed they were his Superiours, to whom he was accountable, will clearly diſcern, that it was upon the Preſbyterian Principles that the Independents built their Concluſions. And if it were lawful for them to wreſt out of his Hands the Sword of the Militia, and to uſe it againſt him; it was no leſs lawful (thought the other) to employ the Sword of Juſtice againſt him. At leaſt after they had taken from him his Revenues, his Servants, his Children, the Liberty of his Perſon, and, which is more, of his Conſcience, they left the Independents but one Step further to go, which was to take away his Life; and all that in which they ſurpaſs'd the others was, that they gave the laſt Blow to him.

In ſuch Times of Confuſion, the Engliſh were a miſerable DESERTED PEOPLE.

THE MISERY OF A DESERTED PEOPLE opened; in a Sermon preached at St. Paul's, before the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-council. By Edward Reynolds, D. D.

London, for Geo. Thompſon, 1659. 4^to^.

To the right honourable Thomas Alleyn, Lord-Mayor of the City of London, the Court of Aldermen, &c.

Right Honourable,

When I was by you called to bear a Part in that ſeaſonable and neceſſary Service of your late ſolemn Humiliation, I conſider'd the ſad Condition whereunto theſe Nations were reduced, the many and great Provocations which we have been guilty of, the miſerable Commotions and Earthquakes, which have not only ſhaken, but even diſſolved our Foundations, and made them all out of Courſe: I ſeriouſly looked back on the dark and gloomy Providences of God amongſt us; the untimely Death of Princes, the dimidiating and diſſolving of Parliaments, the frequent Expirations and Viciſſitudes of Governments; the horrid Apoſtacy, Atheiſm, Scepticiſm, Indifferency, Prodigies of phrenetick and pernicious Opinions; whereby Multitudes have played the Wantons with as glorious a Light of orthodox Religion as any Nation under Heaven enjoy'd; the Defaming of Miniſtry, the Decrying of Ordinances, Incroaching of many Romiſh Doctrines under a Diſguiſe, and other like Diſtempers, whereby we are become an Hiſſing and Aſtoniſhment to the Nations round about us. In a Word, it ſeemed unto me, that the Scene of the ten Tribes was tranſlated into theſe Nations, and that we were making Haſte to be a Jezreel, a Lo-Rumahah, and a Lo-Ammi, as they once did. —— To the Lord's gracious Preſence and Protection in theſe dangerous Times, I deſire in my daily Prayers to recommend theſe Nations, and this great City.

Text: Hoſea ix. 12. Yea, woe alſo unto them, when I depart from them.

P. 29. Among the Symptoms of God's Threatning to depart from us is, 1. Looſening the Joints of Government, and making continual Changes in a State. It is a Sign of Sickneſs in the Body, when it knows not how to reſt, but is in perpetual Agitation, from Chamber to Chamber, from Couch to Couch, from Bed to Bed: And ſo it is in a State, when a Parliament doth not pleaſe, we try a Piece of it; then down with that once and again, and try new Experiments, a certain Sign of a ſick Nation, &c.

Having conſidered the great Diligence of Men formerly, and what Perfection they would arrive unto in Knowledge, before they undertook the Miniſtry, and withal the Earneſtneſs of ſome in theſe Times that decry Learning, and pretend wholly to a Spirit. —— I reſolved to ſtudy the Queſtion, and having examined the Arguments on both Sides, my Reaſon preſently condemned the Haters of humane Learning, as irrational, brutiſh and irreligious Perſons, that took their Riſe either from Ignorance, or from Malice, or from Avarice and a ſacrilegious Mind, to devour the Revenues that Benefactors have beſtow'd upon the Schools of Learning. —— Be it ſpoken to the Honour of your Perſon, and the Univerſity wherein you live. My Lord Biſhop then of Lincoln, Dr. Williams (whilſt you honoured his Family with your Learning and Piety) gave this honourable able Character of you, that you were the beſt read in the Fathers of any he ever knew.

The Advance of General Monk to Barnet.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, 8vo. Philips, Ch. II. at the end of Sir R. Baker, Fol. p. 704.

From St. Albans Feb. 2. General Monk marched to Barnet, which were his laſt Quarters upon the Road, and within ten Miles of the City. And here his two evil Angels, Scot and Robinſon, that had never failed to quarter with him in the ſame Houſe from Leiceſter to this Stage, now left him to take up his Lodging alone, and retir'd themſelves to a private Houſe in the Town.

To enter London the next Day.

This Night he diſpatch'd Orders for the March of the Army into London the next Day, and that the Soldiers ſhould be duly charged to behave themſelves well and peaceably in their Quarters at London, and to pay duly for their Entertainment, which they might very well do, there being ſome of their Scotch Money ſtill in the Treaſury.

Fleetwood's Forces that had been order'd to withdraw were unwilling to give Place.

The General being advanced ſo near, the Juncto were very buſy in diſpatching Fleetwood's Forces out of Town: ——— But theſe Regiments being long accuſtomed to a looſe and lazy Life, in the Luxury of the Town, were very unwilling to exchange their old Quarters in the City, for worſe and coarſer Entertainment in the Country, and ſtomach'd the Diſgrace of their Remove; inſomuch that ſome of theſe Regiments began a Mutiny in the Suburbs, and at the ſame Time a Multitude of Apprentices, taking the Opportunity of the Soldiers Diſcontents, beat up their Drums in the City, declaring for a Free Parliament, in Hopes the enraged and mutinous Soldiers would join with them.

A Mutiny upon it, encourag'd by the Citizens declaring for a free Parliament.

This an Alarm to the Council of State.

Who affright Scot and Robinſon.

Dr. Price's Hiſtory of the Reſtauration, 8vo. p. 88.

The Council of State then ſitting were ſo alarm'd with the Diſorders of this Night in the City, that late in the Night they diſpatch'd away Meſſengers to Scot and Robinſon at Barnet, deſiring them to haſten the General's March into the City, for Prevention of further Miſchief. Mr. Scot was ſo affrighted out of his Sleep with this haſty News, that he could not ſtay to dreſs him, but in the Diſhabit of his Night-Gown, Cap, and Slippers, hurry'd preſently to the General's Quarters, where he made a terrible Repreſentation of this Mutiny in the City, requiring General Monk to beat his Drums, and march forward. But the General, that did not uſe to be alarm'd with every little Noiſe, or put out of his Temper by an haſty Tale, return'd him an Anſwer calmly, and perſuaded Mr. Scot to return to his Bed, and put his Fears under his Pillow; that he was ſo near the City, that no great Miſchief could be done in one Night, and that he would be with them early enough in the Morning to prevent any greater Deſign. Yet that the Commiſſioner might not be altogether at his Wits End, he preſently diſpached away ſome Meſſengers of his own, to inform him more particularly of theſe Commotions, who brought him News early in the Morning, that the Commanders had quieted the Mutiny among their Soldiers; and that ſome Troops of Horſe being ſent up into the City, had diſperſed the Apprentices, and that the Regiments were then marching out of Town.

But the General was ſedate, and would not march before his Time.

Only ſent Meſſengers to London, who ſoon brought back News that all was quiet.

FRIDAY Feb. 3.

The Speaker gives out new Commiſſions.

Mercur. Polit. by Order of Parliament, N°. 606.

Mr. Speaker according to Order before the Sitting of the Houſe deliver'd Commiſſions to Lieutenant Colonel Styles in Colonel George Fleetwood's Regiment of Foot; to Captain Arthur Chaloner, Captain Benjamin Gifford, Captain Richard Bolt, Captain John Buck, Captain Samuel Roſe, &c.

Ordered, That it be referred to the Council of State, to examine the whole Buſineſs touching the Tumults which happen'd laſt Night in the City of London, and ſtate Matter of Fact, and report their Opinion what is fit to be done therein, and how to prevent the like Tumults for the future.

Ordered, That the ſeveral Regiments do go to the Quarters formerly directed by Parliament; and that they continue in thoſe Quarters, until the Commiſſioners for the Army ſhall ſee cauſe to alter the ſame.

The General's March to London.

The Order of it.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, p. 202. See Philips 13 Years of Ch. II. Fol. Append. to Baker, p. 704.

This Friday Morning the General march'd leiſurely toward London. But before he entred the Town, he made a Stand at Highgate, where the Army being then but five thouſand eight hundred Men, came again to rendezvous, and there receiv'd Orders for the manner of their March into the City. The three Regiments of Horſe firſt, and the General mounted at the Head of them, with his Trumpets before him, accompany'd with the Juncto's Commiſſioners, and ſome of his own principal Officers, with ſeveral other Perſons of Quality, that had the Curioſity or Courteſy to meet him at his ſeveral Stages on the Way. After the Horſe march'd his four Regiments of Foot: And in the Afternoon he made his Entry by Gray's-Inn-Lane, where at the Rolls he made a Stop at the Speaker's Door; but he being not yet return'd from the Houſe, the General went on into the Strand, where being told that the Speaker's Coach was coming near, the General alighted from his Horſe, and with much Ceremony complimented the Prince of the Senate, and his legiſlative Mace in the Boot of his Coach. And thence accompany'd with ſome of his Horſe Guards, went on to his Quarters at Whitehall, where the Juncto had aſſign'd him beforehand, the Apartment commonly called the Prince's Lodgings.

After his Arrival at Whitehall, he is viſited and courted with extraordinary Reſpect from the Common-wealths-men, and ſeveral others of good Degree; and now all the Grandees will be his Kinſmen. They invite him to ſit in Council, being one of their Number; whither being come, they tender him the Oath of Abjuration, upon which he demurs rather than denies (he had learned to temporize with the ſubtileſt of them,) and replies, that a great Part of themſelves did refuſe that Oath; and he deſired to have ſome Satiſfaction by a mutual Conference between the Diſſenters that he might proceed with the greater Peace and Content. Which gave ſome Apprehenſion, but upon Debate it was conſented to.

He declines the Oath of Abjuration.

Dr. Martin's Letter againſt the Authority of the Apoſtolical Canons, &c.

Dr. Martin's Letters, 12°. 1662. p. 20.

——— In Maintenance of his Opinion before delivered, that the Apoſtolical Canons were never held of undoubted Authority in the Church of Chriſt; many of them in their Terms and Style, bewraying themſelves to be many hundred Years of later Date than the Apoſtles Times. ——— That which you ſo copiouſly writ concerning the heroick and gracious Diſpoſition and Temper of that moſt honourable, generous and rare Earl, above the ordinary Model and Condition of Lords now adays (which have run themſelves, their Nation, and Religion, out of all Honour and Reſpect from the meaneſt Peaſant in the World) have almoſt determined me to have come myſelf to you, and to have tendered my Service as a Prieſt (till he might be better provided) to that highly deſerving Lord, without any Stipend or Wages, ſave only a Room to have ſaid my Office in twice a Day, for our Church, King, and Country; as God hath enabled me, in Priſons, Dungeons, Fields, Chambers or Ships upon Sea or Land, among Rebels, Theiſts, Atheiſts, Philologers, Wits, Maſters of Reaſon, Puritans, Hugonots and Papiſts, Civil and Barbarous, for theſe eighteen Years daily to do. But the Bitterneſs of the Winter and Continuance of this Froſt and Snow have hindered.

Your own Judgment hath directed you in Mr. Pullen, to make Choice of ſo proper a Man for that Peerleſs Peer, that till I hear what he determines, I cannot apply my Thoughts to think of any other. Dr. Duncon, my true and old Friend, hath been ſo oft at Death's Door, and hath had ſo many deſperate and terrible Warnings, to change that Soil and unwholeſome Air, both at Piſa and Ligorne, that he hath left his Charge wholly to Mr. Pullen. ——— My L. H. too hath ſignified, that he will ſpeedily ſend for this ſmall Fraction of his Family here (intreating me to come along with them) into England. But I have ſhewed them both, that I dare not venture any more into England; and beſides that I am ſo engaged here to a ſingular Friend, that I am bound to tarry ſomewhere in France to attend his Motion. ——— Yours in his beſt Love and Service,

Lord Hatton.

Another Mutiny at Graveſend.

The Regiment lately under Sir Brice Crockram, now under a new Colonel, having been marched to Graveſend in order for their Tranſportation to Dunkirk, were in a high Mutiny, and had beſieged their Colonel in his Chamber, threatening to kill him: Whereupon General Monk hath ſent thither ſome Troops of Horſe, who are to joyn with Colonel Eyre's Regiment quartered in thoſe Parts, to reduce them to Obedience.

Sunday Feb. 5.

General Monk was on Sunday viſited by the Heads of the ſeveral Parties in the Juncto and Council of State, and by many other Perſons of Quality in the City: All Men having a Curioſity to diſcern ſomething of his Intentions by Conference with him, who was too wary to be fathom'd by any of them all, though he was beſet with the more pert and forward Diſcourſe of ſome, and the more contriv'd and cunning Artifices of others.

On this Sunday the General was diſturbed by a ſecret Information, which was this. A Son of Secretary Scot's, who lodg'd in one Mr. Sturdy's Houſe in Ruſſel-Street, had it ſeems ſo great a Confidence in his Landlord (though a Romaniſt) that upon Diſcourſe he revealed a great Secret to him, viz. That not only Monk's Power for commanding the Army ſhould be taken from him in a few Days, but that he ſhould be ſent to the Tower and queſtioned for his Life, &c.

See Feb. 7. Mercur. Polit. by Order of Parliament, p. 1066.

Mr. Scot reports in the Houſe, that General Monk was come to the Court of Wards in order to attend the Pleaſure of the Parliament, in Obedience to their Order, whereupon the Serjeant at Arms was ſent with his Mace to attend General Monk to the Houſe; and he went with his Mace accordingly: And General Monk (the Serjeant at Arms coming before him with his Mace on his Shoulder, being accompanied with Mr. Scot and Mr. Robinſon) came into the Parliament unto a Place on the left Hand within the Bar, where was a Chair faced with Velvet, ſet for General Monk to ſit in; whither being come and having made Obeyſance, Mr. Speaker deſired him to ſit down, but out of his great Reſpects to the Parliament he craved leave to be excuſed, and ſtood behind the Chair. Mr. Speaker made an eloquent Oration, agreeable to his own great Prudence, and the Authority of that ſupreme Aſſembly, whereof this following is a true Copy.

The Speaker's Speech to General Monk.

It hath been a common Obſervation, that the ſlighter Paſſions have had a loud Voice, but ſuch as are of a greater Magnitude are always ſilent: As it is in Paſſions, ſo in Actions alſo, thoſe of a leſſer Dimenſion are often magnified above their Meaſure; but your Hiſtorians do commonly fail in the Expreſſions of noble and great Actions, and ſuch are frequently leſſened, and ſo it may well be in thoſe of this Days Remembrance. The infallible Author tells us, that in Juda is God known, and his Name is great in Iſrael. That Knowledge and Greatneſs of God is verified in the Inſtance of martial Affairs, that the ſtout hearted are ſpoiled, they have ſlept their Sleep, and none of the Men of Might have found their Hands.

This is verified this Day amongſt us here preſent, that both we and you might acknowledge, that it is God, not Man, that hath performed this great Work, that we his Creatures here may neither aſcribe it to our Wiſdom, or your Valour, but that it was God alone, and none elſe. But yet I have always obſerved, that albeit the Glory appertains to the Lord, yet the Influence of that Glory extends it ſelf to the Inſtruments in his Hand, and thereby thoſe Beams enlighten your Honour and Valour, as an eſpecial Inſtrument; not as a Merit, but as a Reward upon your Prudence and wiſe Conduct. The Knowledge of what hath been done in this our Reſtitution, is not unknown in theſe Nations, I believe to this Part of the World, how our Friends (as we conceived) left us, and what Defection hath been in Duty and Truſt. The Face of this Land was covered with a gloomy and black Cloud, and the whole Nation left in the Judgment of Man to the utmoſt of Ruin: But in that Condition we did as the Prophet in the greateſt Miſery of Iſrael, eſpy a little Cloud no broader than an Hand, which is infinitely in an inſtant become the Refreſhment of the whole Nation: That little Cloud was diſcerned afar off in your Hand, and by the Prudence of your Conduct it diſperſed the Miſeries of theſe Nations, and became a glorious Mercy to them all. The Houſe hath a true Reſentment of your Prudence and Conduct in this great Work, and have commanded me to return to you their hearty Thanks, and in their Names and by their Commands, I give you hearty Thanks. But I muſt not end here, for they have alſo a full Senſe of thoſe noble Commanders, Officers and Soldiers, both of their Fidelity, Valour and Duty in this Expedition: And as I have returned to you their Thanks, ſo it is their Deſire, that you ſhould return the ſame to your Commanders, Officers and Soldiers, who have been Inſtrumental in theſe Actions.

The General's Speech to the House.

The Lord General Monk*'s Speech, delivered by him in the Parliament,* on Monday Feb. 6. 1659.

Mr. Speaker,

Amongſt the many Mercies of God to theſe poor Nations, your peaceable Reſtauration is not the leaſt: It is his Work alone, and to him belongs the Glory of it. And I eſteem it as a great Effect of his Goodneſs to me, that he was pleaſed to make me amongſt many worthier in your Service, ſome Way inſtrumental in it. I did nothing but my Duty, and do not deſerve to receive ſo great Honour and Reſpect as you are pleaſed to give me at this Time and Place; which I ſhall ever acknowledge as an high Mark of your Favour to me. Sir, I ſhall not now trouble you with large Narratives, only give me Leave to acquaint you, that as I marched from Scotland hither, I obſerved the People in moſt Counties in great and earneſt Expectations of Settlement; and they made ſeveral Applications to me, with numerous Subſcriptions: The chiefeſt Heads of their Deſires, were for a free and full Parliament; and that you would determine your Sitting, a Goſpel Miniſtry, Incouragement of Learning and Univerſities, and for Admittance of the Members ſecluded before 1648, without any previous Oath or Engagement: To which I commonly anſwered, that you are now in a free Parliament; and if there be any Force remaining upon you, I would endeavour to remove it, and that you had voted to fill up your Houſe, and then you would be a full Parliament alſo; and that you had already determined your Sitting: And for the Miniſtry, their Maintenance, the Law, and Univerſities you had largely declared in your laſt Declaration; and I was confident you would adhere to it: But as for thoſe Gentlemen ſecluded in the Year 1648, I told them you had given Judgment in it; and all People ought to acquieſce in that Judgment, but to admit any Members to ſit in Parliament without a previous Oath or Engagement to ſecure the Government in Being, it was never yet done in England. And although I ſaid it not to them, I muſt ſay with Pardon to you, that the leſs Oaths and Engagements are impoſed, (with Reſpect had to the Security of the common Cauſe) your Settlement will be the ſooner attained to. I am the more particular in theſe Matters, to let you ſee how grateful your preſent Conſultations about theſe Things, will be to the People. I know all the ſober Gentry will heartily cloſe with you, if they may be tenderly and gently uſed; and I am ſure you will ſo uſe them, as knowing it to be our common Concern, to expatiate, and not narrow our Intereſts; and to be careful neither the Cavalier nor Phanatick Party have yet a Share in your civil or military Power; of the laſt of whoſe Impatience to Government, you have had ſo ſevere Experience.

I ſhould ſay ſomething of Ireland and Scotland: Indeed Ireland is in an ill Condition, and made worſe by your ſudden Interruption, which prevented the Paſſing an Act for the Settlement of the Eſtates of Adventurers and Soldiers there, which I heard you intended to have done in a few Days; and I preſume it will be quickly done, being ſo neceſſary at this Time, when the Wants of the Common-wealth call for Supplies, and People will unwillingly pay Taxes for thoſe Eſtates of which they have no legal Aſſurance. I need not tell you how much your Favour was abuſed in the Nomination of your Officers of your Army there; their Malice hath been ſufficiently manifeſted: I dare affirm that thoſe now that have declared for you, will continue faithful, and thereby evince, that as well there as here, it is the ſober Intereſt that muſt eſtabliſh your Dominion.

As for Scotland I muſt ſay the People of that Nation deſerve much to be cheriſhed; and I believe your late Declaration will much glad their Spirits; for nothing was more dreadful to them, than a Fear to be over-run with fanatick Notions.

I humbly recommend them to your Affection and Eſteem, and deſire the intended Act of Union may be proſecuted, and their Taxes made proportionable to thoſe in England, for which I am engaged by Promiſe to be an humble Suitor to you. And truly, Sir, I muſt ask Leave to entreat you to make a ſpeedy Proviſion for their civil Government, of which they have been deſtitute near a Year, to the Ruin of many Families; and except Commiſſioners for Management of the Government, and Judges to ſit in Courts of Judicature, be ſpeedily appointed, that Country will be very miſerable. I directed Mr. Gumble lately to preſent to you ſome Names both of Commiſſioners and Judges; but by Reaſon of your great Affairs, he was not required to deliver them in Writing to you, but I now humbly preſent them to your Conſideration.

Judicious Reflections made on this Speech of General Monk, giving Offence, and Suſpicion of him.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, 8vo. p. 207.

This was a very wary and agreeable Reply, contrived to fit the Temper of thoſe Ears that were to hear him. And tho' ſome Men that wiſh'd him very well, thought by that Diſcourſe he had gone too far in his Compliance with them, yet the abjuring Part of the Houſe (whoſe Jealouſies of him were farther heightned by his Refuſal of the Oath two Days before) were diſpleas'd with all he ſaid, and arraign'd the whole Diſcourſe. His interceding for the Eaſe and Conveniency of the People, they interpreted as a Strain of his Popularity, which was not to be endured in a General that ſerves a Common-wealth. The redreſſing of Grievances was but a more ſecret Reproach upon their Negligence or Injuſtice in the Government. His Remarks upon multiplying farther Oaths, was very offenſive to them, who had lately contriv'd that new one of Abjuration: His pleading for the Encouragement of the ſober Gentry, they accounted as a ſly Contrivance, which in Time would let in the Royal Party upon the Government: And by his frequent and ſharp Reflections upon the Fanaticks (from which Speech they were thought firſt to have received that Name, which they have never yet wiped off) they accuſed him to have invidiouſly repreſented the moſt ſtrict and godly Part of the Nation, who though they might happen to have been miſled by the Deſigns of others, were yet to be eſteemed and cheriſhed as the beſt and ſureſt Friends to the Government. Nor were they pleas'd with the Title of General given to him, calling him always in their own Diſcourſe or Orders Commiſſioner Monk.

Riots and Tumults for a free Parliament.

Adviſed from Briſtol, that there had lately been a great Diſorder in that City, where two Troops of Horſe being deſigned to come could not gain Admittance. Thoſe Maſters of Families, who underhand hatched and fomented the Tumult, were ſo wary, as not to appear themſelves, but ſet on their Apprentices, who with the meaner ſort ran up and down the Street, crying out A free Parliament. In this Confuſion they ſhewed who they were for, by falling foul upon ſuch, as have ſtood in all Times moſt firm to the Intereſt of Parliament and Commonwealth. —— The Magiſtrates had Conference with ſome of the Leaders, and to pacify them told them, that if they would have their Deſires, this was not the Way to get it, but if they would proceed orderly, and join with them in an Addreſs to the Parliament. So they began to cool, and retire to their ſeveral Homes, &c.

Ib. No. 606.

The Parliament ſo jealous and afraid of Monk, that they reſolved to remove him from his Command, and lay him in the Tower.

That ſome of the Parliament had entertained great Apprehenſions and Suſpicions of Monk is manifeſt from one Inſtance, which fell out juſt at this Time. Mr. Scot's Son had lodg'd for ſome Time in the Houſe of one Mr. Sturdy a Roman Catholick, in Ruſſel-ſtreet, and was ſo well acquainted with his Landlord, that diſcourſing together about General Monk's late Arrival at London, he told him ſecretly, "That the Parliament had ſuch Suſpicions of him, as that it was "reſolved to remove him ſuddenly from his Command in the Army, and to "lay him faſt in the Tower, having Articles againſt him ſufficient to endanger "his Life.

But he eſcap'd the Danger, upon ſecret Information given to him.

Mr. Sturdy obſerving, in this miſerable Confuſion, that the Hopes of all honeſt Men were placed upon General Monk and his Army, was very much concerned at this Relation; inſomuch that the next Morning early, he haſten'd up into the City, and found out one Captain Morrice, an honeſt Citizen of his particular Acquaintance, to whom he revealed this ſecret Information. The Captain thought it a Matter of ſo much Conſequence, that he brought his Friend Sturdy to Mr. Kendall and Mr. James Muddeford, who were related to General Monk, and they two forthwith carried him to the General at White-hall, where he further atteſted the Truth of this Relation. The General had other Buſineſs in Hand, than to take any publick Notice of this Information; yet gave ſo much Credit to it, as he reſolved to look more carefully to himſelf, and commanded Mr. Sturdy to ride in his Guards, which he continued to do for ſome while after.

The Kirk Miniſters of Edinburgh, had ſent an Agent to Monk, and give Inſtructions to him.

By another Letter they recommend Mr. Sharp to Colonel Wetham, and by a third to Mr. Calamy and Mr. Aſhe, to be communicate with Mr. Manton and Couper.

Government, and were reſolved to pay no publick Taxes, 'till the Houſe were filled up with equal Repreſentatives. This they looked upon as drawing towards a Contempt of their Authority, and thought they could not better provide for their own Securities, than by oppoſing in Time, and puniſhing ſuch Contumacies. They therefore on the Eighth of February in the Evening, at the Council of State, order the General to go into London the next Morning with a good Part of the Army, and to ſeize upon eleven of the moſt active of the Common-council, and commit them to the Tower; as alſo to pull down the Poſts and the Chains, and to take down the Gates and Portcullices of the City, and quarter his Soldiers there, 'till they were reduced to Obedience.

THURSDAY Feb. 9.

Which he obeys and marches into the City, to put them in Execution.

Gumble's Life of Gen. Monk, 8vo. p. 236.

The Council of State kept General Monk 'till two this Morning, to prevent any new Impreſſions that might hinder their Reſolutions. There were Endeavours uſed by ſome of the Non-Abjurers to diſſuade him, who waited his Return from Council; but it was ſo unſeaſonable, that the General was got to Bed, and could not hear any more than the bare Propoſition. —— The General this Morning marches up into the City, and draws up his Forces in the Old-Exchange, and ſecured many eminent and honeſt Citizens; and then took up his Quarters at the Three Tuns near Guild-Hall, where he iſſues out his Orders to pull down the Poſts and Chains, with the Gates and Portcullices; which do very much ſurprize his Officers, and they withdraw and conſult together, and return with a Reſolution, that they could not give Obedience to ſuch Orders, and therefore offered their Commiſſions to the General, with the Reaſons of their diſſent, that they had freely ventured their Lives for the Honour and Safety of their Country, and heartily joined with him; but they deſired not to diſoblige that great City, which was the Place of the Education of many of them; and that if for their Service they ſhould be honoured with being the City Scavengers, they deſired to begin at Weſtminſter, and make that Houſe clean. This was earneſtly preſſed by ſome of thoſe that were thought moſt inclined to the Parliament's Authority, by reaſon of Relation and Dependance; but moſt of theſe Men acted Conſcience, and not Intereſt, and knew of no Advantages to be put in the Balance with publick Good. ——

And gives out his Orders.

Dr. Price's Hiſtory of the Reſtaurat. 8vo. p. 96.

His Officers at firſt refuſe to obey thoſe Orders.

And remonſtrate againſt them.

And deſired rather to work at Weſtminſter than in London.

The General liſtened to this as the moſt pleaſing Muſick; for he was willing to gratify the Deſires of the Nation, and act for the Reſtauration of Religion, Law, and Majeſty itſelf, which is the Cuſtos of both, according to his own Principles; but did not yet know how to truſt many of his Officers, who had been Perſons that had been long bred up in that War againſt the King's Family. —— He pacifies them with all kind of Sweetneſs, and aſſures them, that they ſhould yet ſee all in a good Condition; and entreats their Obedience with ſome dark Hints of his own Diſlike; but he had Orders from the Council, and he muſt obey.

And tho' pacified by the General, they would not be perſonally concern'd, but left the Orders to be executed by the inferiour Officers.

They perſiſted reſolute, ſo that the inferiour Officers were entruſted with theſe Commands, and addreſſed themſelves to their Work; deſtroying and pulling down, &c. Many honeſt and ſtout Citizens apply'd to the General, and did remonſtrate againſt this Proceeding of the Council, and told him plainly, that they expected him out of Scotland with much Impatience as a Friend, that might be an Inſtrument of their Liberty and Security, and for him thus to uſe them was the more grievous; proteſting they would rather tranſport their Goods and Perſons to any Corner of the World, rather than live expoſed to ſuch Dangers and Confuſion. The General having pulled down their Poſts and Chains thought this might ſatisfy the Parliament, and looked upon the Gates and Portcullices as a Provocation too enraging. He therefore intercedes by Letter to the Parliament, that they would be pleaſed to recall Part of their Orders, but they grow more obſtinate, and vote down the preſent Common-council, and ſend Orders more peremptorily to beat their Gates and Percullices in Pieces.

A great Offence and Provocation to the City.

See the Speech of Mr. Jolly, a diſcreet Citizen, to General Monk, and his Anſwer, in the Hiſt. of Ch. II. annex'd to Baker's Chron. p. 707.

Tho' the Orders were executed in part only.

But the Parliament would not abate the utmoſt Rigour.

And agree to the Report made from the Council of State.

Mercur. Polit. by Order of Parliament, No. 607.

The Houſe received a Report from the Council of State of ſome Reſolutions taken by the Council in relation to the City of London.

Reſolved, That the Parliament doth approve of what the Council of State hath done in ordering, that the Commiſſioners for Government of the Army, do appoint Forces to be and continue in the City of London, for preſerving the Peace thereof, and of the Common-wealth, and for reducing of the City to the Obedience of the Parliament.

Reſolved, That the Parliament doth approve of what the Council of State have done, in ordering that the Commiſſioners for the Army do take Order that the Poſts and Chains in the City of London be taken away.

Reſolved, That the Gates of the City of London, and the Portcullices thereof be forthwith deſtroyed.

Reſolved, That the Parliament doth approve of what the Council of State and Commiſſioners of the Army have done in ſeizing and apprehending of Mr. Vincent, Merchant in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet, and Thomas Browne Grocer in Wood-ſtreet, Daniel Spencer in Friday-ſtreet, Lawrence Bromfield in Tower-ſtreet, Major Chamberlain and Richard Ford in Seething-lane, Major Cox at the Swan in Dowgate, Mr. Bludworth, Mr. Penning in Fenchurch-ſtreet, and Lieutenant Colonel Jackſon.

Dr. Price's Hiſtory of the Reſtauration, 8vo. p. 97.

Never did Soldiers with ſo much regret obey their General; obeyed indeed he was, but with Scorn to them who commanded their Commander. It was a pretty Medley of Paſſion, when I ſaw them both merry and angry at this odious Drudgery: And a lively Pen that had obſerved, and could expreſs their Humours, might have made a Play of it. This was the Carriage of the ordinary Soldiery; but the Officers of Horse ran wholly into Discontent, and offered up their Commissions to the General: But he was deaf and shewed his Patience; and I took Notice that he was more angry at the Spies that were about him (as Colonel Alured and others) than at the Work he was doing. Thither came his ancient Friends, and durst not say a Word to him.

Barebone's Petition against the Promoters of Regal Interest.

Brought up by a Rabble who are to have Thanks of the House for this pretended Voice of the Nation.

Mr. Praise God Barebone presented a Petition to the House in the Name of the Lovers of the Good Old Cause, directed to the Parliament of the Commonwealth of England, and intituled, The Representation and Address of the well-affected Persons, Inhabitants of the Cities of London and Westminster and Places adjacent, being faithful and constant Adherers to this Parliament, who are resolved (by the Assistance of Almighty God) to stand by, assist, and maintain their Authority against all Opposers, notwithstanding the present Confidence and bold Attempts of the Promoters of Regal Interest by the declared Enemies of their Cause and Authority.

Beginn.] Whereas the Good Old Cause was for Civil and Christian Liberty, against Oppression and Persecution; the Oppressors and Persecutors were chiefly the King, his Lords, and Clergy, and their Adherents, who to effect their Designs raised War against the Parliament. —— We pray that you will admit no Person or Persons to sit or vote in this or any future Parliament, or Council of State, or to be in any Office of Judicatory, or any publick Trust in the Commonwealth or Command in the Army, Navy, or Garrisons, or to be a publick Preacher to the People at Sea or Land, or any Instructor of Youth, except such only as shall abjure, or by solemn Engagement renounce the pretended Title or Titles of Charles Stuart, and the whole Line of the late King James, &c.

Ending.] In Prosecution whereof we shall stand by you with our Estates and Lives, to assert and maintain your Authority, against all Oppositions whatsoever, notwithstanding the present Confidence and bold Attempts of yours and our Enemies.

Resolved, That the Petitioners have the Thanks of the House for the Expression of their good Affections to the Parliament.

This mobbish Act was thought an Artifice of the Abjurers in the Council of State.

Dr. Price's History of the King's Restauration, 8vo. p. 100.

The Anabaptists and such like Sectaries in and about the City, (who were afraid of Peace and a National Interest) took Heart at the pulling down of the City Gates, and fell to remonstrating to the Parliament, that none were fit to bear any Office Civil or Military, that would not abjure Charles Stuart and his Title and Family. This was understood to have been the Artifice of some Abjurers in the Council of State, to win over Assistance to their narrow and almost despised Party: And could they have gain'd the Point of encouraging Petitioners of this Nature, I doubt not to say, but that the Council of State would have given a Lift to the Parliament itself.

Afternoon, Feb. 9.

The Parliament proceed vigorously against the City of London.

The House read a Letter from General Monk of the 9th present, from Guild-hall, London.

Resolved, That the Answer to this Letter be, to send unto General Monk the Resolves of the Parliament, that the Gates of the City of London, and the Portcullices be destroyed, and that he be ordered to put the said Vote in Execution.

Resolved, That the present Common Council of the City of London elected for this Year be discontinued, and be and are hereby declared to be null and void. And that a Bill be brought in for the Choice of another Common Council with such Qalifications as the Parliament shall think fit, &c.

This Indignity and Insult to the City of London, was thought to be a Plot laid by Monk himself to provoke the City against the Civil Powers, and thereby to insure it to himself and his Army.

Dr. Price's History of the Restauration, 8vo. p. 98.

And such indeed was the Consequence, tho' hard to know what was the Cause of it.

No Accident of War could have more fully assur'd Monk's Army to him; for now the Parliament was detestable even to us their Restorers. That this was his own Contrivance (and if so, a Master-Piece of Cunning) I have these Inducements to believe: Scot solemnly told Colonel Wetham, that Monk offered himself to do this odious Action; and that the Council of State would not have put him upon it, had it not been for him, who assured them that Monk would undertake it. Thus much Scot alledged for himself to Wetham, who charged the Change of the Government upon this Miscarriage. Scot had little Reason to dissemble (you may be sure) when he saw his Day was lost, and his Life too, for he sate upon his Sovereign's. That Scot thus excus'd himself to Wetham, I will name my Voucher, viz. Dr. Barrow (the Judge Advocate of his Majesty's Army and Guards) a Gentleman who well deserved of the General for his Prudence and Integrity, for he was highly serviceable to him from his first declaring against the Army, and so continued. Nay, I soon after modestly asked the General how he was engaged to undertake this detestable Piece of Service; he merrily answered me, This was a Trick you knew not of, and I do assure you, that I could not have done my Business so soon without it, and possibly not at all. So I confessed, that his Wisdom outwitted my Expectations.

Sectaries were all Parties but the Presbyterian.

The Sectaries all againſt the King, the Presbyterians for him.

Mr. Richard Baxter's Narrative of his Life, Fol Part II. *p.*214.

I confeſs at that Time the Thoughts of Men's Hearts were various, according to their ſeveral Expectations. The Sectarian Party cried out, that God had in Juſtice cut off the Family that reigned over us; and to return to it again, was to betray the Church, and the Souls of Men. Some others ſaid, that the Sectaries had traiterouſly and wickedly pull'd down the King and Parliament, and ſet up themſelves, and broken their Oaths, and pull'd down all Government; and made the Name of Religion a Reproach, and brought that Blot upon it, which is never to the Day of Judgement like to be wiped off: But yet after twelve Years Alienation of the Government, and when a Houſe of Commons hath ſworn Fidelity to another, and the King's own Party had taken the Engagement, their Obligations to that Family were by Providence (againſt their Wills) diſſolved; and that they were not bound to be Actors in that which will ſilence thouſands of faithful Miniſters, and be like to be the Perdition of many and many thouſand Souls. But the Presbyterians ſaid, we are bound by the Covenant to the King that laſt was, and by the Oath of Allegiance to him and his Heirs; and all Changes ſince have been made unlawfully by rebellious Sectaries: And for our Parts, whatever others have done, we have taken no Engagements or contrary Oaths: If the Sectaries and the Cavaliers have taken the Engagement, what is that to us? Our Brethren of Scotland, nor we never did it; therefore being obliged to the King, as the undoubted Heir of the Crown, we ought to do our Duty as Loyal Subjects to reſtore him, and for the Iſſue, let God do what he will.

As bound by the Covenant.

And having never taken the Engagement.

Yet fearing that Epiſcopacy would return with the Crown.

And a Storm of Perſecution with it.

Therefore the Presbyterians themſelves were very indifferent for the King's Reſtoration.

And would rather ſtand by and ſee the Lord's Work.

This was their Reſolution, but in their Expectations they much differed: For thoſe of them that converſe with the Nobles and great Men, and heard from them an high Character of the King, as to his Temper and Piety, were apt to believe them; and had great Hopes, that becauſe he had taken the Covenant himſelf, he would be moderate in ſettling all Matters of the Church. — Others thought that the Prelates being once ſet up, there would be no Place for Non-Subſcribers in the publick Churches; but yet that if we were the Means of the King's Reſtauration, the Prelates would not for Shame deny us ſuch Liberty as the Proteſtants have in France. —— A third ſort ſaid, ye know not the Principles or Spirit of the Prelates, if you look for any Liberty in publick or in private, to be granted to any that do not conform. —— And a fourth ſort there were, that foreſeeing the Silencing of the Miniſters, ſaid, we are ſure that there are not competent Men (much leſs excellent) in England, to ſupply the Place of one among many of thoſe that will be caſt out; and we know that God uſeth to work by Means; and therefore that the Change is like to be the Damnation of many thouſand Souls: And we do not believe that we are bound (all Things conſidered) to be forward to bring ſuch a Work to paſs; but we will ſtand by, and ſee what God will do, and will not hinder it.

FRIDAY Feb. 10.

London, 1660. 8vo.

Some Time after Monk's Execution of his Orders upon the City, came out a little Book, intituled, Scutum Regale. The Royal Buckler. A Lecture to Traytors, who moſt wickedly murthered CHARLES I. and contrary to all Law and Religion baniſhed CHARLES II. third Monarch of Great-Britain, &c.. Salus Populi Salus Regis.

The Royaliſts not only ſuſpected Monk, but heartily railed at him.

For his work in the City.

For which he was become extremely odious.

And had brought the King's Cauſe into a worſe Condition.

Yet ſtill ſome Hopes of reſtoring the King.

As the only Expedient of Peace and Happineſs.

P. 373. The People's Eyes were all fixed upon General Monk as their Moſes to deliver them from this Yoke of Egyptian Bondage. But Monk proved worſe than Pharaoh himſelf, and inſtead of relieving our diſtreſſed Jeruſalem (which he might have done in the Twinkling of an Eye, without one Drop of Blood ſhed, and thereby have gotten eternal Renown and Glory, as well amongſt all Nations as in his own native Country) he heaped Miſery to Miſery. On Thurſday the ninth Day of February, 1659. in perpetuam Rei Memoriam, he drew up all his Soldiers into the City, with their Matches lighted, in a warlike Poſture doubled his Guards, and tore down all the Gates and Poſts of the City; nay, leap'd upon the Aldermen and other Citizens, whom he preſently caſt into Priſon; ſo that now he is become odious, and ſtinks in the Noſtrils of all the Citizens and People: And whereas he was the common Hopes of all Men, he is now the common Hatred of all Men, as a Traytor more deteſtable than Oliver himſelf, who though he manacled the Citizens Hands, yet never took away the Doors of the City. —— So that the King's righteous Cauſe is now ſeemingly in a worſe Condition than it was before —— Yet there are at laſt growing Hopes for the Reſtauration of Charles the Second, whoſe Abſence hath been the Cauſe of all our Miſeries, whoſe Preſence will be the Cauſe of all our Happineſs. The Proſperity of Rebels and Traytors is but momentary. As Monarchy is the beſt of all Governments, ſo the Monarchy of England is the beſt of all Monarchies. Therefore God ſave King Charles the Second, and grant that the proud Presbyterians do not ſtrive to make themſelves Kings over him, as they did over his Father, by ſtraining from him antimonarchical Conceſſions, and by covenanting to extirpate his Biſhops, &c.

No Kingdom more happy than England under Monarchs, none now more miſerable.

The Epiſtle to the Reader. —— No Kingdom in the World was ſo happy both for Peace and Plenty, Law and Religion, and all other good Things, as our Kingdom of England was, whilſt due Obedience was lawfully paid to our Sovereign Lord. But now no Nation under the Sun is more miſerable, and ſo it will continue until King Charles the Second be reſtored to his Crown. —— Repentance for the Murder of Charles the Martyr, and the Reſtauration of Charles II. is the only Balm to cure England's Diſtractions.

Mr.

The Rump take Care to model an Army to be truſted by them.

Mr. Speaker according to former Order did before the ſitting of the Houſe deliver out ſeveral Commiſſions in the Regiment of Colonel Sir John Lenthal, &c.

Mercur. Polit. by Order of Parliament, 4to. N°. 607.

The Houſe approved of the Liſt of Officers in Colonel Streater's Regiment, &c. and in the Regiment of Colonel Saunders, &c. and of Colonel Bethel, &c. of Colonel Whetham, &c.

With faithful Chaplains.

Reſolved, That Mr. Burges of Portſmouth be Chaplain to this Regiment.

Ordered, That it be referred to the Committee for plunder'd Miniſters to put Mr. Brague into the Place formerly conferred on Mr. Burgeſs.

And Rewards for retaining Friends.

Reſolved, That two hundred Pounds per Ann. Land of Inheritance, be ſettled on Colonel Nathaniel Whetham and his Heirs, as a Mark of the Parliaments Favour, for his eminent Services for the Parliament and Commonwealth: And that it be referred to the Committee, to whom the Buſineſs touching ſetting out Lands for General Monk is referred, to ſet out Lands of the yearly Value of two hundred Pounds on the ſaid Colonel as aforeſaid, in ſome convenient Place.

For ſettling the Militia of London out of the Power of the City.

A Bill for ſettling the Militia of the City of London, with the Names of Commiſſioners inſerted, was read, and ordered to be ingroſſed.

Ordered, That it be referred to the Council of State to conſider what is further to be done for the Safety of the Parliament and City.

And to ſuppreſs ſeditious Meetings, i. e. of the Cavaliers.

Ordered, That it be referred to the Council of State to conſider of the ſuppreſſing of ſeditious Meetings, that tend to the Diſturbance of the Peace of the Nation.

Ordered, That all the Forces now in Town have a Months Pay, and that the Committee of the Army do take Care for the Payment thereof accordingly.

Monk's Return to Whitehall not agreeable to thoſe who intended to ſupplant him in his Abſence.

On Friday in the Evening, General Monk came back from the City to Whitehall, but at his Return, Scot and Haſlerig, and ſome others their violent Friends were very much moved, as if he had diſobey'd his Orders, by which they ſaid he was to continue with his Army in the City, till ſeveral Deſigns of theirs for the further humbling them to their Purpoſes ſhould be effected. —— That Evening Clarges privately went to the General, and repreſented to him the ill Conſequences of his Proceedings —— and that he had no Way to redeem his Reputation, but the very next Morning to return into the City with his Army, and declare for a free Parliament. —— The chief Officers agreed with him in a Letter to be ſent to the Houſe next Morning upon theſe Heads.

Philip's 13 Years of Ch. II. p. 707. Dr. Price's Hiſtory of the Reſtauration, 8vo. p. 99.

This was in effect the General and his Army's declaring War againſt the Parliament.

That they gave too much Countenance to Lambert, Vane, and ſeveral that engaged with the late Committee of Safety; that they had permitted Ludlow and ſome others to ſit in their Houſe, that had been by Sir Charles Coot, and ſome of the Iriſh Officers accuſed of High-Treaſon. That they had countenanced too much a late Petition, to exclude the moſt Sober and Conſcientious, both Miniſters and others, by Oaths, from all Imployment and Maintenance. And therefore to requeſt, that on Friday next they would iſſue Writs to fill up their Houſe, and that when filled, they would ariſe at their appointed Time, to give Place to a full and a free Parliament.

The King deſpaired now of any good from General Monk.

And expected nothing but a perpetual Exile.

And his whole Court in the like melancholy Thoughts.

When the King, who had rather an Imagination than an Expectation, that the March of General Monk to London with his Army, might produce ſome Alteration that might be uſeful to him, heard of his entire Submiſſion to the Parliament, and of his entring into the City, and diſarming it, the Commitment of the principal Citizens and breaking their Gates and Portcullices, all the little Remainder of his Hopes was extinguiſhed, and he had nothing left before his Eyes, but a perpetual Exile, attended with all thoſe Diſcomforts, whereof he had too long Experience, and which, he muſt now expect, would be improved with the worſt Circumſtances of Neglect, which uſe to wait upon that Condition. A greater Conſternation and Dejection of Mind cannot be imagin'd, than at that Time cover'd the ſmall Court of the King. But God did not ſuffer him long to be wrapp'd up in that melancholy Cloud.

A Letter from Chancellour Hyde to Dr. John Barwick in London, dated from Bruſſels, Feb. 20. 1660. S. N.

The Court at Bruſſels in hopes of ſome good Service from Sir Thomas Middleton, Lord Newport and others in Wales and Shropſhire.

Without any mention or any proſpect of Monk's Intentions to ſerve the King.

And the King's beſt Friends could hardly agree together.

In any common Meaſures.

Life of Dr. John Barwick, Append. N°. xxv. p. 491.

—— I am glad Sir Thomas Middleton hath ſo good an Opinion of Colonel Whitley, who truly I believe is an honeſt Man; the Danger only is of over Activity. — The King is very glad, that you have receiv'd Sir Thomas Middleton's Commiſſion; and that he is ready to accept the Truſt, when the Seaſon ſhall be ripe. What I ſaid concerning Shrewſbury, was not that I thought it unfit to be in Sir Thomas Middleton's Hands: I know very well how it lies to North-Wales, and the great Advantage they may receive from each other, and no Man is ſo fit to be Governor of it as Sir Thomas Middleton; who offers to contribute ſo much to the poſſeſſing of it: But what I ſaid upon that Occaſion concerning my Lord Newport was, that it would be fitter to be tranſacted and conſented to by an Aſſociation with Shropſhire, than by an abſolute Diſpoſition of the King's. And I nam'd my Lord Newport only, as the principal Perſon of that County, and one very much affected to the King's Service, not as Commander in Chief, which I do not believe that he will ever affect to be. He is too wiſe a Man, to keep any Thing in mind of former Paſſages, that may breed a Diſturbance in the preſent Service. And no Body can be ſo fit to negotiate ſuch an Aſſociation as Andrew Newport; and therefore I pray let my Lord Mordaunt and Mr. Rombald diſpoſe Andrew Newport in ſuch a Manner, as you will do Sir Thomas Middleton, that they may meet together and ſettle the Aſſociation; and I ſhall then wonder, if the Shropſhire Gentlemen ſhall not be very willing that Sir Thomas ſhall be Governor of Shrewſbury, when he hath been the principal Means to take it: And that is all I ſhall ſay of that Matter, more than my hearty Service to Sir Thomas and his Son, of whom his Majeſty hath all the Confidence imaginable.

The Buſineſs of the Church was the filling up the vacant Sees.

Dr. Barwick had refuſed the Biſhoprick of Man.

Which if he would accept, the King deſign'd to remove him to better Preferment.

No determinate Proviſion for the Sees of Cheſter, Carliſle and Man.

Concerning the Buſineſs of the CHURCH, I will confeſs truly to you. I am always aſham'd of mentioning it to his Majeſty, who is as much troubled and aſhamed, that there ſhould be no more Care taken of it by thoſe, whoſe Part it is, when he hath done all that he can. I cannot blame you, for not being deſirous of accepting of the Biſhoprick of Man; which if you ſhould do, no Body will accuſe you of Ambition. So that you will not thereby be leſs capable of preſſing on the Work; but on the contrary will give a good Example to others, by ſhewing them, that for the Churches ſake you expoſe your ſelf to as much Danger, as they can do; and when you can receive nothing to recompence it. The King bids me tell you, that as he doth intend you a much better Preferment, ſo if it be found neceſſary, that you ſubmit to this for the preſent Service you ſhall not continue in it after his Majeſty ſhall be able to remove you from it. I hope what Mr. Alleſtry will ſay from the King, when he ſhall be heard, will prevail with the Biſhops to proceed to the Diſpatch of the whole, and if they ſhall find it counſelable firſt to provide for the Northern Province (if the Perſon deſigned by the King for Cheſter ſhall refuſe) that they chuſe as for Carliſle (which he leaves to them to do) ſo another fit Perſon for Cheſter; and then ſince the Election for Man is in my Lord of Derby, and he hath confer'd it upon you, and much Time may be ſpent in the Alteration; I hope your Friends will perſuade you to accept of it for the facilitating the reſt.

Brother of Sir Henry Cholmley of Yorkſhire, a true Friend and Servant of the King.

I have heard much good of Mr. Cholmeley, and know well, that he is well known to the King and Ormond; and I ſhall be very glad upon any occaſion to ſerve him and to be acquainted with him; as I was very well with his Father and his Uncle Harry; who, I hope, will yet prove right. The Addreſſes from Northamptonſhire and the other Counties are very good, notwithſtanding all Clauſes, which will do good in the Way, and no hurt in the End.

The King's Friends were in great Diſtreſs in England, and continually calling for Money out of the ſmall Bank of Royal Bounty.

Great Concern for the Biſhop of Ely.

Sir Theo. Gilby is a very honeſt and modeſt Man, and a good Officer; but I am ſorry he calls ſo ſoon upon you again, as if he were to be a ſtanding and a conſtant Charge. I have writ to my Lord Mordaunt to do ſomewhat for him, which I hope he will do: And if you pleaſe let the whole 20 l. be given to Grig. who complains too of great Neceſſities; but they muſt not think, that they can be wholly ſupported from hence. I do thank you with all my Heart for giving me an Opportunity to ſend my Service to Clem. Spellman, whom I know to be a very worthy Perſon, and whoſe Affections the King is obliged to reward; which he reſolves to do. I pray remember my Service very kindly to him; and let him know, that I did receive the Books long ſince, with a very great Senſe of the Obligation, and did return my Acknowledgment by at leaſt three ſeveral Letters to Dr. Ryves, which it ſeems he never receiv'd. I have had froward Fortune with reference to Clem. Spellman, to whom I heard one Gentleman without any Authority from me, did very impertinently and abſurdly deliver a Complement in my Name: And all thoſe Ways by which I did in Truth endeavour to let him know how much I am his Servant, have been diſappointed. I pray know of him, whether his Father left no Advance in the Gloſſary. It would be very good News, if I could hear of my Lord of Ely's being in full Liberty, to whom I pray preſent my humble Service. The Truth is, I have little hope of the Buſineſs of the Church, but by his being at Liberty; and therefore I hope he will make no Scruple of accepting it, if it be offer'd, or if it can be reaſonably obtain'd.

Not knowing the Intentions of General Monk, but by Mr. Otway.

The King had ſent a Letter to Clarges, which he ought to have the Courage to ſhew to Monk.

The King ſends a Letter to Colonel Redman; who had married Mr. Otway*'s Siſter; and had a great Intereſt in* Monk for his Services done to him.

A Suggeſtion had been made that the Poſſeſſors of Crown and Church Lands muſt have their Titles confirmed to them; to prevent their Oppoſition to the King's Return.

This Suggeſtion wiſely anſwered; concluding that it is not in the King's Power to alienate Crown or Church Lands, without Conſent of Parliament.

Yet he may give ſome Equivalent to the Poſſeſſors of them, if they timely return to their Duty.

I have received the Note from Sir Thomas Bond, and will return you another either now or very ſpeedily. I conceive by yours of the 30th. that Mr. Otway is before this Time with you, and then you cannot be long kept in Suſpence, what Monk reſolves to do; and if Clarges hath the Courage to ſhew him the King's Letter, it muſt work upon him as much, as if it had been written to himſelf. I conceive the Letter you deſire from the King, is for Colonel Redman (though there be ſome Miſtake in the Cypher) and the King hath writ the incloſed accordingly. I do confeſs to you (though very many are of your Opinion, and would find out Expedients accordingly) I am not ſo much frighten'd with the Fear of thoſe Perſons, who by being poſſeſſed of the Church, Crown, and Delinquents Lands, will be thereby withheld from returning to their Duties except they might be aſſur'd to retain the ſame. Firſt, I do not think the Number ſo very conſiderable of all thoſe, who are intangled in that Guilt, that their Intereſt can continue or ſupport the War, when the Nation ſhall diſcern, that there is nothing elſe keeps off the Peace. Secondly, They who have the greateſt Share in thoſe Spoils, are Perſons otherwiſe ſo irreconcileable, either by their villainous Reſolutions (as Sir Arthur Haſlerig and others) that no Overtures of that kind would work upon them, but would be turned into Reproach: And as the Number of thoſe is not great, ſo the Greatneſs of their Poſſeſſions makes them more Enemies than Friends, ſetting all other Guilt aſide. Thirdly, Tho' it be not in the King's Power to alienate either Crown, Church, or Delinquents Lands, and therefore his offer (if he ſhould make it) would be valued accordingly; and it is hardly poſſible, that any Paliament which owns the King, can be ſo conſtituted as to ratify ſuch an Alienation: So no particular Man who is poſſeſſed of ſuch Lands, and will really do ſignal Service for the King, can doubt that it is in the King's Power, and muſt be in his Will, to make him ample Recompence compence for any Service he ſhall do him; and that he ſhall be a good Huſband, as well as good Subject, by returning to his Duty, and ſerving the King effectually: And therefore you may eaſily undertake from the King, and in his Name, to Colonel Redman, that he ſhall not find his Fortune the worſe for ſerving the King; but that if he ſhall do it vigorouſly, he ſhall be ſure, either to have a good Title given him to the Lands in Ireland, of which he is poſſeſſed, or at leaſt to continue him in the Poſſeſſion of them, 'till he receives a valuable Recompence to his own Satisfaction: And if you can let us know what Lands they are of which he is poſſeſſed, I believe it will be in our Power to ſay more to him for his preſent Satisfaction. And what I ſay to you concerning Redman, you are to take as ſaid with Reference to any others who are in the ſame Condition and Diſpoſition to ſerve the King; and you may cauſe them to be treated with in the ſame Manner, and upon the ſame Aſſurance.

Colonel Redman to be rewarded for his Loyalty.

And others of like good Affection to the King.

The City could not yet judge of Monk's Intentions, which he kept to himſelf, that all Parties might have ſome Hopes of him.

His own Intereſt might be a ſtrong Motive to ſerve the King.

And it would be Folly in him to undertake for a Republick.

The Presbyterian Pulpits to be well tun'd, if the Preachers are Loyal.

I am very much taken with Mr. Steward's Caſe, and did hope that our laſt Letters would have brought us ſome News of the City's Reſentment of it; but I believe they will avoid all ſharp Expoſtulations, 'till they can make a clearer Judgment of Monk's Reſolutions; of which methinks by yours of the third you ſeem ſtill to retain ſome Hopes: And it is evident enough from his Carriage, that he is willing all Parties ſhould retain a fair Hope of him. There is no doubt, it is in his Power (if he be once well reſolved) to make himſelf ſo ſtrong by a Conjunction with honeſt and worthy Men, that he need fear no Oppoſition, but may bring all to paſs that he can reaſonably deſire, or others deſire from him; and he takes very ill Meaſures of his own Intereſt, if he doth not believe, that it can be more advanced by his adhering to the King, and eminently promoting his Right, than by any other Courſe he can take; and in Truth, that no other Advancement can be pleaſant or laſting to him: But if he ſhould prove ſo falſe and ſo fooliſh, as to give himſelf up to the Imagination of a Republick; I hope the good Spirit that already appears throughout the whole Kingdom, will be heighten'd with Indignation and Obſtinacy, to proteſt againſt a Submiſſion and Subjection to ſuch an extravagant and abſurd Government as is now over them, and conſequently will refuſe all Payments of Taxes and Impoſitions, and fill Weſtminſter-Hall with Proceſs and Complaints to the Judges, for the Oppreſſions they ſuffer againſt Law; ſo that they may not only be without Hope of a ſolid Settlement, but may receive ſuch viſible Oppoſition, as may take away all their Reputation with their Neighbours, of their being like to ſettle; and then will be the Time for thoſe Presbyterian Pulpits which would be thought to have any Principles of Allegiance, to diſcharge themſelves efficaciouſly.

Mr. Rombald's Cypher ſaid to be diſcover'd to the Council of State.

Lady Abbeſs of the Engliſh Nunnery at Ghent in Flanders.

See Engl. Life of Dr. Barwick, 8vo. p. 253.

The Expreſs you mention in yours of the third is not yet arrived; ſo that having anſwered every particular in all yours, I might very well give you Eaſe from further Trouble at preſent; but I am compelled to enlarge this very long Letter, by an unhappy Information, which Secretary Nicholas now gives me from Mr. Baron, who ſends to him to deſire me to forbear Writing any more in Mr. Rombald's Cypher; becauſe, he ſays, the Council of State hath gotten a Copy of it; which I cannot imagine; ſince as I am ſure it hath never been out of my own Hand: So that there can be no ſuch Thing from hence; and I cannot imagine that he would be leſs careful there; and it is very natural for them to give out ſuch Braggs as they do, of their great Skill in Decyphering, for which no body needs to fear them if they write carefully in good Cyphers. However, as I ſhall be in great Pain 'till I know the contrary, and eſpecially 'till I know that my Letters of the laſt Friday, under my Lady Abbeſs's Cover, came ſafe to him; which I ſent upon an Invitation from thence, and an Aſſurance that they ſhould be very ſafely delivered; ſo I will forbear writing to Mr. Rombald himſelf, 'till I am better informed. Therefore together with this, I pray let him know that I have received his of the twentieth, and the King his other of the thirtieth, but that of the thirteenth is miſcarry'd, as yours of the ſame Date did.

Mr. Warwick, probably he that was afterwards Sir Philip Warwick.

The King's Friends betray'd and intercepted by means of one Whiting a Spy, and of Lockhart Governor of Dunkirk.

You will receive a Note ſigned by the King, which how obſcure ſoever, his Majeſty hath done upon his Deſire, and upon his great Confidence in Mr. Warwick, to whom he will cauſe it to be delivered, and then give his Majeſty a fuller Account of the Contents and Effects of it, and of that particular which I mentioned in a former Letter to him, by the King's Command concerning Mr. Warwick, to which his Majeſty hath yet received no Anſwer.

The King gives him many Thanks for the Information he ſent him concerning Whiting, who lives not in this Town, but at Bruges; where he is able to do more Miſchief by thoſe Offices than if he were here. We heard before that Lockhart had given Notice of Mr. Alleſtrey's paſſing to Dover before he could get thither; by which the Guard was ready to ſeize him at his Landing: And the ſame Offices had been performed for Sir Jo. Stephens and his Friend. We had no Suſpicion of this Fellow, whom we never ſaw; yet he hath been recommended as an honeſt Man, and worthy of the King's Protection, by ſome Men, who in Truth are ſo, and I am confident, thought this Fellow honeſt. We will take the beſt Courſe we can concerning him; yet the King deſires Mr. Rombald to inform himſelf the beſt he can of him, and to let his Majeſty know who Mrs. Leonard is, to whoſe Affection he is ſo much beholden; and out of Tenderneſs to her and her Daughter, he will be more deſirous to prevent the abſolute Ruin of this Knave: And I pray, let us receive an Anſwer to this particular as ſoon as may be. And if the Length of this Letter doth not tire you, you ſhall never have Cauſe to be abſolutely weary of, Sir,

Your moſt affectionate Servant;

Receiv'd Febr. 19. HYDE.

General Monk very jealous of the Rump and Council of State, reſolves to throw himſelf upon the City.

Philips of Ch. II. annex'd to Sir R. Baker, Fol.

The Officers who had been ſent for to meet at White-hall, came early this Morning; where the Letter agreed on was produced and read to them, the General preſent, and approved by them all. Whereupon the General and they ſigned it, and ſent it by two of the Subſcribers Colonels Clobery and Lydcot: And Clarges at the ſame Time was ſent to my Lord Mayor, to acquaint him with the General's Intentions to come and quarter his Army that Night in the City.

The Citizens Joy for Monk's coming back to them.

Account of it given by his Chaplain Mr. Price, an Eye Witneſs.

Dr. Price's Hiſtory of the Reſtorat. 8vo. p. 104.

As ſoon as the General left White-hall, I went into the City, and not knowing where he would quarter that Night, I came to the Three Tunns before Guild-hall, where the General had quartered two Nights before, and entred the Tavern with a Servant, and a Portmanteau, and asked for a Room; which I had ſcarce got into, but Wine followed me as a Preſent from ſome Citizens, deſiring Leave to drink their Morning's Draught with me. I accepted of the Civility, and was aſked what News, and what might be the Meaning of my ſo returning hither? I freely told them, that we were not now the ſame Men that we were two Days ago; and that this they ſhould find e'er Night, to the full Satisfaction of the Injuries done them. The good Men were tranſported into Joy, and moſt of them left me and their Wine and all, to run and communicate this hopeful News.

The General's firſt coming back to the City much ſuſpected, by the Citizens.

See Dr. Price's Hiſtory of the Reſtauration, 8vo. p. 104.

As ſoon as the General came to the Lord Mayor, he told him, he was very welcome to his Houſe, but that the City was full of Fears and ſad Apprehenſions of his ſudden Return, after ſuch violent Actions as the Day before his Soldiers had been employ'd in. The General told him, He hoped to make them of another Mind in few Hours, and would requeſt him preſently to appoint the Aldermen and Common-council to meet him at four a Clock at Guild-Hall, and that there he would acquaint them with his real Intentions.

He appointed them a Meeting at Guildhall.

Scot and Robinſon flatter and diſſemble with Monk to draw him out of the City.

But the Officers underſtood them and affronted them for it.

In the mean Time Scot and Robinſon came to the General with the Meſſage from the Parliament. Scot made Proteſtations of the Parliament's Affection to him, and their high Opinion of his Services, thereby to divert him from his Intentions of ſtaying in the City. But Colonel Bridges, an Officer of Ireland that ſtood by, told them, The General had no Reaſon to credit their fair Speeches, ſince their Words and their Practices agreed not together, as was manifeſt, &c. And Colonel Clobery told them, The General and all his Officers could not but perceive that they grew jealous of them, and that they went about to balance them with ſuch as had been their Enemies, which made it high Time for them to conſult for their own Safeties. The General cloſed all with Moderation, telling them, All would be well, if they ſtrictly obſerved the Advice of the Letter, and iſſued out Writs on Friday next for filling up their Houſe.

With this Anſwer they returned to their fellow Members not very well ſatisfy'd, as was evident by what they did that very Afternoon in the Houſe.

The Rump terribly affrighted with General Monk's Return into the City, ſent their truſty Spies Scot and Robinſon after him.

So odious they were, that the 'Prentices would have mob'd them, if they could have found them.

Dr. Price's Hiſtory of the Reſtauration, 8vo. p. 106.

The Noiſe of Scot and Robinſon's coming to the General ſo alarm'd the 'Prentices, that they were ſearch'd for as ſtrictly as were the Spies that came to Jericho. The General was now at the Bull's-Head Tavern in Cheapſide. The Streets were thronged: Mr. Gumble and I were in a Coach that was becalmed in a Crowd coming from Guild-Hall, where the General had been to expound the End of his Coming: Now the 'Prentices went, it ſeems, from Coach to Coach in queſt of Scot and Robinſon; and when they looked into ours, they cried out Here they are: Plenty of Dirt was brought againſt us in Shovels from the Kennel, we defending ourſelves with the Curtains of the Coach as well as we could 'till the Miſtake was over, which ſoon was by the Means of our Officers.

Debate on the Qualification of Members to exclude the Royal Party.

Publ. Intell. by Order of Parliament, 4to.

The Parliament this Day reſumed the Debate upon the Qualifications of Members to ſit and ſerve in Parliament, and made a conſiderable further Progreſs therein.

A Letter from General George Monk, and the Officers under his Command from White-hall, Febr. 11. 1659. was read.

The Parliament diſſemble with Monk, and return their Thanks for his ſecuring the City.

Reſolved, That the Thanks of this Houſe be given to General Monk for his faithful Service in ſecuring the City. And that as to the filling up of the Houſe, the Parliament were upon the Qualifications before the Receipt of the ſaid Letter, and the ſame will be diſpatched in due Time.

Ordered, That Mr. Scot and Mr. Robinſon do repair to General Monk, and return theſe Votes in anſwer to his Letter.

Intelligence publiſh'd by Order of Parliament, 4to.

Reſolved, That the Parliament do now proceed in ſettling the Commiſſioners for the Government of the Army. The Bill intituled, An Act for appointing Commiſſioners for Government of the Army, was read the Second Time.

The Parliament for a Check upon Monk, put the Army into the Hands of five Commiſſioners; three of the Quorum, and Monk not one of the three.

Reſolved, That the Number of the Commiſſioners for Government of the Army be five, and they be General George Monk, Sir Arthur Haſlerig, Colonel Herbet Morley, Colonel Valentine Walton, and Colonel Matthew Allured.

Reſolved, That the Quorum of the Commiſſioners be three, and that the Time for the Continuance of the Powers of theſe Commiſſioners be until the Parliament take further Order. And ſo the Act paſſed, and was ordered forthwith to be printed and publiſhed.

This rais'd an Indignation in Monk, and a Reſolution to be even with them.

Philips's Ch. II. p. 709.

It was moved, that General Monk ſhould always be one of the three for Quorum; but upon putting the Queſtion it was carry'd in the Negative. When Word was brought him of this their Ingratitude to him, he could not avoid expreſſing much Indignation at it.

The General's Speech to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen.

Sir Thomas Allen, Lord-Mayor, having entertained at Dinner the General and his Officers, the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-council met at Guild-Hall about five a Clock; where the General told them,

"That he was much troubled to ſee what Affronts were offered to them by "Orders from the Council of State, which he obeyed; yet diſliked that he was "neceſſitated to comply with thoſe Commands, but with a Reſolution always "to run the greateſt Dangers to ſerve them; that he had not forgot their kind "Letter, which he received at Morpeth, wherein he affectionately concurred; "but was forced to retire backward like a Fencer, to make the better Guard, "and the more advantageous Aſſault. That he had ſent to the Houſe that "Morning, that they ſhould iſſue Writs for a full Parliament; and to this "End he was come to ſtay with them, and ſee his Deſires fulfilled; and that "they ſhould put a Period to their Sitting by the ſixth of May." It cannot be expreſſed what Numbers of People were gathered together about Guild-Hall, and with what Shoutings and Acclamations this News was received; ſo that there were Bonfires and ringing of Bells throughout the City. And this is the Night which was called the BURNING the RUMP; and I am perſuaded, 'till the King's Reſtauration, there was never ſo much Joy and Triumph.

Soon communicated to the People, who made Bonfires and burnt Rumps, in Deriſion of the remaining Tail of the Parliament.

The witty Way of Mr. Fuller in clapping his Hands at theſe Bonfires.

Bonfires are always made on welcome Occaſions. Such an Occaſion happened at London laſt February, 1659. I confeſs the 11th. of March is generally beheld as the firſt Day of the Spring, but hereafter London (and in it all England) may date its vernal Heat (after a long Winter of Woes and War) from the 11th. of February, on which Day ſo many Bonfires (the laſt new Lights I ever ſaw in that City) were made; although I believe the Faggots themſelves knew as much as ſome who laid them on, for what Purpoſe they were made. Saturday Night Febr. 11th. renowned for the Night of Burning the RUMP; while Butchers had quick Trading for their Rumps, and many Cooks loſt their Fees.

A Pattern of Mercy opened in a Sermon at St. Paul's, before the right honourable the Lord-Mayor and the Lord General Monk, Febr. 12, 1659. By TOBIAS CONYERS, Miniſter at St. Ethelbert's, London.

London. 1660. 4to.

The Author's Apology.] When I enter'd upon the enſuing Diſcourſe in my private Meditations, I looked upon the Complexion of the Times, and conſider'd the Temper of the Climate in which we live, and in a Nation all rent and torn with Differences in Opinions, both civil and religious, I thought nothing could be more acceptable than a Propoſition for Peace. But whilſt I ſpoke for Peace (ſuch was my Unhappineſs) ſome men made themſelves ready for Battle; though giving Offence was far from my Deſign. ——— 'Tis confeſſed the 12th. of February was a critical Day, and all Circumſtances concurred to render me unacceptable. —— The Aſperſions caſt upon me are either that I am ſchiſmatical, an Enemy to the Church; or that I am heretical: To both which I crave Leave to anſwer. 1. That I am ſchiſmatical or a Sectary, I know not why any Man ſhould think me ſo; it is true that I hold Communion with, and obſerve the Laws of Piety and holy Charity with that Chriſtian People, to whom Mr. John Goodwin is Paſtor. —— If it be the epiſcopal Party that cenſures me for Schiſm, I humbly crave Leave to remonſtrate, that I entred the Miniſtry at a Time when there was no Church Government eſtabliſhed, but every one did that which was right in his own Eyes; as I had no Hand in pulling down that Hierarchy, ſo will they not, I hope, blame me for joining with a People that I thought eſpouſed the Intereſt of Truth and Holineſs. —— If it be the Preſbyterian Party, if I had made any Schiſm, of all Men they had the leaſt Reaſon to take Notice of it: For if the little Foxes and Boars have entred to root up and deſtroy the Vineyard, it was by that Schiſm or Gap which themſelves made; therefore the Brethren of the Preſbytery remembring their own Faults, this Day, will, I hope, exerciſe great Lenity and Grace towards thoſe that are found in the ſame Sin and Tranſgreſſion (if it be a Sin and Tranſgreſſion) with themſelves. To both Parties (whom I wiſh may be no more called two but one) I ſhall only add this, that when the Fence is made up, which how ſtrong ſoever it may be, I wiſh may not be too ſtrait, I muſt either keep out, or at my further Peril.

The Independents upbraid the Preſbyterians with making the firſt Schiſm from the Church.

The Preacher appeals to the Doctrines of the Church of England in her thirty nine Articles.

The ſecond Part of my Accuſation is Error and Hereſy. Erroneous I may be, Humanum eſt errare. Heretical I cannot be, becauſe never cenſured by any lawful Authority. I know not what brought me into Suſpicion with the City, unleſs it were for my Judgment about the Death of Chriſt, Election and Reprobation, &c. wherein I am ſure I hold nothing contrary to the Doctrine of the Church of England, contained in her thirty nine Articles, and interpreted according to her moſt learned and beſt beloved Children, as Dr. Hammond, Dr. Taylor, Mr. Thorndike, Mr. Thruſcroſs, Mr. Gunning, Mr. Pierce.

The general and natural Tendency of my Sermon was for Peace, Love, Mercy, and Unity from the Text, Luke vi. 36. Be ye therefore merciful as your heavenly Father is merciful.

MONDAY Feb. 13.

Sir Henry Vane ſent out of Town.

Reſolved, That the Serjeant at Arms attending the Parliament be required forthwith to put in Execution the former Order of the Houſe, for carrying Sir Henry Vane to his Houſe called Belew, in the County of Lincoln.

And General Lambert confin'd to Holmby Houſe, formerly the Priſon of Ch. I.

By the Parliament. A Proclamation requiring John Lambert, Eſq; who was ordered to repair to Holmeby in Northamptonſhire, there to remain during the Pleaſure of Parliament, but lies privately in and about the City of London, to render himſelf by Thurſday next to the Council of State, &c.

The late Committee of Safety to be call'd in queſtion.

Ordered, That on this Day ſe'night the Members of the Houſe who acted as the pretended Committee of Safety, do appear in Parliament —— and that the Buſineſs concerning the ſaid Members be then taken into Conſideration. Referred to a Committee to ſend for all Books and Papers belonging to the late pretended Committee of Safety, and touching the Draught of a Government preſented to the ſaid Committee.

The Council of State try to wheedle and draw Monk out of the City.

But he was too Crafty to be ſo caught.

Nor were the Citizens willing to part with him.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, 8vo. p. 233.

Dr. Price's Hiſtory of the Reſtoration 8vo. p. 109.

The Council of State invited General Monk to come and aſſiſt them with his Preſence and Counſels, to which he return'd Anſwer, that till the Oaths were withdrawn he could not poſſibly attend them; but for the preſent his Continuance in the City was further neceſſary, becauſe of thoſe Diſcontents there, which were occaſioned by themſelves, having diſtributed ſeven thouſand Arms out of their Stores into the Hands of Anabaptiſts, and other dangerous Fanaticks; and that his own Forces were greatly alarm'd, till thoſe Arms were again recall'd. But the Juncto and Council of State were not more importunate to recover him again to Whitehall, than the Citizens were to perſuade his Continuance among them, as being moſt for his own Safety as well as theirs.

TUESDAY Feb. 14.

The Parliament make a Form of Engagement againſt the King.

Intelligence by Order of Parliament, 4to. No. 607.

The Parliament this Day reſumed the Debate upon the Qualifications of Members to ſit and ſerve in Parliament —— And a Promiſe and Declaration was tendered, which was reſolved to be the Engagement, and is as followeth:

I A. B. do Promiſe and Declare that I will be true and faithful to the Common-wealth of England and the Government thereof, in the Way of a Common-wealth and free State, without a King, ſingle Perſon, or Houſe of Lords.

And to ſweeten Monk, they order Pay to him and his Forces.

Ordered, That the Committee of the Army be and is hereby impowered to pay the Forces of General Monk which came with him out of Scotland, according to the Order of General Monk to the Commiſſary General of the Muſter in Scotland, viz. 100 private Soldiers in each Troop of Horſe beſides Officers, &c.

All the different Intereſts and Parties apply to Monk.

His Anſwers were as the Times would bear.

He ſeem'd moſt favourable to the Preſbyterians, who had been the greateſt Enemies to King Charles I. but grown wiſer by Experience would be glad of the Protection of King Charles II.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, 8vo. p. 234.

General Monk during his Abode in his Quarters at Draper's-Hall, was continually beſet with Applications to him from the ſeveral Intereſts in the City, and from the Heads of the Preſbyterian and Independent Parties, to whom he return'd ſuch Anſwers, as the Condition of his Affairs would allow. The Meſſengers alſo from Weſtminſter were ſtill daily continued: But above all the reſt, that Intereſt in the City and Country which the General could beſt truſt, had now begun very powerful Addreſſes to him for reſtoring the formerly ſecluded Members. —— Theſe Gentlemen were moſtly of the Preſbyterian Intereſt, and ſome of them had been buſy enough in beginning the Misfortunes of their King and Countrey; but were now grown wiſer by the Experience of their Miſtakes, and the Miſeries of a Civil War, which had ended almoſt in their own Undoing, as well as the Death of the King.

Letter of Mr. Sharp, Agent for the Kirk of Scotland, giving ſome Account of his Reception at London and the Kindneſs of Mr. Manton to him.

See Feb. 16.

A Letter of Mr. Sharp Agent for the Kirk of Scotland to his Brethren at Edinburgh, dated Feb. 14. 1660. taking notice of his Arrival at London the 13th, his kind Reception by Mr. Manton, who ſignified to him the large Character the General gave of the Miniſters in Scotland, and Mr. Douglas in particular: That he had immediate Acceſs to the General, who recommended him to Sir Anthony Aſhley Cowper and Mr. Weaver, two Parliament Men. He adds, that the City, who two Days ago were much ſadned by the unhandſome Act put upon the General, with a Deſign to bring him into an Odium with the City, is now mightily pleaſed with the General's Letter to the Parliament.

WEDNESDAY Feb. 15.

Publick Intelligence, by Order of Parliament, 4to.

Letters from Colonel Overton from Hull of the 12th of February, with a Declaration for the ſecluded Members or a Free Parliament; with a Letter of like Tendency directed to General Monk were read and referred to the Council of State.

The Rump were forc'd to make a Shew of filling up the vacant Places.

Reſolved, That for the filling up of the Parliament, Writs do iſſue forth to the ſeveral Counties, Cities and Boroughs in England and Wales, according to uſual Courſe as hath been anciently accuſtomed: And in order thereunto it is referred to a Committee to bring in the Names of the Members now ſitting, and for what Counties, Cities and Boroughs they ſerve to Morrow Morning.

The Parliament and Council of State ſaw themſelves outwitted, and knew not how to play an After-Game.

The Anabaptiſts and Sectaries were the more violent againſt the King.

Dr. Price of the Reſtauration. 8vo. p. 109.

The Parliament and Council of State upon the firſt Revolt of Monk, and retiring to the City with his Army, eaſily ſaw what they were to truſt to. However they ſtill courted his Return. But not truſting to the Charms of Words to allure him; they diſtributed ſome Arms to Anabaptiſts and fifth Monarchy Men, and employed Agitators in their Army (now by Monk's ſucceſsful Artifice diſperſed in Country Quarters) to whiſper his Treaſon againſt the Parliament, and to give out openly that Charles Stuart was like to come in. Thoſe Arms the General deſired might be recall'd, in regard they gave Offence to his Army, and to all ſober Men. —— For the Anabaptiſts and ſuch like Sectaries in and about the City, took Heart at the putting down of the City Gates, and fell to remonſtrating to the Parliament, that none were fit to bear any Office Civil or Military, that would not abjure Charles Stuart, and his Title and Family. This was underſtood to have been the Artifice of ſome Abjurers in the Council of State, to win over Aſſiſtance to their narrow and almoſt deſpiſed Party. Sir Arthur Haſlerig was taxed by the General, as the Promoter of this ill Office, but he had not the Courage to own it.

The Declaration of the County of Oxon; for admitting the ſecluded Members, and filling up the vacant Places.

Publick Intelligence, 4to.

This Day an Addreſs was made to General Monk by the Lord Falkland, Sir Anthony Cope, Mr. James Fiennes, Sir Henry Jones, Captain William Cope and

Mr. Edward Hungerford, with other Gentlemen of the County of Oxon, who preſented a Declaration entitled, the Declaration of the County of Oxon, to his Excellency the Lord General Monk —— That Places vacant in Parliament by Death may be ſupplied, and the ſecluded Members readmitted, and that no previous Oath may be appointed. To which his Lordſhip gave an obliging Anſwer, and acquainted them, that the Parliament were now wholly taken up with the Matters mention'd by them, ſo that he had Cauſe to believe the Houſe would ſpeedily provide to ſatisfy them and the whole Nation; adviſing them to acquieſce in the Parliaments Determination.

The like Declarations from Yorkſhire, and many other Counties.

By ſeveral Letters out of the North, we have had Accounts of a Declaration formed in that County of York, and ſubſcribed by the Gentry, &c. the Subſtance whereof is, that either the ſecluded Members may be admitted, or that there may be a free Parliament, and until this be obtained no Taxes. Alſo that the ſeveral Ridings in that County were inclining to aſſociate with each other, and with ſome other Counties, in order to the ſaid Particulars. —— But of the Weſt it is certified, that Cornwall is in quiet, but inſiſting for the ſame Things with others.

Printed in the Year 1659, 4^to. p. 99.

To promote the good Deſign and common Deſire of reſtoring the ſecluded Members, there was now publiſh'd, A true and perfect Narrative of what was done, ſpoken by, and between Mr. Prynne, the old and newly forcibly late ſecluded Members, the Army Officers, and thoſe now ſitting, both in the Commons Lobby Houſe, and elſewhere, on Saturday and Monday the 7^th and 9^th of May, with the true Reaſons, Ends, inducing Mr. Prynne (a Member of the old Parliament) thus earneſtly to preſs for Entry, to go and keep in the Houſe, as he did. And what Propoſals he intended there to make for publick Peace, Settlement, and Preſervation of the Parliament's Privileges. Put in Writing, and publiſhed by the ſaid William Prynne, Eſq; to rectify the various Reports and Cenſures of this Action; and give publick Satisfaction to all Members of the old Parliament, the whole Engliſh Nation, eſpecially thoſe Vianders and free Burgeſſes of the Borough of Newport in Cornwall (who without his Privity, Solicitation, or good Liking, unanimouſly elected him for their Burgeſs An. 1648. though ſoon after forcibly ſecluded, ſecured, and now twice re-ſecluded in like Manner by the Army Officers) of his ſincere Endeavours to the uttermoſt of his Power, to preſerve our RELIGION, LAWS, LIBERTIES, the eſſential Rights, Privileges, Freedom of Parliament, and all we yet enjoy, according to his Oaths, Covenant, Truſt, as a Parliament Member, againſt the utter Subverters of them, by meer armed Force, arbitrary Will, and tyrannical Power, through the apparent Plots, Seductions of our profeſſed foreign Popiſh Adverſaries and their Inſtruments.

From my Study in Lincoln's-Inn, May 18. 1659.

The Preſbyterians under a Neceſſity of wiſhing the Monarchy reſtor'd.

And upon that View, were for reſtoring the ſecluded Members.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, 8^vo. p. 236.

See Gumble's Life of Monk, 8^vo. p. 260.

And thoſe Members were very moderate in propoſing the Ends of their Readmiſſion.

The Gentlemen of the Preſbyterian Intereſt now ſaw clearly, there was no Way left to ſettle the Nation but by reſtoring the Monarchy; only they would firſt fit it to their Church Diſcipline, and melt down the Crown into a new Form, and reduce the Sceptre to a Length of their own. For the Proſecution of theſe Ends, they were as eager to be again fingering the Government, as the Juncto then ſitting were to keep them out of it. But being Men of much better Morals and Principles than moſt of the other; they had the Prudence to propoſe their own Re-admiſſion with that Moderation and Temper, as was very acceptable to the General and his Officers. They aſſured them, that their Return would not interfere with the General's Declaration in Scotland in behalf of the Parliament, as it ſat October 7, for it was ſtill the ſame Parliament that would be continued. They convinced them, that having by the ſame Declaration undertaken to ſubject the military Power in Obedience to the civil, they had obliged themſelves to ſecure their Re-admiſſion, ſince they had been removed from their Places by the Violence of the Army.

THURSDAY Feb. 16.

Ordered, That the Committee for plundered Miniſters be and are hereby impowered and authorized to ſit every Tueſday and Thurſday in the Afternoon.

Ordered, That on Saturday Morning next the Names of Sheriffs for the reſpective Counties be brought in for the Approbation of Parliament.

A Report was made from the Committee for what Counties, Cities, and Boroughs the Members now ſitting in the Parliament do ſerve.

Lockhart, Governor of Dunkirk, loſt the Opportunity of being a good and great Man.

Bp. Burnet's Hiſtory, Fol. p. 86.

Lockhart had it in his Power to have made a great Fortune, if he had begun firſt, and had brought the King to Dunkirk. As ſoon as the Peace of the Pyrenees was made (where he had attended to watch over the Treaty) he came over and found Monk at London, and took all the Pains he could to penetrate into his Deſigns. But Monk continued ſtill to proteſt to him in the ſolemneſt Manner poſſible, that he would be true to the Common-wealth, and againſt the Royal Family. Lockhart went away perſuaded that Matters would continue ſtill in the ſame State: So that when his old Friend Middleton writ to him to make his own Terms, if he would invite the King to Dunkirk, he ſaid he was truſted by the Common-wealth, and could not betray it.

A better Account given by Admiral Mountague, afterward Earl of Sandwich.

Journal of Edw. Earl of Sandwich to Portugal, MS. Feb. 1667 Fol.

Account given by Edward Earl of Sandwich (now Admiral Mountague) that when he was at Liſbon upon making the Peace between the two Crowns of Spain and Portugal, on Thurſday Febr. 27, 1667-8. he dined with Count Schomberg, and obſerved from him, that a few Weeks before the Reſtauration of the King my Maſter, who was then at Breda, Count Schomberg commanding the French Forces

From the Mouth of General Schomberg.

Who was perſonally concern'd in a Deſign of ſurprizing Dunkirk, but at that Time neither the King of England, nor the Miniſter of France, were for any ſuch Attempt.

ces at Winnox-bergen, enter'd into a Treaty with ſome Officers at Dunkirk, who concerted with him to open the Gates of the Town, and give him Opportunity to ſurprize the Place, for which they were to have had forty thouſand Crowns. The Count adviſed the King of England with it, who directed him by no Means to attempt the Seizing of it, becauſe in England they were ſending Commiſſioners to him to call him over into his Kingdom; and his Majeſty would by no Means have any thing fall out, that might give them Diſguſt or Jealouſy. The Count alſo gave the Cardinal Mazarin Notice of it, and he directed that no ſuch Attempt ſhould be made, becauſe already he was look'd upon as no Friend to the King's Reſtauration, and this would make him worſe thought of in England; and ſo he deſiſted from the Deſign.

France and Spain would have attempted to reſtore the King, but his own Subjects were the only Power able to do it.

Bp. Burnet, p. 97.

The Nation had one great Happineſs during the long Courſe of the civil War, that no Foreigners had got Footing among them. Spain was ſinking to nothing: France was under a baſe ſpirited Miniſter: And both were in War all the while. And now a Peace was made between them. And very probably, according to what is in Mazarin's Letters, they would have joined Forces to have reſtored the King. The Nation was by this Means entirely in its own Hands: And now returning to its Wits, was in a Condition to put every Thing in joint again: Whereas if Foreigners had been poſſeſſed of any important Place, they might have had a large Share of the Management, and would have been ſure of taking Care of themſelves.

Theſe in the Preſence of the Lord General Monk had ſome Conference together.

Gumble's Life of General Monk, 8vo. p. 236.

The General and his Officers were ſo well ſatisfied with the Plea of the ſecluded Members, that they were reſolved to hear what could be alledged againſt them. To that Purpoſe it was agreed, that ſome of theſe ſecluded Members meet at a Conference with a like Number of thoſe now ſitting, which was accordingly done on Saturday February 18, the General and his Officers being preſent; where it was pretended by thoſe now ſitting, that ſince the Removal of the ſecluded Members ſo many Things had been done, both as to Change of the Government, Liberty of Conſcience, and the Sale of publick Lands, as was likely to be all interrupted and diſordered again, by the Return of theſe Members, to the further Prejudice, and retarding the Settlement of the Common-wealth. To this the ſecluded Members reply'd, that they would not bring with them their Paſſions nor Revenge into the Houſe, nor concern themſelves in any Man's Property, nor loſe Time in reflecting back upon what had been done in their long Abſence; but would direct all their Thoughts forward, in purſuing ſuch Counſels as might lay a better Foundation of Settlement to the Common-

Objection of the ſitting Members.

More likely the firſt Meeting was on Friday Night Feb. 17.

Anſwer of the ſecluded Members.

The ſitting Members of the Independent Party, were for preſcribing Terms and Conditions to the ſecluded Members for their Readmiſſion.

Common-wealth, and leave Things in ſome good Order for the further Endeavour of the Parliament which ſhould ſucceed them.

Moſt of thoſe Gentlemen from the Juncto were of the moderate Party in the Houſe, who were weaned with the Extravagancies of their Fellows, and would be contented to ſtrengthen their Intereſt by the Acceſſion of the ſecluded Members. But others among them of the independent Perſuaſion (who had been tamper'd with by the Heads of their Party) began to demurr upon it, unleſs thoſe Members would give Security to declare for the Government of a Common-wealth, and Liberty of Conſcience, and that they would conſent to a further Act for Confirmation of publick Sales.

SATURDAY Feb. 18.

A Letter from Colonel John Lambert of the 14th. of February was this Day read.

Ordered, That a Bill be brought in on Monday next for ſettling the Exciſe and Cuſtoms.

An Act made for the Royaliſts to be incapable of being elected Members of Parliament.

Ordered, That the Bill for diſabling Perſons to elect or be elected to this Parliament be engroſſed. The ſaid Bill, intituled, An Act diſabling Perſons to elect or be elected to this preſent Parliament, was this Day read the third Time, and paſſed; and ordered to be forthwith printed and publiſhed.

Another Conference betwixt ſome ſitting and ſome ſecluded Members.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, 8vo. p. 238.

To ſatisfy all Scruples about re-admitting the ſecluded Members, the General appointed three Perſons of his principal Truſt, to debate thoſe Points further with ſome of the ſecluded Members the next Day in a Conference, which was to be held at Mr. Anneſley's Houſe, afterward Earl of Angleſey. The ſecluded Members were not willing to depart from their firſt Length, but upon a further Debate gave them freſh Aſſurance that they would make no Alteration in the preſent Government, but leave that Point wholly to the next Parliament. And for an Act to confirm the Sale of publick Lands, they were not yet reſolv'd to paſs any Act at all; but there might be no Jealouſy upon them, they were content to be limited in the chief Points they ſhould conſult upon; and in one Month's Time to conclude their Seſſion.

Who amicably agreed the Matter.

Several good Patriots did now appear with great Courage and Zeal for a Settlement, and for his Majeſty's Reſtauration; and aſſiſted with their Counſels and all other Ways to promote that great Deſign; as the Earls of Mancheſter, Angleſey, Carliſle, Lords Hollis, Townſhend, Aſhley, Mr. Pierpoint, with many others I hear did publickly avow their Loyalty in this Time of Confuſion. And the Earl of Lauderdale, newly releaſed out of Priſon in England, where he had been confined many Years, was a very great Inſtrument in his Majeſty's Service. Among many others that employ'd themſelves in the King's Buſineſs, none did more faithfully or judiciouſly negotiate than Mr. William Rumbold. The ſecluded Members did uſually meet at Mr. Anneſley's Houſe, and the two Perſons they appointed were the Lord Aſhley and Colonel Birch; where after many Debates between them, and thoſe appointed by the General, it was at laſt reſolved that the ſecluded Members ſhould be admitted upon Conditions.

And by their Intereſt directed by the General. Articles were made for reſtoring the ſecluded Members, without the leaſt Intimation of ſerving the King by it.

Firſt, To ſettle the Conduct of the Armies in the three Nations, ſo as might beſt ſecure the Peace of the Common-wealth.

Secondly, To provide for the Support of the Forces by Sea and Land, and Money alſo for their Arrears, and the Contingencies of the Government.

Thirdly, To conſtitute a Council of State for the civil Government of Scotland and Ireland, and to iſſue out Writs for the ſummoning a Parliament to meet at Weſtminſter the 20th. of April.

Fourthly, To conſent to their own Diſſolution by a Time that ſhould be limited to them.

TUESDAY Feb. 21.

The General returns to White-hall, and makes a Speech to a Meeting of the ſitting and ſecluded Members.

Publick Intelligence, by Order of Parliament, N°. 608.

This Day his Excellency the Lord General Monk having quitted his head Quarters in the City, returned hither to White-hall, about eight a Clock in the Morning, where met him in his Lodging moſt of theſe Members now about Town, which are commonly called the ſecluded Members, with many other Members of Parliament, to whom he ſpake as followeth:

Gentlemen,

You are not, I hope, ignorant, what Care and Endeavours have been uſed, and Means aſſayed, for healing the Breaches of our Diviſions amongſt ourſelves; and that in order thereunto divers Conferences have been procured between you, though to ſmall Effect; yet having at length received fuller Satisfaction from thoſe worthy Gentlemen that were ſecluded than formerly; I was bold to put you all to the Trouble of this Meeting, that I might open myſelf to you all, even with more Freedom than formerly. But leſt I might be miſapprehended or miſtaken, as of late it befel me, I have committed to Writing the Heads of what I intended to diſcourſe to you, and deſire it may be read openly to you all.

And his Mind more fully delivered in a written Paper.

After this, the following Paper was openly read to the Members by his Secretary.

Gentlemen,

It appears unto me, by what I have heard from you and the whole Nation, that the Peace and happy Settlement of theſe bleeding Nations, next under God, lieth in your Hands; and when I conſider that Wiſdom, Piety, and Self-denial, which I have Reaſon to be confident lodgeth in you, and how great a Share of the Nations Suffering will fall upon you, in caſe the Lord deny us now a Settlement. I am in very good Hopes, there will be found in you all, ſuch melting Bowels towards theſe poor Nations, and towards one another, that you will become Healers and Makers up of all its woful Breaches. And that ſuch an Opportunity may clearly appear to be in your Hands, I thought good to aſſure you, and that in the Preſence of God, that I have nothing before my Eyes but God's Glory, and the Settlement of theſe Nations upon Common-wealth Foundations. In purſuit whereof, I ſhall think nothing too dear; and for my own particular I ſhall throw myſelf down at your Feet, to be any thing or nothing, in order to theſe great Ends. As to the Way of future Settlement, far be it from me to impoſe any thing, I deſire you may be in perfect Freedom; only give me Leave to mind you, that the old Foundations are by God's Providence ſo broken, that in the Eye of Reaſon, they cannot be reſtored, but upon the Ruins of the People of theſe Nations, that have engaged for their Rights, in Defence of the Parliament. And the great and main Ends of the Covenant, for uniting and making the Lord's Name One in the three Nations: And alſo the Liberty of the People's Repreſentatives in Parliament will be certainly loſt: For if the People find, that after ſo long and bloody a War againſt the King, for breaking in upon their Liberties, yet at laſt he muſt be taken in again, it will be out of Queſtion, and is moſt manifeſt, he may for the Future govern by his Will, diſpoſe of Parliaments and Parliament Men as he pleaſeth, and yet the People will never more riſe for their Aſſiſtance.

Perſuading to a Settlement of the Nation, and to an healing and making up the woful Breaches of it.

And that Settlement upon Commonwealth Foundations.

For that the old Foundations of Monarchy were ſo broken, that they cannot be reſtored.

If the King ſhould return, he would govern by Arbitrary Will and Power.

The Intereſt of the City muſt lie in a Commonwealth.

And as to the Intereſts of this famous City (which hath been in all Ages the Bulwark of Parliaments, and unto whom I am for their great Affection ſo deeply engaged) certainly it muſt lie in a Common-wealth; that Government only being capable to make them (through the Lord's Bleſſing) the Metropolis and Bank of Trade for all Chriſtendom, whereunto God and Nature hath fitted them above all others.

And as to Prelacy the Nation cannot bear it.

And as to the Government in the Church, the Want whereof hath been no ſmall Cauſe of theſe Nations Diſtractions; it is moſt manifeſt, that if it be monarchical in the State, the Church muſt follow, and Prelacy muſt be brought in, which theſe Nations I know cannot bear, and againſt which they have ſo ſolemnly ſworn.

Moderate, not rigid Preſbyterians, beſt for the Churches Settlement.

And indeed, moderate, not rigid Preſbyterian Government, with a ſufficient Liberty for Conſciences truly tender, appears at preſent to be the moſt indifferent and acceptable Way to the Church's Settlement.

The great Difficulty in ſatisfying the noble Lords who had adher'd to the Parliament againſt the King.

Not to be made a diſtinct Houſe, yet to have hereditary Marks of Honour.

The main Thing that ſeems to lie in the Way, is the Intereſt of the Lords, even of thoſe Lords who have ſhewed themſelves noble indeed, by joining with the People; and in Defence of thoſe juſt Rights, have adventured their deareſt Blood and large Eſtates. To that I ſhall only ſay, That though the State of theſe Nations be ſuch as cannot bear their ſitting in a diſtinct Houſe, yet certainly the Wiſdom of Parliament will find out ſuch hereditary Marks of Honour for them, as may make them more noble in After-Ages.

Gentlemen,

February 1659-60.

The Buſineſs in Parliament muſt be

To ſettle the Conduct of the Armies.

To pay the Forces by Land and Sea.

To appoint a Council of State.

And call a Parliament to govern without King or Houſe of Lords.

And to diſſolve this Parliament, and provide for a Succeſſion of 'em.

Gentlemen, Upon the whole Matter, the beſt Reſult that I can make at preſent for the Peace of theſe Nations, will be, in my Opinion, that you forthwith go to ſit together in Parliament. In Order,

1. To the ſettling the Conduct of the Armies of the three Nations, in that Manner, as they may be ſerviceable to the Peace and Safety of them, and not to its own and the Nations Ruin, by Faction and Diviſion.

2. To the providing ſufficient Maintenance for them; that is, for the Forces by Land, and for the Navy by Sea, and all the Arrears of both, and other Contingencies of the Government.

3. To the appointing a Council of State, with Authority to ſettle the civil Government and Judicatories in Scotland and Ireland, and to take Care for the Iſſuing of Writs for the Summoning a Parliament of theſe three Nations united, to meet at Weſtminſter the 20th. Day of April next, with ſuch Qualifications as may ſecure the publick Cauſe we are all engaged in, and according to ſuch Diſtributions as were uſed in the Year 1654. which Parliament ſo called, may meet and Act in Freedom, for the more full Eſtabliſhing of this Common-wealth, without a King, ſingle Perſon, or Houſe of Lords.

4. To a legal Diſſolution of this Parliament to make Way for Succeſſion of Parliaments.

And in order to theſe good Ends, the Guards will not only willingly admit you, but faithfully, both myſelf, and every the Officers under my Command, and (I believe) the Officers and Soldiers of the three Nations will ſpend their Blood for you, and ſucceſſive Parliaments.

This to be the Peace and Settlement of theſe Nations.

And all this intended for a healing Speech.

• If your Conjunction be directed to this End, you may part honourably, having made a fair Step to the Settlement of theſe Nations, by making a Way for ſucceſſive Parliaments. But I muſt needs ſay, that if any different Councils ſhould be taken (which I have no Reaſon to fear) theſe Nations would preſently be thrown back into Force and Violence, and all Hopes of this much deſired Eſtabliſhment buried in Diſorder, which the Lord in his great Mercy I hope will prevent. And ſo God ſpeed you well together, and unite your Hearts for the Preſervation of Peace and Settlement of theſe Nations, to his own Glory, and yours, and all our Comforts.

Philips Ch. II. p. 712.

With this the Members of Parliament taking Leave of his Excellency, forthwith repaired to the Houſe, where they found the Door open for them with all Freedom: There were preſent at the firſt ſitting above fourſcore of thoſe formerly excluded, beſides a conſiderable Number of the other Members: And ſo they preſently proceeded to the Buſineſs of the Common-wealth. Theſe Tranſactions were managed with ſo much Secrecy, that the Members that were ſitting in the Houſe knew nothing of them, till they ſaw the ſecluded Members come in and ſit amongſt them, &c.

And annul the Votes for their Excluſion in Dec. 1648.

Reſolved, That all Votes and Reſolutions ſince the 18th of December 1648. relating to the ſecluding or ſuſpending the ſitting of any Members of Parliament be hereby vacated and made null and void.

Reſolved, That all Votes of this Houſe touching new Elections of Members to ſit and ſerve in this Parliament, be and are hereby vacated, and that Mr. Speaker be and is required not to ſign any ſuch Orders.

And make Commiſſioner Monk Captain General.

Reſolved, That General George Monk be conſtituted and appointed Captain General and Commander in Chief under the Parliament, of all the Forces of England, Scotland and Ireland.

And releaſe their Friends in the Tower.

Reſolved, That Sir Robert Pye, Major Fincher, Mr. Vincent, Mr. Bludworth, Major Chamberlain, Colonel Bromfield, Mr. Jackſon, Mr. Thomas Brown and Major Cox be diſcharged of their Impriſonment in the Tower of London.

Reſolved, That Mr. Rolles be diſcharg'd of his Impriſonment upon giving Security to the Lieutenant of the Tower not to diſturb the Peace of the Commonwealth.

And are willing to releaſe Sir George Booth, &c.

Ordered, That the Lieutenant of the Tower do give an Account to the Parliament to Morrow Morning of the Cauſe of the Impriſonment of Sir George Booth and Major Peter Brook.

Eod. Die Martis Feb. 21. poſt Meridiem.

Give the City leave to have their Common Council reſtored.

Publ. Intell. ibid.

Reſolved, That the Order of Parliament of the Ninth of this Inſtant February, for Diſcontinuing the Common-council for the City of London, be and is hereby vacated, and made null and void.

And to make up their Gates and Poſts and Chains.

Reſolved, That the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-council of the City of London have Liberty to make up their Gates, Poſts, Portcullices, and Chains, as they ſhall ſee Cauſe.

Ordered, That Sir Gilbert Gerrard, Mr. Vaſſells, and Alderman Atkins do deliver theſe Votes to the Lord-Mayor and Common-council of the City of London.

Reſolved, That the Apprentices of London now in Priſon in Lambeth Houſe be diſcharged of their Impriſonment.

The General ſtill appear'd to have no Thought or Intention for the King's Service.

But to ſet up a Dutch Republick, and be himſelf a ſort of Stadtholder.

And therefore he ſhew'd no open Favour to the King's Friends.

Lord Clarendon*'s Hiſtory, Vol.* III. Fol. p. 562.

Divers who heard the General's Speech and Paper at White-hall thought there was no Diſſimulation in it, in order to cover and conceal his good Intentions for the King: For without doubt he had not to this Hour ſeem'd to them to have any Purpoſe or Thought to ſerve him, but appear'd to be really of the Opinion he expreſſed in his Paper, that it was a Work impoſſible. So that they thought he deſired nothing but that he might ſee a Common-wealth eſtabliſhed in ſuch a Model as Holland was, where he had been bred; and that himſelf might enjoy the Authority and Place which the Prince of Orange poſſeſſed in that Government. He had not, from his marching out of Scotland to this Time, had much publick Converſation with any Perſons who had ſerved the King; nor had he hitherto, or for ſome Time after, did he ſet one of the King's Friends at Liberty, though all the Priſons were full of them; but on the contrary they were every Day committed by the Rump Parliament, and with them it was Guilt enough to be ſuſpected but to wiſh for the King's Reſtauration.

This Morning the ſecluded Members enter'd the Houſe with the Acclamations of the People, ſeventy three in Number to eighteen of the Rump. Mr. Manton was called to pray with them, and they made void all done againſt them theſe eleven Years; appointed the General Commander in chief of the Forces of the three Nations, took off the Impriſonment of the committed Citizens, and liberate Sir George Booth. That they are to appoint a Council of State to ſit 'till the Parliament be called April 20. That after four or five Days they deſign to diſſolve themſelves, and to make void the Title and Claim of the Long Parliament. That the General in his Speech declares for Preſbyterian Government, not rigid, and hath writ to the Officers of the Army: They both contain Expreſſions which will not be pleaſing, but the preſent Neceſſity of Affairs cauſeth ſome to put a fair Conſtruction upon them. —— He deſires to be recalled —— and hopes this Week our noble Priſoners will be releaſed, [i. e. the Lords in Windſor-Caſtle.]

WEDNESDAY Feb. 22.

Publick Intelligence, by Order of Parliament, №. 608.

Reſolved, That Major General Brown be admitted to come and take his Place in Parliament.

Sir George Booth delivered, and his Sequeſtration taken off.

Reſolved, That Sir George Booth be diſcharged of Impriſonment in the Tower, upon giving 5000 l. Bail, to anſwer any thing that ſhall be objected againſt him, —— and that the Sequeſtration of his Eſtate be ſuſpended.

A new Parliament to meet Apr. 25.

Reſolved, That a new Parliament be ſummoned to appear upon the 25th Day of April, 1660. And that the Lords Commiſſioners for Cuſtody of the Great Seal do iſſue forth Writs for Electing Knights, &c.

It is referred to a Committee to prepare Qualifications of Members to ſit and ſerve in Parliament, and report them to the Parliament on Friday next.

Reſolved, That Mr. Faunt, Sheriff of the County of Leiceſter, be diſcharged from his Impriſonment.

The City to advance Money.

The Houſe appointed a Committee to go to the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-council of the City of London, to confer with them about the Advance of ſuch Sums of Money as they conceive neceſſary, upon Security of the Aſſeſſment of the Army, for the preſent Supply of the Army and Navy.

And to have their Damages repair'd at the Expence of the Publick.

Reſolved, That the Gates, Portcullices, and Poſts of the City of London be made up at the publick Charge of the State.

The King at this Juncture was in a Surprize and Suſpenſe between Hopes and Fears.

Not able to judge of the Event of Things.

Lord Clarendon*'s Hiſtory, Fol. Vol.* III. p. 565.

The King who thanked God for this new Dawning of Hope, and was much refreſhed with this unexpected Alteration, was yet reſtrained from any Confidence that this would produce any ſuch Revolution as would be ſufficient to do his Work; towards which he ſaw Cauſe enough to deſpair of Aſſiſtance from any foreign Power. The moſt that he could collect from the General's Letter, beſides the ſuppreſſing the preſent Tyranny of the Rump Parliament, was, that poſſibly at laſt the excluded Members might be again admitted, and it may be able to govern that Council. And even this adminiſtred no ſolid Ground of Comfort or Confidence to his Majeſty. Several of thoſe ſecluded Members had not been true Members of Parliament, but elected after the End of the War, into their Places who had been expelled for adhering to the King; and ſo they had no Title to ſit there, but what the counterfeit Great Seal had given them, without and againſt the King's Authority. It was thought theſe Men, with others who had been lawfully choſen, were willing and deſirous that the Conceſſions made by the late King at the Iſle of Wight might be accepted; which in Truth did, with the Preſervation of the Name and Life of the King, near as much eſtabliſh a Republican Government, as was ſettled after his Murder; and becauſe they would inſiſt upon that, they were with Force and Violence excluded from the Houſe; without which that horrid Villany could never have been committed. Now what could the King reaſonably expect from theſe Mens readmiſſion into the Government, but that they would reſume their old Concluſions, and preſs him to conſent to his Father's Conceſſions.

Nor to know what Love or Service the ſecluded Members had for him.

THURSDAY Feb. 23.

The Kentiſh Gentlemen diſcharg'd from Priſon.

Publick Intelligence by Order of Parliament, No. 609.

Ordered, That Sir William Man, Sir John Boys, and Mr. William Sumner now in Priſon in Dover-Caſtle, and all other Perſons who ſtand committed only for tendring an Addreſs or Declaration for a free Parliament, be diſcharged of their Impriſonment.

The Militia to be ſettled.

Ordered, That a Committee be appointed to bring in an Act for ſettling the ſeveral Militias in the reſpective Counties of England and Wales.

Mr. Scot to be no longer Secretary of State.

Ordered, That the Vote conſtituting Mr. Scot Secretary of State be repealed, and be and is hereby vacated and made void.

The City advance Money.

And get their Militia into their own Hands.

A Report made from the Committee appointed to go into the City, that they had been with the Lord Mayor and Aldermen —— and that the City was ſo forward to expreſs their Affections to the Parliament, that notwithſtanding the great Decay of Trade and Poverty of the City, they did offer to advance 60000*l.* towards the preſent Supply of the Army and Navy —— A Speech made by Alderman Fowke in the Name of the Citizens — with a Petition that the Militia of London may be forthwith ſettled in the Hands of Citizens of known Integrity and Intereſt in the City; according to a Liſt of Commiſſioners given in.

Reſolved, That the Parliament doth approve of and agree to the Liſt of the Names of Perſons preſented to be Commiſſioners of the Militia of the City of London.

Skinner's Life of Monk.

Lord Clarendon's Hiſtory Vol. III. Fol. p. 566.

Moſt of them Men of Integrity, and well affected to Kingly Government. ——Moſt of them for their Character, and good Inclinations towards the King's Service, were accounted of the very Choice and Flower of the Aſſembly. When his Majeſty heard of theſe Things by ſeveral Expreſſes, who paſſed with much Freedom, and were every Day ſent by his Friends, who had recover'd their Courage to the full, and diſcerned that theſe excluded Members were principally admitted to prepare for the Calling a new Parliament, and to be ſure to make the Diſſolution of this unqueſtionable and certain; the King recover'd his Hopes again; which were every Day increaſed by the Addreſſes of many Men, who had never before applied themſelves to him: And many ſent to him for his Majeſty's Approbation and Leave to ſerve and ſit in the next Parliament.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, p. 246.

This brought up Mr. William Morrice ſoon after Secretary of State.

The Fame of reſtoring the ſecluded Members was quickly ſpread all over the Nation; and they who were already enter'd, diſpatch'd the ſpeedy Advice thereof to their Acquaintance that were abſent in the Countries, who accordingly haſten'd their Return into the Houſe. Among the reſt, Mr. William Morrice of Devonſhire came up to London, who being ally'd to the General, and alſo particularly recommended to him for his great Learning and Prudence, by his Brother Mr. Nicholas Monk, was retain'd with him as a domeſtick Friend in his Quarters at St. James's, where he became an Inſtrument of very extraordinary Services.

Letter of Mr. Douglas to Mr. Sharp, implying, that he knew the General's great Work was to bring in the King, or rather to bring down the Fanaticks.

Woodrow's Introduction, Vol. I. p. 7.

Letter of Mr. Douglas from Edinburgh to Mr. Sharp in London, dated Feb. 23. acquainting him with the Receipt of his and the General's Letters, deſiring him to mind what he ſpoke about the Lords Crawford and Lauderdale, and promiſing to write about them to the General if need be. He adviſes Mr. Sharp to encourage the General in his great Work, for the Good of Religion, and Peace of the three Nations, through all the Difficulties he may meet with. He adds, You yourſelf know what have been my Thoughts from the Beginning of this Undertaking, which I have ſignified to himſelf, though I was ſparing to venture my Opinion in ticklish Matters, yet I looked upon him as called of God in a Streight, to put a Check to theſe who would have run down all our Intereſts.

A private Converſation between the General and his Chaplain.

Dr. Price, Chaplain to Gen. Monk; his Hiſtory of the King's Reſtauration, 8vo. p. 117.

The General went to Bed that Night, not late, but in a very good Humour. —— I came into his Chamber, and underſtood he was in Bed; ſo I was about to retire; but his Lady entertaining me with Diſcourſe, he perceived that I was in the Chamber, and ſo commanded me to his Bed-ſide; where I found him ſatisfied with what he had done, and pleaſant with me. I told him, I came (over and above my Duty of Attendance) to give him Thanks for his Day's Work.

The Chaplain for Biſhops.

The General thought the Temper of the Nation againſt them.

He anſwered me with great Courteſy of Words: No, no, this is none of your Buſineſs; you but diſſemble with me: You come now for ſomewhat elſe, and I believe I know for what. I humbly aſk'd him, what he could think I came for? Sit down then (ſays he) and I'll tell you; You come for Biſhops. —— So he detained me with ſerious Diſcourſe upon the Thing, that he thought this could never be done; for not only their Lands are ſold (ſays he) but the Temper of the Nation is againſt them. I told him, that as yet he could not ſee the Temper of the Nation; the Royal Party having judged it Prudence not to appear openly, or make any Addreſſes. But ſince he had mentioned it, I entreated him to grant me one Requeſt, which was, that he would not be drawn to engage againſt them. He pauſed a while, as his Manner was, and taking me by the Hand, Well then (ſaid he) ſo much I will promiſe you, that I will not be engaged againſt Biſhops. I thanked him, and kiſſing his Hand, added, That it was beſt to leave it to God's Providence, and the next Parliament, when we ſhould be able to diſcern the Temper of the Nation in Reference both to Church and State.

A Reform of the Life-Guard.

Philips Ch. II. p. 713.

The Life-Guard had been lately in Defection with the reſt of the Troops under Lambert, and had not been muſtered ſince the Reſtauration of the Parliament. Therefore the General thought fit at this Time to model that Troop, and to give the Command thereof to Captain Philip Howard; making Mr. Robert bert Harley his Lieutenant, and his Kinſman Mr. Henry Monk Cornet, who were ſo active, that in ſix Hours Time they diſplaced all of whom they had any Suſpicion, and filled up the Troop with honeſt and gallant Men, who immediately marched towards Suffolk, to execute the General's Orders upon Colonel Rich; but he having Notice of the marching of that Party towards him, retired privately, and the Regiment quietly received Colonel Ingoldſby to command them, who by the General's Appointment put out all ſuch Officers as were of froward and ſeditious Principles in Religion or Government.

Mercur. Polit. 608.

The Preſbyterian Miniſters look'd upon the General as their Patron and Protector.

And now the Miniſters of the Preſbyterian Perſuaſion daily frequented St. James's; they were in a hopeful Expectation that all thoſe Sects who had ſupplanted them, would with little Difficulty be put under their Feet; that themſelves alone ſhould inherit the Bleſſing (the Church of England at that Time being below their Fear) for Monk was the Defender of their Faith, and had wreſted the Sword out of the Armies (their Enemies) Hands. And indeed he was their zealous Votary, for one Lord's Day he and his Lady went and communicated at Mr. Calamy's Church; who afterward ſo far prevailed with him, that none were to preach before him, but ſuch only as he recommended.

Text, Zech. ii. 5. For I, ſaith the Lord, will be unto her a Wall of Fire round about, and will be the Glory in the midſt of her.

—— You have great Reaſon to bleſs the Lord, and to make your Boaſt of him all the Day long, as for remoter Mercies which you muſt not forget, ſo for thoſe ſignal Mercies for the Celebration whereof you are met together at this Time.

Bewailing the ſad Eſtate of the Nation.

What a Deluge of Confuſion theſe poor Nations were running into! How deep the Diſcontents of the People: How ready the Tinder of unſatisfied Spirits in all Parts of the Nation to take Fire and break out into a Flame! In what Danger the Function of a learned and orthodox Miniſtry, and the Maintenance thereof, was to be devoured! How deſperately the Ordinances were deſpiſed, the Truths of Religion rejected! What dangerous Divulſions daily more and more made from the Unity of the Church of God amongſt us! How near we were brought to the Brow of the Precipice! It is now our Comfort that we can with Thankfulneſs recount, as ſurviving ſo great Dangers, as well as with Sorrow bewail our Expoſedneſs unto them..

Acknowledging great Deliverances.

How ſhould our Hearts be enlarged, and our Mouths filled, and our Lives acted with the Praiſes of the Lord! What Memorials and Monuments, and Ebenezers ſhould we every where erect of thoſe Wonders, and terrible Things which we looked not for, which the Lord hath wrought for us in a kind of Parallel and Proportion to thoſe which he wrought for Iſrael at the Red Sea?

That then, when Force after Force, and Breach after Breach, had been made upon the ſolemn Conventions of the Nations, and the ancient Honour of the Engliſh Parliaments had been raviſhed and proſtituted to the Will and Paſſions of their own Servants, when the Licentiouſneſs of the Times made way for Men of corrupt Principles and daring Confidence, tantum non, to ſpit in the Face of Magiſtracy and Miniſtry, and all Sobriety of Judgment amongſt us; then for the Lord to ſtir up the Spirits of all the People of the Land as one Man, ſolemnly to own their native Liberties, and with united Affections to implore the Vindication of them; then for the Lord to awaken an honourable Inſtrument to aſſert the Privileges and Dignities of conculcated Parliaments, and to reſtore the many grave and eminent Members thereof to their long-interrupted Right, and to the Adminiſtration of their Truſt again: To ſtand by this famous City, who had chearfully with their Treaſures, their Swords, their Lives, their Counſels, aided and aſſerted the Publick Engagements: That then when your Hearts were ready to ſink at the demoliſhing of your City Gates, immediately they ſhould be revived with the opening of your Parliament Gates, that thoſe worthy Patriots, Lovers of Truth and Righteouſneſs might enter in; as we ought with great Love and Honour to reſpect the Inſtrument, ſo ought we to aſcribe the whole Glory unto God alone, who only doth wondrous Things, at whoſe Preſence the Mountains have flowed down and become a Plain. —— Who, if we follow on to know the Lord, if we provoke him not by murmuring againſt Inſtruments, or by deifying of them, but ſecond their Endeavours with our Prayers, and God's Mercies with our Praiſes, will perfect what he hath begun: And as he hath laid the Foundation, will ſo conſummate the whole Structure of our Settlement, that we ſhall at laſt bring forth the head Stone thereof, with ſhouting and Acclamations, crying Grace, Grace unto it.

ΚΑΚΟΥΡΓΟΙ, ſive Medicaſtri. Slight Healings of publick Hurts: Set forth in a Sermon preached in St. Paul's Cathedral before the Lord Mayor, Lord General, Aldermen, &c. of the City of London, the 28th of February 1659. being a Day of ſolemn Thankſgiving unto God for reſtoring of the ſecluded Members of Parliament to the Houſe of Commons, and for preſerving the City, as a Door of Hope thereby opened to the Fullneſs and Freedom of future Parliaments, the moſt probable Means under God, for healing the Hurts, and recovering the Health

Health of theſe three Britiſh Kingdoms. By JOHN GAUDEN. Wherein is ſomewhat added above what was preached.

Order of Common Council 29 Feb. 1659. for Thanks, and Deſire of Printing and Publiſhing.

Text. Jerem. viii. 11. For they have healed the Hurt of the Daughter of my People ſlightly, ſaying Peace, Peace, when there is no Peace.

The Delay of the Nation's Cure would expoſe us to Foreign Invaſion and Romiſh Superſtition.

P. 8. Every Day's Delay of our Cure is a chargeable, uncharitable, and painful Deluſion to the Nation, threatning ſuch a Conſumption of Spirits, and ſuch Debilitation of the Nation's Strength, and Eſtate (beſides the debaſing of its Honour and Reputation) as muſt neceſſarily at laſt betray us, with our Poſterity, with our Eſtates, Laws, Liberties, and Lives, yea with our Religion (which ought to be dearer to us, as it was to our Forefathers, than our Lives and Eſtates) to that Foreign Invaſion and Romiſh Superſtition, which is τὸ ζητούμενον, the great Deſign of the Jeſuitick Agitation, to which are ſubſervient all the Fanatick Factions.

The Preacher openly declares for Monarchy and Epiſcopacy.

P. 65. I believe the Peers and Gentry of England, lived much more freely, amply and magnificently, though Subjects under one Sovereign, than the beſt Heres or Burgomaſters do among the Low-Countrey Men or Swiſſes: And ſo did the Clergy of England under excellent Biſhops beyond what they ever will under the Rigour of others, who have their Horns, though they endure no Head: The little Finger of rigid Preſbytery hath been heavier than the Loyns of moderate Epiſcopacy.

An Epiſtle Ded. of this Sermon, to the Right Honourable Thomas Alleyn Lord Mayor, &c.

A Door of Hope opened by General Monk, who cannot deceive good Men without deſtroying himſelf.

——All our Lives, Liberties, Honours and Eſtates have for our Sins been long engaged in a Tempeſt of War, and Sea of Blood; nor have they been able to make any fair Port, or happy Haven theſe many Years, ſince they loſt their Pilot and Compaſs, their King and Parliaments, by the various Euroclydons of Mens Paſſions, Luſts and Intereſts; which have toſſed them to and fro with every Wind, and made great Waſte of all that is precious for Religion, Juſtice and Honour, beſides Eſtates and Lives of Men in the three Kingdoms, threatening all with ſpeedy and utter Shipwrack by foreign Invaſion, or an everlaſting Storm by domeſtick Confuſions, until the unexpected and undiſcerned Providence of God began to open to your and your Countries Prayers ſome Door of Hope, by the prudent, valiant and ſucceſsful Conduct of the preſent Lord General Monk, from whom all good Men expect all good Things; nor can he deceive them without deceiving and deſtroying himſelf and his Country. —— Never Age had fouler Humours, or prouder Tumours, more felt, and more painful, more hard and leſs mollified. Theſe I would help to cure, that ſo we might recover publick Health, together with our Wits and Reaſon, our Laws and Religion, our good Confidence and Government; all which we have loſt, ſince we loſt our Heads in Church and State, our full and free Parliaments, conſiſting of KING, LORDS and COMMONS, in which the Soul and Life, the Honour and Happineſs of theſe Nations are bound up.

A Letter from Chancellour Hyde to Dr. John Barwick, dated Bruſſels March 8. 1660. N. S.

Engliſh Life of Dr. John Barwick, 8vo. Append. No. xxvi.

Sir,

Letter of Mr. Chanc. Hyde at Bruſſels to Mr. Barwick at London.

He believes there is no Art of decyphering Letters well written.

In the King's Letters decyphered by Mr. Wallis, much was left in Cypher.

My laſt to you was of the 20th of the laſt Month; not having dared ſince to venture any Letter by the Poſt, upon the Alarm I had of their having gotten a Copy of my Cypher with Mr. Rumbald. I have ſince that Time received three from you, one of the 7th, another of the 9th, and another of the 13th; and the King had, to every one of thoſe, one to him of the ſame Date; and I ſee you are very apprehenſive of the ſame Miſchief by the decyphering our Letters, which you impute to Art, as you have great Reaſon to do, if your Letters and others have been decyphered, as well as Mr. Rumbalds. I confeſs to you, as I am ſure no Copy could be gotten of any of my Cyphers from hence, ſo I did not think it probable, that they could be got on your Side the Water. But I was as confident till you tell me you believe it, that the Devil himſelf cannot decypher a Letter that is well written, or find that 100 ſtands for Sir H. Vane. I have heard of many of the Pretenders to that Skill, and have ſpoken with ſome of them; but have found them all to be Mountebanks: Nor did I ever hear, that more of the King's Letters that were found at Naſeby, than thoſe which they found decypher'd, or found the Cyphers in which they were writ, were decypher'd. And I very well remember, that in the Volume they publiſhed there was much left in Cypher, which could not be underſtood; and which I believe they would have explained, if it had been in their Power: But you can eaſily ſatisfy your ſelf in this Point, if you either make a Cypher your ſelf, or write half a Score Lines out of ſeveral other Cyphers, and ſend them to the Artiſt: And you will then be convinced your ſelf, and be able to convince others; and then it will be to no purpoſe to traffick any more in thoſe Commodities. In the mean Time we muſt look out the ſafeſt Way for Conveyances: And truly I do not find, that many of mine have miſcarryed: And I have perſuaded Mr. Wright to uſe the Conveyance by my Lady Abbeſs, which brings many other Letters very exactly to me. I hope you have receiv'd long ſince the King's Letter to my Lord of Derby. You may aſſure Sir Thomas Middleton, that the Commander in Chief for South Wales, is left to be choſen by the Commiſſioners, as in moſt other Counties; and if Mr.

The beſt Conveyance of Letters thro' the Hands of the Lady Abbeſs.

February 1659-60.

The King's Hopes still in his old Friends, Lord Derby, Sir Thomas Middleton, Lahorne, &c.

Nothing done in the Buſineſs of the Church, i. e. in the Conſecration of new Biſhops.

Biſhop Prideaux.

Mr. Mounſell hath thoſe Affections, which many believe him to have; it is very probable, he will be choſen: For we have not heard from Laborne of late Years; though the King believes well of him, and would be very glad that he appeared. I hope by this Time you have ſpoken with Mr. Alleſtry; and I can add nothing to what hath been already ſo often ſaid in that Affair, but my hearty Sorrow, that nothing is yet done in it, and whoever the Objecter was, the King will not do him ſo much Credit, as to make any Alteration in his Nomination: And the Objecter muſt be of Age to remember, that he who was laſt Biſhop of Worceſter was never Biſhop of any other Place. You have indeed too much Reaſon to doubt, that he who makes thoſe Scruples, will never do any thing he ſhould do. I would be very glad you would tell me who it is.

It was the Biſhop of Oxford, who had fram'd I know not what Excuſes, and thoſe very frivolous to hinder the Work, raiſing little triſling Objections againſt the incomparable Dr. Hammond, nominated by his Majeſty to the Biſhoprick of Worceſter, as tho' it had been contrary to the Practice of all Ages, to promote any one immediately from the Degree of a Presbyter to ſo noble a See. Life of Dr. John Bartwick, Engl. 8vo. p. 241.

The Biſhop of Oxford had then an Eye upon Worceſter which he afterwards obtain'd.

The King had yet no Advice of General Monk's Intentions.

Sir Henry Cholmley of Yorkſhire.

More Enquiry after Toby Wickham.

I hope you have received the King's Letter for Redman, which was ſent with others by an Expreſs; ſo that I cannot fear the Miſcarriage. As Monk's Proceeding hath been very myſterious throughout; ſo nothing is more wonderful, than the Secrecy of all, that hath been tranſacted in Scotland; of all which Intrigue the King knows no more, than he doth of his preſent Intentions; nor hath any Expreſs been diſpatched from Scotland to the King, to give him any Account of what they demanded, or the other promiſed, therefore the King deſires you would uſe the beſt Means you can, to inform yourſelf of all the Particulars. His Majeſty is abundantly pleaſed with the Account you give him of your Friend, upon whoſe Affection he depends; as likewiſe upon his Diſcretion to proceed in that Method and Pace, he finds moſt convenient, who can beſt judge of his Nature, and how he is to be approach'd; and when it is ſeaſonable, he will ſhew him the King's Letter to him, and may aſſure him, that he cannot be diſappointed in any Expectation, he ſhall entertain of the King's Kindneſs. You receive herewith a Letter from the King to Sir Henry Cholmeley, which you will deſire his Nephew to ſend to him; and you may aſſure Mr. Cholmeley of the King's great Kindneſs to him, and of the Senſe he hath of the many Services he hath done him. It would be great Pity, that the Buſineſs of Yorkſhire ſhould be diſturbed by any Factions and Emulations amongſt themſelves, how good ſoever their Intentions are. It is long ſince I aſked you in a Letter ſomewhat concerning Toby Wickham; and if you are acquainted with him, I would be glad.' I aſked you where he is, and what he doth: I preſume Mr. Cholmeley knows all that concerns him.

The laſt Expreſs brought the King more Hopes of General Monk's coming in to the Royal Intereſt.

Tho' a new Parliament did not ſeem the right Way.

This hath been written theſe two Days: And I meant not to have made any Addition; but the Expreſs is juſt now arriv'd with the great News, who likewiſe brings your Letter of the twenty firſt, who gives the King great Hope that Monk is better diſpoſed and reſolved, than he yet avows: However, the Buſineſs is in a good Way; and he will by Degrees be brought to it; if he had not rather others ſhould have the Glory of ſuch an Action than himſelf: But methinks, this calling another Parliament is the fartheſt Way about, and I believe not eaſy to be practiſed. I pray cauſe the Incloſed to be delivered to Mr. Cholmeley. God ſend us a good Meeting, and me Opportunities to ſerve you as, Sir,

Your moſt Affectionate Servant,

Adviſed from Bury St. Edmund's, that a printed Proclamation had been ſet up in the Market-place in the Name of Charles Stuart of a dangerous Conſequence: And that at Newmarket the rude Multitude made Bonfires, and threatned to beat the Soldiers out of Town, and to declare for Charles; but more Forces coming to them, they quenched both their Bonfires and their Fury.

Col. Overton at Hull in a pannick Fear of the King's Return.

He himſelf a fifth Monarchy Man.

Colonel Overton at Hull fell into his Fits of Mutiny and Diſtraction; who being a zealous Bigot of the Fifth Monarchy, and confident of the Strength of the Place had diſperſed ſeveral Copies of a ſeditious Letter among the Officers and Regiments in the North [that having received Intimation from private Hands, that the abandoned Intereſt of Charles Stuart doth ſeem ſo to ſhine in the Face of publick Tranſactions, that many Jealouſies and Diſſatisfactions were created amongſt their Brethren in the Army, who remained faithful to the true Cauſe; God had determined with Victory againſt all monarchical Intereſts. —Which publick Cauſe they were reſolved to aſſert and maintain, as the Fruits of their Blood,

General Monk was not ſo much concerned about the Danger of the Man, as the Quality of the Place he held, and therefore acquainted the Council of State with theſe Practices and Letters; who together with the General ſent down Colonel Alured and Major Smith with their Letters, commanding him upon the Receipt thereof, to attend them forthwith at London, and there to give them an Account of his Fears and Jealouſies. Overton found himſelf ſurpriſed much ſooner than he expected, ſo that he was enforced to ſubmit and deliver up the Garriſon; a Place of impregnable Defence and Strength — which the General committed to Colonel Fairfax.

A Meſſage to the preſent Rulers of England, whether Committee of Safety, Council of Officers, or others, delivered unto them by an Ambaſſadour from the only right Heir of the Government, whoſe Right alone it is to rule, and by ſpecial Authority from him that is ſent unto them.

To keep out the King would atone for the Murder of his royal Father.

To take away Tythes, and put down the Men called Miniſters.

My Maſter is a high and mighty and powerful Prince, and very honourable. Fear and Subjection belongs to him alone, &c. Though ſome of you preſent Rulers be looked upon as great Traitors and Tyrants (in cutting off the King's Head, and extirpating Epiſcopacy) the Lord doth not account as Men. Theſe Things muſt needs have come to paſs for the Furtherance of the Kingdom of Jeſus Chriſt, and if you were but faithful to what the Lord requires of you, what you have done to them in the Murther aforeſaid, ſhould not be reckoned Account againſt you, neither by God nor good Men. Let all forced Maintenance to Miniſters, as Tythes, be ſpeedily taken away, and let juſt Men, and righteous Men, and meek Men have the Power and Judgment committed to them to determine Things between Man and Man. Down with all that judge for Rewards, and away with all hireling Rulers that execute the Law for Money: And as for the Men called Miniſters, the Way of their ſetting up, ſending forth, and Maintenance are the greateſt Oppreſſion in the Nation, they are the woful Cauſe of the Nation's groaning, their Iniquities cry for Vengeance, for they are full, they are full, and God's eternal Vengeance is their next Reward from the eternal God, &c.

London, printed for Livewell Chapman, 1659. 4to. p. 32.

An Indictment againſt Tythes: Or Tythes no Wages for Goſpel Miniſters. Wherein is declared, 1. The Time when Tythes were firſt given in England.

2. By whom, and by whoſe Authority and Power Tythes were firſt given, and after continued in England. 4. Miniſters pretending a threefold Right to Tythes. 1. By Donation: 2. By the Laws of the Nation: and 3. By the Law of God, examined and confuted by John Oſborn, a Lover of the Truth as it is in Jeſus. To which are added certain Reaſons taken out of Dr. Burgeſs his Caſe, concerning the Buying of Biſhops Lands, which are as full and directly againſt Tythes, as to what he applied them. Likewiſe a Query to William Prynne. By John Canne. —— With Epiſtle to the Reader, concluding, whatſoever Encouragement is given to the Continuance of Tythes, yet this we know, that they who cry out loudeſt for them are (for the moſt Part) for a ſingle Perſon, or for the Intereſt of Charles Stuart, I ſay more a great deal for a King, than a free Common-wealth.

A concluding Argument againſt Tythes, that thoſe who were for them, were likewiſe for the King.

A ſober Defence of Tythes, and the Danger in aboliſhing of them.

A Caution againſt Sacrilege: Or ſundry Queries concerning Tythes. Wherein is held forth, 1. The Propriety and Title that Miniſters have to them. 2. The Miſchiefs that would enſue, if Tythes were brought into a common Treaſury, and Miniſters reduced to ſtipends. 3. The Danger of gratifying the Petitioners againſt Tythes, and all impoſed Maintenance. And, 4. Something of the Spirit and End of their Actings. Collected and compoſed by one that hath no Propriety in Tythes, and humbly tender'd to this preſent Parliament.

Mr. Toland's Account of a Book of the Pedigree of Gen. Monk.

I have now before me (ſaith Mr. Toland) a Pamphlet printed in the very Year of this Tranſaction, 1659. for W. Godbid, in the Street called Little-Britain: It is intituled, The Pedigree and Descent of his Excellency General George Monk, ſetting forth how he is deſcended from King Edward III. by a Branch and Slip of the white Roſe, the Houſe of York, and likewiſe his Extraction

The Art of Reſtoring, London, 1714. 8^vo^. p. 38.

Extraction from Richard King of the Romans, &c. But this pompous Title (ſaith he) comes to no more in the End, than that Monk was deſcended from the ſecond Daughter of Arthur Plantagenet, who was himſelf no more than the natural Son of Edward IV. by his Concubine the Lady Elizabeth Lucy. As this Deſcent then gave the General no manner of Title in the World; ſo the Preface of the Pamphlet, and the concluding Words of the ſame have fully convinced me, that the Author intended no more than a Compliment to him by the Way, while his real Deſign was to prove the Title of the STUARTS, whom he perceived the other was going about to reſtore.

Though General Monk had refuſed the Gift of the Crown Lands, yet ſome of thoſe who had been concerned in the Murder of the late King, and others who had cut themſelves large Thongs out of the Royal Demeſns, had the Confidence to tamper with him about aſſuming the Government in his own Perſon: And amongſt the reſt Sir Arthur Haſlerig (to preclude the Reſtauration of the King) offered him one hundred thouſand Hands that ſhould ſubſcribe to his Title. —— But the General, who was immoveable in his ſecret Reſolution and Allegiance for reſtoring the King, abhorred the Thoughts of this Propoſal, and gave them ſo cloſe and poſitive an Anſwer, as he was reſolv'd ſhould put an End to all further Addreſſes of that Nature.

The London Miniſters Exhortation to their People.

London, printed for Sam. Gellibrand, 1660. 4to.

A ſeaſonable Exhortation of ſundry Miniſters in London to the People of their reſpective Congregations, upon Occaſion of the late ſad Confuſions, and the Lord's opening a Door of Hope at this Time.

—— Repreſenting I. The Fears of the Return of Popery. II. The diſtracted Eſtate of Religion amongſt us. III. Other Symptoms of God's Wrath hanging over our Heads.

Againſt Popery which however odious was now ready to break in upon them.

As to the firſt, we had verily Thought, that Popery had render'd itſelf juſtly odious by its own Abominations in Doctrine and Worſhip, as alſo by its bloody Tyranny lately revived in the Slaughters of Ireland, and ſince that of Piedmont and Poland; and that in theſe Days of Light and Knowledge, to imagine the Poſſibility of a Return of a ſecond Deluge of Antichriſtianiſm over the Proteſtant Churches, was a groundleſs Suppoſition and to fear where no fear was. But alas — it is grown into a near and apparent Probability, or a Miſchief at hand ready to break in upon us. —— We deſire you to conſider, I. The Union of Foreign Popiſh Powers. —— II. The vaſt Numbers of Popiſh Emiſſaries, Prieſts, and Jeſuits, that ſwarm amongſt us. —— III. The printing and vending ſo many Thouſands of Popiſh Books every Year in the Engliſh Tongue. —— IV. The whole Body almoſt of Popery publiſhed by Sectaries, eſpecially by Quakers. —— V. Jeſuitical Deſigns and Models of reducing England to Rome's Obedience, exactly followed and promoted by many deluded Proteſtants. —— VI. The Toleration of Popery publickly pleaded for in Print, and by ſome of Power and Intereſt endeavoured. —— Subſcribed by Edward Reynolds, Miniſter of Lawrence Jewry, Arthur Jackſon, Miniſter of Faiths under Pauls, and thirty nine others.

The Dangers of it very imminent for many Reaſons.

Reſolved, That General Edward Montague be and is hereby conſtituted and appointed one of the Commiſſioners of the Admiralty —— and that no Perſons go as Chaplains in any of the Ships but Miniſters, or ſuch as ſhall be approved of by the Generals at Sea, &c.

Twenty Sail of Men of War to put to Sea under General Mountague.

Publick Intelligence, by Order of Parliament, 4to. No. 610.

Whitehall, March 3. The Parliament having ordered General Mountague to go forthwith, and take Charge of the Navy. There are in the River about twenty Sail of gallant Men of War ready, which will ſuddenly put forth to Sea, and more are to follow, to have an Eye upon the Coaſt.

General Monk invited and entertain'd by ſeveral Companies in London.

As the City in general have manifeſted a very high Senſe of the Merits of his Excellency the Lord General Monk, ſo the Companies alſo of the City in a particular Manner. On Thurſday the Company of Mercers ſent to invite his Excellency and his Officers to dine with them on Tueſday next; which Invitation he was pleaſed to accept. The like Invitation came alſo this Week from the Company of Clothworkers, to dine at their Hall on Thurſday next, and he declared his Acceptance, being deſirous upon all Occaſions to manifeſt how great a Value he hath of the Citizens of that famous City, and of their Affections.

Debates upon reſtoring the Lords to ſit in Parliament.

Not yet to be done.

Philip's Ch. II. at the End of Baker's Chron. Fol. p. 715.

Many private Overtures were made to the General by ſome of the Peers that ſate in the Lord's Houſe a little before the Death of the late King, to be admitted to ſit; but he thought it inconvenient and hazardous, in regard the Army was already ſo jealous upon the Sitting of the ſecluded Members, that he had Difficulty enough to moderate them. Yet at the Requeſt of the Earl of he ſent Commiſſary Clarges to confer with him. The Earl told him, the Sitting of the Lords would be very advantageous to the Good of the Kingdom, and to the Soldiers in particular; for that they would join in an Act for the Confirmation of their Eſtates: And if it ſhould be thought convenient for the Good of the Kingdom to receive the King, he could not upon any Conditions with ſo much Safety be reſtored, as ſuch as ſhould be made by Act of Parliament. To this Clarges reply'd, that the General was very well ſatisfy'd, that the Parliament was diſſolved by the Death of the late King; and that the preſent Sitting of the Members was a Conſtitution rather taken up upon Neceſſity than Right, which was but to make Way for another Parliament; that one great Argument for the Admiſſion of the ſecluded Members was their Conſent to a quick Diſſolution; which could not be, if the Lords ſhould ſit: For they would then think themſelves inveſted in that Perpetuity which ſome fancy is of right in this Parliament ſtill. But that which was moſt convincing was, that the Army was not yet in Temper for it.

Becauſe among other Difficulties.

Better defer it to next Parliament.

The Army was not yet in Temper for it.

Woodrow's Introduction to the Hiſtory of Scotland, Vol. I. p. 9.

A Letter of Mr. Sharp, Agent for the Preſbyterian Miniſters of Scotland, to the reverend Mr. John Smith at Edinburgh, dated March 4, wherein he tells him, That the Houſe have voted the Confeſſion of the Aſſembly to be the Doctrine of the Church of England, except the two Chapters about Church Diſcipline and Cenſures, which are remitted to a Committee, where 'tis thought they will ſleep 'till the Parliament ſit. They have appointed Dr. Owen to be before them on Thurſday, in order, as 'tis thought, to reſtore his Deanery to Dr. Reynolds. This Day the Houſe have releaſed our old Scotch Priſoners, who have given Security to the Council for their good Behaviour, and their Eſtates will ſoon be reſtored: That Ireland is ſecured, and all Quakers, Anabaptiſts, and Sectaries baniſhed: That ſome Judges are appointed for Scotland, but the Parliament will not meddle with them. He adds, he is in a Peck of Troubles to get the City Miniſters to ſet about their Buſineſs. That this Day a large Meeting named four of the faſteſt and honeſteſt to ſit on Monday, and he, Mr. Sharp, with them, and afterwards to meet when he ſees fit. He names five, whom he calls warping Brethren, and no Friends to the Covenant Intereſt, whom a Member of the Houſe of Commons hath undertaken for, but (ſays he) they muſt not be truſted. He adds, I tell what your Mind is as to the civil Buſineſs, and honeſt People here, who are but few, either in the City or Houſe, are of one Heart with you. The great Fear is, that the King will come in, and that with him moderate Epiſcopacy at the leaſt will take Place here. The good Party are doing what they can to keep the Covenant Intereſt on Foot, but I fear, there will be much ado to have it ſo. They dare not preſs the voting for Preſbyterian Government, leſt it bar them from being elected next Parliament. Our Friends in the City think it were not amiſs, that from the Nation of Scotland were publiſhed a Declaration; but I think it not yet ſeaſonable. It were good you have your Thoughts upon it in Time, and the Intent would be to guard againſt Sectaries upon the one Hand, and Cavaliers upon the other. For God's Sake, take Care that the People keep themſelves quiet, and wait 'till the Lord gives a fit Opportunity. Matters here are in a very ticklish diſcompoſed Condition. They ſay Ireland hath ſent for the King, but I do not believe it.

Terribly afraid of the King's coming in, and bringing moderate Epiſcopacy with him.

Againſt the Covenant Intereſt.

Afraid leſt Ireland ſhould ſend for the King.

Publick Confeſſion of Faith to be printed and examined.

Publick Intelligence, by Order of Parliament, N°.610.

An Act declaring the publick Confeſſion of Faith of the Church of England, was read the firſt, ſecond, and third Time, and paſſed. Ordered, That it be forthwith printed and publiſhed.

Ordered, That it be referred to Dr. Reynolds, Mr. Calamy, and Mr. Manton, to examine the ſame at the Preſs, and alſo to examine the Scriptures for Proof of every Article, and inſert the ſame in the Margin of the Book.

Ordered,

Several Sheriffs turned out, and new ones to be approved by Parliament.

Ordered, That John Blackmore be diſcharged from being Sheriff of the County of Devon. —— That the Sheriff for the County of Suſſex be diſcharged. —— That Edmund Warring be diſcharged from being Sheriff of Shropſhire. ——That Mr. Crowcher be diſcharged from being Sheriff of Hampſhire. ——And that the Members of Parliament do bring in the Names of Sheriffs for the Approbation of Parliament.

Order for a Proclamation againſt Popery.

Ordered, That a Proclamation do iſſue forth for putting all the Laws and Statutes againſt Popiſh Recuſants, Prieſts, and Jeſuits in ſpeedy and effectual Execution, —— with the Sum of twenty Pounds to be given by every Sheriff to ſuch Perſon or Perſons as ſhall diſcover any Popiſh Prieſt or Jeſuit upon Conviction.

Solemn League and Covenant to be ſet up in Churches, and in the Parliament Houſe.

Ordered, That the Solemn League and Covenant be printed and publiſhed, and ſet up, and forthwith read in every Church, and alſo once every Year, according to former Order of Parliament, and that the ſaid Solemn League and Covenant be alſo ſet up in this Houſe.

A Reflection made upon it.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, 8vo, p. 253.

The Solemn League and Covenant (the Engine or Sacrament of ſo many Miſchiefs) hung upon the Wall of their Houſe, as the Palladium of the Place, where moſt of them preſent might read their own Names ſubſcribed to it; 'till a ſucceeding Parliament two Years after, went backward, and covered the Shame of their Predeceſſors, by a Vote of their Houſe, commanding it to be taken down, and diſſolved the Charm it had put upon the Nation, by burning the Witch.

TUESDAY Mar. 6.

Letter to Scotland boaſting of the Honour done to the ſolemn League and Covenant.

Woodrow's Hiſtory of the Church of Scotland, Vol. I. Introduction, p. 10.

A Letter of Mr. Sharp, Agent for the Kirk of Scotland in Weſtminſter, to Mr. Douglas, a chief Preſbyterian Miniſter in Edinburgh, dated March 6, 1660.

—— The Houſe Yeſterday in their Preface to the Act owning the Confeſſion of Faith, as drawn up by the Aſſembly of Divines, as the Doctrine of the Church of England, did mention the Covenant as one of the Grounds upon which they were induced to make ſuch an Ordinance. Whereupon the Motion was ſtated that the Solemn League and Covenant ſhould be revived; and an Order made for printing it, and ſetting it up in all the Churches of England and Wales, and the Doors of the Parliament Houſe: To which none in the Houſe offered to make any Contradiction. And this Day the League and Covenant on great Lombard Paper is to be ſold in all the Shops of London. This hath given a great Alarm to the Sectarian Party, who center in Lambert, who refuſing to give Security for keeping the Peace, was Yeſternight laid in the Tower, and they are proceeding againſt others of that Party. —— Wariſtoun hath been with me; his Drift is, that I may deal with the General, that he may have a perſonal Protection, Payment of his Debts, or enjoy his Places at leaſt, I have declined to meddle in it.

The Sectaries had an Eye to Lambert committed to the Tower.

Laird Wariſtoun is tampering with General Monk for Protection and other Advantages.

In the Poſtſcript to this Letter he tells Mr. Douglas, that Mr. Calamy, Mr. Aſh, and Mr. Taylor, are honeſt, and after his own Heart. They ſay, I am uſeful to them, ſure they put me to Toil enough in ſpeaking to Parliament Members; the General, and his Officers, honeſt Men, are at a Stand what to think or do. If this Parliament riſe, and another ſit, they conclude we can have no Security for Religion or Liberty: The following will bring in the King immediately. This cannot ſit longer, unleſs a Houſe of Lords be called, and this the Army will not give Way to. Moſt of the Members have no Inclination to ſit longer. This Claſhing of Parties is like to caſt all in Confuſion, and the Cavaliers and Sectaries are waiting their Opportunity. All that wiſh well to Religion apprehend, that if this Parliament do not continue to ſit, the King muſt come in without Terms, and therefore do judge it beſt to call him in Time. I never ſaw England in ſuch a Poſture. God knoweth how to interpoſe. The Papiſt and Sectary will join Iſſue expecting Toleration, and the honeſt Party are like to be ſwallowed up.

Still afraid that a new Parliament will bring in the King.

And that without Terms, to the ſwallowing up of the honeſt Party, i. e. The Preſbyterians.

Mr. Douglas in his Anſwer to Mr. Sharp, March 13, tells him, that he is refreſhed with the reviving the League and Covenant, &c.

Publick Intelligence, by Order of Parliament, 4to.

Reſolved, That Matthew Heale, Eſq; be Sheriff for the County of Devon, and William Oakeley, Eſq; for the County of Salop.

The Council of State committed Lambert to the Tower, and the Houſe approve of it.

The Petition of John Lambert, Major General, was read. Reſolved, That the Parliament doth approve of what the Council of State have done in committing of Colonel John Lambert to the Tower. —— That Sir Arthur Haſlerig do attend the Parliament to morrow Morning. —— That the Council of State be enjoined to take ſpecial Care of the Safety and Peace of the Nation, and to proceed vigorouſly in ſecuring ſuch Perſons, as they ſhall think dangerous to the Peace and Safety of the Nation.

Very jealous of the Peace and Safety of the Nation.

Mr. Speaker acquaints the Parliament, that divers Perſons with Store of Arms are apprehended, and at the Door.

Reſolved, That the Serjeant do detain the Perſons taken with Arms, until the Council of State do ſit, and that no body be permitted to ſpeak with them.

Earl of Bedford made Cuſtos Rotulorum.

Reſolved, That the Earl of Bedford be and is hereby conſtituted Cuſtos Rotulorum for Bedfordſhire in the Room of John Okey.

Gumble's Life of General Monk; p. 271.

Many were the Meetings of diſcontented Perſons, who now repreſented to themſelves the Danger of this Change, and therefore by ſome Attempt reſolved to diſappoint the General's Purpoſes: And Major General Lambert being in the Tower they fix upon him as a Perſon whom they chuſe their Head; and hope that the Noiſe of the King's Return, whom now the People began impatiently to expect, would divide the Army, and make all the old Soldiers revolt from General Monk, and to that end they endeavour to obtain his Deliverance by Eſcape, which was furthered by ſome inferiour Officers of the Companies quartered in the Tower.

Dr. Price's Hiſtory of the Reſtauration, 8vo. p. 31.

Swinton and Oſborn and others tacked about timely for Quakers, as that which was moſt likely to be the thriving Sect; the Principles of it being ſuch, that they put no Rules to the Conſcience, but only breathed the Air, and lived in the Region of Enthuſiaſm. It was a Trojan Horſe of all Hereſies, every Man might be of this comprehenſive Religion with a Salvo to his own, a Jew and a Jeſuit might ſtand with his Hat on his Head, for the Light within him, and all practical Villanies might have come in under this Shelter.

A Number of Quakers in Lambert's Army.

I told the General, that if Things did continue in this State much longer, it would be found that the Quaker would be as great a Goad in the Sides of our new Sects, as ever the old Puritan was to the Church of England. For about this Time [Octob. 1659.] came ſeveral Quakers from England, who were cunning Seminaries of this new Faith, and ſome of them came to our Head Quarters, and taught Doctrines not to be believ'd by Soldiers, of the Unlawfulneſs of ſuch a bloody Calling. —— Afterwards there was a Number of them in Lambert's Army in Newcaſtle, as it was related to us: Where they bargained for, and ſold Horſes, to be paid, when ſuch or ſuch a Steeple-Houſe (in our Language a Church) was pulled down.

WEDNESDAY Mar. 7.

Court of Tryers for Approbation of Miniſters, to fill all Churches with Preſbyterian Teachers.

Publick Intelligence, by Order of Parliament, 4to.

The Houſe had under Conſideration the Bill for Approbation of Miniſters, and agreed upon ſeveral Amendments to be made thereunto, and likewiſe referred it to a Committee to bring in a Clauſe to be inſerted in the ſaid Bill, to authorize and impower the Approvers to delegate other Perſons to approve Miniſters in ſeveral Places of theſe Nations remote from London, for eaſe of the Charge and Trouble of Miniſters in making long Journeys, and in tedious Attendance to be approved, and other Clauſes upon the Debate of the Houſe.

The Complaints and Informations againſt Colonel Rich and Sir Arthur Haſlerig, were referred back to the Council of State, to examine and report to the Parliament.

Reſolved, That the Parliament do proceed only with Matters of Religion, the Militia, the Qualifications and the Writs.

Publick Advice given of the wandring State of Charles Stuart.

Ib. Publick Intelligence, 4to.

From Dover it hath been certified, That Charles Stuart having left Bruſſels, was about a Week paſt at Calais, but whither he went afterward is unknown. Reports are various, ſome ſaying that he went to ſome Part of Germany, others that he went to Breda, to be under the Protection of his Siſter the Princeſs of Orange, but nothing there is of Certainty.

Account given of General Mountague; inclined to ſerve the King.

Lord Clarendon's Hiſt. Fol. Vol. III. p. 572.

When Colonel Edward Mountague, who had lain privately in his own Houſe under a Cloud and Jealouſy of being inclined too much to the King, was called by the Parliament to be a joint Admiral of the Fleet with General Monk; he ſent privately over to the King for his Approbation, before he would accept the Charge, which being ſpeedily ſent to him, he came to London, and enter'd into that joint Command with the General; and immediately applied himſelf to put the Fleet into ſo good Order, that he might comfortably ſerve in it. No Man betook himſelf to his Majeſty's Service with more Generoſity than this Gentleman. —— There accompanied him at that Time Edward Mountague, the eldeſt Son of the Lord Mountague of Boughton, and his near Kinſman, with whom he had a particular Friendſhip. This Gentleman was not unknown to the King, and very well known to the Chancellour, to have good Affections and Reſolutions, and one who by the Correſpondence that was between them, he knew, had undertaken that unpleaſant Voyage [to the Sound] only to diſpoſe his Couſin to lay hold of the firſt Opportunity to ſerve his Majeſty. —— His reſuming the Command of the Fleet, together with the other good Symptoms in the State, raiſed his Majeſty's Hopes and Expectation higher than ever, if it had not been an unpleaſant Allay, that in ſo great an Alteration, and Application of many who had been eminently averſe from his Majeſty; of the General, who only could put an end to all his Doubts, there was altum ſilentium; no Perſons truſted by his Majeſty could approach him, nor was any Word known to fall from him that could encourage them to go to him, though they ſtill preſumed that he meant well.

Encouraged by his Kinſman Edward Mountague, Son of the Lord Mountague of Boughton.

General Monk would not yet ſay a Word of his Intentions to reſtore his Majeſty.

Chancellour Hyde upon the View of Things working towards a Reſtoration, ſent over Dr. George Morley, with Letters from the King and himſelf to the leading Men.

Some of the Delinquents in England ſent over their Preſents and Offerings to the King, to purchaſe their Pardon and Peace.

Bp. Burnet's Hiſtory of his own Times, Fol. p. 88.

Chancellour Hyde was all this while very buſy: He ſent over Dr. Morley, who talked much with the Preſbyterians of Moderation in general, but would enter into no Particulars: Only he took Care to let them know he was a Calviniſt; and they had the beſt Opinion of ſuch of the Church of England as were of that Perſuaſion. Hyde wrote in the King's Name to all the leading Men, and got the King to write a great many Letters in a very obliging Manner. Some that had been faulty ſent over conſiderable Preſents, with Aſſurances they would redeem all that was paſt with their Zeal for the Future. Theſe were all accepted ed of, their Money alſo was very welcome, for the King needed Money, when his Matters were on that Criſis, and he had ſo many Tools at Work. The Management of all this was ſo entirely the Chancellour's ſingle Performance, that there was ſcarce any other that had ſo much as a Share in it with him. He kept a Regiſter of all the King's Promiſes and of his own; and did all that lay in his Power afterwards to get them all to be performed. He was alſo all that while giving the King many wiſe and good Advices. But he did it too much with the Air of a Governour or of a Lawyer. Yet then the King was wholly in his Hands.

The Chancellour active and wiſe in his Services and Advices to the King.

General Monk to keep all Things and People quiet, protects the Quakers in their peaceable Meetings.

About this Time the Soldiers under General Monk's Command were rude and troubleſome at Friends Meetings in many Places; whereof Complaint being made to him, he gave forth the following Order, which did ſomewhat reſtrain them.

A raſcally Piece againſt the King to expoſe him to the Hatred of his People.

Mr. A. Wood has obſerved, there is no Name to this Letter (full of Raſcalities againſt King Charles II. and his Court) but the general Report was then, that it was written by Marchimont Needham (formerly Writer of the Mercurius Britannicus on the King's Side, beginning in October 1643. and carried on to the End of 1646. and then of the Mercurius Politicus on the Commonwealth Side, beginning from the 9th of June 1649. and carried on to the Middle of April 1660.) and convey'd to the Printer or Bookſeller, by that notorious Schiſmatick, and grand Zealot for the Good old Cauſe, Praiſe God Barebone: It was anſwered about a Week after in another Thing in 4to, intituled, The late News or Meſſage from Bruſſels unmaſked; but by whom it was written I know not.

The General for the Preſbyterian Miniſters. The Intereſt of the other Sectaries declining; and that of moderate Epiſcopacy riſing.

Woodrow's Introduction to the Hiſtory of the Church of Scotland, p. 6.

A Letter of Mr. Sharp the Preſbyterian Agent at Weſtminſter for the Kirk of Scotland, to Mr. Douglas at Edinburgh, dated March 10. wherein he tells him, That the General hath much countenanced Preſbyterian Miniſters, and ſtill profeſſeth to be for that Way: That the Sectarian Intereſt is on the wav'ring Hand, and moderate Epiſcopacy ſetting up its Head: That upon Thurſday our noble Priſoners were liberate upon Security to keep the Peace, and not to return to Scotland, without Leave of Council or Parliament: That they are highly eſteemed by the Engliſh. He wiſheth a Commiſſion were immediately ſent up from Scotland to Crawford and Lauderdale, to act in Capacity of Commiſſioners for the Kingdom of Scotland. The Parliament are this Night upon ſettling the Militia of the City and Nation, with this Proviſo, that all in it ſhall own the Cauſe of the Parliament againſt the late King to be juſt. He adds, that ſeveral Parliament Men and the Lord Mancheſter think he hath Privacy with the General, and ſend him (Mr. Sharp) to him on all Occaſions, and the General by him communicates his Mind to his Friends in the City, and he is employed in all that relates to Religion, ſo that he hath ſcarce any Time to write: That he had met with Reports once and again, that you Mr. Douglas, Hutchinſon, Dickinſon, Wood, and himſelf, ſhould have ſaid, We could wiſh to be ſettled in a Commonwealth Way, and were againſt the King's coming in on any Terms. Whereupon he went to the Earl of Mancheſter, Lord Wharton, and ſeveral Parliament Men, by whom it was buzzed by Colonel Wetham and Gumble, and flatly contradicted it as a Slander, declaring that nothing would ſatiſfy Scotland but the King on Covenant Terms, and that it was contrary to their Mind he ſhould be brought in on Cavalier Terms. That he finding many poſſeſſed with the Belief, that the King while in Scotland broke all Terms, and the Engagements he was under by Treaty, and was vicious and unclean, and a Scorner of Ordinances, and a Diſcountenancer of Miniſters, had detected thoſe great Lies and malicious Forgeries; and declared, he could not ſay the King broke to us, and that the honeſt Party were well ſatisfy'd with him, that by Covenant and Treaty, he engaged by all lawful and peaceable Ways to endeavour Uniformity in Doctrine, Diſcipline, &c. in the three Nations. The Difficulties (adds he) from the Army are overcome; the Militia is ſo ſettled, that General Monk hath the abſolute Power of the Army; and the Agitators and Army cannot now ſtop the Deſign on Foot. There is no ſatiſfying the People without the King; a Treaty with him will ſoon be ſet on Foot. The General and leading Men in the Houſe are now ſettled in a mutual Confidence. The great Thing now is, Whether this Houſe ſhall continue or diſſolve? If they continue, they loſe their Reputation, and will not be able to act for a Settlement; if they diſſolve, they fear the next Parliament will bring in the King, without Security to Religion and the publick Cauſe. But (adds he) I apprehend they muſt diſſolve themſelves, and ſet that on Foot

The Cauſe of the Parliament againſt the late King to be owned juſt.

The Scots Preſbyterians ſuſpected to be for a Commonwealth. Upon which, Aſſurance is given by Mr Sharp, that they are for the King upon Covenant Terms.

Not on Cavalier Terms.

The King in Scotland did not break his Faith and Engagements with them.

There is now no ſatisfying the People without the King.

The next Parliament will bring in the King, if this do not.

before the ſitting of the next Parliament, which will ſecure the honeſt Intereſt: However they are reſolved on that which will upon the Matter ſettle Preſbyterian Government.

TUESDAY Mar. 13.

The Parliament act as Preſbyterian.

Dr. Reynolds in room of Dr. Owen, Dean of Chriſt Church.

Woodrow's Hiſtory of the Church of Scotland, Vol I. Introduction, p. 12.

A Letter of Mr. Sharp, Miniſter and Agent for the Kirk of Scotland at Weſtminſter, to Mr. Douglas, one of the chief Preſbyters in Edinburgh, dated March 13, 1660. ——— The Parliament have appointed a Committee for Approbation and Ordination of Miniſters; and therein upon the Matter have approven the Directory and Form of Church Government. This Day Dr. Owen was outed of his Deanery of Chriſt Church, Oxon. and Dr. Reynolds put in his Room.

Yet the General had ſeen too much of that Spirit in Scotland.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, 8vo. p. 259.

However he complyed much with the Preſbyterian Clergy; and would ſuffer none to preach before him but ſuch as Mr. Calamy would pleaſe to ſend him.

The ſhort Seſſion of the ſecluded Members had already made a very conſiderable Alteration in the late governing Intereſts, ſo that now the Preſbyterian Party began to come aloft. The General was not now to be taught the Temper and Principles of the Preſbyterians, having ſeen enough of their Way in thoſe Petulances between the Reſolutioner and Remonſtrator in Scotland, during his long Command among them; and therefore had taken a juſt Length how far to intruſt or imploy them. He very well knew their Power and Intereſt in the City of London, and that there were alſo very many Perſons among them, who out of Hatred to the late Tyrannies, and Affection to the King, did very paſſionately deſire his Reſtauration, as the beſt Remedy for ſaving their Country, and were therefore very likely to co-operate with him towards his own Ends. And obſerving how abſolutely this People were governed by their Clergy, he had received ſeveral Viſits from the Chief of them, and frequently heard ſome of them preach, eſpecially Mr. Calamy the Superintendant of them, with whom he ſo far comply'd, as to entertain only ſuch Chaplains to preach before him every Sunday in the Chapel at St. James's, as Mr. Calamy ſhould pleaſe to ſend him, who was hourly contriving to poſſeſs the Ears of the General with the continual Air and Breath of Preſbyterianiſm, and to plant it in his Family, to the further Advantage and Reputation of the Party.

His Chaplain Mr Price had contriv'd to introduce Dr. Pearſon, a known Royaliſt, to give him a Sermon; but the General would not ſuffer it.

Dr Price's Hiſtory of the Reſtauration, 8vo. p. 121.

But his domeſtick Chaplain, Dr. Price, who knew nothing of this Intrigue, being deſirous to introduce ſome of the principal Clergy of the Church of England to the Favour and Eſtimation of the General, had one Sunday deſired Dr. Pearſon (afterwards Lord Biſhop of Cheſter) to preach before him, who was accordingly there preſent. In the Interim arrived two Miniſters ſent from the Head of their Order, to perform the Service, but in the bad Way by the Park Wall, their Coach happen'd to make ſo unlucky a Trip, that they all came together into the Dirt, ſo that neither of them were in any Condition for a Pulpit, 'till Dr. Price had ſet them to Rights again in his Chamber, intreating one of them to preach that Sunday, and the other on the next. The General being informed what Perſons were there ready to preach, would by no Means accept Dr. Pearſon, though he very well underſtood the Value of the Man, and was perſuaded to it by his domeſtick Confident Mr. Morrice, but accepted of the Preſbyterian Preachers. So careful he was even in this little Inſtance, not to diſoblige the Party, 'till he had fully done his Buſineſs with them.

The Principality of Orange delivered up to the French, much to the Hurt of the Proteſtant Intereſt.

Mercur.Polit. 4to. No. 614.

Adviſed from Marſeilles, March 23, 1660. That the Governour of Orange (from whence the Prince of Orange derives his Title) delivered up the Place Yeſterday to the King of France, having received two hundred thouſand Livres Reward, under the Pretence of Damages. How the Buſineſs will be reſented in Holland we cannot here imagine; but the Proteſtants in all theſe Parts are highly troubled at it, and good Reaſon they have, for it was their only Place of Refuge. ——— The Count of Dona the Governour is to hold the Place under the King, who intends to retain the Poſſeſſion, 'till the young Prince of Orange ſhall come to Age.

Returning to the old Conſtitution of King, Lords and Commons.

The Preſbyterian Miniſters convince General Monk, that a Commonwealth is impracticable.

And that there is a Neceſſity of a new Parliament.

Mr. Sharp in the aforementioned Letter to Mr. Douglas, dated this 13th of March, had told him, that the Houſe had further Ordered, That none ſuffer any more for the Sake of the Engagement, and voted it to be utterly void henceforth. That by the above-named Clauſe in the Militia Act, ordering all to declare the Parliament's Juſtice in their War againſt the King, they have guarded againſt the Cavaliers; and by their adding, that Magiſtracy and Miniſtry are Ordinances of God, they guard againſt Sectaries and Levellers. Laſt Sunday (ſays he) I went to Mr. Calamy's Church, with our noble Priſoners, where Mr. Calamy and Taylor gave publick Thanks for their Liberation. ——— He adds, the Difficulties about ſitting or not ſitting if this Houſe continue: But ſit or not, they will declare for King, Lords, and Commons. ——— Sunday laſt the General ſent his Coach for Mr. Calamy, Mr. Aſhe and me, and we had a long Converſation with him in private, and convinced him a Common-wealth was impracticable, and to our Senſe beat him off that Sconce he hath hitherto maintained; and came from him as being ſatisfied of the Neceſſity of diſſolving this Houſe, and calling a new Parliament. We urged much upon him, that the Preſbyterian Intereſt he had eſpouſed, was much concerned in keeping up this Houſe, and ſettling the Government on Terms, but in regard he had ſo lately declared againſt the Houſe of Lords, and continuing of this Houſe, he could not do it ſo reputably. The ſecluded Members though they could out-vote the Rump, yet cannot ſo well proceed againſt the Rumpers in this as in another Parliament.

WEDNESDAY Mar. 14.

The Enemies of the King underſtood the Deſign laid for Reſtoration.

And to prevent it, they offered the General to make him the ſingle Perſon.

Philips or Clarges Ch II. p. 715. at the end of Baker's Chron. p. 715.

Upon abrogating the Engagement, Scot, Haſlerig, and ſome others were much alarm'd at this Proceeding, which they took to be an inevitable Prognoſtick of Introducing the King: And though they ſo much affected Power, as to endure no Rivals in it, they choſe rather to have the General take the Dominion of the three Kingdoms upon himſelf than to have the King reſtor'd. They conſulted privately with ſome of the Officers of the Army, whom they truſted moſt, and theſe approved ſo well of the Expedient, that the General was treated with about it in Whitehall, where Haſlerig told him, that many of his Friends were much troubled at the Parliament's Actions, —— which tended to the Reſtitution of the King and his own Overthrow. —— They found a Common-wealth Government not agreeable with the Diſpoſition of the People, and therefore ſince a ſingle Perſon was neceſſary, there could not be one fitter than he for that Office; to which they had very good Grounds to believe all the good People of the Nation would concur with them. The General told them, he himſelf was not well pleaſed at the late unneceſſary Vote of Parliament concerning the Engagement, but many of the moſt diſcreet Members had been with him, and ſatisfied him, that they had no Deſign in it, but to keep themſelves free againſt the next Parliament. —— As for the Government in his own Perſon, he ſaid, the Experience of Cromwell's Fate gave him Reaſons to avoid the Rock on which that Family ſplit. They replied, that Oliver Cromwell uſurped the Dominion againſt the Suffrage of the Army, and the Conſent of all the good People, whereas he ſhould have it by their unanimous Conſent, and under what Name and Title he pleaſed to accept it. The General would by no Means hear more of theſe Temptations. —— A little before theſe Men went to the General, Commiſſary Clarges had been tampered with by them to the ſame Purpoſe. —— The Council of State ſitting at the Time of this private Conference, and within two Chambers of the Place where it was tranſacted; he ſent in to the Council to Sir Anthony Aſhley Cooper, and informed him of what he knew, and what he further ſuſpected: Upon which it was agreed, that as ſoon as the General ſhould depart from them, and come into the Council, he ſhould move, that all Clerks and Attendants that were not Counſellours, ſhould withdraw, and the Doors be lock'd, and then declare, that he had had Information of a dangerous Deſign in ſome ſeditious Perſons who were contriving to make Diſturbances in the Nation, and that they had proceeded ſo far, as to make ſome indecent Overtures to him, of which he deſired that the Council might receive a full Diſcovery, that thereupon they might apply themſelves to prevent the Conſequences of it.

But he cautiouſly refus'd it.

His Chaplain Dr. Price reports, that he not only refuſed the Offer, but ſaid he would rather be torn in Pieces by wild Horſes, than be ſo treacherous to his Countrey's Freedom. Hiſtory of the Reſtauration, p. 130.

The Council of State were informed of theſe Overtures made to General Monk.

And were extremely jealous of him.

But he did all that was poſſible to aſſure them of his Fidelity to the Commonwealth.

But the General being unwilling to expoſe thoſe Men to Ruin, (though they deſerved not his Favour) becauſe his Purpoſes were deſigned to be effected by the moſt peaceable Ways, told the Council, That there was not ſo much Danger in Agitation as they apprehended; but that it was true, ſome had been with him to be reſolved in Scruples concerning the preſent Tranſactions in Parliament, but they went away from him well ſatisfied.

When they could not prevail with the General to accept the Government in his own Perſon,

They ſtir up the Army to make a Declaration for a Common-wealth.

See Dr. Skinner's Life of Gen. Monk, p. 254.

Thus the Goodneſs of the General was abuſed: For theſe unreaſonable Men, when they ſaw they could not allure him to their Ends by the Temptation of Power, attempted to make a Mutiny in the Army; wherein they prevailed ſo far, as that the Officers had had one Meeting, and had appointed another. In their firſt they were ſo heated, that a Declaration was immediately prepared, and brought by ſome of them to the General, to oblige him with his Army to declare for a Common-wealth, and engage againſt all them that ſhould attempt the ſetting up of a ſingle Perſon, and that he ſhould ſend to the Parliament to joyn with them in this Declaration.

Commiſſary Clarges and Mr. Clark the General's Secretary were with him when this was brought to him, and obſerving great Trouble in his Countenance at the Reading of it, moved, that he would defer the Signing or giving any Opinion of it 'till the next Morning.

An Epiſtle of Dr. Edward Reynolds, dedicating his Sermon, The Wall and Glory of Jeruſalem, to the right honourable Thomas Alleyn, Lord-Mayor of the City of London, the Court of Aldermen, and Common-council.

The ſad Doubts and Diviſions of the People well deſcribed by Dr. Reynolds.

—— We underſtand, that Stability and Sanctity, Healing and Holineſs, are two moſt eminent and ſignal Mercies of God unto a People, who have been long exerciſed with Breach upon Breach, and emptied from Veſſel into Veſſel. How ſad the Condition of theſe diſcompoſed and dilacerated Nations hath been, how doleful the Earthquakes and Concuſſions both in Church and State, how daring the Inſolencies and Attempts of Men of unſtable Minds, deſtitute of ſolid and ſteady Principles, acted by the various and quotidian Conduct of changeable and domeſtical Intereſts, have been againſt our Jachim and our Boaz, Authority in our Parliaments and Miniſtry in our Churches, hath been ſo well known both at Home and Abroad, as to render theſe Nations a Shame to themſelves, and a Ludibrium to the World. What the great Works are which the Lord by the wonderful Series and Viciſſitudes of Providence is doing in the Midſt of us, the Hearts of his Servants hanging in Suſpence between Hope and Fear, do tremulouſly depend upon, and labour to underſtand. When we conſider the Maturity of our mighty Sins, we have great Reaſon to fear his Wrath; and when we obſerve the Progreſs of his wonderful Works, we have ſome comfortable Encouragement to hope for the Renewal of his Mercy, and the rather, becauſe he hath ſtirred up your Hearts in this great City to return unto him the Glory due unto his Name, for his Goodneſs to theſe Nations in reſtoring the Parliament; and unto yourſelves in reſtoring your Council, and healing the Wound inflicted on the Honour of this great City. That the Lord will be graciouſly pleaſed to crown and conſummate the Mercies which he hath begun, in guiding the Hearts of the People to chuſe for this next Parliament, Men of Eminency for Piety and Prudence, who may come with healing Spirits, and make it their Buſineſs to repair our Breaches, and be the Reſtorers of Paths to dwell in, who may lay to Heart the Intereſt of Chriſt and his Church, and promote Purity of Doctrine and Worſhip, due Adminiſtration of holy Ordinances, and whatever may conduce to the Power of Godlineſs —— ſhall be the hearty Prayer of

Your moſt humble
March 14, 1659. And faithful Servant in the Lord,
EDWARD REYNOLDS.

THURSDAY Mar. 15.

This Gentleman Col. Okey, was a better Soldier than Orator; beſide that his Life lay at Stake, having ſate as Judge upon the King's. He was a known Stickler for the Commonwealth Party, and but lately as much a General as Monk himſelf, neither did he want either a Courage to act, or poſſibly a Part of the Army to follow him. Dr. Price's Hiſtory of the Reſtauration, p. 128.

I happen'd to be preſent at the Debate, which Clarges managed with much Reſolution and Dexterity of Words, ibid. p. 129.

Philips or Clarges of King Ch. II. Fol. p. 716.

See Dr. Skinner's Life of Gen. Monk, 8vo. p. 256.

This next Morning a great Concourſe of Officers met at St. James's. And Colonel Okey [the Chandler of Billingſgate] opened the Council with a long Speech of the Fears they were in of an Inundation of Evils breaking in upon them, to invade their Civil and Religious Liberties; and that if great Care was not uſed to prevent it, Charles Stuart would be introduced: And that the beſt Expedient that could be thought of, was to ſend immediately to the Parliament, to oblige them to declare and engage for a free State and Commonwealth, without a King or Houſe of Lords: And if they refuſed to do it, to take ſuch a Remedy as God ſhould put into their Hearts to ſave the Nation from Deſtruction.

Commiſſary Clarges anſwered, That he ſaw no Cauſe for thoſe Fears that were inſinuated, and that if they ſent to the Parliament in ſuch a Manner, they would find no pleaſing Return from them; for if theſe Men would have been terrified by the Army, there would not have been fourteen of them impeached at one Time of Treaſon, and two hundred ſecluded at another, and the firſt Thing they would probably do upon the Receipt of ſuch a Meſſage, would be to diſſolve themſelves, and then there would be no Government, but inſtead of the ſingle Perſon they were ſo much afraid of, they muſt neceſſarily have Recourſe to Richard Cromwell, and expoſe themſelves to his Revenge, for the Indignities they had lately with ſo much Scorn put upon him and his Family.

And as for the General (applying himſelf to him) he ſaid he knew he would not aſſume the Government, having heard him profeſs, (on Occaſion of theſe Alterations) he would rather be drawn in Pieces with wild Horſes than be ſo treacherous to the Nation.

The General pacifies them with the Expectance of a new Parliament.

The General concluded, and told them, the Time of this Parliament's ending was ſo near, they could not do the Ills ſome of them (he hoped) cauſeleſly feared; and that from the next Parliament he doubted not they would receive better Satiſfaction than they had in this, ſince it was provided in the ACT for their aſſembling, that none ſhould be elected that had been againſt the Parliament ſince 1641. Withal, he confirmed what Commiſſary Clarges had ſaid, that if by this violent Proceeding they ſhould make the Parliament haſtily diſſolve themſelves, and leave the Nation in Confuſion, they muſt not expect he would take upon him the Government, which he had rather loſe his Life than accept.

And abſolutely declares againſt taking the Government upon himſelf.

After this, there was little moved by any of the Officers, only one ſaid, That nothing could be hoped from Qualifications for a new Parliament; for they themſelves being to be Judges of them, it might ſo happen, that the major Part might be of ſuch as were not themſelves qualified.

The General knew this to be an unanſwerable Argument, (and it was for this Reaſon he preſſed for a new Parliament on any Terms) but was unwilling to hear more Diſcourſe of this kind, and therefore told them, nothing was more injurious to Diſcipline, than their meeting in military Councils to interpoſe in civil Things. And from that Time he forbad them to aſſemble again; and within a few Days after, that is to ſay on the ſeventeenth of March, the Parliament by Act diſſolved itſelf.

Letter of Mr. Douglas at Edinburgh to Mr. Sharp in London.

Againſt moderate Epiſcopacy, that would end in Epiſcopal Tyranny.

Woodrow's Introduction to the Hiſtory of the Church of Scotland, p. 11.

An Anſwer of Mr. Douglas to Mr. Sharp's Letter of March 10. dated March 15. 1660. ſignifying his Satiſfaction, that the General ſupports Preſbyterian Government and Miniſters, (adding) it is beſt that Preſbyterian Government be ſettled ſimply, for we know by Experience that moderate Epiſcopacy (what can it be other than Biſhops with Cautions) is the next Step to Epiſcopal Tyranny, which will appear very ſoon above board if that Ground once be laid. You know the old Saying, Perpetua Dictatura via ad Imperium. Our conſtant Moderators was a Step to Biſhops, and they once entred ſoon broke all Caveats. —— He ſays, the Report of their being for a Commonwealth is a mere Forgery: That they profeſſed any ſettled Government better than Anarchy, and ſubmitted to Providence in their preſent Condition. That it may be they were miſtaken for ſome of their Brethren the Proteſtors, to whom, ſays he, the King's Return is matter of Terror, becauſe of their Miſcarriages to him. You know (adds he) that the Judgment of honeſt Men here is for admitting the King upon no other Terms but Covenant-Terms, wherein Religion, the Liberties of the Nation, and his juſt Greatneſs are beſt ſecured.

The Proteſtors are againſt any Admiſſion of the King.

And the other Preſbyterians for admitting him upon no other Terms but Covenant-Terms.

The Parliament diſſolved.

And thus having reſolved to make their End agreeable to their Beginning, on the long deſir'd 17th [16th] of March, this unhappy and fatal Parliament, having been twice excluded, and twice diſmember'd, was at laſt diſſolv'd by their own Act, after they had continued thro' various Interruptions for almoſt twenty Years in the Practice of ſuch publick Miſchief and Confuſions, as will ever be remembred with Horror.

SATURDAY Mar. 17.

After the Parliament had diſſolv'd themſelves. The next News is of the King at Bruſſels.

Yeſternight the Parliament declaring the Diſſolution of their Aſſembly, departed about ſeven a Clock at Night. By ſeveral Letters out of Flanders, it is certified that Charles Stuart is ſtill at Bruſſels.

The Inſcription under the Pedeſtal of the late King, blotted out by a bold Plaiſterer.

On Thurſday Evening came a Man (ſuppos'd to be a Plaiſterer) with his Boy and a Ladder, by which he went up to the Statue of Queen Elizabeth, and after he had wiped it, he removed to the Pedeſtal where the Statue of the late King formerly ſtood, and there blotting out the Inſcription [Exit Tyrannus Regum ultimus] he preſently came down; whereupon ſome of the People gathered together, and made a Bonfire.

Intrigues of the French Ambaſſador directed by Cardinal Mazarine.

Monſieur de Bourdeaux the French Ambaſſador now Reſident in London, was very deſirous to intereſs Cardinal Mazarine in this great Revolution of Government, and having had Acquaintance with Clarges, expected by him to diſcover all the General's Deſigns, and in order thereunto ſent his Secretary to him, to deſire him to move the General to have Licence to give him a Viſit, and to confer about ſome Overtures he had to make to him.

Philips or Clarges firſt thirteen Years of Ch. II. Fol. p. 717.

His Diſcourſe with Clarges.

Clarges upon this Intimation went to the Ambaſſador, who carried him into his Cloſet, and they two being alone, he told him, “That it was viſible to all, that the General had ſome great Deſign in Projection, and that moſt wiſe Men believ'd it was, either to advance himſelf to the Monarchy of theſe Nations, or introduce the King; and that in either of theſe he had the Advantage of being more ſerviceable to him than any other. For if he ſhould uſe any Engliſhman in ſo important an Intrigue, if he ſhould not have Succeſs, that would be brought in Evidence againſt him to his Deſtruction: Whereas if he as a Stranger, and a publick Miniſter could not be queſtioned. He further ſaid, what he propoſed, was not only in reference to himſelf, but to Cardinal Mazarine, who would be glad to have the Honour of his Friendſhip; aſſiſt him faithfully in all his Purpoſes. He ſaid moreover, that he could not undertake to determine, whether it was not beſt for him to dignify his Family with the Empire of theſe Kingdoms, or to reſtore the King to them; they were both Actions of much Glory; and if the latter were as eaſy, the Honour of it would be as great: But that he might be confident of the Cardinal, he did aſſure him, that Oliver Cromwell kept ſo ſtrict a League with him, that he did not aſſume the Government without his Privity, and was directed ſtep by ſtep by him in the Progreſs of that Action: And therefore if he reſolved on that Courſe, he ſhould not only have the Cardinal's Friendſhip and Counſel in the Attempt, but a ſafe Retreat and honourable Support in France, if he failed in it. Or if he would admit the King, and put the Manner of it into the Cardinal's Hands, whatever he would deſire for himſelf of Security, or Honour from the Crown, he would undertake to obtain, and in ſuch a Manner, that it ſhould rather ſeem by the Cardinal's Advice, than his particular Inclination; and the King would gladly receive it, and France ſhould be the Place to which (if he agreed) the King ſhould preſently retreat, where he ſhould have a Train provided proportionable to his Greatneſs, that his People here might with greater Reverence, apply themſelves to him; and by this Way (he ſaid) the General might not only oblige the King of England, but the King his Maſter alſo, by making him a Mediator and Inſtrument in his Reſtauration.

That Oliver Cromwell aſſum'd the Government by the Privity and Direction of the Cardinal.

And if Monk would attempt the like, he ſhould have the Cardinal's Friendſhip and Counſel in it.

Otherwiſe if he would bring in the King, the Cardinal would undertake the Management of it.

And the King ſhould retreat into France, for his Security of coming to the Crown of England.

The Anſwer of Clarges to the French Ambaſſador.

To this Clarges anſwered, “That the Matter was too deep for him to be involved in, in regard (as he himſelf had acknowledged) of the Danger of having ſuch a Secret known to any ſecond Perſon a Native of England.

“But nevertheleſs, to ſatisfy him, he aſſured him, That the General did not intend to take upon him the Government, but ſubmit all to the Determination of the next Parliament. He then reply'd, That a Parliament in England was a kind of tumultuary Council, ſo various in their Debates, that no certain Meaſure could be taken from them, and therefore for not taking this Courſe which he adviſed, he might be hurried by their froward Proceedings to ſome ſudden Enterpriſe, neither ſafe for himſelf nor good for the People, and that with him in any Misfortune, all his Relations would be ruin'd.

The General wanted the French Tongue.

“To this Conference, Clarges put an End, by telling him, he would take a ſudden Occaſion to ſound the General's Inclinations; and though he would not directly tell him what had paſſed betwixt them, he ſhould nevertheleſs gueſs, whether it might be fit for him to impart it to him; the only Difficulty that remained, was the General's Want of the French Tongue; which the Ambaſſadour ſaid, was not neceſſary, for that he had Engliſh enough to be “ underſtood, and to underſtand all that ſhould be ſaid to him; and thus they “ parted.

The General abſolutely refuſed to have any Commerce with the French Ambaſſador, or his Maſter the Cardinal.

Clarges told all that paſſed to Mr. Morrice, and to the General himſelf, who abſolutely refuſed to have any Commerce with the Ambaſſadour or the Cardinal; nevertheleſs, that he might not appear uncivil, he was contented to receive his Viſit, but on Condition, That he ſhould not propoſe any thing to him in reference to the publick Affairs of Government.

This was ſignified to the Ambaſſadour, and he came that Evening to compliment the General, making great Profeſſions of his Services to him, on all Occaſions, without deſcending to Particulars.

Upon this Conference was grounded an improbable Story,

Of Monk's agreeing with the French Ambaſſador to take the Government upon himſelf;

And that he was diverted from it by Sir Anthony Aſhley Cowper.

Memoirs of the Earl of Shaftſbury in Mr. Lock's Poſthumous Works, 8vo.

Monk after the Death of Oliver Cromwell, and the Removal of Richard, marching with the Army he had with him into England, gave fair Promiſes all along in his Way to London to the Rump who were then ſitting, who had ſent Commiſſioners to him that accompanied him. When he was come to Town, tho' he had promiſed fair to the Rump and Common-wealth Party on the one Hand, and gave Hopes to the Royaliſts on the other, yet at laſt agreed with the French Ambaſſadour to take the Government on himſelf, by whom he had Promiſe from Mazarine of Aſſiſtance from France to ſupport him in this Undertaking. This Bargain was ſtruck up between them late at Night, but not ſo ſecretly, but that his Wife who had poſted herſelf conveniently behind the Hangings, where ſhe could hear all that paſſed, finding what was reſolved, ſent her Brother Clarges away immediately, with Notice of it to Sir Anthony Aſhley Cowper. She was zealous for the Reſtauration of the King, and had therefore promiſed Sir A. to watch her Huſband, and inform him from Time to Time how Matters went. Upon this Notice Sir A. cauſed the Council of State, whereof he was one, to be ſummoned; and when they were met, he deſired the Clerks might withdraw, he having Matter of great Importance to communicate to them. The Doors of the Council Chamber being lock'd, and the Keys laid upon the Table, he began to charge Monk, not in a direct and open Accuſation, but in obſcure Intimations and doubtful Expreſſions, giving ground of Suſpicion, that he was playing falſe with them, and not doing as he promiſed. This he did ſo ſkilfully and intelligibly, that he perceived he was diſcovered, and therefore in his Anſwer to him fumbled and ſeemed out of Order; ſo that the reſt of the Council perceived there was ſomething in it, though they knew not what the Matter was. And the General at laſt averring, that what had been ſuggeſted was upon groundleſs Suſpicions, and that he was true to his Principles, and ſtood firm to what he had profeſſed to them, and had no ſecret Deſigns that ought to diſturb them, and that he was ready to give them all manner of Satisfaction. Sir Anthony cloſed with him, and made a further Uſe of what he ſaid than he intended. For he meant no more, than ſo far as to get away from them, upon this Aſſurance which he gave them. But Sir Anthony told him, that if he was ſincere in what he ſaid, he might preſently remove all Scruples; he ſhould preſently take away their Commiſſions from ſuch and ſuch Officers in the Army, and give them to thoſe whom he named, and that preſently before he went out of the Room. Monk was in himſelf no quick Man, he was guilty, alone, among a Company of Men who he knew not what they would do with him; for they all ſtruck in with Sir Anthony, and plainly perceived that Monk had deſigned ſome foul Play. In theſe Straits, being thus cloſe preſſed, and knowing not how elſe to extricate himſelf, he conſented to what was propoſed, and ſo immediately, before he ſtirred, a great Part of the Commiſſions of his Officers were changed, and Sir Edward Harley among the reſt, who was a Member of the Council, and there preſent, was made Governour of Dunkirk, in the Room of Sir William Lockhart, and was ſent away immediately to take Poſſeſſion of it. By which Means the Army ceaſed to be at Monk's Devotion, and was put into Hands that would not ſerve him in the Deſign he had undertaken. The French Ambaſſadour who had the Night before ſent away an Expreſs to Mazarine, poſitively to aſſure him, that Things went as he had deſir'd, and that Monk was fix'd by him in his Reſolution to take upon himſelf the Government; was not a little aſtoniſhed the next Day to find Things taking another Turn. And indeed this ſo much diſgraced him in the French Court, that he was preſently called Home, and ſoon after broke his Heart. This was that which gave the great Turn to the Reſtoration of King Charles, whereof Sir Anthony had laid the Plan in his Head a long Time before.

See Mr. Echard's Hiſtory of England, Vol II. p. 886. who introduces the Story with this Preface to it. But that which ſeem'd his greateſt Temptation was, the Overtures of Monſieur Bourdeaux, the French Ambaſſador, who promis'd him from his Maſter Mazarine, the powerful Aſſiſtance of France to ſupport him, if he would take the Government upon himſelf, ſo ſteadily averſe was the Cardinal to the Reſtoration of a Perſon he had ſo much injured and ſlighted. Some ſay he bravely reſiſted the Propoſal, but Mr. Lock expreſſly tells us, that he at laſt did agree with the French Ambaſſador to aſſume the Government to himſelf.—This ſingular Account is left wholly to the Reader.

Beſides that Reform of the Officers could not be owing to that Stratagem of Sir A. A. Cowper, but was the Effect of an expreſs Engagement to be true to the General and a Council of State till the enſuing Parliament, and the Refuſers were not turn'd out as the General's Creatures, nor others admitted as a ſtricter Guard upon him: But they who were caſhier'd were his Enemies, and they who were taken in, were his greater Friends and Confidents.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, 8vo. p. 264.

Becauſe no Means was thought effectual enough to bind and ſecure the Obedience of an Army that had been ſo long accuſtomed to Miſrule and Violence, it was contrived by the General, and ſome of his more ſecret Council, that all Officers in the ſeveral Armies ſhould preſently ſign an Engagement, declaring their entire Submiſſion to all the Commands of his Excellency the Lord General, and to the Orders of the preſent Council of State, and that they would yield all Obedience to the Reſolutions and Councils of the ſucceeding Parliament. This Engagement was readily ſubſcribed by all the Officers of General Monk's Army, and by moſt alſo of the others; and they who refuſed were preſently removed from their Commands, which gave the General the fair Opportunity which he had ſo long deſired, for introducing ſeveral Perſons of Honour and Quality into Commands in the Army, in the Place of thoſe he could no longer truſt.

The new Officers were Perſons of great Eſtate, Courage, and Fidelity; as the Lord Falconbridge, General Montague, Colonel Roſciter, Colonel Sheffield, and many others, all brave and loyal Perſons.

The Common Council of London, petition that the Council of State and the General would remove into the City.

Which they decline as being safe enough.

Mercur. Publ. 4to. No. 612.

A Petition from the Common-council of the City of London, presented to the Council of State, taking Notice that the late Parliament having brought these Nations into some Prospect of the desired Settlement by a free Parliament, and left this honourable Council with the Lord General to carry on the Government in the interval.—They humbly pray that it would please their Honours to remove their Residence and Sitting into the City; and to use their Interest with the Lord General, so as to prevail with his Excellency to accompany their Honours in Person and Council, during this Interval of Parliament. —— To which the Council of State answered, That they did return the City hearty Thanks for their Affections, and that they did not at present apprehend any such Danger as to remove their Sitting, but if they should hereafter, they would willingly accept the City's Invitation.

Lord Clarendon's Character of Mr. Will. Morrice.

Lord Clarendon's History Vol. III. Fol. p. 573.

He came up before he was chosen.

There was at this Time in much Conversation and Trust with the General, a Gentleman of Devonshire of a fair Estate and Reputation, one Mr. William Morrice, a Person of a retired Life, which he spent in Study, being learned and of good Parts; and he had been always looked upon as a Man far from any Malice towards the King if he had not good Affections for him; which they who knew him best, believ'd him to have in a good Measure. This Gentleman was allied to the General, and entirely trusted by him in the Management of his Estate in that Country; where by the Death of his elder Brother without Heirs Male, he inherited a fair Fortune. And Morrice being chosen to serve in the next ensuing Parliament, had made haste to London, the better to observe how Things were like to go. With him the General consulted freely touching all his Perplexities and Observations, "how he found most Men of Quality and Interest inclined to call "in the King, but upon such Conditions, as must be very ungrateful, if possible to be receiv'd"; and the London Ministers talked already so loudly of them, that the Covenant being new printed, and by Order fixed up in all Churches, they in their Sermons discoursed of the several Obligations in it, that without exposing themselves to the Danger of naming the King (which yet they did not long forbear) every Body understood, they thought it necessary the People should return to their Allegiance.

Character of Sir John Greenvill.

See Dr. Price's History of the Restauration, 8vo. p. 133.

There was then in the Town a Gentleman well known to be a Servant of eminent Trust to the King, Sir John Greenvill, who from the Time of the Surrender of Silly had enjoy'd his Estate, and sometimes his Liberty, though under the Jealousy of a disaffected Person, often restrained. He had been privy to the sending to the General into Scotland the Clergy man his Brother; and was conversant with those who were most trusted by his Majesty, and at this Time were taken Notice of to have all Intimacy with Mr. Mordaunt, who most immediately corresponded with Brussels. This Gentleman was of a Family to which the General was allied, and he had been obliged to his Father Sir Bevil Greenvill, who lost his Life at the Battle of Landsdown for the King, and by his Will had recommended his much impair'd Fortune and his Wife and Children, to the Care and Counsel of his Neighbour and Friend Mr. Morrice, who had executed the Trust with the utmost Fidelity and Friendship.

The General now fix'd in his Resolution of restoring the King, admits of a Conversation with Sir John Greenvill.

And sends him over to the King without a Letter.

Only he was to take Minutes of what he had said to him.

The first private Conference between the Gen and Sir J. Greenvill is said to be at nine in the Evening of the next Day after the Dissolution of the Parliam. Philips's Ch. II. p. 717.

See Account given by Sir Tho. Clarges in Philips's Hist. of Ch. II p 717.

And by Dr. Skinner in his Life of General Monk, 8vo, p 267.

And by Mr. Gumble in his Life of General Monk, 8vo, p. 267.

The General was content, that Sir John Greenvill should be trusted in this great Affair, and that Mr. Morrice should bring him secretly to him in a private Lodging he had in St. James's. When he came to him, after he had solemnly conjur'd him to Secrecy, upon the Peril of his Life, he told him, "he meant to "send him to the King; with whom he presumed he had Credit enough to be be-"lieved, without any Testimony; for he was resolved not to write to the King, "nor to give him any Thing in writing; but wished him to confer with Mr. Mor-"rice, and to take short Memorials in his own Hand of those Particulars he "should offer to him in Discourse; which when he had done, he would himself "confer with him again at an Hour he should appoint". And so he retired hastily out of the Room, as if he were jealous that other Men would wonder at his Absence.

Mr. Morrice's Advice to Sir John Greenvill how to manage the Affair.

That which Mr. Morrice communicated to Greenvill was, to advise that the King should write a Letter to the General, in which after kind and gracious Expressions, he should desire him to deliver the inclosed Letter and Declaration to the Parliament; the particular Heads and Materials for which Letter and Declaration, Morrice discoursed to him; the end of which was to satisfy all Interests, and to comply with every Man's Humour, and indeed to suffer every Man to enjoy what he would.

Sir J. Greenvill's second Access to the General, and final Instructions by Word of Mouth only.

After Sir John Greenvill had enough discoursed of all Particulars with him, and taken such short Memorials for his Memory as he thought necessary; within a Day or two he was brought with the same Wariness, and in another Place, to the the General; to whom he read the ſhort Notes he had taken, to which little was added; and the General ſaid, " that if the King writ to that purpoſe, when he " brought the Letter to him, he would keep it in his Hands, till he found a fit " Time to deliver it, or ſhould think of another Way to ſerve his Majeſty". Only he added another Particular, as an Advice abſolutely neceſſary for the King to conſent to, which was his Majeſty's preſent Remove out of Flanders. He undertook to know, That the Spaniard had no purpoſe to do any thing for him, and that all his Friends were jealous, that it would not be in his Power to remove from thence, if he deferr'd it till they diſcovered that he was like to have no need of them. And therefore he deſired, that his Majeſty would make haſte to Breda, and that for the publick Satisfaction, and that it might be evident he had left Flanders, whatſoever he ſhould ſend in Writing ſhould bear Date as from Breda; and he enjoyn'd Sir John Greenvill not to return, till he had himſelf ſeen the King out of the Dominions of Flanders. Thus inſtructed he left him, who taking Mr. Mordaunt with him for the Companion of his Journey, ſet out for Flanders about the beginning of April 1660. and in few Days arriv'd ſafely at Bruſſels.

Bp. of Winton's Letter to the Dutcheſs of York. Printed with his other Treatiſes, 1682. 4^to^.

The King's Enemies gave out, that the King by living ſo long abroad in Popiſh Countries was ſo corrupted in his Religion, that if he were ſuffered to return, he would bring home Popery along with him. So that with this groundleſs Fear I found many very conſiderable and very much intereſted Perſons to be poſſeſs'd when I was ſent into England, about two Months before the King's Return; moſt of which Time I ſpent in undeceiving all I met with, eſpecially the Heads and Leaders of the Preſbyterian and Independent Parties (who ſeem'd to be moſt afraid of ſuch a Change) by aſſuring them that thoſe Miſreports they had heard of the King and his Brothers, were nothing elſe but the malicious Inventions of thoſe, that were either in Fact or in Conſent the Murderers of their Father, and conſequently irreconcilable and implacable Enemies unto his Children. For (ſaid I) to my certain Knowledge, who was almoſt always an Eye-witneſs of their Actions, the King and both his Brothers did not only by their Profeſſion, but by their Practice declare and teſtify themſelves to be true Sons of the Church of England (even in the Midſt of its Enemies) by coming daily to our Prayers, and weekly to our Sermons, and frequently to our Communions. Which I do not now [1682.] repeat by way of boaſting of what I did; for though it was all I could do, yet perhaps it was leſs, I am ſure it was no more than I am bound to do.

TUESDAY Mar. 20.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, 8^vo^. p. 274.

The next Evening Sir John Greenvill attended the General in Mr. Morrice's Chamber, where his Excellency deſir'd him to take his Inſtructions in writing, the Heads whereof were:

Theſe Inſtructions in Writing ſeem penn'd by Mr. Morrice.

To grant a general Pardon.

To aſſent to a Toleration and Liberty of Conſcience.

To retire from the Spaniſh Dominions to Holland.

After theſe Inſtructions the General burnt the Paper.

And took all other Care of profound Secrecy.

That ſince by the long Civil War and Change of Government, the Minds of the Soldiers in general, and a great Part of the People would be alarm'd with the Apprehenſion of his Majeſty's Return, it was his humble Advice, that he would be graciouſly pleaſed to proclaim his free and general Pardon to all his Subjects, except to ſuch as the Parliament ſhould eſteem incapable of it. That he would prepare the Minds of the Army, by declaring his Readineſs to conſent to ſuch Acts, as ſhould ſecure the publick Sales and Diſpoſitions of Lands, and the Payment alſo of their Arrears. And becauſe nothing was more likely to run the People into Frenzies, than the Fear of Reſtraint in their ſeveral Religions, he did further beſeech his Majeſty to declare his Aſſent for a Toleration and Liberty of Conſcience to all his Subjects, who ſhould ſo employ it as not to give any Diſturbance to the Civil Government. He was alſo inſtructed to deſire his Majeſty to retire from the Dominions of the King of Spain, into ſome convenient Place belonging to the States of the United Provinces, where with more Freedom and Security to his Perſon, he might treat further with his Parliament and People. And laſtly, he was ſtrictly cautioned not to give his Majeſty any Interruption by offering Propoſals to him for the Reward of his Service. The General then deſir'd him to peruſe his Inſtructions carefully, and to fix them throughly in his Memory, and then receiving the Paper from his Hand, threw it into the Fire before them, and intreated him to keep theſe Particulars in his Thoughts as he travelled, and by no Means to commit them again to writing, till he was firſt arriv'd in Flanders, nor to acquaint any Perſon with his Buſineſs except his Majeſty only. They then privately took Leave of each other; and the ſame Night Sir John Greenvill ſpeeding ſecretly through the City, began his Journey towards Dover, where the next Day he ſeaſonably found the Lord Mordaunt, who was then going over to the King, and had hir'd a Veſſel to himſelf, in which he was very joyful to accommodate his old Acquaintance Sir John Greenvill, and engage together in the King's Service; but in all their Voyage to Oſtend, they knew nothing of one another's Buſineſs.

A more particular Account of this Conference given by Dr. Price Chaplain to General Monk.

Dr. Price ſeems to have taken this Account from the Mouth of Sir John Greenvill, to whom he dedicated his Hiſtory when Earl of Bath, and would ſay nothing of him without his Approbation.

Hiſtory of the King's Reſtauration, 8vo. p. 133.

Monk was very ſhy of entring into any Converſation with his Couſin Greenvill, becauſe a known Cavalier.

Yet Monk employ'd Morrice to know the Buſineſs of Greenvill.

But he would impart it to none but to the General himſelf.

Sir John Greenvill had before made his Applications to the General —— and would often ſpin out his Viſits to an extraordinary Length, in Expectation of the Rooms being clear'd by the breaking up of the Company; yet ſo ſoon as ever it was, and a Convenience offer'd of unfolding part of his Errand, the General (well knowing the Reaſon of Greenvill's long Attendance) would immediately riſe from his Chair, and ſay Good Night Couſin, 'tis late; or otherwiſe excuſe himſelf by pretending Buſineſs. —— At laſt he bethought himſelf of making his Application to Mr. Morrice, by his Mediation to obtain the Favour of a little private Diſcourſe with the General. Morrice acquainted the General with it, but he refuſed to have any ſecret Converſe with him, in regard that being a known Cavalier, Notice would be taken of it, ſhould he be admitted to any ſuch Privacy as he deſired. Yet he ordered Morrice to wait upon his Couſin, to try if he could learn of what Quality his Buſineſs was; and to make his Report accordingly; giving him leave to aſſure him in his Name, that he was authorized to receive his Meſſage (of what Secrecy ſoever it might be) and he promis'd to return the General's Anſwer to it. This Morrice earneſtly preſſed Greenvill to do, but he refuſed the Propoſal, and would not give him the leaſt Intimation of his Buſineſs; only telling him that it concerned none but the General himſelf; and yet him ſo very much, that without all further Delay he muſt neceſſarily impart it to him; and in caſe he ſtill obſtinately perſiſted to deny him a private Hearing, he was reſolved to ſpeak to him wherever he ſhould meet him next. Upon Morrice's reporting of this to the General, he was inwardly pleaſed at it; ſo the next Night was appointed for diſcloſing this Secret.

The private Conference between General Monk and Sir John Greenvill.

Greenvill came to Morrice's Chamber at St. James's; whither the General upon Morrice's Intimation ſoon after came likewiſe. Sir John Greenvill and the General being now alone (and Morrice Door-keeper to the Conference) he addreſs'd himſelf to the General in this purport of Words: (they are his own) That "he " was infinitely obliged to his Excellency, for giving him this Opportunity of " diſcharging himſelf of a Truſt of great Importance both to himſelf and the " whole Kingdom, that had been long depoſited in his Hands; and that whatſo-
" ever became of him, he thought himſelf very happy to have this good Occaſion
" of performing his Duty in obeying the Commands of the King his Maſter".
At the ſame Inſtant, he preſented the General with a Letter from his Majeſty, and produced another directed to himſelf, as alſo the Commiſſion which he had from his Majeſty to treat with him.

Greenvill delivers him a Letter from the King, which the General ſeem'd very much afraid to receive.

The General ſtept back; and (holding the Paper in his Hand) with a frowning Countenance demanded of him how he durſt to ſpeak to him in ſuch a Matter, without conſidering the Danger he was to run into? But Sir John's Anſwer was, that he had long ſince duly conſidered this Matter, with all the Danger that might attend it; which was not ſufficient yet, to deter him from the Performance of his Duty in this Particular, any more than in all others, which he had chearfully undergone at his Majeſty's Command, but that he was the more encouraged to undertake this, in regard his Excellency could not but remember the Meſſage he received in Scotland by his Brother. Whereupon, the General without any other Reply, approached him with a pleaſing Aſpect; and embraceing him in his Arms, ſaid, " Dear Couſin, I thank you with all my Heart for the " Prudence, Fidelity, Care and Conſtancy you have ſhewed in this great Affair;
" and I am much pleaſed alſo at your reſolute Secrecy in it; for could I have un-
" derſtood that you had reveal'd it to any Body living, ſince you firſt truſted my " Brother with it; I would never have treated with you; which now I ſhall moſt
" willingly; and with you the rather, becauſe you are one of my neareſt Kinſ-
" men, and of a Family to which I owe many Obligations. So the General read the King's Letters, and the Commiſſion, for which he ſaid, " I hope the King will
" forgive what is paſt, both in my Words and Actions, according to the Con" tents of his gracious Letter; for my Heart was ever faithful to him, but I was " never in a Condition to do him Service till this preſent; and you ſhall aſſure
" his Majeſty, that I am not only ready to obey his Commands, but to ſacri-
" fice my Life and Fortune in his Service. To witneſs this, I call this ho-
" neſt Man from the Door". So he called Mr. Morrice to him, who by this Time could not but underſtand the Deſign of Greenvill's coming to the General. Morrice likewiſe chearfully embraced the Propoſal, and was Aſſiſtant in it. Sir John now intreated the General to ſend ſome Confident of his own to the King, which the General willingly yielded to; but told him the Confident muſt be himſelf, for he would ſend no Letters as yet, for fear of the worſt, and without them the King had no Reaſon to give Credit to a Meſſenger from him: tho' his Majeſty might well believe his own, whom he had employed to him. Wherefore at the next Conference Inſtructions were prepar'd which Greenvill wrote out; and after he had diligently peruſed them and fix'd them in his Memory, as he was deſired, the General threw the Paper into the Fire, with charge not to commit his Inſtructions again to Paper till he came to Bruſſels (where the King then was) and there to communicate them to none but his Majeſty.

The General well pleas'd with a Letter and Commiſſion from the King, opens his Heart to Greenvill.

And ſends back Greenvill, with Aſſurance of his Duty to his Majeſty.

Inſtructions were given him in writing, but then the Paper was burnt for keeping the Secret.

Afraid of the King's Intereſt in Ireland.

By ſeveral Letters out of Ireland it is certified, that there is a Convention ſitting at Dublin, the Lord Brogbill, Sir Charles Coot, and other principal Perſons being being among them. —— But that they have not (as hath been rumoured) declared any thing for Charles Stuart, but inſiſt upon ſeveral Particulars relating to their Intereſt as Members of that Nation.

And have a jealous Eye upon the Royal Family in Flanders.

Ibid. N°. 613.

Adviſed from Flanders, That the Princeſs of Orange having been highly careſſed with her Brothers at Bruſſels, was departed thence to Antwerp, being conducted thither by her Brothers, in order to her Return into Holland. —— The Dutch Poſt not being arriv'd in Time, we have no Account concerning Charles Stuart, but the former Letters related him ſtill reſident in the City of Bruſſels.

The Preſbyterians who were in the King's Intereſt, would bring him in upon the Terms of his Father's Conceſſions in the Iſle of Wight.

The General at firſt Propoſal declar'd for a Commonwealth; but at laſt agrees to ſuch a conditional Reſtoring the King.

Dr. Price's Hiſtory of the Reſtauration, 8vo. p. 141.

Some Men of great Quality and great Guilt, were very earneſt with the General, that the King, if he muſt be brought in by the next Parliament, ſhould be admitted to his Throne upon no other than the Conceſſions of the Iſle of Wight, to which Charles I. had yielded when he was a Priſoner in Cariſbrook Caſtle 1648. —— The General at firſt moving, expreſſed a Reſolution of his profeſſed Obſtinacy to adhere to a Commonwealth; though at laſt (in regard the Propoſers, ſome of them, were Men of Honour, and all of Eminency) he ſeemed to be conquered into a Concurrence; but ſo as to hint this to be the utmoſt Line, that he could or would advance to in favour of the King. This Stiffneſs endeared him the more to the Propoſers, as encreaſing their Hopes that he would not deceive them.

But ſoon after the General's Danger was freely repreſented to him, ſhould he be yielding to ſuch Propoſals, anticipate the next Parliament; becauſe in Probability it would bring a freſh War upon the Nation, &c.

And the Propoſers ſignify his Conſent to ſuch Terms.

The Propoſers rejoyced that they had ſo far prevailed with the General; and ſent an Expreſs of their own to the King at Bruſſels, repreſenting to him the great Service they had done his Majeſty in prevailing with Monk (notwithſtanding his being ſo obſtinate a Commonwealth's Man) not to oppoſe his Majeſty's Return upon his Father's Conceſſions in the Iſle of Wight and not otherwiſe; and that although theſe were hard Terms, and aſſented unto by his Father in his Neceſſity, yet they beſought his Majeſty, that he would not now think hard of them, leſt his Refuſal might exclude him from the Crown.

And beſeech the King to comply with them.

The Parliament afraid of the Army, and of the Agitators in it.

Printed in the publick Intelligence of Mar. 22. 4to.

By the Council of State. A Proclamation.

The Council of State being intruſted, in this Interval of Parliament, with Preſervation of the publick Peace, and being well informed, that ſome Perſons from miſtaken Apprehenſions of the Temper of the Army, do ſecretly attempt the debauching and alienating the Affections of ſome in the Army from that Obedience and Duty which they owe, and (as upon good Grounds is hoped and believed) bear to the preſent Authority eſtabliſh'd by Parliament, and to their ſuperior Officers in the Army; have therefore thought fit, hereby to declare and make known their great Diſlike of ſuch Proceedings, as tending and aiming at the Diſturbance of the Peace of this Commonwealth, and engaging it into new Diſtractions and Blood (now that ſuch a Door of Hope is opened of Deliverance and Settlement) and do hereby Charge and Require all and every Perſon and Perſons, of what Sort or Degree ſoever, to forbear at their uttermoſt Perils, all Applications of what kind ſoever to any the Officers or Soldiers of the Armies of this Commonwealth by way of Agitating or otherwiſe, with Deſign or Endeavour by Word or Act, to beget Diſſatisfactions in any ſuch Officer or Soldier, towards the preſent Government, or to withdraw them from their Obedience to their Superiors, or to make Combinations or Factions in the Army, to the Diſturbance thereof, or endangering the Peace of the Nation, &c.

A Remonſtrance of the Republican Party againſt the General and his Officers for their having deſerted the good old Cauſe, and their now returning to Egypt and the old Bondage.

Plain Engliſh. To his Excellency the Lord General Monk and the Officers of his Army: Or a Word in Seaſon not only to them, but to all impartial Engliſhmen. To which is added, a Declaration of Parliament in the Year 1647. ſetting forth the Grounds and Reaſons why they reſolved to make no further Addreſs or Application to the King.

To think of Reſtoring the King was putting a Knife to the Throats of the Republicans, &c.

My Lord and Gentlemen,

It is written the Prudent ſhall keep ſilence in an evil Time, and 'tis like we alſo might hold our Peace, but that we fear a Knife is at the very Throat, not only of our and your Liberties, but of our Perſons too. In this Condition we hope it will be no Offence, if we cry out to you for help; you that through God's Goodneſs have helped us ſo often, and ſtrenuouſly maintained the ſame Cauſe with us againſt the Return of that Family which pretends to the Government of theſe Nations. It is the publick Intereſt and yours that we hitherto fought for, and for which we now plead; therefore we inſiſt upon it with the greater Confidence before you, becauſe we are all equally concerned in the Good or Ill of your Tranſactions. We cannot yet be perſwaded, though our Fears and Jealouſies are ſtrong, and the Grounds of them many, that you can ſo lull aſleep your Conſciences, or forget the publick Intereſt and your own, as to be returning back with the Multitude to Egypt, or that you ſhould with them be hankering after the Leeks and Onions of our old Bondage. Though it were poſſible you ſhould forget, yet certainly God will not, all the Injuries and Oppreſſions done by that Family to his Church and People in theſe and other Nations. Though the Inſcription Exit Tyrannus, which was fixed over the Place where the Statue of the late King formerly ſtood at the Exchange, hath been blotted out by the Rabble, yet it is written with the Pen of a Diamond in the Hearts of many Thouſands, &c. Dated March 22. 1659.

The Spaniards had no Apprehenſion that Things in England could work for the King's Intereſt.

Lord Clarendon's Hiſtory, Vol. III. Fol. p. 575.

It was no unpleaſant Proſpect to the King, nor of ſmall Advantage to him, that the Spaniard look'd upon all theſe Revolutions in England, as the Effects of the ſeveral Animoſities and Emulations of the different Factions among themſelves; a Contention only between the Preſbyterian Republicans on one Side, and the Independent and Levelling Party on the other, for Superiority, and who ſhould ſteer the Government of the State, without the leaſt Reference to the King's Intereſt, which they thought would in no Degree be advanced which Side ſoever prevailed. And therefore Don Alonzo by his Iriſh Agents (who made him believe any thing) continued firm to the Levellers, who if they got the better of their Enemies, he was aſſured, would make a good Peace with Spain, which above all Things they deſired: And if they were oppreſſed, he made as little doubt they would unite themſelves to the King, upon ſuch Conditions as he ſhould arbitrate between them. And in this Confidence he embraced all the Ways he could to correſpond with them, receiving ſuch Agents with all poſſible Secrecy who repaired to him at Bruſſels; and when Inſtruments of moſt Credit and Importance would not adventure thither, he was contented to ſend ſome Perſon, who was entruſted by him into Zealand to confer and treat with them. And in this kind of Negotiation, which was very expenſive, they cared not what Money they diſburſed, whilſt they neglected the King, and ſuffer'd him to be without that ſmall Supply which they had aſſign'd to him.

And therefore neglected his Majeſty at Bruſſels.

And began to withdraw the ſmall Subſiſtence aſſign'd to him.

The Court of Madrid had the ſame Notion of the King's deſperate Condition.

In this Temper were the Spaniſh Miniſters, when Mr. Mordaunt and Sir John Greenvill came to Bruſſels. And Don Alonzo had ſo fully poſſeſſed the Court at Madrid with the ſame Spirit, that when the Chancellor in his Letters to Sir Harry Bennet, his Majeſty's Reſident there, intimated the Hopes they had of a Revolution in England to the Advantage of the King, he anſwered plainly, that he durſt not communicate any of thoſe Letters to the Miniſters there, who would laugh at him for abuſing them, ſince they look'd upon all thoſe Hopes of the King as imaginary and without Foundation of Senſe, and upon his Condition as moſt deplorable and abſolutely deſperate.

The Portugal Ambaſſador was applying for Engliſh Troops to aſſiſt againſt Spain.

Echard's Hiſtory, Vol. II. p. 889.

In the mean Time the General had Application made to him from the Portugal Ambaſſador Don Franciſco de Melo, who came over into England upon this following Occaſion. Upon the Concluſion of the late Pyrenean Treaty, the French the more to blind the Eyes of the Spaniard, and to excite the Portugueſe to ſeek out new Helps, had pretended to deſert the Intereſt of the latter, and to leave them to the Mercy of the former; which occaſioned this Miniſter diligently to apply to the Powers then uppermoſt in England, for a certain Number of Troops to be ſent to the Aſſiſtance of his Maſter, which at length concluded in a Treaty with the Council of State, now lying in the Paper Office. But when Monk's Power became ſo conſpicuous, he made his chief Overtures to him; and being accompanied with Father Ruſſel, a Prieſt of the Engliſh College at Liſbon, who ſerv'd him as an Interpreter, he at the firſt Time ſpoke only thus much to him: "That he would not preſume to enquire if his Excellency had any good Inclinations for the King's Return; but this he would advertiſe him as an Intelligence of great Moment to England, that the Spaniards had reſolved, if his Majeſty ſhould be called home to detain him at Bruſſels, till he had engaged for the Reſtoration of Dunkirk, if not Jamaica." The General made no Anſwer; but when the Ambaſſador found that he was heard, and that there were ſome good Effects of his Intelligence, he ſoon proceeded to other Matters with the General, and to make Offer of the Infanta of Portugal to the King, as a Match the moſt Advantageous of any in the World to England; "Since beſides the greateſt Portion in Money that ever Queen had, that Princeſs was to bring with her Tangier, which as the Ambaſſador ſaid, would make the Engliſh Maſters of the Trade in the Mediterranean and Bombaia, which would give them the like Advantage in the Eaſt-Indies, and would likewiſe ſerve to humble the Power of Spain;" which the General, according to the Notions he had imbibed in his younger Days thought to be the greateſt Advantage of all. Therefore taking all theſe Things in their full Extent; but eſpecially conſidering that nothing was at preſent deſired but Forces, and that thereby the moſt mutinous of thoſe Regiments bred up by Cromwell might be ſent away, and the Peace of the Kingdom ſecured, the General clos'd intirely with what was offered; and Mr. Morrice was eminently concern'd in the Treaty, which was immediately and effectually offer'd by the General to the King at his Return into England. So ſoon was this Match provided, and ſo contrary to the common Accounts of it; and what is ſtill remarkable, by a particular Article of the Treaty, it was ſtipulated for the Benefit of Portugal, that Dunkirk ſhould never be parted withal to the Spaniard, which laid the Foundation for the Sale of it afterwards to the French. Of all which we have unqueſtionable Proof from good Manuſcripts, and other ſufficient Evidences.

And the Council of State had agreed in a Treaty to that Effect.

The Ambaſſador applies to General Monk.

And tells him of the Spaniſh Deſign to ſtop the King at Bruſſels.

And ſo brings about a Motion for a Match of the King of England with the Infanta of Portugal, upon very advantageous Terms.

This was communicated by Monk to the King after his Return, and took effect.

Letter of Monſ. Gaches to Mr. Baxter,

To recommend the reſtoring of Monarchy in England.

Collect. of Letters, 1660.

Reprinted in Phenix, 8vo. Vol. I. p. 559.

Raimond Gaches, Paſtor of the Reformed Church of Paris, to the moſt famous Man and moſt upright Paſtor Richard Baxter, wiſheth all Health.

Though I am neither by Face nor Fame known unto you, (moſt Worthy Sir, and moſt Reverend Brother in Chriſt) yet I addreſs myſelf to you with Confidence, becauſe I know you very well, and am fully aſſured of your Piety. I have read again and again, not without Admiration, thoſe learned Volumes (little indeed, if we reſpect the Bulk, but exceeding precious, and throughly dy'd with the deepeſt Tinctures of Chriſtianity) wherewith you have bleſt your own Country, and with which France hath not been altogether unacquainted. ———

As the only Way of ſettling the Peace and Safety of Great-Britain,

We ought, Reverend Sir, to lay together our Studies, and all our Counſels, to eſtabliſh firmly the Safety of Britain. I ſuppoſe its Condition will be perpetually tottering, until the Government return into one Man's Hand. As the Cuſtoms of Nations and their Diſpoſitions are various, ſo are their Manners of governing Publick Affairs, they are not of the ſame Mind. One People chuſes a Popular Government, and neither is, nor can be accuſtom'd to be ruled by one Man, another People being taken with the Splendor of Nobility, and hating the Madneſs of the Commonalty, prefers Monarchy.

Which had ſo long flouriſh'd under Kings.

Your Country of England hath been a Lover of Kings for almoſt innumerable Ages; neither do I know any Monarchy in the World more ancient: The ſame Sun ſhines upon the preſent Engliſhmen: The Aſpects of the Stars, the Quality of the Soil, have the ſame Influence upon their Affections now as formerly. Who then can hope that either a Democracy or Ariſtocracy will eaſily prevail in that Country, wherein Monarchy hath taken ſuch deep rooting? But England, may ſome Man ſay, hath already changed the Form of Government, and that (as it ſeem'd) with common Conſent: Who then can deny, but that may be commodiouſly done, which hath been done commodiouſly. I have a double Anſwer hereto.

The ſad Conſequences of changing the old Monarchical Government.

Firſt, I will in like manner query, Whether that Change prov'd very happy for England? Truly, if Taxes and Impoſts be to be counted, they are not only doubled, but increas'd beyond almoſt all Meaſure. If the State of Religion be to be conſider'd, what a common Sewer of Hereſies is there? Who ever heard of Ranters, Quakers, &c. under the King?

It was forc'd to be reſtor'd in the Name of a Protector, a ſingle Perſon.

Secondly, Suppoſe Britain hath been happy ſince the Change, yet it was under the Government of One; What matters the Name? This one was a Protector, not a King, I grant; but he was one, and ſuch a one as was neither unſkilful in the Art of ruling, nor behav'd himſelf inferiour to a King in diſſolving Parliaments. And from his Death, or the leaſt from the caſting out his Son, England never was quiet; Changes were continual: Whom yeſterday we reverenc'd, to day we loath'd: Whom we ſwore Fealty to but now, him ſoon after we damn with Curſes.

And after his Death and the caſting out his Son, no Quiet.

No Peace or Settlement without the King.

Shall not that noble Queen of Iſlands always be ſo toſſed upon the Waves? And ſhall no Halcyon fly thither, which may calm your Seas? Truly I fear, you will never have Peace aſcertained either againſt Tumults at Home, or the Attempts of Enemies Abroad, till he, who is the Grandſon of ſo many Kings, at length be reſtor'd to his Grandfather's Throne. He hath every way, by Right of Inheritance, the Title of King of Great Britain, though he yet poſſeſſes not the Thing deſign'd by the Title.

Suſpicions and Rumours had paſs'd about a Year before of the King changing his Religion; which Report was then denied and confuted by Dr. George Morley in a Latin Epiſtle, dated June 7. 1659. and printed for a Teſtimony of the King's Stedfaſtneſs in the Proteſtant Religion in 1663.

I know what Odium hath been caſt upon him: Some, whether really or in pretenſion, are diſsatisfied in his Conſtancy to the true Religion, and alledge, that it concerns the Church very much, that he who is to rule others, ſhould excel them in Godlineſs. I will not anſwer (what truly may be ſaid) that it belongs not to us to enquire into the Prince's Religion: Be he what he will, (if his Power be otherwiſe lawful, and the Right of reigning belongeth to him) Obedience in Civil Matters muſt be perform'd to the King, and other Matters muſt be committed to the Divine Providence. Let the Biſhop of Rome luſt to juſtle Kings out of their Throne, unleſs they order Affairs of Religion according to his Beck, we may not be ſo proud. We give unto God the Things that are God's, and to Cæſar the Things that are Cæſar's.

The King had join'd in the Proteſtant Aſſemblies at Roan and Rochel, tho' not at Paris.

Offended with the Preſbyterians, who muſt wipe off the Scandal they had given in their Behaviour to the Father, by readily offering to reſtore the Son.

But I paſs over all this: For (which is the thing chiefly to be conſider'd) this Prince being born and duly educated in the true Religion, never departed from the publick Profeſſion of it; no, not even in thoſe Places, in which he was like to ſuffer Loſs thereby; neither did he diſdain to be preſent at our Religious Aſſembly at Roan and Rochel. Moreover, he hath the Eſtimation of Godly Practice among thoſe that are about him. I confeſs he never graced our Church with his Preſence, while he was ſeated at Paris, which truly grieved us: But becauſe the Caſe of thoſe call'd Preſbyterians ſeem'd to concerns us who are Preſbyterians; and becauſe the King's Death was aſcribed to the Preſbyterians, he could not but be ſtrange to us, until the Event of Things certified him, that his Reſtauration was principally hinder'd not by our Brethren, but by the Anabaptiſts for the moſt part, or at leaſt the Independents, whom alſo he certainly underſtood to have before promoted his Father's ſad Death. I wiſh the Odium of that Fact, wherewith our Churches have been ſo long loaded, might now at length be removed from us, and our Engliſh Brethren: Which I know not how it can ever be, unleſs Matters may be ſo compoſed, as the Son may bear his Father's Sceptre, not violently wreſted out of the Preſbyterians Hands, but friendly and freely proffered.

Go on, reverend Sir, prevent the Calamities of imminent War. Do you, and the Brethren like you embrace peaceable Counſels, and give the like to your Country-men. Divine Providence will favour and bleſs your Endeavours, and will uſe you as ſacred Inſtruments for reſtoring Happineſs to your Country.

But enough, and too much of this, for you may wonder that I ſpeak ſo familiarly to you; but I mentioned in the Beginning what Cauſe moved me thereto, viz. relying on your Piety and Charity, which will take all in good Part. Further, God bleſs your Studies, your Labours, your Church, and all your, nay, our England, England the Flower and Glory of the Reformation.

England, which is the Flower and Glory of all the Kingdoms wherein God is truly worſhipped.

Paris, April 2, 1660.

A Letter of Monſ. Drelincourt, to the ſame Purpoſe of vindicating the King from being a ſuſpected Papiſt.

A Letter of Monſieur Drelincourt, Miniſter of the Church of Paris, à Monſieur Monſieur Stroupe, M. D. S. E. à Londres.

Sir, my honoured Brother,

The glorious Work of reſtoring the King,

By the Hands of the Preſbyterians.

Nothing hath happened more ſtrange in our Days, than the Revolutions of England, Scotland, and Ireland. After the tragical Death of the late King, Hopes were given, that a Common-wealth might be eſtabliſhed, that ſhould become the Wonder and Admiration of the whole World. But the ſeveral Changes that have happen'd ſince from Time to Time, and the Confuſions that are to be feared cauſe many to believe, that God will reduce Affairs to their firſt State, and ſet the three Crowns united upon the Head of one Monarch. That which in this doth moſt rejoice and comfort us is, that it ſeems for the doing of this glorious Work, God will uſe the Service of thoſe, with whom we have more ſtrict Communion in Doctrine and Diſcipline. For we underſtand, that ſuch as are call'd Preſbyterians, are now poſſeſſed of the greateſt Power, and ſit at the Helm of State. That illuſtrious Aſſembly, which would have preſerved to the King his Life and Royalty, was without doubt very far from deſigning to rob his Children of that Right, which is convey'd to them by a continual Succeſſion in their Royal Family for many Ages.

Nothing would more obſtruct, than an Opinion of the King's turning Roman Catholick.

A Report is here, that the Thing which might hinder this King from being recalled to the Inheritance of his Fathers, is the Opinion conceived by ſome, of his being turned to the Roman Catholick Profeſſion; and the Fear that in Time he might ruin the Religion now flouriſhing in theſe three Kingdoms. But, Sir, you know that we have ever deteſted the Doctrine of Popes and their Inſtruments, who teach, that all Princes, called by them Hereticks, are incapable of the Succeſſion of Crowns, and if in Poſſeſſion, to be turned out.

No ground for it.

Only an uncharitable Jealouſy.

So Henry IV. was call'd a Heretick.

And Charles I. a Papiſt.

And more than this, I ſee not any Ground there is for calling this Prince a Roman Catholick, he making no Profeſſion of it; but on the contrary hath rejected all the Advantages and all the Aids offered to him upon that Condition. Charity is not jealous, and if it forbid us to ſuſpect on ſlight Grounds private Perſons, how can it approve Jealouſies upon Perſons ſo ſacred! Experience hath taught us, how little Reaſon hath in the End appear'd for the like, and even the greateſt Apprehenſions of that kind, our Hiſtory doth furniſh us with a convincing Example. The League never pretended other Cauſe for their Rebellion againſt King Henry IV. but for his being an Heretick, and a Maintainer of Hereticks: And thence was inferr'd, that he was no Ways affected to the Roman, and a Favourer of our Religion. In the mean Time we never had a more potent Enemy, and to all Mens Knowledge he liv'd and dy'd in the Communion of Rome, and therein ſhewed as much Zeal as any of his Predeceſſors. But not to paſs your Seas, you have in the Midſt of you an Inſtance above all Contradiction: For, what Jealouſies have not been raiſed againſt the Religion of the late King of Great-Britain, and yet at the Hour when there was no Place for diſſembling, as being void of Fears and Hopes from Man, he made his Zeal to the true Religion appear; and even that Sweetneſs and that admirable Patience with which he ſuffered Death by the Hands of his own Subjects, hath made it very viſible, that the Spirit of God reigned in his Heart.

King Charles II. had not appear'd in the Proteſtant Church at Charenton.

The Writer had paid no Viſit to the King, or the Duke of York; but to the Duke of Glouceſter only, who had expreſs'd a great Zeal for the Proteſtant Religion,

Upon a Charge from his Father, and by Order of the King his Brother.

True it is, that from myſelf I am not able to relate any thing touching the Religion of this Prince, becauſe for Reaſons of State, we had not the Honour of his Preſence in our Aſſemblies of Charenton, the only Place where in a formal Body we are able to witneſs the Reſpect we bear to ſtranger Princes in communion with us. And as to myſelf, I am not conſiderable enough to have made a Viſit to ſo great a Prince, which was alſo the Reaſon why I had not the Honour to ſee the Duke of York. But two Years ſince, being informed how the Duke of Glouceſter had manifeſted his Ability to confound the falſe Doctors that had undertaken to ſeduce him, and that he had Courage and Generoſity enough to reſiſt thoſe who would have placed him in the College of the Jeſuits; I thought, conſidering how very young he was, that I might have the Honour to give him a Viſit, without apprehending any Diſadvantage: And I performed it freely, becauſe I knew that not only he would accept it, but did alſo deſire it. I cannot expreſs how much I was ſatisfy'd with that young Prince. For beſides the obliging Manner wherewith he received me, he gave me ſeveral Proofs of his Zeal and Piety. I remember that among other Diſcourſes, he told me, how the late King his Father, a little before his Death had charged him with three Things: Never to change his Religion; to obey his elder Brother, who was to be his King, as he would have obey'd himſelf, if God had ſpared his Life; and to continue obedient to the Queen his Mother in all but what related to Religion. To which he added, that in perſevering in his Religion, he did not only do his Duty towards God, and preſerve the Peace of his own Conſcience, but alſo perform the laſt Will of the King his Father, and follow the Order of the King his Brother, who had ſent for him to deliver him from future Temptations. This Diſcourſe, which he delivered with a very good Grace, confirms me in the Belief I had of the late King's Religion, and made me ſee what I ought in Charity to believe of the King his Son.

But

The great Prejudice againſt the King was owing to the Rigidneſs of ſome of the Engliſh, who would not communicate with the French Proteſtants.

But other Engliſhmen had readily come to their Churches, and among them the King's own Chaplain Dr. Coſin, [thought in England to be one of the higheſt Churchmen.]

The Preſbyterians ſhould now wipe off the Aſperſion of no Biſhop, no King.

But over and above, there are in his Family among his Domeſticks ſome Gentlemen of our Religion, and my old Friends, who at ſeveral Times have given me Aſſurances of the Piety of this Prince, and the Stability in the Profeſſion he makes. The Truth is, ſome Engliſhmen have unadviſedly done him great Wrong; for upon falſe Prejudices they have forbore Communion with us, and ſo have raiſed Jealouſies, as if their King and all his Court were inclined to Popery. But the more Diſcreet behave themſelves otherwiſe; for knowing that the Belief of our Church and that of the Church of England is the ſame, they willingly came to our Churches; and even Dr. Coſin, the King of Great-Britain's Chaplain, hath joined with us with great Devotion.

To return to my Diſcourſe, God intruſts at this Day your Preſbyterians, the Gentlemen now in Power, with the Honour and Reputation of our Churches: For if without the Intervening of any foreign Power, they recal this Prince, and ſeat him on his Throne, they acquire to themſelves and to their Poſterity an immortal Glory, and ſtop their Mouths for ever, who charge us falſly as Enemies of Royalty, and make appear, that the Maxim of No Biſhop, no King, is injuriouſly imputed to us.

For my Part, I confeſs, that as I have deplor'd with bitter Tears that bloody Death of the late King; ſo ſhall it be to me an exceeding Joy, to behold the Re-eſtabliſhment of the King his Son, if performed with Circumſtances not leſſening the Splendour of Royal Majeſty, and which may be to the Glory of God, and the Good and Quiet of the three Kingdoms. 'Tis for this I offer up my Prayers to God, and for you ——

SIR,

Rejoicing at the general Inclination of the Engliſh People to recal their King.

To the Honour of the Proteſtant Religion.

The Death of the late King to be caſt upon the Sectaries.

—— I cannot but rejoice with you for the happy News which is convey'd to us from the Place where you are, whereby we are informed, that the univerſal Deſire of the People ſeems with a common Voice to recal their natural and lawful King. Now beſides that Generoſity and Equity oblige us to wiſh, that this Prince may return unto his own Kingdom and Inheritance, of which he hath been unjuſtly deprived; we ought alſo to deſire it for the Honour of our Religion, which ſhould be more dear to us than any other Intereſt. For when our Adverſaries formerly would charge the Blame of the Death of the late King of England on our Religion, you know we could very well guard ourſelves from that Reproach, by caſting it entirely upon the Sectaries, who indeed were alone guilty of that horrible Crime. But at preſent we do not ſtand upon the ſame Terms, ſince there is ſuch a Change of Affairs, the Sectarians having now loſt their Credit, or at leaſt being fallen from that ſovereign Power which they had graſp'd; and on the contrary, the Preſbyterian Party which is ours, now governing in England: So that if they let ſlip this fair Opportunity, which God ſeems to open to them, for the Re-eſtabliſhment of the King of Great-Britain in his Dominions, and to re-advance him to the Throne of his Anceſtors, it is moſt apparent, there will be no further ground to excuſe themſelves upon the Sectaries, nor to waſh our holy Religion from that Spot, from which by the Grace of God it hath always been preſerved pure and clean to this preſent.

The ſooner to be credited, if the Preſbyterians will now take the Opportunity of calling back the King.

Not to believe the evil Rumours of the King's Change of Religion.

His Chaplains good Proteſtants.

I well know there have been diſperſed evil Rumours concerning the Religion of this Prince: And I doubt not, but there are ſome Perſons at London, as well as here at Paris, who endeavour to perſuade the World, that he hath forſaken our Communion to embrace that of Rome. But who can believe a Thing that is ſo contrary to all Probability? There is nothing of this appears to us. On the contrary, we well know, that although this Prince hath been conſtrained by the Circumſtances of his preſent Condition, to reſide ſometimes in Places where the Exerciſe of our Religion is not permitted, yet he hath always had his Chaplains near to him, who are nothing leſs than Papiſts, and who have every where regularly in his Preſence prayed and performed the other Parts of Divine Service.

The King had taken great Care to prevent the Deſigns of perverting the Duke of Glouceſter.

Moreover, all Paris and all the World have known the Anger and the juſt Indignation which he expreſs'd, when he underſtood the Endeavours that had been uſed (though ineffectively) for the Apoſtacy of the Duke of Glouceſter. And if this young Prince rendred his Piety and Conſtancy admirable, by that firm Reſiſtance which he oppoſed in ſo tender an Age, to ſuch a violent and dangerous Perſecution: So alſo in that he retired to the King his Brother, and there ſought for a Sanctuary to his Religion, it is a very certain Argument, that the King had not quitted that Religion. For if this had been true, the Duke of Glouceſter had found him an Enemy inſtead of a Protector, and muſt have ſuffer'd the Loſs of his Conſcience, where he had ſought its Security, and where he really found it.

Anſwer to the Objection of the King's not coming to the Proteſtant Worſhip in France

It is objected againſt this, that during the whole Space of Time which the King of Great-Britain paſs'd in the Court of France, he never came to our religious Aſſemblies, and that amongſt others, he never came to Charenton on the Days of our Worſhip. But although this may at firſt View appear ſtrange to thoſe who

Not indeed at Paris, but yet he has come at Caen and in other Towns.

who know not the Reaſon of it; nevertheleſs, as we are better inform'd of this than any one, we can teſtifie that Religion was not the Cauſe of it, and that he abſtain'd from coming upon politick and prudential Conſiderations, which may be peculiar to our Church. And the Proof of this appears, in that when the King of England hath been out of Paris, he hath willingly gone to Sermon in the Churches of our Brethren; as for Inſtance, in Caen and ſome other Towns: And in Holland alſo he hath ſeveral Times heard the Sermons of the famous Monſieur More, who at preſent is our Colleague.

The Report of his being a Papiſt is a Calumny, and an Artifice to prevent his Reſtoration.

Thus, Sir, it is more clear than the Day, that whatſoever hath been reported 'till this Time of the Change of his Religion, is a meer Calumny, ſcatter'd by the Artifice of his Enemies, for to vilify him in the Judgment of his Subjects, and to alienate their Affections and Good-will from him, and finally, to render fruitleſs the juſt Prayers which they make at preſent for his happy Return into England.

Concluding with Prayers for his Majeſty's Reſtoration.

God grant their Accompliſhment by his Almighty Juſtice; and as it is he who hath inſpir'd theſe good Deſigns into the Hearts of his People, and who ſeems to diſpoſe all Things for the effecting them, may it pleaſe him to bleſs what remains of this Work, and to ſucceed it for his Glory, and the Honour of his Anointed, but eſpecially for the Edification of his Church. For this I pray to him with all my Soul, and recommend you particularly to his Grace, being, Sir,

The Letter to Triglandius, the Prince of Orange's Tutour, I writ upon Occaſion of a falſe and malicious Report of our King's being a Papiſt; which Report had its Birth and Growth from the King's own ſchiſmatical and rebellious Subjects living in Holland, and in others of the States Dominions, who being themſelves diſaffected to the King and his Cauſe, did do what they could to make the People of thoſe Provinces where they lived, as ill-affected to the King and his Cauſe, as they were themſelves. What Operation this Letter had upon the People of thoſe Countries I know not, but it was printed at the Hague without my Privity and without my Name to it.

Appendix to the Engliſh Life of Dr Joh. Barwick, No. xxviii. p. 508.

A Letter of Mr. Chancellour Hyde to John Barwick, dated from Bruſſels, 2. Apr. 1660. N. S.

Sir,

The King ſatisfy'd with the Service of Col. Clobery.

Tho' Jealouſies had been ſuggeſted both of him and of Redman.

They began to have ſome Hopes even of Monk himſelf.

In mine of Saturday laſt to Mr. Wright, I deſir'd him to excuſe me to you, for not acknowledging yours of the 10th both to the King and myſelf, which I had then newly received; as I had your former of the 2d of laſt Month. The King is abundantly ſatisfy'd with the Account you give of your Friend; and hath heard nothing that ſhould perſuade him, that Monk hath withdrawn any of his Confidence from him; but it is very true, one Letter from a reaſonable good Hand, (which doth not ſuſpect that we know any thing of him) mentions him as a great Stickler with the Officers to promote that Remonſtrance, which the General quaſh'd; and I find many others, eſpecially about Cheſter, who believe Redman to be an Anabaptiſt, and that Brigade to be even ready to proteſt and engage againſt the preſent Government, but nothing of thoſe Diſcourſes make any Impreſſion here; but his Majeſty promiſes himſelf great Effects of both their Services. And truly (if we may believe what ſome ſober Men of the City ſay of Monk himſelf, and ſome Expreſſions of his to them) we may reaſonably believe, that he is not only without any Malice or Sharpneſs towards the King, but even with very good Purpoſes to his Service; of which I hope we ſhall ſhortly ſee the Effects. ——

Great Correſpondence with the King.

And Application for his Royal Pardon.

I have not been able to compute, that any Letters of mine to you have miſcarry'd; and there muſt be ſome great Miſtake, if that Letter, in which my Lord of Derby's was incloſ'd, hath not been deliver'd to you. —— However I ſend you another of the ſame from the King to my Lord, which I hope will have better Fortune. —— Concerning the Pardon, it ſhall be diſpatch'd here upon an Hour's Warning, if the Party will cauſe it to be drawn there to his Satisfaction (there being no Body here that can do it) and if he will get it ingroſs'd, one Draught for the Record, and the other for the Great Seal. And then it ſhall be done with ſo much Secrecy, that the King's Secretary Nicholas and myſelf ſhall only know of it. —— And when this is done, the Party may be very confident, that the King intends him other Rewards than a Pardon: And in the mean Time he may aſſure himſelf, for the Quiet of his own Mind, that the King doth as heartily pardon him, as he deſires Pardon himſelf in Heaven.

The Editor of the Engliſh Life of Dr Barwick, 8vo p. 512. ſeems to conjecture well that this was not improbably Ge neral Monk's Pardon. See his Life by Skinner, p. 299.

George Morley, D. D. who died Biſhop of Wincheſter.

I hope Dr. Morley is by this Time with you, and will join with you in the Buſineſs of the Church, of which I can ſay no more, but that I hope God Almighty will not put it in their Power, who care ſo little for it, to ſuffer it to expire. The King is very well pleaſed with the Account Mr. Cholmeley hath given him, and is very confident of his Unkle: But when any thing is to be done in Yorkſhire, the King deſires that Mr. Cholmeley would be there upon the Place, in order to bring the King's Friends into the Conjunction; and thoſe of inferiour Condition may, I ſuppoſe, appear at the Beginning; though the reſt of the greater Quality may forbear, 'till the Seaſon ſhall be judg'd ripe. My Lord Langdale is not in this Country, but retir'd to a Monaſtery in Germany, to live with the more Frugality. I ſhall write to him, how much his Country-men deſire him.

Sir Marmaduke Langdale of Holme in Spalding-Moor, in the Eaſt Riding of Yorkſhire, a zealous Papiſt and Cavalier, was for his eminent Services to K Ch. I. and Sufferings for Ch. II. by Letters Patent bearing Date at Bruges, Feb. 4 Reg. 10. advanced to the Degree and Dignity of a Baron of this Realm, by the Title of Lord Langdale of Holme, to deſcend to his Heirs Male. He died at Holme, Aug 5 1661 and was buried at Sancton near adjacent. Note of the Editor of Dr. Barwick's Life in Engliſh, p. 93.

I pray remember my Service to our Friend Mr. Spellman, and give him Aſſurance of all the Offices I can perform towards him; and I do not doubt, but to be able to ſerve him, at leaſt to ſuch a Degree as he propoſeth.

Clem. Spellman, Eſq; made Baron of the Exchequer, 9. Mar. 15 Car. II.

The Preſbyterians and their Humours and Appetites muſt be now ſo well known, that I hope no Arts or Artifices are omitted to diſpoſe them, for their own Sakes as much as is poſſible, to repair the Ruins they have made; and then the worſt of them will be ſo contradicted and controuled by the beſt, that the Schiſm will appear. There are ſome of them, who have been eminent enough, when they were againſt us; who now either really are, or are willing to appear converted as well to a Piety towards the Church, as a Loyalty towards the King. I am, Sir,

Your moſt affectionate Servant,

HYDE.

The Fear of God and the King preſſed; in a Sermon at Mercer's Chapel, on Sunday March 25, 1660. By Matthew Griffith, D. D.

In which Sermon ſhewing himſelf too zealous for the Royal Cauſe, before General Monk durſt own it, he was to pleaſe and blind the fanatical Party, impriſon'd in Newgate, but ſoon after releaſed.

There was an Anſwer made to this by John Milton, entitled, Brief Notes upon a late Sermon, entitled THE FEAR OF GOD, &c. Whereupon came out a little Thing called No blind Guides, &c. addreſſed to the Author in two Sheets in Roger L'Eſtrange his Apology. London 1660 4to.

Ded. to the Right Worſhipful the Citizens of London. —— This Sermon prepared for you, and preached to you, and that by one of you; for I received my Life at firſt (as being born) and my Livelihood ever ſince (as being beneficed) among you. —— I gladly grant that many of you are zealouſly affected, and it were well if ſome of you were not a little infected by certain Creatures of your own ſetting up (I mean Lay-Levites if I may ſo call them) who ſtretch your Purſes, and ſtraiten your Conſciences againſt the Doctrine and Diſcipline eſtabliſhed by Law among us, by ſowing the Seeds of Schiſm in the Church, and Sedition in the Common-wealth, under Pretence of I know not what extraordinary Illumination, and Revelations which thoſe Dreamers dream of, &c.

It was yet unſeaſonable to preach up the King;

Complaints of the Offence given by ſuch Preachers.

And eſpecially by Dr. Griffith, who has highly offended General Monk.

The King has been preſs'd to ſend an Order to reſtrain ſuch forward Zeal.

But is content they ſhould be taught to wait for a full Seaſon.

Append. ad Vitam Johannis Barwici, 8vo. Nº xxxii. Engliſh Life, Nº. xxix. p 515.

—— I am heartily glad that Dr. Morley is with you; whom you will find a very worthy and diſcreet Perſon, and fit to keep you Company in allaying the too much Heat and Diſtemper which ſome of our Friends are in this unſeaſonable Conjuncture very much accuſed of; inſomuch as this very laſt Poſt hath brought over three or four Complaints to the King, of the very unſkilful Paſſion and Diſtemper of ſome of our Divines in their late Sermons; with which they ſay, that both the General and the Council of State are highly offended; as truly they have Reaſon to be, if as they report, there have been ſuch Menaces and Threats againſt thoſe who have hitherto had the Power of doing hurt; and are not yet ſo much depriv'd of it, that they ought to be undervalued. One Dr. Griffith is mention'd for having preach'd a Sermon of that kind, and ſince printed and dedicated to the General, who they ſay is extremely offended at it. Other Perſons are likewiſe named as guilty of the ſame Indiſcretions, who are ſo well known to me, that I do not believe it: And the King is very earneſtly deſir'd to ſend ſome ſuch Order and Reprehenſion, under his own Hand, to reſtrain thoſe who profeſs Devotion to his Service from ſuch Exceſſes. But it is not eaſy to do it in that Way that is preſcrib'd; nor are we willing to believe the Information is exact in all Particulars. However the King is really troubled at it; and (being extremely apprehenſive of Inconvenience and Miſchief to the Church and himſelf from Offences of that kind) hath commanded me to deſire, not only you and Dr. Morley, to uſe your Credit and Authority with ſuch Men, and to let them know from his Majeſty the Senſe he hath of it; but if you find occaſion, that you do ſpeak to the Biſhops of Ely and Saliſbury, to interpoſe their Authority, to conjure thoſe Men to make a better Judgment of the Seaſon, and not to awaken thoſe Jealouſies and Apprehenſions, which all Men ſhould endeavour to extinguiſh. And truly I hope, if Faults of this kind are not committed, that both the Church and the Kingdom will be better dealt with, than is imagin'd: And I am confident thoſe good Men will be more troubled, that the Church ſhould undergo a new Suffering by their Indiſcretion, than for all that they have ſuffer'd hitherto themſelves. I ſhould not have enlarg'd ſo much upon this Particular without Command; and I ſhould not have receiv'd that Command, if his Majeſty had not receiv'd very particular Information and Complaint in the Point. And I am ſure this Advertiſement cannot be ill taken, though in Truth there ſhould have been no Grounds for the other.

The King's Reception of Sir John Greenvill was by himſelf thus told to Dr. Price. It ſo fell out, that the Service and Meſſage of the Propoſers to bring in the King upon the Articles of the Iſle of Wight, were poſtponed; for Sir John Greenvill was got before them to the King, to whom he had related Monk's Acceptance of his Service. —— Inſomuch as the King upon the Receipt of the Letter from theſe Propoſers, (which he ſhewed to Sir John Greenvill) merrily told him, little do they in England think, that General Monk and I are upon ſo good Terms, for I myſelf could hardly have believ'd it till your Arrival; which hath brought me ſuch happy News, and with ſo great Secrecy too, from the General of my Reſtauration without Conditions, even beyond our Expectation here, or the Belief of all our Friends in England, excepting yourſelf, who was alone employed in it.

Philips's Ch. II. Fol. p. 718.

Sir John Greenvill at Bruſſels retired to a private Houſe, to which his Majeſty (upon Intimation) very ſecretly repair'd, and with great Satisfaction receiv'd the Intelligence he brought. But becauſe he could not proſecute the General's Deſire (as to his Removal, without Advice for the Manner of executing it) he conſulted the Marquis of Ormond, the Lord Chancellor and Mr. Secretary Nicholas, being Perſons in whom, from juſt Reaſon and Experience, he had moſt entire Confidence, by whoſe Aſſiſtance the Matter was ſo order'd, that in two or three Days, he took his Journey to Breda.

Lord Clarendon's Hiſt. Fol. Vol. III. p. 575.

When Sir John Greenvill had at large inform'd his Majeſty of the Affairs of England, of the manner of the General's Conference with him, and the good Affection of Mr. Morrice, and had communicated the Inſtructions and Advices he had receiv'd; as his Majeſty was very glad that the General had thus far diſcover'd himſelf, and that he had open'd a Door for Correſpondence, ſo he was not without great Perplexity upon many Particulars which were recommended to be done; ſome of which he believ'd to be impoſſible and unpracticable, as the leaving every Body in the State they were in, and confirming their Poſſeſſion in all the Lands which they held in England, Scotland, or Ireland, by Purchaſe or Donation, whether of Lands belonging to the Crown and Church, or ſuch who for adhering to his Father and himſelf, were declar'd Delinquents, and had their Lands confiſcated and diſpoſed of as their Enemies had thought fit. Then the complying with all Humours in Religion, and the granting a general Liberty of Conſcience, was a Violation of all the Laws in Force, and could not be apprehended to conſiſt with the Peace of the Kingdom. No Man was more diſpoſed to a general Act of Indemnity and Oblivion than his Majeſty was, which he knew in ſo long and univerſal a Guilt, was abſolutely neceſſary. But he thought it neither conſiſtent with his Honour nor his Conſcience, that thoſe who had ſate as Judges, and condemn'd his Father to be murther'd, ſhould be comprehended in that Act of Parliament: Yet it was adviſed, “ that there might be no Exception, or that above four might not be excepted ;” becauſe it was alledg'd, that ſome of them had facilitated the General's March by falling from Lambert, and others had barefaced advanced the King's Service very much.

After great Deliberation upon all the Particulars, and weighing the Importance of complying with the General's Advice in all Things which his Conſcience and Honour would permit, his Majeſty directed ſuch Letters and Declarations to be prepared, as ſhould be in a good Degree ſuitable to the Wiſhes and Counſel of the General, and yet make the Tranſaction of thoſe Things which he did not like, the Effect of the Power of the Parliament, rather than of his Majeſty's Approbation. And the Confidence he had upon the general Election of honeſt and prudent Men, and in ſome particular Perſons, who he heard were already choſen, diſpoſed him to make a general Reference of all Things which he could not reſerve to himſelf, to the Wiſdom of the Parliament, upon Preſumption, that they would not exact more from him than he was willing to conſent to; ſince he well knew, that whatever Title they aſſumed, or he gave them, they muſt have another kind of Parliament to confirm all that was done by them; without which they could not be ſafe and contented, nor his Majeſty obliged.

Dr. Price upon good Authority tells us, that in this Privy Council of King, Chancellor Hyde, Marquis of Ormond, and Secretary Nicholas, in the Preſence of Greenvill; Monk's Commiſſion was ſign'd to be Captain General of all his Majeſty's Land Forces in the three Kingdoms: And publick Diſpatches according to Inſtructions given, were framed and ſigned here.

A Letter of the Princeſs of Turenne, to facilitate the Return of King Ch. II.

Of which there was great Hope and earneſt Deſire.

A Letter from the Princeſs of Turenne, to a noble Lady her Couſin-German, Madam de Caſtelnaut at London, dated Tueſday April 6. N. S. 1660.

Reprinted in the Phœnix, Vol. II. p. 554.

——— I long much for the Satisfaction to ſee you again in this Country, you have already ſeen many Revolutions in that where you are; and whatever my Longing be for your Return, I do avow it, that I wiſh with all my Heart, you may yet ſee there that Change, which the preſent Condition of Affairs gives us Reaſon to hope very ſhortly, and which all good Men deſire with an extreme Paſſion, that is, the King's Return to his former Luſtre and Authority. I have ever wiſh'd with great Paſſion the Re-eſtabliſhment of that Prince for divers Reaſons, both for the Deſire which I think every one ought to have, that Things be done according to Juſtice, and for the Horror of the Crime committed upon the Perſon of the King his Father, which hath ſince drawn down ſuch terrible Judgments on thoſe Nations, and ſo fearful Confuſions in thoſe Churches which God had gathered there, and which he had made flouriſh with ſo much Luſtre and Purity, that one cannot forbear to weep over their Ruin, as bitterly as Ezra, Nehemiah and Daniel did over that of Jeruſalem, until it may pleaſe the Lord to hear us and ſettle them. I profeſs I cannot believe that that Sin can be expiated, nor the Interdict be removed from among them, but by the Re-eſtabliſhment of their lawful and ſovereign Lord, and by the rendring to him that Power which he receiv'd from God, and which for ſo long a Time hath been uſurped from him.

To atone for the Murder of his Royal Father.

The ſame who commands to give God the Things that are God's, commands us alſo to render to Cæſar the Things that are Cæſar's: So that I believe that he who would content himſelf with one of theſe two Duties, and ſo ſeparate the Things which God hath join'd, ſhould ſatisfy neither; and that ſo lame a Service ſhould be leſs acceptable among the Chriſtians, tban a lame Offering was among the Jews.

The Preſbyterians have now an Advantage of wiping off the Stain of their Sovereign's Blood, by reſtoring his Son and lawful Succeſſor.

Theſe Conſiderations make me wiſh with great Paſſion, that God would inſpire thoſe Nations to do their Duty; but I do avow it, that I double my Prayers and my Zeal, when I hear that the preſent Governors are no more thoſe Sectaries, but Men of our Profeſſion: They have had the Misfortune to be ſlander'd by the Adverſaries, as acceſſary to the Death of their Sovereign, and that infamous Accuſation ſeems to have blackned all their Brethren. Bleſſed be the God of Mercy, who preſents to them ſo fair an Occaſion to clear themſelves, and to wipe off that Reproach from ſo holy a Profeſſion as ours is, which we have ever boaſted to have this Advantage above all others, in that it did teach us better than any other, the Duty which we owe to Sovereigns, and did not permit that Men ſhould under any Pretext whatſoever, be diſpenſed with from that Oath of Fidelity which they have taken. I have ſo great an Impatience to hear that they have there ſo re-eſtabliſh'd it by ſo juſt and ſo lovely an Action, that I cannot tell you with how much Affection I beg'd it of God on the Faſt-Day which we kept at Charenton laſt Eaſter-Week: And how earneſtly I do beg it every Day. And I believe there be few Lovers of the Peace of Jeruſalem, who make not the ſame Prayer. And I ſee that all thoſe of our Profeſſion in this Kingdom are more earneſt in this than ever, whether it be that God inſpires this Motion, to pray more earneſtly at a Time when he will do his Work (as he is often pleas'd to make the Prayers of his Children meet with the Decrees of his Providence) or whether they have taken more Notice of late of the Effects of the Piety of the King of England, which makes them intereſt themſelves more ſenſibly in his Concerns.

This Princeſs was exceedingly ſatisfied in ſome late Converſation with the King.

Who had heard their Sermons at Rochel and Roan.

For my own Part I profeſs it, that I was exceedingly ſatisfied, when I had the Honour to pay my Reſpects to him the laſt Time he paſs'd thro' this Country, having heard him ſpeak with ſo great Teſtimonies of Piety, that I was extremely edify'd. He was alſo pleas'd to give this Mark of his Communion with our Churches, as to go to Sermon at Rochel and at Roan in his Paſſage, and if he had ſtaid here, we had had the Honour to ſee him at Charenton.

Is conſtantly at Morning and Evening Prayers in his Family.

There can nothing be added to the Regularity which this Prince keeps in attending daily upon thoſe Exerciſes of Piety, which are kept up Morning and Evening in his Family. In a word, I bleſs God, in that the Marks of God's Election are ſeen in him. And I hope God will uſe his Service for re-eſtabliſhing what we have before ſeen with ſo much Pleaſure in his Dominions; and that his Subjects will have Cauſe to bleſs the Lord for putting it into their Hearts, to render to their King his Crown, and that as fair as ever he had it, without ſpoiling or defacing it in ſetting it on his Head. I pray God with all my Heart, that he may give them his Grace, and I do lay it to Heart, that I take the Liberty to write you a long Letter upon it, which looks like a little Volume. But it is, my dear Couſin, becauſe I believe, that as you are on the Place, it is a Point of Duty to contribute always what one can to infuſe theſe Thoughts into ſuch as have them not, and that every one ought to be ambitious to bring their little Stone toward that excellent Work. And as I deſire very much, that thoſe in whom I have any Intereſt may employ themſelves towards what is excellent, I ſhall be very glad that my Lady, your Siſter in Law, and you, might contribute ſomewhat to this. Oblige me by aſſuring her of my moſt humble Service, and by believing me altogether

And the Marks of God's Election are ſeen in him.

And therefore his Subjects ſhould ſet the Crown upon his Head without ſpoiling or defacing it, i. e. without diſhonourable Conditions.

Yours ——

The King was well pleas'd with Gen. Monk's Advice for his Remove out of Flanders, being weary of it.

And tho' not inclinable to go to Holland, it would be worſe to go to France.

Lord Clarendon's Hiſtory Vol. III. Fol. p. 576.

The Advice for his Majeſty's Remove out of Flanders preſently, was not ungrateful; for he had Reaſons abundant to be weary of it; yet he was without any great Inclination to Holland; where he had been as unkindly uſed, as it was poſſible for any Gentleman to be. But beſides the Authority which the General's Advice deſerved to have, the Truth is, his Majeſty could remove no whither elſe. France was equally excepted againſt, and equally diſagreeable to the King; and the Way thither muſt be through all the Spaniſh Dominions. Dunkirk was a Place in many reſpects deſirable, becauſe it was in Poſſeſſion of the Engliſh, from whence he might embark for England upon the ſhorteſt Warning. And upon the firſt Alterations in England, after the Peace between the two Crowns, the King had ſent to Lockhart the Governour and General of the Engliſh there, by a Perſon of Honour and well reſpected by him, to invite him to his Service by the Proſpect he had of the Revolutions like to enſue, (which probably could not but be advantageous to the King) and by the Uncertainty of Lockhart's own Condition upon any ſuch Alterations. The Arguments were urged unto him with Clearneſs and Force enough, and all neceſſary Offers made to perſuade him to declare for the King, and to receive his Majeſty into that Garriſon; which might be facilitated by his Majeſty's Troops, if he did not think his own Soldiers enough at his Devotion: Yet he could not be prevailed with, urging the Truſt he had received, and the Indecency of breaking it; tho' he confeſſed, there was ſuch a Jealouſy of him in the Council of State, for his Relation and Alliance to Cromwell, that he expected every Day to be removed from that Command, as ſhortly after he was. Whether this Refuſal proceeded from the Punctuality of his Nature (for he was a Man of Parts, and of Honour) or from the Jealouſy of the Garriſon, that they would not be diſpoſed by him, (for though he was exceedingly beloved and obeyed by them, yet they were all Engliſh Men, and he had none of his own Nation, which was the Scotiſh, but in his own Family) certain it is, that at the ſame Time he refuſed to treat with the King, he refuſed to accept the great Offers made to him by the Cardinal, who had a high Eſteem of him, and offered to make him Marſhal of France, with great Appointments of Penſions and other Emoluments, if he would deliver Dunkirk and Mardyke into the Hands of France; all which Overtures he rejected: So that his Majeſty had no Place to reſort to, preferable to Breda.

He would rather chuſe Dunkirk, and had ſent to Lockhart the Governor for Reception there;

But he could not be perſuaded to receive his Majeſty into that Engliſh Garriſon.

Tho' he was a Man of Parts and Honour.

And refus'd the great Offers of Cardinal Mazarine, if he would deliver up Dunkirk and Mardyke into the Hands of the French.

A Letter from the reverend Mr. Sharp, Agent for the Kirk of Scotland at Weſtminſter, to Mr. Douglas at Edinburgh, dated March 27, deſiring to be recalled, and ſignifying, that the Elections are moſtly of the Royal Party, which cauſeth Fear of Mind among the ſober Party: That Wariſtoun that Day took Journey for Scotland. He excuſeth the General's Letter to them, as having ſome Expreſſions in it not ſo favourable put in by Gumble, who is at the Bottom for Epiſcopacy. He tells Mr. Douglas, that the Printing of his Sermon at King Charles's Coronation, at London, hath offended the epiſcopal Party, which doth not much matter. That the Declaration at Dumfermling bearing the King's Acknowledgment of the Blood ſhed by his Father's Houſe, is what he knows not how to excuſe. That Lauderdale and he endeavour to vindicate Scotland's treating with the King upon the Terms of the Covenant, from the Neceſſity England now find themſelves in, of treating with the King upon Terms, before his Return. He adds, ſome of the epiſcopal Party have ſent Meſſages to me twice or thrice, to give them a Meeting, which I have refuſed; and upon this I am reported both here and at Bruſſels, to be a Scotiſh rigid Preſbyterian, making it my Work to have it ſettled here, &c.

Perſons began now to purge themſelves from the Guilt and Odium of ſitting Judges on the King.

The Purgation of Alderman John Fowk,

Mercur. Polit. publiſhed by Order, N°. 614. 4^to.

Whereas Mention hath been made in ſeveral printed Books, that John Fowk Alderman was one of thoſe Perſons that did actually ſit as Judges upon the Tryal of his Majeſty, with the Council and Attendants of the Court; and was in the Number of the Judges at the King's Sentence of Death: Theſe are to give Notice to all Men, that the ſame is moſt falſe and ſcandalous, as will many Ways appear, and in particular by the Certificate of Henry Scobel, Clerk of the Parliament, in theſe Words following:

In a Book ordered by the Parliament to be kept among the Records of the Parliament, read in the Houſe the 11^th of December, 1650. and intituled, A Journal of the Proceedings of the High Court of Juſtice, erected by Act of the Commons of England, intituled, An Act of the Commons of England aſſembled in Parliament for erecting an High Court of Juſtice for the Trying and Judging of Charles Stuart King of England; in which Book are ſet down the Names of the Commiſſioners appearing every Day in Court, having diligently ſearched the ſame, the Name of John Fowk Alderman of London is not therein mentioned, as being preſent with the Commiſſioners at any Meeting upon the ſaid Tryal either publick or private.

March 28, 1660. Henry Scobel, Clerk of the Parliament.

And of Thomas Atkin Alderman.

Whereas Mention hath been made in ſeveral printed Books and Papers, that Thomas Atkin Alderman of London was one of thoſe Perſons that did actually ſit as Judges upon the Tryal of the late King Charles, and did ſeal the Warrant for his Execution; the Book of Parliament dated the 11^th Day of December, 1650. and intituled A Journal of the Proceedings of the High Court of Juſtice, &c. (in which Book is ſet down the Names of the Commiſſioners appearing every Day in Court) being diligently ſearched, the Name of the ſaid Thomas Atkin is not therein mentioned, as being preſent with the Commiſſioners at any Meeting upon the ſaid Tryal, either publick or private: The ſaid Thomas Atkin never ſaw the ſaid King ſince his going from Whitehall in the Beginning of the late Wars; and though he was ſummoned to be preſent at the ſaid Tryal, yet he never did nor would appear. It is therefore deſired, that (for his Vindication from that falſe and ſcandalous Aſperſion) this ſhould be publiſhed, that all Perſons might know the Truth.

A Letter of Mr. Douglas, a rigid Preſbyter in Scotland, to the reverend Mr. Sharp, Agent for the Kirk at Weſtminſter, dated Edinburgh March 31, 1660.

—— That he cannot but admire God's Hand in moving the late Parliament to revive the Solemn League and Covenant, which is the only Baſis of ſettling theſe diſtracted Nations —— is for putting a Reſtraint upon Malignants, the prelatick Party, the Fanaticks, and thoſe who are looſe and profane. — He is much offended that there is one Hardie who hath preached before the General in the Babyloniſh Faſhion, and vehemently cry'd up the Engliſh Hierarchy, and the reſt of the Romiſh Relicts, that remained in England after the firſt Reformation, which (he ſays) is made uſe of here to the General's Diſadvantage, &c. with a Poſtſcript declaring, that if the King come not in upon the Terms of the League and Covenant, his coming in will be diſadvantageous to Religion and the Liberty of the three Nations. Therefore I exhort Crawford, Lauderdale and yourſelf, to deal with all Earneſtneſs, that the League and Covenant be ſettled, as the only Baſis of the Security and Happineſs of theſe Nations.

A Letter of Mr. Sharp to Mr. Douglas Miniſter at Edinburgh, dated March 31, 1660.

The Engliſh are inclined to keep Scotland in Subjection; but the King will make it again a diſtinct Kingdom.

—— That there is no Fear of any Diſturbance from the Army; and as the General declared at firſt, ſo he hath laid Things effectually, that the military Power ſhall not maintain a ſeparate Intereſt from the civil; that all People he is among are Engliſh Men, and incline to keep Scotland under, and either incorporate or make us diſtinct, as they ſhall find moſt ſerviceable to their Intereſt: That he is of Opinion, the King both in point of Honour and Intereſt will reſtore us, and make us a diſtinct Kingdom. No Man queſtions now the King's being called in: That the real Preſbyterians in the City have deſired a Meeting with the Earl of Lauderdale and Mr. Sharp on Monday, to concert Matters againſt Sectaries and Cavaliers, which they deſign to keep.

1. Whether thoſe Perſons that are living that took upon themſelves the Name, Stile, and Title of the Parliament, beheaded their lawful Proteſtant King, baniſhed his Poſterity, overturning our ancient Government, endeavouring to ſet up an Utopian Commonwealth; whether theſe Perſons may not juſtly fear they may fall down quick into Hell, or fall into the ſame exemplary Terrours, Judgments, and Self-Executions with others, if they repent not for their Abominations?

2. Whether theſe Men that ſet aſide and repeal'd the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, and alſo the Solemn League and Covenant —— to ſet up a new Engagement —— are fit Perſons to be Truſtees for the Nation in this Time of imminent Danger, now the Nation groans under ſo many Oppreſſionss and Dangers?

(Concluding). From henceforth let no Man think it ſtrange, that any denies to ſwear at all, but rather wonder, that the God of this World ſhould ſo long have blinded the Minds of them that believe not in the Light of the Son of God, leſt by the Shining of the Light in their Hearts, they ſhould come to the Knowledge of the Glory of God in the Face of Chriſt, and by him ſhould be taught to ſpeak Truth without Swearing, and ſo he become the Head over all Things to the Church, who is God over all bleſſed for evermore. Amen.

The Declaration of Sir Geo. Booth reprinted.

There was reprinted in a large Sheet, the Letter or Declaration of Sir George Booth, before his Riſing in Cheſhire, dated from Cheſter, Aug. 2, 1659. — concluding] Let the Nation freely chuſe their Repreſentatives, and they as freely ſit and vote without Awe or Force of Soldiery; and whatever in ſuch an Aſſembly is determined, ſhall be by us freely and chearfully ſubmitted unto. — We were born for our Country: Our Religion and Laws are in Danger, and we will not be unconcerned. But we are faithful and peaceable in the Land; and if they in Authority will decline Hoſtility, and agree of a Means to admit the old Members of both Houſes, or to call a new free Parliament, let him be (and he only is truly) a Traytor that reſolves not his Judgment and Obedience to their Determination. I am, Sir,

Your Humble Servant,

George Booth.

Various Applications and Addreſſes made to Gen. Monk.

Chiefly not to admit the King, but upon the Conceſſions made by his Father in the Iſle of Wight.

Dr. Thomas Skinner*'s Life of Gen.* Monk, 8vo. p. 282.

General Monk was perpetually beſet with many and different Addreſſes. Among the reſt, Application was made to him by ſome Members of the late Parliament; who perſuaded him, that if the next Seſſion ſhould reſolve upon reſtoring the ancient Government and bring home the King; yet his Return ſhould not be ſafely admitted, but upon the ſame Articles which twelve Years before had been offer'd to his Father in his laſt and greateſt Extremity in the Iſle of Wight, and would have made him no better than Magni Nominis Umbra. By which Conceſſions the Militia of the Kingdom, with the Diſpoſal of all Places of Truſt, and all Officers, muſt have continued in the Hands of the Parliament; and the Preſbyterian Government be eſtabliſhed at leaſt for three Years, with the fair Probabilities of a longer Leaſe; and his moſt faithful Servants be dealt with as Delinquents. So that upon theſe Terms, the Parliament would not have been leſs Maſters than before, nor his Majeſty a much greater Prince than in his preſent Exile.

To which the General demurred, but would not ſeem to refuſe.

The General having before ſent away Sir John Greenvill privately to his Majeſty with Aſſurance of his Allegiance, and Reſolutions for his Service, without the mention of any Limitation, was ſomewhat concern'd how to make good Work with theſe Gentlemen. Nor were they ordinary People, but ſome of them Perſons of Quality, and all of them Men of Parts and Eminency among the Parties where they ſway'd. So that the General thought it moſt ſafe at preſent to entertain them with ſome Appearance of his Conſent; and having (as they thought) thus faſten'd the Trick upon him, their next Contrivance was to perfect this Juggle with the King. To that Purpoſe a Letter was ſent to him, relating their earneſt Deſires and Endeavours for his Return; and that to that End they had held ſeveral Treaties with General Monk, who could not be prevailed with to conſent to his Reſtauration, otherwiſe than upon his Father's Conceſſions in the Iſle of Wight; beſeeching his Majeſty to accept thereof, rather than, by his further Refuſal, to hazard a total Excluſion from his Crown and Kingdom. This Letter was deliver'd to his Majeſty whilſt Sir John Greenvill was attending upon him, to whom it was alſo ſhewn. But, upon farther deliberating among themſelves, the Artifice was quickly diſcovered; ſo that his Majeſty pleaſantly reply'd: I perceive theſe People do not know that I and General Monk ſtand upon much better Terms, which he has ſo generouſly propoſed to me, and Sir John Greenvill has ſo induſtriouſly tranſacted, and faithfully rendered me the Account of. And theſe Perſons when they came afterwards to find, that the General had, by Sir John Greenvil, enter'd into ſecret Correſpondencies with the King, though they had the Diſcretion to conceal their Diſcontent, yet were ever afterwards ſecret and implacable Enemies to him.

And therefore they took that Plan for granted.

And ſent the Propoſal in a Letter to the King:

Who underſtood the Artifice, and depended upon better Terms from General Monk.

Tuesday April 3.

No Reſolution had been taken about the Lords ſitting in Parliament.

However the King ſends his Letters to Lords, Commons, Fleet, and City of London.

When the Summons were ſent out to call the Parliament, there was no Mention or Thought of a Houſe of Peers; nor had the General intimated any ſuch Thing to Sir John Greenvill, nor did Sir John himſelf or Mr. Mordaunt, conceive that any of the Lords had a Purpoſe to meet at firſt, but that all muſt depend upon the Commons. However, the King thought not fit to paſs them by, but to have a Letter prepared as well for them, as for the Houſe of Commons; and likewiſe another to the Fleet; and another to the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-council of the City of London; who by adhering to the General, were like to add very much to his Authority.

Dr. Price ſays Greenvill was ſent back to the General about the beginning of April, and brought with him (beſides the Commiſſion to Monk) his Majeſty's Seal and Signet, by which

When all theſe Things were prepared, and peruſed, and approved by the King, which he reſolved to ſend by Sir John Greenvill to the General (Greenvill's and Mordaunt's being in Bruſſels being unknown; they, attending his Majeſty only in the Night at the Chancellour's Lodging, concealing themſelves from being taken Notice of by any) his Majeſty viſited the Marquis of Carracena, and told him, which the General was empower'd to make a Secretary of State, which he conferred upon Mr. Morrice by the Advice of Sir John Greenvill. And beſides his publick Letters he brought a private one to the General from his Majeſty, written with his Majeſty's own Hand, to which the General return'd an Anſwer by Mr. Bernard Greenvill, Brother to Sir John.

him, That he intended the next Day to go to Antwerp, and from thence to Breda to ſpend two or three Days with his Siſter the Princeſs of Orange, to whom the Dukes of York and Gloceſter were already gone, to acquaint her with the King's Purpoſe, and his Majeſty likewiſe, in Confidence inform'd him, that there were ſome Perſons come from England, who would not venture to come to Bruſſels, from whom he expected ſome Propoſitions and Informations, which might prove beneficial to him; which obliged him to make that Journey to confer with them.

The Marquis ſeem'd to think that of little Moment, and ſaid, "That Don "Alonzo expected every Day to receive Aſſurance, that the Levellers would u-"nite themſelves to the King's Intereſt, upon more moderate Conditions than "they had hitherto made; but deſired his Majeſty, That the Duke of York "might haſten his Journey into Spain, to receive the Command that was there "reſerv'd for him; and the King deſired him, that the Forces he had promi-"ſed for his Service might be ready againſt his Return to be embarked "upon the firſt Appearance of a hopeful Occaſion." So they parted; and his Majeſty went the next Day to Antwerp, with that ſmall Retinue he us'd to travel with.

The King's Departure from Bruſſels in great Secrecy and Haſte.

Upon Advice that the Governor intended him a Guard to keep him within the Bounds of the Spaniſh Dominions.

This Notice obliged the King to make his Eſcape in good Time.

His Departure was ſome Hours earlier than the Marquis imagin'd; and the Reaſon of it was this: In that Night, one Mr. William Galloway, an Iriſh young Man, Page at that Time to Don Alonzo de Cardinas, came to the Lord Chancellor's Lodgings, and finding his Secretary in his own Room, told him, "he "muſt needs ſpeak preſently with his Lord; for he had ſomething to impart to "him that concern'd the King's Life." The Chancellor, though at that Time in Bed, order'd him to be admitted; and the poor Man trembling told him, "That his Lord Don Alonzo and the Marquis of Carracena had been long toge-"ther that Evening; and that himſelf had over heard them ſaying ſomething of "ſending a Guard to attend the King: That about an Hour after, they parted; "and the Marquis ſent a Paper to Don Alonzo; who, when he went to Bed, laid "it on his Table: That himſelf, who lay in his Maſter's Ante-Chamber, look'd "into the Paper, when his Maſter was in Bed; and ſeeing what it was, had "brought it to the Chancellor: It imported an Order to an Officer to attend the King with a Party of Horſe, for a Guard wherever he went (a Reſpect that never had been paid him before) but not to ſuffer him, on any Terms, to go out of the Town. Aſſoon as the Chancellor had read the Order, he ſent his Secretary with it to the King; who was in Bed likewiſe, and his Majeſty having read it, the Secretary return'd it to Galloway, who went home, and laid it in its Place upon his Maſter's Table. The King commanded the Chancellor's Secretary to call up his Majeſty's Equerry, Sir William Armorer; and to him his Majeſty gave his Orders, charging him with Secrecy, that he would be gone at three of the Clock that Morning: and accordingly he went, attended by the Marquis of Ormond, Sir William Armorer, and two or three Servants more. Between eight and nine that Morning, an Officer did come and inquire for the King; but it happen'd, by this ſeaſonable Diſcovery, that his Majeſty had made his Eſcape ſome Hours before, to the no ſmall Mortification, no doubt, of the Spaniſh Governor.

When his Majeſty came into the States Dominions, he ſent away the ſeveral Diſpatches for England as dated from Breda.

Aſſoon as his Majeſty came into the States Dominions, which was about the Midway between Antwerp and Breda, he delivered to Sir John Greenvill (who attended there incognito, that he might warrantably aver to the General, that he had ſeen his Majeſty out of Flanders) all thoſe Diſpatches, which were prepared, and dated, as from Breda, upon the ſame Day in which he receiv'd them and where his Majeſty was to be that Night. The Copies of all were likewiſe delivered to him, that the General, upon Peruſal thereof, might without opening the Originals chuſe whether he would deliver them, if any Thing was contain'd therein which he diſliked; and his Majeſty referr'd it to him to proceed any other Way, if upon any Alterations which ſhould happen, he thought fit to vary from his former Advice.

Sir John Greenvill obtains a Promiſe for Mr. Morrice to be Secretary of State.

Sir John Greenvill, before his Departure told the King, "that though he had "no Order to propoſe it directly to his Majeſty; yet he could aſſure him, it "would be the moſt grateful and obliging Thing his Majeſty could do towards "the General, if he would give him leave to aſſure him, that aſſoon as he came "into England, he would beſtow the Office of one of the Secretaries of State "upon Mr. Morrice; who was as well qualified for it, as any Man who had not "been verſed in the Knowledge of Foreign Affairs." One of thoſe Places was then void by the Earl of Briſtol's becoming Roman Catholick, and thereupon reſigning the Signet; and his Majeſty was very glad to lay that Obligation upon the General, and to gratify a Perſon who had ſo much Credit with him, and had already given ſuch Manifeſtation of his good Affection to his Majeſty, and directed him to give that Aſſurance to the General. With theſe Diſpatches Sir John Greenvill, and Mr. Mordaunt who privately expected his Return at Antwerp, made what haſte they could towards England; and the King went that Night to Breda. The Letters which the King writ to the General, and to the Houſe of Commons, and the other Letters, with the Declaration, are here inſerted in the Terms they were ſent.

Copies of the Letters prepared by Chancellor Hyde, and ſent by Sir John Greenvill.

To the General, to the Council of State, and Army.

To our truſty and well-beloved General Monk, to be by him communicated to the Preſident, and Council of State, and to the Officers of the Armies under his Command.

Charles Rex,

Truſty and well-beloved, we greet you well: It cannot be believed, but that we have been, are, and ever muſt be, as ſollicitous as we can, by all Endeavours to improve the Affections of our good Subjects at Home, and to procure the Aſſiſtance of our Friends and Allies abroad, for the Recovery of that Right, which by the Laws of God and Man, is unqueſtionable; and of which we have been ſo long diſpoſſeſſed by ſuch Force, and with thoſe Circumſtances, as we do not deſire to aggravate by any ſharp Expreſſions; but rather wiſh, that the Memory of what is paſt, may be buried to the World. That we have more endeavoured to prepare and to improve the Affections of our Subjects at home for our Reſtauration, than to procure Aſſiſtance from abroad to invade either of our Kingdoms, is as manifeſt to the World. And we cannot give a better Evidence that we are ſtill of the ſame Mind, than in this Conjuncture, when common Reaſon muſt ſatisfy all Men, that we cannot be without Aſſiſtance from abroad, we chuſe rather to ſend to you, who have it in your Power to prevent that Ruin and Deſolation which a War would bring upon the Nation, and to make the whole Kingdom owe the Peace, Happineſs, Security, and Glory it ſhall enjoy, to your Virtue; and to acknowledge that the Armies have comply'd with their Obligations, for which they were firſt raiſed, for the Preſervation of the Proteſtant Religion, the Honour and Dignity of the King, the Privileges of Parliament, the Liberty and Property of the Subject, and the fundamental Laws of the Land; and that you have vindicated that Truſt, which others moſt perfidiouſly abuſed and betrayed. How much we deſire and reſolve to contribute to thoſe good Ends, will appear to you by our incloſed Declaration, which we deſire you to cauſe to be publiſhed for the Information and Satisfaction of all good Subjects, who do not deſire a farther Effuſion of precious Chriſtian Blood, but to have their Peace and Security founded upon that which can only ſupport it, an Unity of Affections amongſt ourſelves, an equal Adminiſtration of Juſtice to Men, reſtoring Parliaments to a full Capacity of providing for all that is amiſs, and the Laws of the Land to their due Veneration.

You have been yourſelves Witneſſes of ſo many Revolutions, and have had ſo much Experience, how far any Power and Authority that is only aſſumed by Paſſion and Appetite, and not ſupported by Juſtice, is from providing for the Happineſs and Peace of the People, or from receiving any Obedience from them (without which no Government can provide for them) that you may very reaſonably believe, that God hath not been ſo well pleaſed with the Attempts that have been made, ſince he hath uſually increaſed the Confuſion, by giving all the Succeſs that hath been deſired, and brought that to paſs without Effect, which the Deſigners have propoſed as the beſt Means to ſettle and compoſe the Nation: And therefore we cannot but hope and believe that you will concur with us in the Remedy we have apply'd; which to humane Underſtanding, is only proper for the Ills we all groan under; and that you will make yourſelves the bleſſed Inſtruments to bring this Bleſſing of Peace and Reconciliation upon King and People; it being the uſual Method in which divine Providence delighteth itſelf, to uſe and ſanctify thoſe very Means, which ill Men deſign for the Satisfaction of private and particular Ends and Ambition, and other wicked Purpoſes, to wholeſome and publick Ends, and to eſtabliſh that good which is moſt contrary to the Deſigners; which is the greateſt Manifeſtation of God's peculiar Kindneſs to a Nation that can be given in this World. How far we reſolve to preſerve your Intereſts and reward your Services, we refer to our Declaration; and we hope God will inſpire you to perform your Duty to us, and to your native Country; whoſe Happineſs cannot be ſeparated from each other.

We have entruſted our well-beloved Servant Sir John Greenvill, one of the Gentlemen of our Bed-chamber, to deliver this unto you, and to give us an Account of your Reception of it, and to deſire you, in our Name, that it may be publiſhed. And ſo we bid you farewell.

Given at our Court at Breda. the $\frac{4}{14}$th of April, 1660. in the Twelfth Year of our Reign.

To the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons.

To our truſty and well-beloved, the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons.

Charles, R.

Truſty and well-beloved, we greet you well: In theſe great and inſupportable Afflictions and Calamities, under which the poor Nation hath been ſo long exerciſed, and by which it is ſo near exhauſted, we cannot think of a more natural and proper Remedy than to reſort to thoſe for Counſel and Advice, who have ſeen and obſerved the firſt Beginning of our Miſeries, the Progreſs from bad to worſe, and the Miſtakes and Miſunderſtandings which have been produced, and contributed to Inconveniencies which were not intended; and after ſo many Revolutions, and the Obſervation of what hath attended them, are now truſted by our good Subjects to repair the Breaches which are made, and to provide vide proper Remedies for thoſe Evils, and for the laſting Peace, Happineſs, and Security of the Kingdom.

April 1660.

We do aſſure you upon our Royal Word, that none of our Predeceſſors have had a greater Eſteem of Parliaments than we have in our Judgment, as well as from our Obligation; we do believe them to be ſo vital a Part of the Conſtitution of the Kingdom, and ſo neceſſary for the Government of it, that we well know neither Prince nor People can be in any tolerable Degree happy without them; and therefore you may be confident, that we ſhall always look upon their Counſels, as the beſt we can receive; and ſhall be as tender of their Privileges, and as careful to preſerve, and protect them, as of that which is moſt near to our ſelf, and moſt neceſſary for our own Preſervation.

And as this our Opinion of Parliaments, that their Authority is moſt neceſſary for the Government of the Kingdom; ſo we are moſt confident, that you believe, and find, that the Preſervation of the King's Authority is as neceſſary for the Preſervation of Parliaments; and that it is not the Name, but the right Conſtitution of them, which can prepare and apply proper Remedies for thoſe Evils which are grievous to the People, and which can thereby eſtabliſh their Peace and Security. And therefore we have not the leaſt doubt, but that you will be as tender in, and as jealous of, any thing that may infringe our Honour or impair our Authority, as of your own Liberty and Property; which is beſt preſerved by preſerving the other.

How far we have truſted you in this great Affair, and how much it is in your Power to reſtore the Nation to all that it hath loſt, and to redeem it from any Infamy it hath undergone, and to make the King and People as happy as they ought to be; you will find by our incloſed Declaration; a Copy of which we have likewiſe ſent to the Houſe of Peers: And you will eaſily believe, that we would not voluntarily and of our ſelf, have repoſed ſo great a Truſt in you, but upon an entire Confidence that you will not abuſe it, and that you will proceed in ſuch a Manner, and with ſuch due Conſideration of us who have truſted you, that we ſhall not be aſhamed of declining other Aſſiſtance (which we have Aſſurance of) and repairing to you for more natural and proper Remedies for the Evils we would be freed from; nor ſorry, that we have bound up our own Intereſts ſo entirely with that of our Subjects, as that we refer it to the ſame Perſons to take Care of us, who are truſted to provide for them. We look upon you as wiſe and diſpaſſionate Men, and good Patriots, who will raiſe up thoſe Banks and Fences which have been caſt down, and who will moſt reaſonably hope, that the ſame Proſperity will again ſpring from thoſe Roots, from which it hath heretofore and always grown; nor can we apprehend that you will propoſe any thing to us, or expect any thing from us, but what we are as ready to give, as you to receive.

This Aſſurance of other Aſſiſtance which the King had declined, muſt relate to the Aids promiſed by France and Spain in the late Treaty at Fuenterabia, where the King was preſent, and obtain'd ſecret Articles in favour of recovering his Crown by force of Invaſion; the Conſequence whereof muſt have been very fatal to our Liberties and Religion.

If you deſire the Advancement and Propagation of the Proteſtant Religion, we have, by our conſtant Profeſſion, and Practice of it, given ſufficient Teſtimony to the World, that neither the unkindneſs of thoſe of the ſame Faith towards us, nor the Civilities and Obligations from thoſe of a contrary Profeſſion (of both which we have had an abundant Evidence) could in the leaſt Degree ſtartle us, or make us ſwerve from it; and nothing can be propoſed to manifeſt our Zeal and Affection for it, to which we will not readily conſent. And we hope, in due Time, our ſelf to propoſe ſomewhat to you for the Propagation of it, that will ſatisfy the World, that we have always made it both our Care and our Study, and have enough obſerved what is moſt like to bring Diſadvantage to it.

If you deſire Security for thoſe who, in theſe calamitous Times, either wilfully or weakly have tranſgreſſed thoſe Bounds which were preſcribed, and have invaded each others Rights, we have left to you to provide for their Security and Indemnity, and in ſuch a Way, as you ſhall think juſt and reaſonable; and by a juſt Computation of what Men have done, and ſuffered, as near as is poſſible, to take Care that all Men be ſatisfied; which is the ſureſt Way to ſuppreſs and extirpate all ſuch Uncharitableneſs and Animoſity, as might hereafter ſhake and threaten that Peace, which for the preſent might ſeem eſtabliſhed. If there be a crying Sin, for which the Nation may be involved in the Infamy that attends it, we cannot doubt but that you will be as ſollicitous to redeem it, and vindicate the Nation from that Guilt and Infamy, as we can be.

If you deſire that Reverence and Obedience may be paid to the fundamental Laws of the Land, and that Juſtice may be equally and impartially adminiſtred to all Men, it is that which we deſire to be ſworn to our ſelf, and that all Perſons in Power and Authority ſhould be ſo too.

In a Word, there is nothing that you can propoſe that may make the Kingdom happy, which we will not contend with you to compaſs; and upon this Confidence and Aſſurance, we have thought fit to ſend you this Declaration, that you may, as much as is poſſible, at this Diſtance, ſee our Heart; which when God ſhall bring us nearer together (as we hope he will do ſhortly) will appear to you very agreeable to what we have profeſſed; and, we hope, that we have made that right Chriſtian Uſe of our Affliction, and that the Obſervation and Experience we have had in other Countries, have been ſuch, as that we, and, we hope, all our Subjects, ſhall be the better for what we have ſeen and ſuffered.

We ſhall add no more, but our Prayers to Almighty God, that he will ſo bleſs your Counſels, and direct your Endeavours, that his Glory and Worſhip may be provided for; and the Peace, Honour, and Happineſs of the Nation, may be eſtabliſhed upon thoſe Foundations which can beſt ſupport it. And ſo we bid you farewell.

Given at our Court at Breda, this $\frac{4}{14}$th Day of April, 1660. in the Twelfth Year of our Reign.

His Majeſty's Declaration.

CHARLES, Rex.

The King's Declaration to all his loving Subjects.

Charles, by the Grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To all our loving Subjects of what Degree or Quality ſoever, greeting. If the general Diſtraction and Confuſion, which is ſpread over the whole Kingdom, doth not awaken all Men to a deſire and longing, that thoſe Wounds which have ſo many Years together been kept bleeding, may be bound up, all we can ſay will be to no Purpoſe. However after this long Silence, we have thought it our Duty to declare, how much we deſire to contribute thereunto: And that as we can never give over the Hope in good Time, to obtain the Poſſeſſion of that Right, which God and Nature hath made our due; ſo we do make it our daily Suit to the Divine Providence, that he will in compaſſion to us, and our Subjects, after ſo long Miſery and Sufferings, remit, and put us into a quiet and peaceable Poſſeſſion of that our Right, with as little Blood and Damage to our People as is poſſible; nor do we deſire more to enjoy what is ours, than that all our Subjects may enjoy what by Law is theirs, by a full and entire Adminiſtration of Juſtice throughout the Land, and by extending our Mercy where it is wanted and deſerv'd.

And to the End that Fear of Puniſhment may not engage any conſcious to themſelves of what is paſt, to a Perſeverance in Guilt for the future, by oppoſing the Quiet and Happineſs of their Country, in the Reſtoration both of King, and Peers, and People, to their juſt, ancient, and fundamental Rights; we do by theſe Preſents declare that we do grant a free and general Pardon, which we are ready upon demand, to paſs under our Great Seal of England, to all our Subjects of what Degree or Quality ſoever, who within forty Days after the publiſhing hereof, ſhall lay hold upon this our Grace and Favour, and ſhall by any publick Act declare their doing ſo, and that they return to the Loyalty and Obedience of good Subjects; excepting only ſuch Perſons as ſhall hereafter be excepted by Parliament. Thoſe only excepted, let all our Subjects, how faulty ſoever, rely upon the Word of a King, ſolemnly given by this preſent Declaration, that no Crime whatſoever committed againſt us or our Royal Father before the Publication of this, ſhall ever riſe in Judgment or be brought into queſtion, againſt any of them, to the leaſt Indamagement of them either in their Lives, Liberties, or Eſtates or (as far forth as lies in our Power) ſo much as to the Prejudice of their Reputations, by any Reproach or Terms of Diſtinction from the reſt of our beſt Subjects: We deſiring, and ordaining, that henceforward all Notes of Diſcord, Separation, and Difference of Parties, be utterly aboliſhed among all our Subjects; whom we invite and conjure to a perfect Union among themſelves under our Protection, for the Reſettlement of our juſt Rights and theirs in a free Parliament, by which upon the Word of a King we will be adviſed.

And becauſe the Paſſion and Uncharitableneſs of the Times, have produced ſeveral Opinions in Religion, by which Men are engaged in Parties and Animoſities againſt each other, which when they ſhall hereafter unite in a Freedom of Converſation, will be compoſed, or better underſtood; we do declare a Liberty to tender Conſciences; and that no Man ſhall be diſquieted, or called in queſtion for Differences of Opinion in Matters of Religion, which do not diſturb the Peace of the Kingdom; and that we ſhall be ready to conſent to ſuch an Act of Parliament as, upon mature Deliberation ſhall be offer'd to us, for the full granting that Indulgence.

And becauſe in the continued Diſtractions of ſo many Years, and ſo many great Revolutions, many Grants and Purchaſes of Eſtates have been made to and by many Officers, Soldiers and others, who are now poſſeſs'd of the ſame, and who may be liable to Actions at Law upon ſeveral Titles; we are likewiſe willing that all ſuch Differences, and all Things relating to ſuch Grants, Sales and Purchaſes ſhall be determin'd in Parliament, which can beſt provide for the juſt Satiſfaction of all Men who are concern'd.

And we do farther declare, that we will be ready to conſent to any Act or Acts of Parliament to the Purpoſes aforeſaid, and for the full Satiſfaction of all Arrears due to the Officers and Soldiers of the Army under the Command of General Monk; and that they ſhall be receiv'd into our Service upon as good Pay, and Conditions, as they now enjoy.

His Majeſty's Letter to the Houſe of Lords.

CHARLES, Rex.

The King's Letter to the Houſe of Lords.

Right Truſty and Right well-beloved Couſins, and Right Truſty and well-beloved Couſins, and Truſty and Right well-beloved, we greet you well. We cannot have a better Reaſon to promiſe our ſelf an end of our common Sufferings and Calamities; and that our own juſt Power and Authority will, with God's Bleſſing, be reſtored to us, than that you are again acknowledged to have that Authority and Juriſdiction which hath always belonged to you by your Birth, and the Fundamental Laws of the Land: And we have thought it very fit and ſafe for us to call to you for your Help, in the compoſing the confounding Diſtempers and Diſtractions of the Kingdom; in which your Sufferings are next to thoſe we have undergone our ſelf; and therefore you cannot but be the moſt proper Counſellors for removing thoſe Miſchiefs, and for preventing the like for the future. How great a Truſt we repoſe in you, for the procuring and eſtabliſhing a bleſſed Peace and Security for the Kingdom, will appear to you by our incloſed Declaration; which Truſt, we are moſt confident you will diſcharge with that Juſtice and Wiſdom that becomes you, and muſt always be expected from you; and that upon your Experience how one Violation ſucceeds another, when the known Relations and Rules of Juſtice are once tranſgreſſed, you will be as jealous for the Rights of the Crown, and for the Honour of the King, as for your ſelves: And then you cannot but diſcharge the Truſt with good Succeſs, and provide for, and eſtabliſh the Peace, Happineſs and Honour of King, Lords, and Commons, upon that Foundation which can only ſupport it; and we ſhall be all happy in each other: And as the whole Kingdom will bleſs God for you all, ſo we ſhall hold our ſelf obliged in an eſpecial Manner, to thank you in particular, according to the Affection you ſhall expreſs towards us. We need the leſs enlarge to you upon this Subject, becauſe we have likewiſe writ to the Houſe of Commons; which we ſuppoſe they will communicate to you. And we pray God to bleſs your joint Endeavours for the Good of us all. And ſo we bid you very heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at Breda, this $\frac{4}{14}$th Day of April 1660, in the Twelfth Year of our Reign.

To our Truſty and Well-beloved General Monk, and General Mountague, Generals at Sea, to be communicated to the Fleet.

The King's Letters to the two Generals at Sea, to be communicated to the Fleet.

Charles, Rex.

Truſty and Well-beloved, we greet you well. It is no ſmall Comfort to us, after ſo long and great Troubles and Miſeries, which the whole Nation hath groaned under; and after ſo great Revolutions, which have ſtill encreaſed thoſe Miſeries, to hear that the Fleet and Ships, which are the Walls of the Kingdom, are put under the Command of two Perſons ſo well diſpoſed to, and concern'd in the Peace and Happineſs of the Kingdom as we believe you to be; and that the Officers and Seamen under your Command, are more inclin'd to return to their Duty to us, and put a Period to theſe Diſtempers and Diſtractions, which have ſo impoveriſh'd and diſhonour'd the Nation, than to widen the Breach, and to raiſe their Fortunes by Rapine and Violence; which gives us great Encouragement and Hope, that God Almighty will heal the Wounds by the ſame Plaiſter that made the Fleſh raw, that he will proceed in the ſame Method in pouring his Bleſſings upon us, which he was pleaſed to uſe, when he began to afflict us; and that the Manifeſtation of the good Affection of the Fleet and Seamen towards us, and the Peace of the Nation, may be the Prologue to that Peace, which was firſt interrupted by the Miſtake and Miſunderſtanding of their Predeceſſors; which would be ſuch a Bleſſing upon us all, that we ſhould not be leſs delighted with the Manner, than the Matter of it.

In this Hope and Confidence, we have ſent the incloſed Declaration to you; by which you may diſcern, how much we are willing to contribute towards the obtaining the general and publick Peace: In which as no Man can be more, or ſo much, concern'd, ſo no Man can be more ſollicitous for it. And we do earneſtly deſire you, that you will cauſe the ſaid Declaration to be publiſhed to all the Officers and Seamen of the Fleet; to the end, that they may plainly diſcern, how much we have put it into their Power to provide for the Peace and Happineſs of the Nation, who have been always underſtood by them to be the beſt and moſt proper Counſellors for thoſe good Ends: And you are likewiſe farther to declare to them, that we have the ſame gracious Purpoſe towards them which we have expreſſed towards the Army at Land; and will be as ready to provide for the Payment of all Arrears due to them, and for rewarding them according to their ſeveral Merits, as we have expreſſed to the other; and we will always take ſo particular a Care of them and their Condition, as ſhall manifeſt our Kindneſs towards them. And ſo depending upon God's Bleſſing for infuſing thoſe good Reſolutions into your, and their Hearts, which are beſt for us all; we bid you farewell.

Given at our Court at Breda, this $\frac{4}{14}$th Day of April 1660. in the Twelfth Year of our Reign.

To our truſty and well-beloved the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Council of our City of London.

The King's Letters to the City of London.

Charles, R.

Truſty and well-beloved, we greet you well: In theſe great Revolutions of late, happen'd in that our Kingdom, to the Wonder and Amazement of all the World, there is none that we have look'd upon with more Comfort, than the ſo frequent and publick Manifeſtations of their Affections to us in the City of London, which hath exceedingly raiſed our Spirits, and which, no doubt, hath proceeded from the Spirit of God, and his extraordinary Mercy to the Nation; which hath been encouraged by you, and your good Example, to aſſert that Government under which it hath, ſo many hundred Years, enjoy'd as great Felicity as any Nation in Europe; and to diſcountenance the Imaginations of thoſe who would ſubject our Subjects to a Government they have not yet deviſed, and to ſatisfy the Pride and Ambition of a few ill Men, would introduce the moſt arbitrary and tyrannical Power that was ever yet heard of. How long we have all ſuffer'd under thoſe and the like Devices, all the World takes Notice, to the no ſmall Reproach of the Engliſh Nation; which we hope is now providing for its own Security and Redemption, and will be no longer bewitched by thoſe Inventions.

How deſirous we are to contribute to the obtaining the Peace and Happineſs of our Subjects without Effuſion of Blood; and how far we are from deſiring to recover what belongs to us by a War, if it can be otherwiſe done, will appear to you by the incloſed Declaration; which together with this our Letter, we have entruſted our right truſty and well-beloved Couſin, the Lord Viſcount Mordaunt, and our truſty and well-beloved Servant, Sir John Greenvill, Kt. one of the Gentlemen of our Bed-chamber, to deliver to you; to the End, that you and all the reſt of our good Subjects of that our City of London (to whom we deſire it ſhould be publiſhed) may know, how far we are from the Deſire of Revenge, or that the Peace, Happineſs, and Security of the Kingdom, ſhould be raiſed upon any other Foundation than the Affections and Hearts of our Subjects, and their own Conſents.

We have not the leaſt doubt of your juſt Senſe of theſe our Condeſcenſions, or of your Zeal to advance and promote the ſame good End, by diſpoſing all Men to meet us with the ſame Affection and Tenderneſs, in reſtoring the fundamental Laws to that Reverence that is due to them, and upon the Preſervation whereof all our Happineſs depends. And you will have no Reaſon to doubt of enjoying your full Share in that Happineſs, and of the improving it by our particular Affection to you. It is very natural for all Men to do all the Good they can for their native Country, and to advance the Honour of it; and as we have that full Affection for the Kingdom in general, ſo we would not be thought to be without ſome extraordinary Kindneſs for our native City in that particular; which we ſhall manifeſt on all Occaſions, not only by renewing their Charter, and confirming all thoſe Privileges which they have received from our Predeceſſors but by adding and granting any new Favours, which may advance the Trade, Wealth, and Honour of that our native City; for which we will be ſo ſollicitous, that we doubt not but that it will, in due Time, receive ſome Benefit and Advantage in all thoſe reſpects, even from our own Obſervation and Experience abroad. And we are moſt confident, we ſhall never be diſappointed in our Expectation of all poſſible Service from your Affections: And ſo we bid you farewell.

THURSDAY Apr. 5.
The Scots Preſbyterians adhere to their Reſolution of bringing in the King upon Covenant Terms if poſſible.

A Letter of the reverend Mr. Sharp, Agent for the Kirk of Scotland, to Mr. Douglas a chief Preſbyter in Edinburgh, dated April 5, 1660. telling him, That according to Appointment, they had had a Meeting with ten Preſbyterian Miniſters whom they could truſt, where Lauderdale, they, and he had agreed upon the Neceſſity of bringing in the King upon Covenant Terms. There are (ſays he) Endeavours for an Accommodation between the moderate Epiſcopalian Party and the Preſbyterians. But at our Meeting Lauderdale and I obtained of thoſe Miniſters, that they ſhould not give a Meeting to the Epiſcopal Men, 'till they firſt met among themſelves, and reſolved on the Terms they would ſtick to. —— The King is acquainted with all Proceedings here, and wants not Information of the Carriage and Affection of Scotland. The Parliament will addreſs him, ſome ſay in hard, others upon honourable Terms. I ſee not full ground of Hope, that Covenant Terms will be rigidly ſtuck to.

Woodrow's Introduction to the Hiſtory of the Church of Scotland, p. 17.

Another Letter from the ſame Hand to the ſaid Mr. Douglas at Edinburgh, dated April 7, 1660. —— The Lord having opened a fair Door of Hope, we may look for a Settlement upon the Grounds of the Covenant, and thereby a Foundation laid for Security againſt the prelatick and fanatick Aſſaults. But I am dubious if this ſhould be the Reſult of the Agitations now on foot. The Story of Hardie's preaching before the General in the Babyloniſh Habit is a meer Forgery. We intend to publiſh ſome Letters from the French Proteſtant Miniſters vindicating the King from Popery, and giving him a large Character. The Sectaries will not be able to do any thing to prevent the King's coming in. Our honeſt Preſbyterian Brethren are cordially for him. I have been dealing with ſome of them to ſend ſome Teſtimony of their Affection for him, and Yeſternight five of them promiſed to ſend a thouſand Pieces of Gold to him. The Epiſcopal Party are making Applications to the Preſbyterians for an Accommodation, but the Preſbyterians reſolve to ſtick to their Principles. I ſaw a Letter this Day under the King's Hand, exhorting his Friends to Moderation, and Endeavours for compoſing Differences amongſt his good People.

Introduction to the Hiſtory of the Church of Scotland, ib.

To vindicate the King from the Imputation of Popery; the Preſbyterians agree to publiſh the Letters of ſome foreign Proteſtants written in Vindication of his Majeſty's good Affection for the Proteſtant Religion,

And ſend Preſents of Gold, &c.

The Preſbyterians refuſe all Accommodation with the Epiſcopal Men.

Of Monſieur de l'Angle.

A Letter written by Monſieur de l'Angle, Miniſter of the Reformed Church at Roven in Normandy, to a Friend of his in London, more fully evidencing the King's Stedfaſtneſs in the Proteſtant Religion; and acknowledging that he writes this upon an happy View of the King's Re-eſtabliſhment on his Throne, and fearing that to have the King thought a Papiſt might hinder that good Event: And therefore he is willing to take away that Obſtacle by arguing firſt, that the Reſtauration of the King of England ought not to depend on his Religion; and then clearing all Suſpicion of him, by giving an Account of his Majeſty's Behaviour at his firſt coming into France after his Defeat at Worceſter, when he had a ſanctified Heart, and ſpake the very Language of Canaan; yet proteſting before God that he had never any Converſe with that Prince, never ſaw or ſpake to him. Reflections of Mr. Wood upon that Letter.

A. Wood Athen. Oxon. Vol. II. Col. 585.

Mr. Wood ſays of this Epiſtle, that the Author of it (as writing to a Proteſtant, who was a Favourer of his Maſter's Intereſt, and with whom he had before held ſome Correſpondence by Letters) fully clears King Charles II. from all the leaſt Ground of Suſpicion of his inclining to Popery, throughout his whole Time of Exile, contrary to what ſome Engliſh Men had reported either through Ignorance or Hatred; and which was by an eaſy Credulity too ſpeedily entertained by ſome Foreigners. After this, he vehemently preſſeth the Dutch (as deſiring that this his Epiſtle might be communicated to other Dutchmen of the like Perſuaſion with the Perſon to whom it was immediately directed) with ſtrong Reaſons drawn from the ſeveral perſuaſive Heads vigorouſly to imploy their ſpeedy and utmoſt Endeavours to reſtore his Majeſty to his lawful Throne and juſt Rights.

General Monk's Letter to the Univerſity of Oxford.

Regiſter of the Un. of Oxon.

A Letter of General Monk, directed, For the reverend and honourable the Vice-chancellour and the Body of the Convocation in the Univerſity of Oxford.

Honourable Gentlemen,

Recommending the late Speaker Lenthall to be elected for one of their Burgeſſes,

As the moſt worthy Perſon.

The General himſelf having declined their Offer of chuſing him.

But they would not chuſe Lenthall, as well knowing his paſt Services in Oppoſition to the Church and Crown.

How ſtrongly ſoever the General recommended him, and inſiſted on the Choice of him.

Though I am confident I need not refreſh my former Deſires for your Election of the Maſter of the Rolls, for one of the Univerſity's Burgeſſes in the enſuing Parliament; yet underſtanding the ſevere Oppoſition againſt him, I muſt needs take Leave to tell you, that I had never deſir'd that Favour, either for myſelf or any other, had I not apprehended you as ready to grant it, as I was free and chearful to aſk it; and I have Reaſon yet to believe that I could not ſo much miſtake thoſe worthy Perſons that gave me a Tender herein, as to imagine a greater Favour to myſelf, than they, or you intended me. Gentlemen, it is really the Deſire of my Heart to be an Inſtrument in the Hand of God to do good in my beſt Services, both to yourſelves and to the whole Nation; and had I known any Perſon more able and ready to aſſiſt in that great Work, I had certainly with the ſame Freedom propos'd him; but you muſt give me Leave to ſay, it was not Favour but Choice, and that in order to the beſt Ends; that fix'd and determin'd my Thoughts upon that worthy Perſon; and therefore notwithſtanding his Modeſty and Self-denial herein to me, I take the Freedom ſtill to inſiſt upon my firſt Deſires ſent unto you by Captain Warcupp, your Condeſcenſion whereto will oblige him to continue his Regards to you, and the whole Church, and much gratify,

Gentlemen,
Your very humble Servant,
George Monk.

Mr. Lenthal's Letter to the University of Oxford.

To recommend himſelf as commended by General Monk to be elected their Burgeſs in Parliament.

For the reverend and honourable the Vice-Chancellour and the Body of the Convocation in the Univerſity of Oxford.

Reverend and honourable Sirs,

It hath been the Pleaſure of his Excellency the Lord General, to recommend me to your Univerſity, to be elected a Burgeſs in this next Parliament for you; it being a Place which himſelf had the Offer of the Honour to be choſen in: And for Reaſons to himſelf, with the Approbation and Deſires of the now moſt eminent Perſons, and as he believes, moſt for your Service, hath preſented me to your Conſiderations for it in his own Room. That I have been ſerviceable to you, I know the Aſſurance of it myſelf, and muſt expect the Teſtimony of it from many amongſt you; and that there was no Inconvenience beſel you, I can (I thank God) give myſelf the Comfort of it; and I can alſo ſay, you have enjoy'd the Benefit of my Endeavours. I know not what Oppoſition may be made me; if from Perſons, they muſt be very active that can outſtrip me in your Service; if from Suggeſtions, they will upon due Conſideration appear improbable to you; and which I muſt wholly diſown, becauſe I know my own Heart, and upon what Principles I have always gone. I ſhall leave this upon your Thoughts, and ſhall hope to find your Choice conferr'd upon me, it being the greateſt Honour which I do court, and which will enable me to continue the Reſpects and Service I have ever paid the Univerſity, and perhaps put a Power in my Hands in this Juncture of Affairs, to render myſelf not leſs uſeful in the Settlement of this Nation, than active for your Advancement, which being what I have ever propoſed to myſelf (when effected) I ſhall eſteem the happieſt Action in the Life of,

Reverend and honourable Sirs,
Your moſt humble
and faithful Servant,
WILL. LENTHALL.

Rolls, April
6, 1660.

He would have deſiſted but that the General will not ſuffer him ſo to do.

The Oppoſition made againſt me, whereof I have been advertiſed, had eaſily perſuaded me to deſiſt, but that my Lord General ſince the writing hereof hath obliged me to perſiſt herein.

A Letter from Chancellour Hyde to Mr. John Barwick, dated Breda April 16, N. S. 1660.

Appendix to the Engliſh Life of Dr. Joh. Barwick, N°. 26.

S I R,

The King comes to Breda; and the Chancellor following his Majeſty, begins to rejoice in the good Proſpect of Affairs; and in the good Opinion of General Monk.

Colonel Clobery.

Suppoſed to be Colonel Clobery and Colonel Redman.

The King and his Court at Breda conceal their knowledge of ſeveral Things and Perſons.

Emulations and Prejudices among the King's Friends.

When honeſt Mr. Wright left us, I had ſo much upon my Hands to diſpatch, that I obliged him to make my Excuſe to you for not writing, which he promiſed me to do very confidently; and next to not writing at all, the Diſpatch I ſhall now ſend you, in the Acknowledgment both of yours of the 23d and the 30th will need a new Excuſe; for the Truth is, I am now almoſt in as much haſte as I was when he left me. The King came hither but on Wedneſday, and I but the laſt Night: So that having but two or three Hours to make uſe of a ſafe Meſſenger, I can hardly find the Letters I am to anſwer. The Proſpect of your Affairs looks very well towards us, and I am perſuaded that Monk will in the End appear to have proceeded like a ſober Man, and aſſure yourſelf, your Friend cannot be without a very good Acknowledgment, for contributing much towards that Temper; and whatever Jealouſies there be among themſelves, between the civil and the martial Counſellours; I do not find there is any of the laſt Claſſis, by whom Monk is like to be adviſed, or who are like to do him ſo much Service in the Army as your two Friends are: And therefore I pray continue your Interpoſition with them, with all the Encouragements that can be deſir'd from the King, of which they may be moſt confident. And here I muſt not omit to tell you, that ſome Perſons of unqueſtionable Affections, and of great Quality, have ſent lately to the King, to make Propoſitions to him of engaging Colonel Clobery, as a Perſon moſt able to do him Service with the General: They not imagining, that we have any Knowledge or Communication with him: Nor do we pretend it; but ſeem to decline to write ſuch Letters as they deſire, out of an Apprehenſion, that he is of the Republican Party, and not to be wrought upon. This we think very neceſſary you ſhould know, and it may be he himſelf; leſt it ſhould be intimated to him, that there is an ill Opinion of him here; which ſometimes falls out by the Weakneſs of our Friends; when to avoid ſome unſeaſonable Overtures, or a more unſeaſonable Diſcovery, we ſeem to have Prejudice towards thoſe, in whom we have moſt confided. Lord Mordaunt tells me of a Miſtake you incurr'd, in delivering a wrong Letter to Colonel Redman, but I ſuppoſe you have ſince rectify'd it; otherwiſe I would have ſent you a Duplicate of it; as I did of that to my Lord of Derby, which I hope came ſafe to your Hands.

I am heartily glad that Dr. Morley is with you, &c.

The Printer to the Reader. If ever was a Relation whoſe Truth might be indubitable, it is queſtionleſs this which I give you at preſent. It was compoſed on the publick Acts drawn from the Regiſters of the Eſtate, and expoſed to the Eyes of thoſe who were Eye-witneſſes of the Things whereof it treateth, and made the Speeches which are inſerted there, and which are ſo faithfully related, that except one only, there is none which was not pronounced in the ſame Manner as you ſee them here written, &c.

The King's Reception at Breda.

The 14th of April, the King arriv'd at Breda, and was the ſame Day complemented by Mr. Snel old Burgomaſter in the Name of the Magiſtrates, who would likewiſe oblige the Town to make a ſolemn Entrance for his Majeſty, but the Princeſs Royal hindred it for moſt conſiderable Reaſons.

The ſeveral Princes wait on the King.

Among others the Duke of Brunſwick-Lunenburg reſiding at Hanover, came to attend his Majeſty.

The Prince of Orange his Nephew was at Breda the 16th of April. Prince Frederick of Naſſau, Brother to Prince Maurice arrived there the 2d of May with the Princeſs his Wife from his Government of Bergen op Zoom. And the Duke of Brunſwick-Lunenburgh, who reſides at Hanover, came there four Days after, the Viſit of this Prince who is no leſs conſiderable through the excellent Qualities which he poſſeſſeth, then through the Extent of his Dominions, was ſo agreeable to his Majeſty, that he could not forbear to teſtify it unto him on all Occaſions, and in a moſt obliging manner; inſomuch that he would voluntarily ſup with his Highneſs, accompanied with the Dukes his Brothers, and live with him in a Confidence which might make him to hope for a very particular good Will for the future.

The French King takes away the Principality of Orange, on Pretence of reſtoring it, when the Minor Prince ſhall come of Age.

Adviſed from the Hague, that the News is brought hither, how that the King of France hath made himſelf Maſter of Orange, which Place the preceding Princes have poſſeſs'd ſo long, and is taken now from this innocent Prince in his Minority, upon Pretence of reſtoring it when he ſhall be of Age. Which cauſeth great Diſcontent among the People here, and great Grumblings there are againſt thoſe that have been the Cauſe of it. For though it be pretended that his Majeſty of France took Poſſeſſion of the ſaid Place for the Prince of Orange, till he come to the Age of twenty Years, yet it is feared theſe Intentions will not anſwer our Expectation.

MONDAY Apr. 9.

It was hard to keep the Peace at this critical Juncture.

The beſt Expedient for it was to form an Engagement for the Army to acquieſce in the Counſels of the approaching Parliament, and in the mean Time to obey Orders of the General and Council of State.

The Proclamation for preventing Cabals and Tumults in the Army, did not ſufficiently prevent the ill Humours amongſt the Soldiers, which made Commiſſary Clarges conſult privately with the General, about ſome other more effectual Courſe; he propos'd to frame an Engagement for all to ſubſcribe, to acquieſce in whatever the next Parliament ſhould do, and to diſplace all that ſhould refuſe. His Lordſhip liked very well of this Propoſition, but thought it very hard to be executed: Nevertheleſs he encourag'd him to go on; and that Night he alone fram'd it, and immediately adviſ'd with Colonel Howard, Sir Anthony Aſhley Cowper, Mr. Anneſley, and Colonel Knight (who all of them with one Conſent approv'd it, being all Perſons of great Credit with the General) about the putting it in Execution. Colonel Knight undertook by the next Day at Noon to get it ſigned by all the Officers of his own Regiment, and the General's Regiment of Horſe, and the Life-Guard; and Colonel Howard did the like for his Regiment which lay about Croydon, &c.

The Form of the Armies Engagement.

Engagement of the Army by way of Addreſs and Declaration.

We the Officers of the Army, under your Excellency's Command, whoſe Names are hereunto written, being truly ſenſible of the merciful and wonderful Providence of Almighty God, in bringing us after ſo many Revolutions and Changes into an hopeful Way of Settlement; and perceiving to our great Grief, that there are too many, who ſeeking more their own private Intereſt than the publick Good, are endeavouring to reduce us again to our old Neceſſities and Confuſions; and that they have proceeded ſo far, as to cauſe Jealouſies in the Council of State, in whom the ſupreme Power and Truſt now till the Meeting of the Parliament is reſiding, do hold it our Duties, for the preventing of all ſuch Jealouſies for the future, and for the ſtrengthening of your Excellency's Hands in the carrying on of this good Work, in which it hath pleaſed God to make you ſo highly inſtrumental, humbly to make this ADDRESS unto your Excellency, in the Name of ourſelves and all the Soldiers under our Command, and to DECLARE that we ſhall, according to our Duties, carry and behave ourſelves, as Officers of an Army inſtructed by your Example and Diſcipline, to obey, and not to diſpute, the Orders of our Superiors; and ſhall freely and readily obſerve ſuch Commands, as we ſhall receive from your Excellency or the Council of State, or the Parliament when aſſembled: And in particular we ſhall according to the late Proclamation of the Council of State of the 17th of March, decline any Meeting or Meetings for the contriving or carrying on of any Declaration or Subſcriptions concerning Affairs of State or Government, thereby avoiding thoſe Miſchiefs, which made many lately in Arms ſo juſtly diſtaſtful to the People, by making themſelves a divided Intereſt from the reſt of them. And we are the more willing to make this Addreſs at this Time to evince to all the World the Integrity of our Obedience, becauſe of the great Expectation of the next Parliament, from whom we hope for a happy Settlement to all the Nations: And that they may have no ill Apprehenſions of us, we are reſolv'd as it becomes us in Duty, to ſubmit to whatſoever the Lord ſhall bring forth from their Conſultations, knowing that Parliaments only can ſecure us in our Religious and Civil Rights. And forasmuch as many Repreſentations heretofore made to Perſons in eminent Authority have been too frequently contriv'd in the Name of the Army, which were done rather in Formality (as we perceive by the Event) than otherwiſe: We do ſolemnly deſire that this may be recorded as a Teſtimony and Witneſs againſt us, if ever we ſhall be guilty of any ſuch Backſlidings.

This Engagement preſented as an Addreſs to the General.

This Engagement being ſigned by Lieutenant Colonel Morgan, Colonel Hubbletborn, Colonel Clobery, Colonel Lydcot, Colonel Read and the reſt of the Officers of ten Regiments of Horſe and Foot, was preſented to the General by Colonel Howard attended with forty Officers at St. James's the 9th Day of April, and was with much Satisfaction and Content received by him.

Tuesday April 10.

Sir John Greenvill*'s Return to* London, with the King's own Letter and Commiſſion to the General.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, 8vo. p. 284.

Sir John Greenvill after four Days ſtay at Court, had taken Leave of his Majeſty, and return'd for England. At his Arrival, he privately attended the General at St. James's, and deliver'd to him his Majeſty's Letter written with his own Hand, together with his Commiſſion of General over all the Armies of England, Scotland and Ireland. The General peruſ'd the Letter, and kept it with him; but for the preſent he would not truſt his own Cabinet with the Commiſſion; which was therefore deliver'd back to Sir John Greenvill, who ſecur'd it in a private Place in the Floor of his Bed-Chamber, where he had us'd to lay up Letters and Commiſſions from the King; where alſo this lay till after the King's Return, and was then deliver'd to the General.

Several Points agreed upon between them.

And for thoſe other Letters, it was here reſolv'd, that Sir John Greenvill ſhould keep them privately till the opening of the Parliament, and then deliver them according to his Inſtructions. The General alſo here deliberated with Sir John Greenvill about the Diſpoſal of his Majeſty's Seal and Signet; where it was agreed that in regard Mr. Morrice was the only Perſon that had been privy to this ſecret Affair, and had ſo faithfully aſſiſted therein, they would recommend him to the Truſt. Which ſo ſoon as the King returned, was accordingly done by the General. When at the ſame time his Excellency was offer'd ten thouſand Pounds to procure the Place for another.

The General ſtill upon the Reſerve and acting with great Privacy.

And now for the preſent all Interviews between the General and Sir John Greenvill were but ſeldom, and always private.

In the Elections for Parliament, the Preſbyterians puſh'd for their Friends; but the Royal Intereſt prevail'd in the Minds of the People.

All this while the People were every where very buſy in chuſing the Members for the approaching Parliament; but with ſo little regard to thoſe Qualifications appointed by the former Aſſembly, that no Man ever took notice of them. The Preſbyterians were very induſtrious for the introducing again Men of their own Party; but were ſucceſsfully prevented by the Royal Intereſt, which at this Time began to appear, yet with great Moderation and Temper. And the People (from the Memory of their paſt Miſeries) were generally ſo averſe to that Sort of Men, that few of them found their way into this approaching Parliament.

Colonel Lambert eſcapes from the Tower, abſconds in the City, and there holds Conſultation with the Fanaticks.

Philip's Ch. II. Append. to Baker's Chron. Fol. p. 720.

Many factious People were enraged to deſign againſt the Government, inſomuch that on the Evening of that Day, wherein Colonel Howard preſented the abovemention'd Addreſs to the General, Colonel Lambert having made an Eſcape out of the Tower, was conceal'd by ſome of that Party, that had been lately engaged againſt General Monk, and ſome others of Fanatick Principles. Theſe held a Council in London, but were not ſo private in their Conſultations, but the General had from Time to Time intimation of much of their Proceedings.

The Council being informed of the Eſcape of Colonel John Lambert (after what manner is uncertain) immediately put forth the Proclamation following.

A Proclamation for apprehending of Lambert.

Mercur. Polit. publiſhed by Order, 4to. No. 615.

By the Council of State. A Proclamation.

Whereas Colonel John Lambert was in order to the publick Safety, and for Reaſons of high Concernment to the Peace of the Nation, committed Priſoner to the Tower of London, and there continued under Reſtraint by Order of the late Parliament. And whereas the Council of State is informed, that the ſaid Colonel John Lambert hath broke Priſon, and made his Eſcape out of the Tower: The Council do hereby charge and require the ſaid Colonel John Lambert at his uttermoſt Peril to render himſelf to the Council at Whitehall within twenty four Hours after the publiſhing of this Proclamation. And they do ſtrictly prohibit all and every Perſon and Perſons from harbouring, ſheltering, or in any kind concealing of the ſaid Colonel John Lambert, upon ſuch Pains and Penalties as the ſaid Colonel John Lambert is himſelf lyable to, for the High Crimes whereof he ſtands guilty.

With the Reward of 100l.

And the Council do hereby declare, that whoſoever ſhall diſcover and bring unto them the ſaid Colonel John Lambert ſhall have one hundred Pounds given him as a Gratuity and Reward for ſuch his Service. And all Officers Civil and Military are hereby required to give their beſt Aſſiſtance to any Perſon that ſhall make Diſcovery of the ſaid Colonel John Lambert for the ſecuring curing and bringing of him in ſafe Cuſtody to the Council. This Wedneſday April 11. 1660.

Woodrow's Hiſtory of the Church of Scotland, Introduction. p. 18.

A Letter of the Reverend Mr. James Sharp Agent for the Kirk of Scotland in Weſtminſter, to his chief Correſpondent Mr. Douglas Miniſter in Edinburgh, dated Apr. 12. 1660.

The Presbyterians will ſpeak with the Epiſcopal Party only one by one.

Mr. Sharp with Dr. Morley.

Great Fear of bringing in the King without Terms.

The Church to be ſettled by a Synod of Members called from all the Reformed Churches.

Moſt of the Parliament ſide were intent upon making Terms with the King.

But the General would have no Treaty but in the next Parliament.

—— That his Work is not leſſened by the Intervals of Parliaments. That the General had left it on Mr. Calamy and him, to name ſuch as ſhould preach before him; that the Fanaticks will eſſay their worſt on Lambert's Eſcape, but the General is on his Guard. It was reſolved, that in this Juncture we may ſpeak only one by one with any of the Epiſcopal Party; and I having told them, that ſome Motions had been made to me of ſpeaking with them, they prayed me not to decline it. To morrow I have promiſed to meet with Dr. Morley who came from the King: The King is at Breda: The Parliament will at its firſt ſitting (as 'tis expected) call him in. Some ſay the Sectarian Party have made Application to him to bring him in without Terms. The Dutch have offered to prepare Lodgings, and defray his Charges, during the Treaty. The French Ambaſſador preſſes his going to France, but he refuſes, &c. [and in another Letter of the ſame to the ſame, the Day following Apr. 13.] the Inſolencies of the Cavaliers are ſo great; that the ſober Part of that Name emit Declarations againſt them. There is ſome Talk, that for the more reputable ſettling of the Church of England, a Synod will be called from all the Reformed Churches, &c. All that were upon the Parliament's Side, are gone into the calling in of the King, and they are now only intent upon Terms. The General will admit of no other way of Treaty but by a Parliament. The Council fearing that the Parliament will bring him in without ſufficient Security to ſuch who acted in the War againſt his Father, are now upon framing Propoſitions to propoſe to the Parliament: This is kept ſecret, but I am promiſed a Copy when they are agreed unto. I continue in my Opinion, that Scotland ſhould make no Applications till the King come in, &c.

An Antidote againſt immoderate Sorrow for the Death of our Friends taken from an aſſured Hope of our Reſurrection to Life and Glory. Append. to Life of Dr. John Barwick, 8vo. p. 253.

A Letter from Mr. Chancellour Hyde to Dr. John Barwick in London, dated from Breda, Apr. 22. 1660. N. S.

Letter of Chancellour Hyde to Mr. Barwick.

SIR,

My laſt to you was of the 16th under Cover to Mr. Wright, when I had many of yours upon my Hands undecypher'd; ſo that I am now to account to you for yours of the 16th and 19th paſt to the King and to myſelf, and another of the 26th to myſelf.

Colonel Clobery.

Colonel Venables made Governour of Cheſter.

The King's Friend, tho' ſuſpected for an Independent.

The King is very glad, that there is ſo good an Underſtanding between Monk and your Friend; and he hopes all will proceed hereafter without any Rubs; and that the Army will be reduc'd to a good Temper, both by putting out ill Men, and by bringing in good. I am very glad that Colonel Venables is Governour of Cheſter; of whoſe Affections the King hath not the leaſt doubt: Yet I have thought to aſk you a Queſtion concerning him long, whether he be of the Independent Party in point of Religion? Which I have heard confidently averred by ſome, who have great Kindneſs for him, and Aſſurance of his Affection to the King; and together with that a great Opinion of his Parts and Underſtanding, which methink ſhould hardly conſiſt with the other.

Dr. John Earle had been Tutour, and was now Chaplain and Clerk of the Cloſet to the King. He died Biſhop of Sarum 17. Nov. 1665.

By Mr. Hawles probably is meant Anthony Hawles of Queen's-College, Oxon, Chaplain to his Majeſty abroad, and after his Return S. T. P. Canon of Windſor, Prebendary and Archdeacon of Sarum, Rector firſt of Knowle, and then of Biſhopſtown Com' Wilts. He died 6. Januar. 1663.

Mr. Wright ſpoke to me of thoſe Sums to be return'd to Dr. Earle and Mr. Hawles, which I was not able to do; but I think Lord Mordaunt undertook to do it at Antwerp; but I would know whether it be done or no. I am perſuaded, I did ſend that Acquittance you mention; however you ſhall be ſure to receive another very quickly. You do not ſend me Word, in whoſe Hands Shrewſbury is put; I wiſh it were in Sir Thomas Middleton's.

He was made a Baron of the Exchequer 9. March, 15 Car. II.

He had a good Collection of his Father Sir Henry Spelman's Papers.

Colonel Redman had been ſuſpected for a Republican.

The King knows not what to ſay more of the Buſineſs of the Church, and preſumes that my Lord of Ely, and the Biſhop of Saliſbury will be able to make a Judgment, how Things are like to ſucceed, and proceed accordingly. I pray remember me very kindly to Clem. Spelman, and tell him, that I have Authority from the King to aſſure him, that he ſhall find himſelf in his Care, and he will quickly find the Effects of it. I did mention the firſt Place to the King, but have not as yet mention'd this laſt, which is nam'd by you; nor do I think it equal either in Profit or Reputation to the other. Beſides if I am not deceiv'd, there was ſome Grant made of it to Sir Edward Warder's Son at Oxford, it having been an Office for ſome Deſcents in that Family. However I am very glad he hath ſuch a Collection of the Papers, which I ſhall be very glad to receive from him when we meet; and will rather defer it till then, than put him to the Trouble of ſuch a Journey in this Conjuncture, when his Preſence there may be of more uſe: And truly I hope it will not be long before we meet. —— As to Colonel Redman. —— I find there have been more Miſtakes concerning him, than concerning Colonel Clobery, and that he hath been generally taken to be fixed to the Republick Party; and it may be he hath been the more able to do Service that way.

Great Application had been made for alienating or leaſing out the Church Lands.

Wherein the King had not engag'd himſelf; but intends as good a Bargain as he can for the Church.

Since I writ thus far, I have received yours of the 6th of this Month, upon which I have neither Time, nor in Truth Occaſion to enlarge much, only I will not omit to tell you, (upon what you ſaid in your former of the 30th and in this) that you may be moſt confident, the King will be moſt tender in parting with the Revenues of the Church: And I cannot imagine that longer Leaſes can be preſſed for, than three Lives, reſerving the old Rent: And I cannot chuſe but hope and believe, that how untoward Accounts ſoever ſome of the Preſbyterians make, there will be a better Bargain made for the Church, than is yet imagin'd.

The King deſirous that the Epiſcopal Clergy ſhould converſe with the Preſbyterians; and bring them to a Temper if poſſible.

Eſpecially with thoſe of Reputation, paſſing by the Divines of Pride and Paſſion.

And ſtopping the Indiſcretions of Dr. Griffith and other warm Epiſcopal Preachers; whoſe great Forwardneſs would do hurt.

Since Dr. Morley hath not yet his Cypher by him, I muſt deſire you to tell him, and to make uſe of the Advertiſement yourſelf, that the King very well approves and deſires, that he and you, and other diſcreet Men of the Clergy ſhould enter into Converſation, and have frequent Conferences with thoſe of the Preſbyterian Party; that if it be poſſible, you may reduce them to ſuch a Temper, as is conſiſtent with the good of the Church: And it may be, it would be no ill Expedient to promote that Temper, to aſſure them of preſent good Preferments in the Church. But in my own Opinion, you ſhould rather endeavour to win over thoſe, who being recover'd, will have both Reputation and Deſire to merit from the Church, than be over ſollicitous to comply with the Pride and Paſſion of thoſe, who propoſe extravagant Things; as what can be ſaid to the Divine, who is not only ſo well ſatiſfied with his Rebellion, but would require other Men to renounce their Innocence, and juſtify him; which I am confident no Parliament will ever do. You find by my laſt how ſenſible the King is of thoſe Indiſcretions of Dr. Griffith, and other Clergy-men; and of the great Diſſervice it doth him; which I perceive by yours, is as much as we heard before. I ſhall not need to deſire you to apply all poſſible Remedies to it; and if the Lord Fairfax were there (as I hope he will be ſhortly) thoſe Gentlemen will find, that he doth in no degree think himſelf beholden to them. I ſhall add no more, but that I am very heartily, Sir, Elected one of the Knights for the County of York.

Your moſt Affectionate Servant,

HYDE.

P. S. The incloſed from the King to Colonel Redman is not the Duplicate, but an Enlargement of what he writ formerly, taking Notice of the Miſcarriage and Miſtake of the former.

FRIDAY April 13.

Colonel Lambert leaves the City, and appoints a Rendezvous in Warwickſhire.

Lambert finding that the General had ſo ſettled the Militia of the City, as no good was to be done among them, quickly left the Town, and haſten'd towards Warwickſhire, having firſt agreed with his Confederates to meet at a Rendezvous there, whither he hop'd the Regiments of the Engliſh Army, quartering in thoſe Counties, would quickly repair to him.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, 8vo.

But meets there with ſmall Encouragement.

They ſent ſome buſie Men to all the Regiments in England, and thoſe Officers that refuſed the Addreſs, had entic'd many of the Troopers to ſteal after them. But ſuch was the Vigilance of the reſt of the Officers, that there got not above ſeven or eight Troops of Horſe in a Body to joyn with Lambert, and but one Company of Foot.

Philips's Ch. II. Fol. p. 720.

This made the General preſs the late Engagement of the Officers ſhould be preſs'd upon the private Soldiers, but many of them refus'd it.

One Merry a diſbanded diſcontented Officer of Colonel Smithſon's Regiment, had enticed fourty of Captain Deverell's to revolt, with deſign to ſeize on York, but by the Care of other Troops they were diſſipated. And one Everard and Captain Lockier, two diſcontented Officers, that had been lately in Cuſtody, and releaſed upon their Engagement, not to act any thing in Diſturbance of the publick Peace, did nevertheleſs march through Nottingham, with a ſeditious Troop of their Companions, whereof Captain Sherman of Colonel Sanders his Regiment having Notice, drew out his own Troop, and that of Captain Cradock's of Hacker's Regiment to engage them: But immediately Cradock's Troop joined with the Enemy; which made Sherman (finding himſelf too weak for them) to retreat to Nottingham, to ſecure that Place, where the Mayor, Alderman, and Gentry gave him ready Aſſiſtance. This News made the General give Orders, that the late Addreſs ſigned by the Officers, ſhould be tendred to all the private Soldiers alſo, which made ſo thorough a Reformation, that in many Regiments thirty of a Troop diſbanded, rather than they would conſent to it; and many in the Foot Companies alſo left their Arms: But in all the General's Regiment in London, that marched with him from Scotland, there were but two Diſſenters.

A Deſign for the Surpriſal of York in favour of Lambert.

MS. Papers of Mr. Monckton of Yorkſhire.

When York was to have been ſurpriz'd to have given a Reputation to Lambert's Inſurrection, I accidentally came that Night out of Derbyſhire to York, and was called out of my Bed at two of the Clock in the Morning, to prevail with the Governour to prevent the Surpriſal. I went to him and did prevail with him to keep the Town for the General, although he was tempted with the Promiſe of fifteen hundred Pounds, that lay ready for him in the Town, and with the Promiſe of being Governour for his Life, and to have a Regiment of Foot: This I had the Fortune to do, againſt theſe Temptations, and his being ſuppoſed acceſſary to Sir Henry Slingſby's Death.

Monk.

—— Dr. Duncon hath been ſo violently and dangerouſly afflicted with Fits of the Strangury of late at Leghorn, that his Phyſicians there have adviſed him not to adventure himſelf by any Means by Land, but to take Shipping immediately for England: And it is ſuppoſed he is by this Time arrived there. I ſhall not cum bono Deo be long from him, where I now begin to hope, I may meet with you, if but a Quarter of the News ſent us from Flanders be true. From thence we hear, that when the preſent Power of England came to be in the Hands of * * * * and the City, they in Flanders expected a Treaty with all imaginable Preſſures upon the Church and Crown, by ſhameful Acts for the Juſtification of their Rebellion, for their intended Reformation, and for their Covenant, &c. But the City (being more paſſive than active in all their Preſbyterian Villanies) think it not ſafe to venture their Lives and Goods in the ſame Bottom with ſuch Malefactors; and therefore will have their Sovereign Free, and as becomes his Majeſty, unſhackled either in Honour or Conſcience. So that it is conſtantly believed there, that his Majeſty will very ſhortly go for England. He is already at Breda with his Council and Court: Meſſengers from England in Numbers have lately been with him, and ſome of Quality and Intereſt: And every Wind and Tide, there is imagined and expected to bring a great Fleet for his Sacred Majeſty with his own Colours. If this hold any thing certain, I hope we ſhall have in England a general Reſurrection of all in the Graves of Captivity and Exile, tho' not a general Judgment for every one to receive according to his Works.——

A vile Pamphlet againſt the King, intitled, A Letter from Bruſſels, &c.

Philips's Ch. II. p. 722.

Several ſeditious Pamphlets were publiſhed in print, to deprave the Minds of the People, and Tickets were thrown into the Courts of Guard in the Night, to debauch the Soldiers. But none of them appear'd to have been penn'd with more Virulency and Malice, than that vile ſuppoſititious Paper, which they ſcattered about, carrying in its Frontiſpiece, A Letter from Bruſſels, &c. with which ſome of his Majeſty's moſt implacable Enemies attempted to poyſon or palliate the now high Expectations and Impreſſions of his good Subjects: And it was in Truth ſo fatally tim'd, and ſo ſubtilly contriv'd, that it had like to have done a great deal of Miſchief amongſt ſome, who not acquainted with the innate and unparallell'd Inclination of his Majeſty to Clemency, began to apprehend their Forwardneſs for his Reſtauration, and to remit of their former Zeal. But this Hydra was dextrouſly cut off by Mr. Evelyn, in a Reply which was printed to the entire Satisfaction of all that read it.

The general Report was that this Letter of News from Bruſſels was written by Marchimont Needham, a Perſon endowed with quick natural Parts, was a good humanitian Poet and boon Droll: And had he been conſtant to his Cavaliering Principle, he would have been beloved by and admired of all; but being mercenary, and valuing Money and ſordid Intereſt, rather than Conſcience, Friendſhip, or Love to his Prince, was much hated by the Royal Party to the laſt. —— He was the Writer of the Mercurius Politicus, compriſing the Sum of foreign Intelligence, with the Affairs now on Foot in the three Nations of England, Scotland, and Ireland, for Information of the People. Publiſhed by Order, &c. They began from the 9th of June 1649. and were conſtantly carry'd on till about the Middle of this Month of April 1660. where the Author was prohibited by Order of the Council of State. — This moſt ſeditious, mutable, and railing Author died ſuddenly in the Houſe of one Kidder, in Devereux Court near Temple Bar, in 1678. and was buried on the 29th of November, at the upper End of the Body of the Church of St. Clements Danes, near the Entrance into the Chancel.

TUESDAY Apr. 17.

The Rebellion of Lambert made General Monk more reſolute and zealous for the King.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, 8vo. p. 237.

About this Time his Excellency ſent for Sir John Greenvill, and upon private Conference with him, told him, it was not certain what might be the Iſſue of this Inſurrection, if Lambert was not preſently reduced, and the Army ſhould revolt from him: But that he would publiſh his Commiſſion from the King, and by it would raiſe all the Royal Party of the three Nations into Arms, rather than ſuffer theſe furious and hair-brain'd Sectaries to domineer within the Kingdom; deſiring him to be always in Readineſs for receiving further Orders from him, which ſhould be communicated by him to ſuch Perſons about the Town, as he knew were moſt faſt and devoted to his Majeſty's Service.

He writes a ſubmiſſive Letter to his Majeſty, and ſends it by Mr Bernard Greenvill, Brother to Sir John.

Dr. Skinner, ibid. 291.

Nor would the General defer an Anſwer to his Majeſty's Letter brought by Sir John Greenvill, till the Concluſion of Lambert's Inſurrection; but before ever he knew what would be the Effect of this Man's Miſchief, or whether he might be able to make good his Word, he reſolv'd to write back to his Majeſty; and

I ſhall not need to deſire you to apply all poſſible Remedies to it; and if the Lord Fairfax were there (as I hope he will be ſhortly) thoſe Gentlemen will find, that he doth in no degree think himſelf beholden to them. I ſhall add no more, but that I am very heartily, Sir,

FRIDAY April 13.

Colonel Lambert leaves the City, and appoints a Rendezvous in Warwickſhire.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, 8vo.

Lambert finding that the General had ſo ſettled the Militia of the City, as no good was to be done among them, quickly left the Town, and haſten'd towards Warwickſhire, having firſt agreed with his Confederates to meet at a Rendezvous there, whither he hop'd the Regiments of the Engliſh Army, quartering in thoſe Counties, would quickly repair to him.

Phillips's Ch. II. Fol. p. 720.

But meets there with ſmall Encouragement.

They ſent ſome buſie Men to all the Regiments in England, and thoſe Officers that refuſed the Addreſs, had entic'd many of the Troopers to ſteal after them. But ſuch was the Vigilance of the reſt of the Officers, that there got not above ſeven or eight Troops of Horſe in a Body to joyn with Lambert, and but one Company of Foot.

This made the General preſs the late Engagement of the Officers ſhould be preſs'd upon the private Soldiers, but many of them refus'd it.

One Merry a diſbanded diſcontented Officer of Colonel Smithſon's Regiment, had enticed fourty of Captain Deverell's to revolt, with deſign to ſeize on York, but by the Care of other Troops they were diſſipated. And one Everard and Captain Lockier, two diſcontented Officers, that had been lately in Cuſtody, and releaſed upon their Engagement, not to act any thing in Diſturbance of the publick Peace, did nevertheleſs march through Nottingham, with a ſeditious Troop of their Companions, whereof Captain Sherman of Colonel Sanders his Regiment having Notice, drew out his own Troop, and that of Captain Cradock's of Hacker's Regiment to engage them: But immediately Cradock's Troop joined with the Enemy; which made Sherman (finding himſelf too weak for them) to retreat to Nottingham, to ſecure that Place, where the Mayor, Alderman, and Gentry gave him ready Aſſiſtance. This News made the General give Orders, that the late Addreſs ſigned by the Officers, ſhould be tendred to all the private Soldiers alſo, which made ſo thorough a Reformation, that in many Regiments thirty of a Troop diſbanded, rather than they would conſent to it; and many in the Foot Companies alſo left their Arms: But in all the General's Regiment in London, that marched with him from Scotland, there were but two Diſſenters.

A Deſign for the Surpriſal of York in favour of Lambert.

MS. Papers of Mr. Monckton of Yorkſhire.

When York was to have been ſurpriz'd to have given a Reputation to Lambert's Inſurrection, I accidentally came that Night out of Derbyſhire to York, and was called out of my Bed at two of the Clock in the Morning, to prevail with the Governour to prevent the Surpriſal. I went to him and did prevail with him to keep the Town for the General, although he was tempted with the Promiſe of fifteen hundred Pounds, that lay ready for him in the Town, and with the Promiſe of being Governour for his Life, and to have a Regiment of Foot: This I had the Fortune to do, againſt theſe Temptations, and his being ſuppoſed acceſſary to Sir Henry Slingſby's Death.

The City inclin'd to more Loyalty.

—— Dr. Denton hath been ſo violently and dangerouſly afflicted with Fits of the Strangury of late at Leghorn, that his Phyſicians there have adviſed him not to adventure himſelf by any Means by Land, but to take Shipping immediately for England: And it is ſuppoſed he is by this Time arrived there. I ſhall not cum bono Deo be long from him, where I now begin to hope, I may meet with you, if but a Quarter of the News ſent us from Flanders be true. From thence we hear, that when the preſent Power of England came to be in the Hands of * * * * and the City, they in Flanders expected a Treaty with all imaginable Preſſures upon the Church and Crown, by ſhameful Acts for the Juſtification of their Rebellion, for their intended Reformation, and for their Covenant, &c. But the City (being more paſſive than active in all their Preſbyterian Villanies) think it not ſafe to venture their Lives and Goods in the ſame Bottom with ſuch Malefactors; and therefore will have their Sovereign Free, and as becomes his Majeſty, unſhackled either in Honour or Conſcience. So that it is conſtantly believed there, that his Majeſty will very ſhortly go for England. He is already at Breda with his Council and Court: Meſſengers from England in Numbers have lately been with him, and ſome of Quality and Intereſt: And every Wind and Tide, there is imagined and expected to bring a great Fleet for his Sacred Majeſty with his own Colours. If this hold any thing certain, I hope we ſhall have in England a general Reſurrection of all in the Graves of Captivity and Exile, tho' not a general Judgment for every one to receive according to his Works.——

MONDAY April 16.

A vile Pamphlet againſt the King, intitled, A Letter from Bruſſels, &c.

Philips's Ch. II. p. 722.

See March 10. 1659.

Anſwer'd by Mr. Evelyn.

Several ſeditious Pamphlets were publiſhed in print, to deprave the Minds of the People, and Tickets were thrown into the Courts of Guard in the Night, to debauch the Soldiers. But none of them appear'd to have been penn'd with more Virulency and Malice, than that vile ſuppoſititious Paper, which they ſcattered about, carrying in its Frontiſpiece, A Letter from Bruſſels, &c. with which ſome of his Majeſty's moſt implacable Enemies attempted to poyſon or palliate the now high Expectations and Impreſſions of his good Subjects: And it was in Truth ſo fatally tim'd, and ſo ſubtilly contriv'd, that it had like to have done a great deal of Miſchief amongſt ſome, who not acquainted with the innate and unparallell'd Inclination of his Majeſty to Clemency, began to apprehend their Forwardneſs for his Reſtauration, and to remit of their former Zeal. But this Hydra was dextrouſly cut off by Mr. Evelyn, in a Reply which was printed to the entire Satisfaction of all that read it.

Suppos'd to be writ by Marchimont Needham a Hackney Scribler.

Born at Burford in Oxfordſhire, bred in All Souls Coll. and St Mary's Hall, Oxon, Uſher in Merchant Taylor's School; then of Gray's Inn; then a Student of Phyſick.

Wood's Athen Oxon. Vol II. Col. 467.

The general Report was that this Letter of News from Bruſſels was written by Marchimont Needham, a Perſon endowed with quick natural Parts, was a good humanitian Poet and boon Droll: And had he been conſtant to his Cavaliering Principle, he would have been beloved by and admired of all; but being mercenary, and valuing Money and ſordid Intereſt, rather than Conſcience, Friendſhip, or Love to his Prince, was much hated by the Royal Party to the laſt. —— He was the Writer of the Mercurius Politicus, compriſing the Sum of foreign Intelligence, with the Affairs now on Foot in the three Nations of England, Scotland, and Ireland, for Information of the People. Publiſhed by Order, &c. They began from the 9th of June 1649. and were conſtantly carry'd on till about the Middle of this Month of April 1660. where the Author was prohibited by Order of the Council of State. — This moſt ſeditious, mutable, and railing Author died ſuddenly in the Houſe of one Kidder, in Devereux Court near Temple Bar, in 1678. and was buried on the 29th of November, at the upper End of the Body of the Church of St. Clements Danes, near the Entrance into the Chancel.

TUESDAY Apr. 17.

The Rebellion of Lambert made General Monk more reſolute and zealous for the King.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, 8vo. p. 237.

About this Time his Excellency ſent for Sir John Greenvill, and upon private Conference with him, told him, it was not certain what might be the Iſſue of this Inſurrection, if Lambert was not preſently reduced, and the Army ſhould revolt from him: But that he would publiſh his Commiſſion from the King, and by it would raiſe all the Royal Party of the three Nations into Arms, rather than ſuffer theſe furious and hair-brain'd Sectaries to domineer within the Kingdom; deſiring him to be always in Readineſs for receiving further Orders from him, which ſhould be communicated by him to ſuch Perſons about the Town, as he knew were moſt faſt and devoted to his Majeſty's Service.

He writes a ſubmiſſive Letter to his Majeſty, and ſends it by Mr Bernard Greenvill, Brother to Sir John.

Dr. Skinner, ibid. 291.

Nor would the General defer an Anſwer to his Majeſty's Letter brought by Sir John Greenvill, till the Concluſion of Lambert's Inſurrection; but before ever he knew what would be the Effect of this Man's Miſchief, or whether he might be able to make good his Word, he reſolv'd to write back to his Majeſty; and becauſe Sir John Greenvill, who was to be ready at the Opening of the Parliament now at hand, could not be ſpar'd from that Attendance, that this ſecret Truſt might ſtill be continued in the Family, the General ſent his Letter by Mr. Bernard Greenvill, a younger Brother to Sir John.

This Proſpect of the King's Return made his Enemies apply to him: And even ſome of the Judges of his Royal Father excus'd themſelves, and offer'd any Expiation.

Lord Clarendon's Hiſtory, Vol. III. p. 595.

From the Time that the King came to Breda, very few Days paſſed without ſome Expreſs from London, upon the Obſervations of his Friends, and the Applications made to them by many who had been very active againſt the King, and were now as ſollicitous his Majeſty ſhould know, that they wholly dedicated themſelves to his Service. Even before the General had declar'd himſelf, or the Parliament was aſſembled, ſome who had ſate Judges upon his Father, ſent many Excuſes, that they were forced to it, and offer'd to perform ſignal Services, if they might obtain their Pardon. But his Majeſty would admit no Addreſs from them, nor hearken to any Propoſitions made on their Behalf.

General Monk ſends Colonel Ingoldſby after Lambert about Northampton.

Philips's Ch. II. Fol. p. 720.

On Wedneſday the 18th of April, the General upon Advice from Colonel Streater of Lambert's hovering in the North Parts, and of the want of Horſe in his Quarters; ſent for Colonel Ingoldſby to him, and told him he muſt be at Northhampton with his Regiment on the Saturday following; and that he ſhould receive Orders to take any of Colonel Roſciter's Troops to his Aſſiſtance, which quartered in thoſe Parts. He alſo told him, that Colonel Streater, a Perſon whom he could truſt, was with ſome of his Companies at Northampton, whom he would find ready to join with him. The Colonel told him, that his Regiment was diſperſed in Norfolk and Suffolk, but he would do his Endeavours to get them together. And he was ſo diligent herein, that by the Friday following he got his Regiment to Cambridge, and on Saturday in the Evening to Northampton.

The General alſo ſent Colonel Howard with his Regiment and ſome other ſelect Troops towards Worceſterſhire and Warwickſhire, to hinder any Defection of the Troops in thoſe Parts, and to have an Eye towards Coventry, which Lambert had deſigned to garriſon; and indeed he had done it, had not the Care of the General prevented it, by ordering three Companies of Colonel Streater's Regiment to quarter in that City.

Major George Anneſley, Son to the Lord Mount Norris, of C. C. C. Oxon. 1647. and A. M. 1652. was unhappily drowned, taken up, and buried April 18, 1660.

A Letter of the reverend Mr. James Sharp, Agent for the Kirk of Scotland attending at Weſtminſter, to his chief Correſpondent Mr. Douglas at Edinburgh, dated April 19, 1660.

Mr. Sharp to Mr. Douglas reports Lambert's Deſign for bringing in the King without Conditions.

So would the Cavalier Party.

But the Parliament will be for Terms.

Woodrow's Hiſtory of the Church of Scotland, Vol. I. Introduction, p. 18.

——— The Plot of the Fanaticks appears to be broke. A Meſſenger from Lambert going to the King is taken, who was to aſſure the King, if he will truſt to the Army Lambert could make, they would bring him in without any Conditions. Lambert is ſculking no body knows where. Moſt of the Army have yielded to bring in the King upon Terms. If the Cavalier Party do not drive him on precipitant Meaſures, the Parliament will bring him in upon Terms honourable to himſelf and ſafe to the Nations. —— Moſt of the Members of Parliament are thought to be for Moderation. I find they incline not to put him upon juſtifying the late War. The Buſineſs of Religion will be altogether waved in the Treaty, and referred to be ſettled in a Synod. —— [In another Letter before the End of April, the ſame Writer tells the ſame Friend] I fear the Intereſt of the Solemn League and Covenant ſhall be neglected; and I ſmell that moderate Epiſcopacy is the faireſt Accommodation which moderate Men who wiſh well to Religion expect.

Much afraid of the Intereſt of the Solemn League and Covenant.

Admiral Mountague engages for the King.

Lord Clarendon's Hiſtory, Vol. III. p. 596.

While the Fleet was preparing, Admiral Mountague ſent his Couſin Edward Mountague to the King, to let him know, that as ſoon as it ſhould be ready (which he hoped might be within ſo many Days) he would be himſelf on board, and then would be ready to receive and obey his Majeſty's Orders: This was before the Parliament aſſembled. He ſent Word what Officers he was confident of, and of whom he was not aſſured, and who he concluded would not concur with him, and who muſt be reduced by Force. He deſired to know whether the King had any Aſſurance of the General, who however he wiſh'd might know nothing of his Reſolutions. And it was no ſmall Inconvenience to his Majeſty, that he was reſtrained from communicating to either, the Confidence he had in the other. But the mutual Jealouſies between them, and indeed of all Men, would not permit that Liberty to his Majeſty.

Before he knew of General Monk's Engagement.

Which ſhews a Combination of Minds and Diſpoſitions to reſtore the King.

Even the Spaniſh Miniſters begin now to think the King's Cauſe leſs deſperate than they had before imagin'd.

The frequent Reſort of Perſons to Bruſſels, before they knew of the King's being gone to Breda, and their Communication of the good News they brought to his Majeſty's Servants, and the other Engliſh who remain'd there, and who publiſh'd what they wiſh'd has come to paſs, as well as what they heard, made the Spaniſh Miniſters begin to think, that the King's Affairs were not altogether ſo hopeleſs as they imagin'd them to be, and that there was more in the King's Remove to Breda than at firſt appeared. They had every Day expected to hear that the States had ſent to forbid his Majeſty to remain in their Dominions, as they had done when his Preſence had been leſs notorious. But when they could hear of no ſuch Thing, but of greater Reſort thither to the King, and that he had ſtay'd longer there than he had ſeem'd to intend to do. The Marquis of Carracena ſent a Perſon of prime Quality to Breda, to invite his Majeſty to return to Bruſſels, the rather becauſe he had received ſome very hopeful Propoſitions from England, to which he was not willing to make any Anſwer, without receiving his Majeſty's Approbation and Command." The King ſent him Word, "That he was obliged with Reference to his Buſineſs in England to ſtay where he was; and that he was not without Hope that his Affairs might ſucceed ſo well, that he ſhould not be neceſſitated to return to Bruſſels at all." Which Anſwer the Marquis no ſooner received, than he return'd the ſame Meſſenger with a kind of Expoſtulation; "For the Indignity that would be offer'd to his Catholick Majeſty, if he ſhould leave his Dominions in ſuch a Manner; and therefore beſought him either to return himſelf thither, or that the Duke of York and the Duke of Glouceſter, or at leaſt one of them might come to Bruſſels, that the World might not believe, that his Majeſty was offended with the Catholick King, who had treated him ſo well." When he found that he was to receive no Satisfaction in either of thoſe Particulars, though the King and both the Dukes made their Excuſes with all poſſible Acknowledgment of the Favours they had received from his Catholick Majeſty, and of the Civilities ſhew'd to them by the Marquis himſelf, he reveng'd himſelf upon Don Alonzo with a Million of Reproaches "for his Stupidity and Ignorance in the Affairs of England, and of every Thing relating thereunto, after having reſided ſixteen Years Ambaſſador in that Kingdom."

And therefore the Marquis of Carracena invites the King to return from Breda to Bruſſels.

That the King well knew the Meaning of this Invitation and declin'd it.

Which made the Marquis expoſtulate the Matter with ſome Indignation.

Better Intelligence given to Cardinal Mazarine.

Who by the Earl of St. Albans invites the King to Paris, or at leaſt to Calais with great Craft and Importunity;

As the only Place of making Peace with the Parliament, and being there enabled to withſtand their inſolent Demands.

Cardinal Mazarine had better Intelligence from the French Ambaſſador in London, who gave him diligent Accounts of every Day's Alteration, and of the general Imagination that Monk had other Intentions than he yet diſcover'd. And when he heard that the King was removed from Bruſſels to Breda, he preſently perſuaded the Queen Mother of England to ſend the Lord Jermyn (whom the King had lately upon his Mother's Deſire created Earl of St. Albans) to invite the King to come into France, and to make that Treaty, which probably would be between the enſuing Parliament and his Majeſty in that Kingdom; which might prove of great Uſe and Advantage to her Majeſty's Intereſt and Honour, in which the Power of the Cardinal might be of great Importance in diverting or allaying any inſolent Demands which might be made. And the Cardinal himſelf made the ſame Invitation by that Lord, with Profeſſions of wonderful Kindneſs; and that the moſt Chriſtian King was infinitely deſirous to perform all thoſe Offices and Reſpects to his Majeſty which he had always deſired, but was never able to accompliſh till now; with this Addition, that if his Majeſty found that the Expedition of his Affairs would not permit him to come to Paris, Order and Preparations ſhould be made for his Reception at Calais, or any other Place he would appoint; where the Queen his Mother would attend him; with all other Expreſſions of the higheſt Eſteem; which the Cunning of that great Miniſter was plentifully ſupplied with.

But the King was as much afraid of going to France as of ſtaying in Flanders.

And reflected on the ill Uſage he had met with in thoſe Countries.

The Earl of St. Albans found the King in too good a Poſture of Hope and Expectation, to ſuffer himſelf to be much importuned upon the Inſtances he brought; and was content to return with the King's Acknowledgments and Excuſe, that he could not decently paſs through Flanders, after he had refuſed to return to Bruſſels, and without going through thoſe Provinces, he could not well make a Journey into France. In the mean Time it was no ſmall Pleaſure to his Majeſty, to find himſelf ſo ſolemnly invited by the Miniſters of theſe two great Kings, to enter into their Dominions, out of one of which he had been rejected with ſo many Diſobligations and Indignities; and with ſo much Caution and Apprehenſion had been ſuffer'd to paſs through the other, that he might not reſide a Day there, or ſpend more Time than was abſolutely neceſſary for his Journey.

Account of the defeating and taking Lambert.

Philips's Ch. II. p. 720.

On this Eaſter-Eve Colonel Ingoldſby joyned with Colonel Streater at Northampton; where he was at that Time, and had been ſome Days before. The Earl of Exeter with ſeveral Loyal Gentlemen of that County, to the Number of near one hundred Horſe, with much Reſolution offer'd to aſſiſt Colonel Streater. Likewiſe the Trained Bands of that Town were in Arms at the ſame Time, in order to the ſecuring thereof, in caſe of a Neceſſity of Colonel Streater's attending Lambert's Motion; the Colonel purpoſing that Night if need had been, to have mounted four hundred Foot of his Regiment, with the Horſes that came into the Town that Day (againſt the Fair on the Monday following) and to have beaten up Lambert's Quarters.

SUNDAY Apr. 22.

In the Fields of Daventry in Northamptonſhire.

Philips's Continuat. of Hiſt. of Great-Brit. at end of Baker, Fol. p. 721.

On Eaſter-Day early, Intelligence was brought to Colonel Ingoldſby and Colonel Streater, that Lambert was at Daventry, upon which they marched towards him: When they came to Daventry, they heard Lambert was march'd two Miles from thence, and therefore haſtned to meet him. Which they did in a plain Field, where a little Brook parted them. Lambert had with him (beſides the Troops of Horſe before mention'd, theſe Perſons, Colonel Okey, Colonel Axtel, Colonel Cobbet, Lieutenant Colonel Young, Major Creed, Captain Timothy Clare, Captain Gregory, Captain Spinage, beſides divers private Soldiers that were Anabaptiſts.——

When the two Bodies came near, juſt as Col. Ingoldſby was going to charge, Col. Streater commanded ſix Files of Muſqueteers to advance; one File gave Fire, and hurt one or two of Lambert's Horſe, his Drums beat, and in good Order he advanc'd, having given ſtrict Command, that his Muſketeers ſhould not Fire, till they they came as near as push of Pike. But Lambert's Men held the Noses of their Pistols towards the Ground, and Nelthorp's Troop came off to Ingoldsby. Haslerigg's Troop having deserted him before: For Colonel Ingoldsby sending Captain Elsmore before him with a Party, as he march'd to find Lambert, met Captain Haslerigg and took him Prisoner, but releas'd him upon his Parole, to send his whole Troop over to joyn with Ingoldsby; which he faithfully performed, sending it to them by his Quarter Master, but he retir'd himself. Colonel Ingoldsby told Lambert, he was his Prisoner. Whereupon Creed and the rest earnestly intreated him to do what he pleas'd with them, but permit Lambert to escape, acquainting him that his Life would be of no Advantage to him; which Ingoldsby absolutely refused, telling them, that he would not be treacherous to those that had commanded him by such an ungenerous Act. Lambert then turn'd about his Horse, and attempted to escape; but Ingoldsby pursued him so close, that he came quickly up to him, and vow'd to pistol him, if he did not immediately yield. Lambert in great Depression of Spirit twice pray'd him to let him escape, but when he saw he could not prevail, submitted, as all the rest did, except Okey, Axtel, and Cleer who escaped.

Mr. Echard says that Lambert cried out, Pray my Lord, let me escape, what Good will my Life or Imprisonment do you?

Sir Anthony Ashley Cowper's Correspondence with Admiral Mountague.

A Letter from Sir Anthony Ashley Cooper, directed for General Mountague, dated Monday Morning, indorsed April 23, 1660.

With his Account given of the Defeat of Lambert.

Mountague's Advice from the Fleet had been, that Vice Admiral Lawson and the whole Navy had receiv'd him with great Respect and Satisfaction; and were resolv'd to submit to the Determination of the next Parliament.

Orig. Letter, MS. among the Papers of the Earl of Sandwich.

My Lord,

Your Lordship's Letter brings that Account of the Fleet, and so satisfactory as might be expected from it, since put under the Conduct of such a General. —— This Morning the certain News of Colonel Lambert his being taken came to the Council. There appear'd with him six Troops of Horse in Daventry Fields in Northamptonshire, Colonel Okey, Axtel, Creed, Sir Arthur Haslerigg's Son, and others. But when Colonel Ingoldsby came up, the kind Men without shewing much Courage rendred themselves. Thus God has blasted the Wicked in their Reputations and bloody Designs; and I hope will bless us with a happy Settlement, which is the Prayers of,

My Lord,
Your most faithful and humble Servant,
Anthony Ashley Cooper.

The City Militia draw up in Hyde-Park.

Under Colonels well affected to the King's Interest.

Philips's Continuat. of Hist. at end of Baker, Fol, p. 721.

This Tuesday after the Defeat of Lambert, all the Militia of the City of London drew into Hyde Park; six Trained-Band Regiments, besides several Regiments of Auxiliaries. The Red commanded by Colonel Bateman, Alderman; the White by Colonel Wale, Alderman; the Green by Colonel John Robinson, Alderman; the Blew by Colonel William Vincent; the Yellow by Colonel William Bromfield; and the Orange by Colonel Thomas Bloodworth; all Men of Courage and good Affections to the Peace and Felicity of their native Country; they made up in all twelve thousand Men. The General, the Lord-Mayor, Alderman, and a great Concourse of Noblemen and Gentlemen were present at the Appearance. And this Evening Colonel Lambert, Colonel Cobbet, and Major Creed were brought Prisoners to the Council of State, and committed to the Tower. And the next Day, the rest of the Prisoners were brought by Captain Parry to the General, and by him committed to the Marshal General.

Lambert and his Assistants committed to Prison.

General Monk was now at Liberty to prepare for the approaching Parliament.

But many of his Officers were for his preventing the Parliament, and doing the Work himself.

Which he wisely declin'd, and still appeal'd to the ensuing Parliament.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, 8vo. p. 295.

And now Lambert being again laid fast in the Tower, and his Party wholly defeated, to the utter Ruin and Frustration of that Interest, the General had no more to do but to discharge a great Part of his Care into the Bosom of the approaching Parliament. But before their Meeting, he was interrupted with an importunate and unseasonable Address from some of his own Officers, who observing how all Things concenter'd towards the King's Restauration were very earnest with his Excellency to anticipate the Counsels of the Parliament, and assume the Glory and Advantage of the Action to himself and his Army. —— But the General calmly declin'd the Proposal, telling them, They had before declared their Resolution to keep the Military Power in Obedience to the Civil; and that lately they had engaged themselves, by their Subscriptions, to submit to the Resolutions of this approaching Parliament, both which Obligations would be treacherously frustrated by such an Attempt.

A Declaration of the Nobility and Gentry that adhered to the late King in and about the City of London.

A Declaration of the Royalists.

Acknowledging the Scene of Providence.

And commending General Monk for the opening of it.

Professing themselves to be not implacable, as they have been represented to be.

After the Miseries of a civil War, and the many and fruitless Attempts towards Settlement upon several Interests, and imaginary Forms of Government. It having pleased Almighty God, by unexpected and wonderful Means to give these Nations a probable Hope of being restored to those Laws and Privileges, which have been transmitted to them from their Ancestors; we do declare, that we think ourselves obliged next to Divine Providence, to attribute this gracious Work to his Excellency the Lord General Monk, who as he had the Courage to assert the publick Liberty, and the Prudence to carry it on against so many Difficulties; has also had the Happiness, to lead us thus far through the Wilderness of Confusion, without passing the Red Sea of Blood; and because the Enemies of the publick Peace have endeavoured to represent those of the King's Party, as Men implacable, and ſuch as would ſacrifice the common Good to their own private Paſſions; we do ſincerely profeſs, that we do reflect upon our paſt Sufferings from the Hands of God, and therefore do not cheriſh any violent Thoughts or Inclinations, to have been any way Inſtrumental in them. And if the Indiſcretion of any ſpirited Perſons, tranſports them to Expreſſions contrary to this our Senſe, we utterly diſclaim them. And deſire, that the Imputation may extend no further, than the Folly of the Offendors. And we further declare, that we intend by our quiet and peaceable Behaviour, to teſtify our Submiſſion to the preſent Power, as it now reſides in the Council of State, in Expectation of the future Parliament, upon whoſe Wiſdom and Determinations, we truſt God will give ſuch a Bleſſing, as may produce a perfect Settlement both in Church and State.

And promiſing a quiet and peaceable Behaviour; with a full Submiſſion to the approaching Parliament.

And as his Excellency hath not choſen the ſandy Foundations of Self-Government, but the firm Rock of National Intereſt, whereon to frame a Settlement; It is our Hope and Prayer, that when the Building comes to be raiſed, it may not like Rome have the Beginning in the Blood of Brethren, nor like Babel, be interrupted by the Confuſion of Tongues: But that we may all ſpeak in one Language, and be of one Name; that all mention of Parties and Factions, and all Rancour and Animoſities may be thrown in, and buried like Rubbiſh under the Foundation.

Declaring againſt Blood and Confuſion; and deſiring no mention of Parties and Factions.

Woodrow's Introduction, p. 19.

Would have the late War if not juſtified, yet not condemn'd as unlawful.

—— As to what Mr. Sharp had writ, that the King was not to be urged to juſtifie the War made againſt his Father, Mr. Douglas ſaid, they would do well, when they do not put him to a direct juſtifying of it, to provide againſt his quarrelling the Lawfulneſs of it. That he conceives that War will come under an Act of Oblivion; and that it does not appear convenient to touch much upon the Lawfulneſs of defenſive War; and ſince it is paſſed, it ought not to be meddled in: And that whatever hath been in the Proſecution, and Cloſe of it, Evil, yet it was undertaken upon neceſſary Grounds, for our civil and religious Intereſts. He wiſhes, that inſtead of a Synod of foreign Divines, the Bottom of all were to be the Aſſembly at Weſtminſter, their Procedure, and there is little Need of the Help of Foreigners in that Matter.

Since it was undertaken upon neceſſary Grounds.

He is againſt a Synod of Foreign Divines; and would Things ſettled upon the Bottom of the late Aſſembly at Weſtminſter.

Dr. Reynold's prudent Sermon at the opening of the Parliament.

Text an Alluſion to the Riſing Sun.

The Author and Subject of Healing in the Church. Set forth in a Sermon preached before the Right Honourable the Parliament of England, at St. Margaret's Church in Weſtminſter, on Wedneſday April 25. 1660. being the firſt Day of their Aſſembly.

London, 4to, 1660.

Mal. iv. 2, 3. But unto you that fear my Name, ſhall the Sun of Righteouſneſs ariſe with healing in his Wings. And ye ſhall go forth and grow up as Calves of the Stall. And ye ſhall tread down the wicked.

The Uſe and Application of the Sermon to the Members of Parliament.

I ſhall now proceed very briefly unto ſuch an Application of the Words, as may come cloſer and be more ſeaſonable and ſuitable to this honourable Society.

This Convention to be a College of Phyſicians to heal the Church and three Nations, wounded and half dead.

Parliaments aſſaulted.

Princes bleeding and baniſh'd.

Peers ſecluded.

Commons caſt out.

Miniſtry ſacrific'd.

And all manner of Impiety and Miſchief.

Set forth in proper lively Colours.

That this great Council and College of Phyſicians hath a dangerouſly ſick Patient to look after, three Nations, and the Church of God in them, like the Man between Jeruſalem and Jericho wounded and half dead, we have had theſe many Years the beſt, or rather worſt Aſſurance that may be, by feeling the Sickneſs; ſo that there need be no farther Proof of it. We have ſeen and felt with Sorrow and Amazement, the Honour of the Parliaments of England ſhamefully aſſaulted, Princes bleeding out their Souls, ſojourning in Meſech and in the Tents of Kedar; Psal. cxx. 5. Peers and Patriots ſecluded from their honourable and rightful Truſt; the great Council of the Nation ſequidimidiated; a learned and faithful Miniſtry reproached, ready to be ſacrificed, brought to the Brow of the Precipice; Ordinances decried, Errors and Hereſies cumulated; the publick Worſhip of God interrupted, the Aſſemblies of his People on his own Day, profanely affronted by Mechanicks, working their ordinary Works in our Churches and Pulpits: We have ſeen and felt our Laws and Foundations threatned, our Ships broken, our Trade obſtructed, our Merchants diſcouraged, our Religion crumbled, our Church Congregations ſhamed and defiled with the impure and obſcene Intruſion of naked Perſons, cloathed with nothing but Dung and Impudence. We have heard of Families raiſed upon the Ruins of others, and of Families ruined by perjurious Criminations. Indeed we have ſeen and heard of more Evils and Confuſions, than the Hour of a Sermon, or the Length of an Hiſtory can well enumerate. If Sins, if Sorrows, if Shame, if Fear, if Dangers, if Frenzies, if Quakings, if Convulſions, if Breach upon Breach, if Change upon Change, if divided Minds, if disjoynted Hearts, if inconſiſtent Intereſts, if incoherent Deſigns, if Viciſſitudes of Government as mutable as the Courſes of the Moon, if Altar againſt Altar, Doctrine againſt Doctrine, Worſhip againſt Worſhip, Poſt by Poſt, Threſhold by Threſhold be Symptoms of a ſick Body, certainly this great College of Phyſicians hath a very ſick Patient to look after.

The Miſcarriages of the Presbyterians themſelves.

Nay which is much to be bewailed, even they who fear the Name of the Lord on every Hand, on every Perſuaſion, if they will impartially review their own Ways, will find that by their mutual Jealouſies, Breaches, Diſaffections, Diſtances, Animoſities, Affectations of Preheminence and Domination, purſuance of Intereſts, preſerving of Stations and new raiſed Eſtates; and many other the like Miſcarriages have contributed a great Share to the Sickneſſes and Sorrows of the common Body, and cauſed the Name of God and the Honour of Religion to be evil ſpoken of.

They alone can be Healers of the deſperate Diſeaſe of the Nation.

Your proper Work, Right Honourable Patriots, is to be Healers, (ſo Rulers Jerem. xiv. 19. are called Iſai. iii. 7.) Healers to theſe three Nations. We have looked long for Peace and there came no Good; and for the Time of Healing and behold Trouble. If the Lord Job xxix. 15, 16, 25. have reſerved you for ſuch a Time, for ſuch a Work as this, to be Eyes to the Blind, Feet to the Lame, Fathers to the Poor, as one that comforteth the Mourners, as Job ſpeaks, the Ear that hears you ſhall bleſs you, the Eye that ſees you ſhall bear witneſs to you: It ſhall be written for the Generation to come, and the People which ſhall be created ſhall praiſe the Lord for you. The Lord ſhall make you the Deut. xxviii. 13. Head and not the Tail, you ſhall be Above only and not Beneath. It is a Enterpriſe, the Cure difficult, the Diſeaſe complicate, great Skill and Wiſdom, great Love and Caution, great Patience and Tenderneſs is required unto it. There may be Danger of Miſcarriage by claſhing of Councils, by Partiality of Intereſts, by miſ-judging of Caſes, by the Acrimony of Purgatives, by the Height of Cordials, by inequality and diſproportionate Applications, by minding the Parts aſunder, as divided from the whole.

This to be done by Unity and mutual Agreement.

O come with none but healing Reſolutions, with none but cloſing and uniting Affections. Let one Heart, one Soul, one End, one Spirit, animate your whole Body. If this precious Ointment of Unity and Peace be firſt upon you, it will fall down to the Skirts of the Nation. The Patients will not fall out, if the Phyſicians be agreed.

To ſave a dying People.

Think with yourſelves, that you hear the Life and Being, the ancient Honour and Renown of theſe Nations, call aloud unto you for Healing. England ſometimes a Terror to her proudeſt Enemies, a Balance to all the Intereſts of Chriſtendom, now a Supplicant to her own Children to keep her alive.

To keep up the Proteſtant Intereſt in Europe.

Think that you hear the concurrent Cry of the Proteſtant Churches, which are greatly concerned in our Weal or Woe (the Proteſtant Religion being the Intereſt of England, as the Duke of Roan hath gravely obſerved) calling upon you to heal us, that they may be whole.

And to ſerve all degrees of Men among us.

Think that you hear the Importunities of all the People of the Land, and all Orders therein, call unto you for Healing. Princes and Peers long dethroned and eclipſed in their Honour and Spendor. Citizens long decayed in their Trade and Commerce. Countrymen long exhauſted with heavy Expences upon narrow Eſtates. Miniſters long diſcouraged by ſwarms of dangerous and corrupt Opinions; by that abundance of Atheiſm, Scepticiſm, Neutrality, Indifferency, Profaneneſs, Contempt of Ordinances, which the Looſeneſs of theſe Times, like an opened Sluice, or a Breach in a Bank, hath let in as a Deluge upon the Church of God amongſt us.

Think

And all Posterity.

Think that you hear your own Families, your Wives, your Children, Et natos natorum, & qui naſcuntur ab illis, the Generations yet unborn, calling unto you to lay up Healing for them, and like the Man of Macedonia to the Apoſtle ſaying, Come and help us.

Pointing at the King, as the Fountain of Heat and Light.

And if you will give me leave to tell you where, you muſt begin at this Sun of Righteouſneſs. You muſt be Wings, Beams, Angels, Emanations from him, if you will bring help and healing to his People.

The Sun to paſs thro' the Land.

And as this muſt be your firſt Care to begin at the Sun of Righteouſneſs, and to imitate him; ſo you muſt be careful of the two Wings, which are the Vehicula of Healing; be ſure that the Wings of the Sun of Righteouſneſs do carry him into all Places of the Land, &c.

Unto you that fear my Name ſhall the Sun of Righteouſneſs ariſe with Healing in his Wings, and theſe Wings ſhall carry your Names and Memories with Splendor and Renown unto all ſucceeding Ages. For they that honour him the Lord will honour.

A Meſſage of the Lords to General Monk.

A Meſſage from the Lords to the Lord General Monk, acknowledging his Lordſhip's Valour and Prudence in managing the great Affairs intruſted to him, and returning their Acknowledgments for the Care and Reſpect he had expreſſed to the Peers in reſtoring them to their ancient and undoubted Rights; and hoping that God will bleſs him in the Uſe of all Means, for the procuring a ſafe and well grounded Peace, according to the ancient and fundamental Government of this Nation; wherein they ſhall employ their Counſels and utmoſt Endeavours in Concurrence with him.

In the Houſe of Commons. Order for concurring with the Houſe of Lords, that Monday next be ſet apart for a Day of Faſting and Humiliation, to ſeek the Lord for a Bleſſing on theſe diſtracted Nations.

Three Sermons to be preach'd to the Commons on the Faſt-Day.

Reſolved by the Commons, that Mr. Calamy de deſired to preach and aſſiſt in carrying on the Work of Faſting and Humiliation before this Houſe at Margaret's Weſtminſter. Lord Clarendon's Hiſtory, Fol. Vol. III. p. 590.

The General was return'd a Member to ſerve as Knight of the Shire for the County of Devon. Sir Harbottle Grimſton Speaker had been a Member of the Long Parliament, and continued rather than concurred with them, till after the Treaty of the Iſle of Wight, where he was one of the Commiſſioners ſent to treat with that King, and behav'd himſelf ſo well, that his Majeſty was well ſatisfied with him; and after his return from thence, he preſſed the Acceptance of the King's Conceſſions; and was thereupon in the Number of thoſe who were by Force excluded the Houſe. His Election to be Speaker at this Time was contriv'd by thoſe who meant well to the King; and he ſubmitted to it out of a Hope and Confidence that the Deſigns it was laid for would ſucceed. They began chiefly with bitter Invectives againſt the Memory of Cromwell, as an odious and perjur'd Tyrant, with Execrations upon the unchriſtian Murther of the late King. And in theſe generals they ſpent the firſt Days of ſitting; no Man having the Courage how loyal ſo ever their Wiſhes were, to mention his Majeſty, till they could make a Diſcovery of what Mind the General was of; who could only protect ſuch a Propoſition from being penal to the Perſon who made it, by the former Ordinances of the Rump Parliament.

Acknowledgment of the Commons to General Monk.

Philips's Continuat. of the Hiſt. of Great-Britain, Fol. p. 723.

The Commons gave all due Acknowledgments to General Monk for his eminent Services and great Wiſdom in ſubduing his Enemies without Blood, magnifying the Mercies of God, that made him ſo inſtrumental to keep up theſe Nations from ſinking, when no Way appear'd whence Deliverance ſhould ariſe.

The reverend Dr. Henry Hammond, a moſt famous and celebrated Author, after he had ſpent his Life in great Retiredneſs, Lucubration, and Devotion, ſurrendred up his moſt pious Soul to God in the Houſe of Sir John Packington on the 25th of April 1660. aged 55 Years. Whereupon his Body was upon the Morrow in the Evening buried in the Chancel of Hampton Church near to Weſtwood, with the whole Office and uſual Rites of the Church of England, not at that Time reſtored or practiſed by publick Command. THURSDAY Apr. 26.
Order for the Lords to come to their Houſe before Prayers under pecuniary Mulcts.
A Day of Thankſgiving appointed.
Journal of the Houſe of Lords.

In the Houſe of Peers. Prayers by Mr. Hodges.

Ordered that the ancient Orders of this Houſe be revived, for the Lords to pay coming after Prayers, viz. Every Earl two Shillings, and every Baron one.

A Meſſage brought from the Commons that they have Reſolved, that this Day fortnight be ſet apart for a Day of Thankſgiving to the Lord, for raiſing up his Excellency the Lord General and other eminent Perſons, who have been inſtrumental in delivering this Nation from Thraldom —— To which the Lords gave their Concurrence.

Report of General Monk's Anſwer to the Meſſage of the Lords.

The Earl of Mancheſter reported, that his Lordſhip and the reſt of the Lords Committees delivered to General Monk what this Houſe had directed yeſterday, and the General expreſs'd himſelf to this Effect, that he took it for a great Honour and Civility from the Houſe of Peers, and ſaid he would be ready to carry on all Things as tend to the Safety and Settlement of this Nation; and deſired that their Lordſhips would look forward and not backward in tranſacting of Affairs.

The States General ſend their Deputies.
And thoſe of Holland invite the King to the Hague.
Lord Clarendon's Hiſtory, Fol. Vol. III. p. 598.

The King had not been many Days in Breda, before the States General ſent Deputies of their own Body to congratulate his Majeſty's Arrival in their Dominions, and to acknowledge the great Honour he had vouchſafed to them. And ſhortly after other Deputies came from the States of Holland, beſeeching his Majeſty, that he would grace that Province with his royal Preſence at the Hague, where Preparations ſhould be made for his Reception, in ſuch a Manner, as would teſtify the great Joy of their Hearts for the Bleſſings which Divine Providence was pouring upon his Head. His Majeſty accepting their Invitation, they return'd in order to make his Journey thither, and his Entertainment there, equal to their Profeſſions.

Breda full of Engliſh crowding with Preſents and Proteſtations of Loyalty.
And the Town itſelf very civil and obſequious to his Majeſty.

In the mean Time, Breda ſwarm'd with Engliſh, a Multitude repairing thither from all other Places, as well as London, with Preſents and Proteſtations, how much they had longed and prayed for this bleſſed Change, and magnifying their Sufferings under the late Tyrannical Government; when ſome of them had been zealous Inſtruments and Promoters of it. The Magiſtrates of the Town took all imaginable Care to expreſs their Devotion to the King, by uſing all Civilities towards, and providing for the Accommodation of the Multitude of his Subjects, who reſorted thither to expreſs their Duty to him. So that no Man would have imagin'd by the Treatment he now receiv'd, that he had been ſo lately forbid to come into that Place; which indeed had not proceeded from the Diſaffection of the Inhabitants of that good Town, who had always Paſſion for his Proſperity, and even then publickly deteſted the Rudeneſs of their Superiours, whom they were bound to obey.

A Letter of Mr. Douglas from Edinburgh, to Mr. Sharp at Weſtminſter, dated April 26. 1660.

Mr. Douglas to Mr Sharp, would have the General permit him to go to the King and give him better Information.
Neglect of the ſolemn League and Covenant, will be ſtill a Judgment upon theſe Nations.
And moderate Epiſcopacy will be two Steps towards the higheſt Prelacy.
Woodrow's Introduction, p. 20.

—— That he hopes the Nation will not ſuffer by the Commiſſioners coming up againſt all Advice. He fears the King hath but ſlender Information of the Carriage of the honeſt Party in Scotland, and their Diſpoſition: That he wiſheth the General would admit him (Mr. Sharp) to go over and give the King Information, concerning his and our Carriage. He wiſhes the King may know who were and are his real Friends. —— If the Solemn League and Covenant be neglected, it ſeems to me that the Judgment on theſe Nations is not at an End. The greateſt Security for theſe Nations were to come in upon that Bottom. If it ſhall be neglected, I fear it ſhall give too great Advantage to our Ranters here, who are crying it down. If moderate Epiſcopacy ſhall be the Reſult of all the Preſbyterians Endeavours, it will be a ſad Buſineſs, for moderate Epiſcopacy is two Steps of the Ladder, to climb up to the higheſt Prelacy, &c.

In the Houſe of Peers. Prayers by Mr. Hodges.

Ordered that Mr. Hodges be and is hereby appointed to preach before the Lords on the Thankſgiving Day, in the Abbey Church.

Ordered, that a Conference be had with the Commons to conſider of ſome Way and Means to be found out to make up the Breaches and Diſtractions of this Kingdom. And this Conference to be on Tueſday next.

SATURDAY April 28.
Woodrow's Introduction, p. 20.

Mr. Sharp in a Letter to Mr. Douglas at Edinburgh, dated April 28. ſignifies to him, That the Deſign of cloſing with the King now appeareth above Board. Yeſterday the young Lords came to the Houſe, who with thoſe of the Year 1648. made up thirty ſix. There will, 'tis thought, be no Notice taken of Qualifications in the Houſe of Commons. Both Houſes are adjourned till Tueſday, when a Meſſage will come from the King.

MONDAY April 30.

In the Houſe of Lords. Prayers by Dr. Reynolds.

Ordered, that the Lords of this Houſe do receive the Sacrament in the Abbey Church at Weſtminſter, and as concerning the Time, it is referred to the Committee of Privileges, &c.

The Faſt begins in the Houſe of Lords with a Collection for the Poor.

The Lords before they went to the Faſt Sermons, made a Collection for the Poor, which is to be diſtributed as the Houſe hereafter ſhall appoint.

The Means and Method of Healing in the Church. Set forth in a Sermon preached before the Right Honourable the Houſe of Peers in Weſtminſter-Abbey, April 30. 1660. being a Day of ſolemn Humiliation to ſeek God for his Bleſſing on the Counſels of the Parliament. By Edward Reynolds, D. D.

London, 1660, 4to.

2 Chron. vii. 13, 14. If I ſhut up Heaven, that there be no Rain, or if I command the Locuſts to devour the Land, or if I ſend Peſtilence among my People: If my People which are called by my Name, ſhall humble themſelves, and pray, and ſeek my Face, and turn from their wicked Ways: Then will I hear from Heaven, and will forgive their Sin, and will heal their Land.

The late diſmal Eſtate of the Nation.

The great Difficulty of healing and ſettling a broken and divided Land.

——The great Sins, the ſad Diviſions, the disjoynted Affections, the contrary Intereſts, the doleful Errors and Diſtempers in the Church, the miſerable Fluctuations and Diſcompoſures which have been in the State, the horrid Violations of Order and Juſtice, the woeful Stains which have been upon the Land by the irregular and prodigious Effuſion of the Blood of Princes, Peers, and Prophets; the Affronts and Diſſipations which have been put upon Parliaments; the Contempts which have been poured out upon Miniſters, and Attempts againſt their Maintenance; the great Difficulties which lie before the noble Houſes at this Time, in their Endeavours of healing and ſettling the Land, and putting the broken Bones and diſlocated Joynts into due Order again; the allaying of Animoſities, the moderating of Extremities, the reconciling of Differences, the ſatisfying of Intereſts, the preſervation of pure Religion, and the great Concernments of Chriſt and his People; the reſtoring of collapſed Honour to the Nations, and of juſt Rights to all Orders therein (which have been ſo many Years obſtructed) the reviving of Trade, the eaſing of Preſſures, the reducing of theſe woefully toſſed and naufragated Kingdoms unto Calmneſs and Serenity again, do call aloud for theſe Duties in the Text, that ſo the Lord may be pleaſed to hear, forgive, and heal us himſelf; and ſhine upon the Counſels, and bleſs the whole Undertakings of his Servants, that they may be Inſtruments of Healing us likewiſe.

Uſe and Application.

To remember from whence they are fallen.

[Concluding] In as much as even the Sins of ſuch may provoke the Lord, your Zeal to God, and Love to the Nation ſhould appear, in awakening them and all others to remember from whence they are fallen, many of them through Pride, Wantonneſs, Intereſts, and carnal Deſigns, from wholſome Truths, from holy Ordinances, from the Love of a faithful Miniſtry, from Brotherly Love, from Chriſtian Communion to many Errors and vain Janglings, to Contempt of Magiſtracy, to affronting Authority, to violating publick Order and Peace, to ſuch an Exceſs of Licentiouſneſs under the Pretence of Freedom, that Religion was ſcarce ever more endangered under the Streights of Perſecution, than under the Laſciviouſneſs and Wantonneſs of an abuſed Liberty. Though therefore there ought to be all Tenderneſs to preſerve to God's People the Liberty wherewith the Lord hath made them free, God forbid any Reſtraint or Abridgment ſhould be upon that; yet ſince the ſame Lord hath commanded that we muſt not uſe our Liberty as a Cloak of Maliciousneſs; it is neceſſary that great Prudence be uſed to prevent the Exorbitances of wanton Minds, who make Uſe of Liberty to the Diſhonour and Aſſaulting of publick Authority, to the kindling of Flames, animating the diſcontented People into Inſurrections, enervating the Peace and Concord of the People of the Land, by disjointing them in that which is the main Bond of Unity the Truths of Religion; wherein when they were once univerſally broken, who ſees not how wide a Door is opened for Rome or Munſter, not only to enter in, but to be welcomed amongſt us.

For Liberty, againſt a general Toleration.

For Charity and Unity.

The Way therefore unto Healing is to endeavour to bring us all home to be God's People, and as his People to be compacted within ourſelves, to lay aſide all dividing, diſtinguiſhing, invidious Titles; and with fraternal Affections to coaleſce, as far as may be in Judgment, however throughly in Affection; and ſo to keep our differing Opinions to ourſelves, as that the Conſciences of our Brethren may not be grieved, nor the Peace of the Church of Chriſt endangered thereby.

And Prayers to the God of Peace.

I conclude with beſeeching you, that ſince the Lord hath taken it as one of his Titles to be called the Lord that healeth us, Exod. xv. 26. that without him the Builder worketh, the Watchman keepeth, the Stateſman counſelleth, the Phyſician healeth all in vain, you would ever by Prayer and Attendance unto God for Counſel, ſo ſeek his Face and Guidance in this weighty Work, that when it is finiſhed, and the head Stone of our Settlement laid, we may ſay, It was the Lord's Doing, and marvellous in our Eyes, and may with Shoutings cry, Grace, Grace unto it.

God's great Demonſtration and Demands of Juſtice, Mercy, and Humility. A Sermon Preached on Micah vi. 8. before the honourable Houſe of Commons, at their ſolemn ſolemn Faſt upon their firſt Sitting the thirtieth of April, 1660. By John Gauden, D.D.

London, 1660. 4to.

Mr. Baxter's Account of his Sermon on this Day before the Commons.

Life of Mr. Baxter, Fol. Part II. p. 217.

When I was in London, the new Parliament being called, they preſently appointed a Day of Faſting and Prayer for by themſelves: The Houſe of Commons choſe Mr. Calamy, Dr. Gauden, and myſelf to preach and pray with them at St. Margaret's Weſtminſter. In that Sermon I uttered ſome Paſſages that were after Matter of ſome Diſcourſe: Speaking of our Differences and the Ways to heal them, I told them, that whether we ſhould be loyal to our King, was none of our Differences; in that we are all agreed; it being not poſſible that a Man ſhould be true to the Proteſtants Principles and not be loyal; as it was impoſſible to be true to the Papiſts Principles and to be loyal: And for the Concord now wiſh'd in Matters of Church Government, I told them it was eaſy for moderate Men to come to a fair Agreement, and that the late reverend Primate of Ireland and myſelf had agreed in half an Hour. I remember not the very Words, but you may read them in the Sermon which was printed by Order of the Houſe of Commons.

As ſoon as this printed Sermon came abroad, the Papiſts were enraged againſt me; and one nameleſs Gentleman wrote a Pamphlet to challenge me to make good my Charge: And others ſent me Letters with their Names (real or counterfeit) containing the ſame Challenge; but never told me where they dwelt, nor how I might convey an Anſwer to them; whereas the heedleſs Challengers might have ſeen that I fully performed what I undertook, and anſwered their Challenge before they ſent it in the Sermon itſelf, where I cited Can. 3. of the General Council of the Laterane under Pope Innocent III. which I have done in other Places again and again to provoke them to make ſome Anſwer to it; but never could procure it of them. But to gratifie theſe Gentlemen, I began to write a fuller Proof of what I there affirmed; but I was adviſed not to publiſh it, conſidering the Power and Malice of the Papiſts, and how greatly (though they called for it) they would be enraged by it, and in likelihood quickly work my Ruin.

His Excellency received the Commiſſion with all Humility and Reſpect, but in regard the Parliament was adjourn'd for three Days, adviſed him the next Day to deliver that Letter which was to be by him imparted to the Council of State, to the Council at their next ſitting, which he accordingly did; but they would not preſume to open it without the Parliaments Directions, and took Caution of Sir John Greenvill to attend the Houſe at their next ſitting. At which time, by the General's Advice, he went without acquainting them, to the Houſe of Lords, to inform them he had a Letter from the King, who being acquainted that Sir John Greenvill attended at the Door with a Letter from his Majeſty, the Earl of Mancheſter went down to the Clerk and receiv'd it; the Letter had a Declaration incloſed in it, which were both read in the Houſe.

Original Letters among the Papers of Edw. Earl of Sandwich. MS.

My Lord,

This Day have been read in the Houſe of Commons two Letters from the King, one directed to the Houſe itſelf, and the other to the General: They conſiſted in four Points, 1. A general Act of Oblivion to all Perſons, ſave ſuch as the Parliament ſhall except, provided they do within 40 Days ſignify their Acceptance of this Pardon by ſome publick Act. 2. To confirm the Sales in ſuch Manner as the Two Houſes ſhall adviſe. 3. To grant Liberty of Conſcience. And 4. To pay the Arrears of the Army, and to receive them into Pay and Service: The Houſe upon the reading thereof expreſſed a great Senſe of Satisfaction, and ordered a Committee to draw up an Anſwer to the King's Letters, expreſſing therein the great and joyful Senſe they have of his Majeſty's gracious Offer, returning him humble Thanks for the ſame, promiſing a ſpeedy Anſwer to his Propoſitions, and giving Aſſurance of their Duty and Loyalty. The Lords had alſo a Letter to the ſame Effect; they voted a Return of Thanks: That the Government ought to be and is in the King and the two Houſes; that the Cauſe of all our Miſeries of late hath been the Separation of the Head from the Body; and that a Committee of both Houſes be appointed to conſider of fitting Expedients for uniting them again. Theſe Votes being communicated to the Houſe of Commons, they concurred therein. So that your Lordſhip by this will underſtand where the Government reſides now. This is all one Day's Work. The General hath Leave to make his own Anſwer to the King without communicating it to the Houſe. The Letter the King writ to him he read this Afternoon to ſome of his Officers, who (as I am told) expreſſed no diſlike of it. I am,

And of the like Proceedings in the Houſe of Lords.

Your Lordſhip's moſt humble
and faithful Servant,
J. Thurloe.

In the Evening his Excellency ſummoned all his Officers, that were in and near the City, and communicated to them his Majeſty's Letter and Declaration, upon the Reading whereof Colonel Lydcott firſt ſpake, addreſſing himſelf to his Excellency then preſent, That they were all bound to bleſs God for the Happineſs of that Day, which made them Witneſſes of his Majeſty's great Clemency and Goodneſs to all his Subjects expreſſed in that Declaration, and for his particular Kindneſs to them manifeſted in his moſt gracious Letter, &c. concluding, that they had now by the Prudence of their ever to be honoured General, the Opportunity to comply with the Obligations for which they were firſt raiſed, and they were theſe which his Majeſty was pleaſed to own, in their Submiſſion to his moſt juſt and lawful Authority, to be the Inſtruments to bring the Bleſſing of Peace and Reconciliation upon the King and People.

Their Anſwer by Addreſs to the General.

The Speech was approved by all that heard it. But Colonel Knight deſired they might give ſome written Teſtimony, —— and it was referred to a Committee of Officers, to draw up an Addreſs to his Excellency, in compliance with his Majeſty's Letter and Declaration, to be prepared againſt ſix the next Morning.

Ordinance for making Monk Captain General of all the Forces in England, Scotland and Ireland.

To reſtore the Dignity of Peerage.

In the Houſe of Lords, Prayers by Mr. Hodges. An Ordinance for making George Monk, Eſq; Captain General of all the Land Forces of England, Scotland, and Ireland, read a firſt and ſecond Time and committed.

—— Ordered, That the Committee of Privileges do take into their Conſideration the great Violation that hath been lately made upon the Peerage of this Kingdom.

Committee of the Houſe of Commons for a Treaty to be made with the King, upon Articles to be ſworn by his Majeſty before his Return.

Lord Clarendon's *Hiſtory, Vol.*III *p.*591.

The Committee who were appointed by the Houſe of Commons to prepare an Anſwer to the King's Letter, found it hard to ſatisfy all Men, who were well contented that the King ſhould be invited to return: But ſome thought that the Guilt of the Nation did require leſs Precipitation than was like to be uſed; and that the Treaty ought firſt to be made with the King, and Conditions of Security agreed on, before his Majeſty ſhould be reſtor'd. Many of thoſe who had [illegible] ferr'd together before the Meeting of the Parliament, had deſign'd ſome Articles to be prepared according to the Model of thoſe at Killingworth in the Time of King Harry the Third, to which the King ſhould be ſworn before he came home.

And the Preſbyterians were for Conditions of the Covenant.

Then the Preſbyterian Party, of which there were many Members in Parliament, though they were rather troubleſome than powerful, ſeem'd very ſolicitous, that ſomewhat ſhould be concluded in Veneration of the Covenant; and at leaſt that ſomewhat ſhould be inſerted in their Anſwer to the Diſcountenance of the Biſhops.

But the Houſe laid aſide all theſe Formalities.

But the warmer Zeal of the Houſe threw away all thoſe Formalities and Affectations. They ſaid they had proceeded too far already in their Vote upon the Receipt of the Letter, to fall back again, and to offend the King with colder Expreſſions of their Duty.

Biſhop Burnet's Account of theſe Proceedings.

Biſhop Burnet's Hiſtory, Fol. p. 88.

Mr. Hale, afterwards Chief Juſtice, moved for a Committee on this Head,

And was ſeconded in that Motion.

But General Monk gave his Reaſons againſt it.

Such Unanimity appeared in their Proceedings, that there was not the leaſt Diſpute among them, but upon one ſingle Point: Yet that was a very important one. Hale, afterwards the famous Chief Juſtice, moved that a Committee might be appointed to look into the Propoſitions that had been made, and the Conceſſions that had been offered by the late King during the War, particularly at the Treaty of Newport, that from thence they might digeſt ſuch Propoſitions as they ſhould think fit to be ſent over to the King. This was ſeconded, but I do not remember by whom. It was foreſeen, that ſuch a Motion might be ſet on foot: So Monk was inſtructed how to anſwer it whenſoever it ſhould be propoſed. He told the Houſe, that there was yet, beyond all Mens Hope, an univerſal quiet all over the Nation; but there were many Incendiaries ſtill on the Watch, trying where they could firſt raiſe the Flame. He ſaid, he had ſuch copious Informations ſent him of theſe Things, that it was not fit they ſhould be generally known: He could not anſwer for the Peace, either of the Nation or of the Army, if any Delay was put to the ſending for the King: What need was there of ſending Propoſitions to him? Might they not as well prepare them and offer them to him, when he ſhould come over? He was to bring neither Army nor Treaſure with him, either to fright them or to corrupt them. So he moved, that they would immediately ſend Commiſſioners to bring over the King. And ſaid, that he muſt lay the Blame of all the Blood or Miſchief that might follow on the Heads of thoſe, who ſhould ſtill inſiſt on any Motion that might delay the preſent Settlement of the Nation. This was eccho'd with ſuch a ſhout over the Houſe, that the Motion was no more inſiſted on.

And the Motion was dropt, with great Applauſe to the contrary.

Tho' not according to the Opinion of that Prelate.

This was indeed the great Service that Monk did. It was chiefly owing to the Poſt he was in, and to the Credit he had gained: For as to the Reſtoration itſelf, the Tide run ſo ſtrong, that he only went into it dexterouſly enough to get much Fame, and great Rewards, for that which will have ſtill a great Appearance in Hiſtory. If he had died ſoon after, he might have been more juſtly admir'd, becauſe leſs known, and ſeen only in one advantageous Light. But he lived long enough to make it known how falſe a Judgment Men are apt to make upon outward Appearance. To the King's coming in without Conditions, may be well imputed all the Errors of his Reign.

The Anſwer of the Commons agreed upon.

To gratify the Preſbyterians to little purpoſe.

In the End, after ſome Days Debate, finding an equal Impatience without the Walls, to that within the Houſe, they were contented to gratify the Preſbyterians in the Length of the Anſwer, and in uſing ſome Expreſſions which would pleaſe them, and could do the King no Prejudice, and all agreed, that this Anſwer ſhould be return'd to his Majeſty, which is here inſerted in the very Words.

Printed under this Title, a Letter to the King's moſt excellent Majeſty from the Commons of England aſſembled in Parliament, in Anſwer of his Majeſty's gracious Letter to that Houſe.

Moſt Royal Sovereign,

Acknowledging the Divine Providence, and his Majeſty's Wiſdom and Goodneſs,

And his Confidence in his Parliament;

And promiſing all Fidelity to him.

We your Majeſty's moſt loyal Subjects, the Commons of England aſſembled in Parliament, do with all humbleneſs preſent unto your Majeſty the unfeigned Thankfulneſs of our Hearts, for thoſe gracious Expreſſions of Piety, and Goodneſs, and Love to us, and the Nations under your Dominion, which your Majeſty's Letter of the $\frac{4}{14}$th of April, dated from Breda, together with the Declaration incloſed in it of the ſame Date, do ſo evidently contain. For which we do in the firſt Place, look up to the great King of Kings, and bleſs his Name, who hath put theſe Thoughts into the Heart of Our King, to make him glorious in the Eyes of his People; as thoſe great Deliverances, which that Divine Majeſty hath afforded unto your Royal Perſon, from many Dangers, and the Support which he hath given to your heroick and princely Mind under various Tryals, make it appear to all the World that you are precious in his Sight. And give us leave to ſay, that as your Majeſty is pleaſed to declare your Confidence in Parliaments, your Eſteem of them, and this your Judgment and Character of them, that they are ſo neceſſary for the Government of the Kingdom, that neither Prince nor People can be in any tolerable Degree happy without them, and therefore ſay, that you will hearken unto their Counſels, be tender of their Privileges, and careful to preſerve, and protect them; ſo we truſt, and will, with all humility, be bold to affirm, that your Majeſty will not be deceived in us, and that we will never depart from the Fidelity which we owe unto your Majeſty, that Zeal which we bear unto your Service, and a conſtant Endeavour to advance your Honour and Greatneſs.

With an Apology for the laſt Parliament under King Charles I.

And we beſeech your Majeſty, we may add this farther for the Vindication of Parliaments, and even of the laſt Parliament, conven'd under your Royal Father of happy Memory, when as your Majeſty well obſerves, through Miſtakes, and Miſun-

And declaring their Detestation of the late King's Murder.

As a Reproach to the Nation and an Offence to all the Protestant Churches.

Yet the Parliament was innocent of it.

And his Majesty's Goodness had inclin'd him to reconciling Thoughts.

And to restore the Nation to their lost Laws, Liberties and Estates.

And to take great Care for repairing the Breaches, without shaking the Foundations.

Miſunderſtandings, many Inconveniences were produced, which were not intended; that thoſe very Inconveniences could not have been brought upon us by thoſe Perſons who had deſign'd them, without violating the Parliament itſelf. For they well knew it was not poſſible to do a Violence to that ſacred Perſon, whilſt the Parliament which had vowed and covenanted for the Defence and Safety of that Perſon, remain'd entire. Surely, Sir, as the Perſons of our Kings have ever been dear unto Parliaments, ſo we cannot think of that horrid Act committed againſt the precious Life of our late Sovereign, but with ſuch a Deteſtation and Abhorrency, as we want Words to expreſs it; and next to wiſhing it had never been, we wiſh it may never be remembred by your Majeſty, to be unto you an Occaſion of Sorrow, as it will never be remember'd by us, but with that Grief and Trouble of Mind which it deſerves: Being the greateſt Reproach that ever was incurr'd by any of the Engliſh Nation, an Offence to all the Proteſtant Churches abroad, and a Scandal to the Profeſſion of the Truth of Religion here at home; though both Profeſſion, and true Profeſſors, and the Nation itſelf, as well as the Parliament, were moſt innocent of it; it having been only the Contrivance and Act of ſome few ambitious and bloody Perſons, and ſuch others, as by their Influence were miſled. And as we hope and pray, that God will not impute the Guilt of it, nor of all the evil Conſequences thereof, unto the Land, whoſe divine Juſtice never involves the Guiltleſs with the Guilty, ſo we cannot but give due Praiſe to your Majeſty's Goodneſs, who are pleaſed to entertain ſuch reconciled, and reconciling Thoughts, and with them not only meet, but as it were prevent your Parliament and People, propoſing your ſelf in a great Meaſure; and inviting the Parliament to conſider farther, and adviſe your Majeſty, what may be neceſſary to reſtore the Nation to what it hath loſt, raiſe up again the Banks and Fences of it, and make the Kingdom happy by the Advancement of Religion, the Security of our Laws, Liberties, and Eſtates, and the removing all Jealouſies and Animoſities, which may render our Peace leſs certain and durable. Wherein your Majeſty gives a large Evidence of your great Wiſdom; judging aright, that after ſo high a Diſtemper, and ſuch an univerſal Shaking of the very Foundations, great Care muſt be had to repair the Breaches, and much Circumſpection and Induſtry uſed to provide Things neceſſary for the ſtrengthening of thoſe Repairs, and preventing whatſoever may diſturb or weaken them.

They are preparing ſome Propoſals to that End.

And rely upon his Majeſty's Concurrence with them.

He ſpeaking as a gracious King, and they acting as dutiful, loving and loyal Subjects.

Aſſuring his Majeſty, of not ſparing their Eſtates nor their Lives to ſerve him.

We ſhall immediately apply our ſelves to the preparing of theſe Things; and, in a very ſhort Time, we hope to be able to preſent them to your Majeſty; and for the preſent do, with all humble Thankfulneſs, acknowledge your Grace and Favour in aſſuring us of your Royal Concurrence with us, and ſaying, that we ſhall not expect any Thing from you, but what you will be as ready to give, as we to receive. And we cannot doubt of your Majeſty's effectual Performance, ſince your own princely Judgment hath prompted unto you the Neceſſity of doing ſuch Things; and your Piety and Goodneſs hath carried you to a free Tender of them to your faithful Parliament. You ſpeak as a gracious King, and we will do what beſits dutiful, loving, and loyal Subjects; who are yet more engaged to honour and highly eſteem your Majeſty, for your declining, as you were pleaſed to ſay, all foreign Aſſiſtance, and rather truſting to your People; who we do aſſure your Majeſty, will and do open their Arms and their Hearts to receive you, and will ſpare neither their Eſtates nor their Lives when your Service ſhall require it of them.

They congratulate his Majeſty for continuing in the true Faith.

Againſt the Promiſes and Perſuaſions of ſeducing Papiſts on the one hand,

And the hard Uſage of ſome miſguided Proteſtants on the other hand.

Concluding with their Prayers, that he may be the Glory of Kings, and the Joy of his People.

And we have yet more Cauſe to enlarge our Praiſe and our Prayers to God for your Majeſty, that you have continued unſhaken in your Faith; that neither the Temptation of Allurements, Perſuaſions, and Promiſes from ſeducing Papiſts on the one Hand, nor the Perſecution, and hard Uſage from ſome ſeduced, and miſguided Profeſſors of the Proteſtant Religion on the other Hand, could at all prevail on your Majeſty, to make you forſake the Rock of Iſrael, the God of your Fathers, and the true Proteſtant Religion in which your Majeſty hath been bred; but you have ſtill been as a Rock yourſelf, firm to your Covenant with your and our God, even now expreſſing your Zeal and Affection for the Proteſtant Religion, and your Care and Study for the Propagation thereof. This hath been a Rejoycing of Heart to all the Faithful of the Land, and an Aſſurance to them that God would not forſake you; but after many Tryals, which ſhould but make you more precious, as Gold out of the Fire, would reſtore your Majeſty unto your Patrimony, and People, with more Splendour and Dignity, and make you the Glory of Kings, and the Joy of your Subjects; which is, and ſhall ever be, the Prayer of your Majeſty's moſt loyal Subjects, the Commons of England aſſembled in Parliament.

A Letter to the King's most Excellent Majesty, from the Commons of England assembled in Parliament, in Answer of his Majesty's Gracious Letter to that House. London, Printed by Edward Husbands and Thomas Newcomb, Printers to the Commons House of Parliament.

The Address of the Officers of the Army to his Excellency the Lord General Monk, Phillips & Clarges Contin. Hist. fol. p. 727.

To his Excellency the Lord General Monk, Captain General of all the Armies and Forces in England, Scotland, and Ireland, and one of the Generals at Sea,

The humble Address of the Officers of your Excellency's Army, in the Name of themselves and their Brethren.

Declaring their Obedience and their Resolutions, to acquiesce in what the Lord shall bring forth from the Consultations of this present Parliament,

Although we cannot doubt of your Excellency's Confidence in our Affections, and our Faithfulness to your Excellency, and that Discipline which by your good and prudent Conduct, hath been exercised over us, whereby we are instructed to an entire Obedience to your Excellency, and that Authority which the Lord shall place over us, which we hope we have manifested in our last Actions under your Excellency, against all Persons whatsoever, in any ways disturbing the Peace and Settlement of the Nations, although some of them have been our Brethren formerly engaged in the same Cause with us. As also in our late Remonstrance and Address to your Excellency, wherein, as it becomes us in Duty, we have solemnly declared to acquiesce in what the Lord shall bring forth from the Consultations of this present Parliament.

And their Satisfaction in his Majesty's Letter and Declaration,

Yet in regard your Excellency hath been pleased to communicate to us, a Letter and Declaration from the King's Majesty, full of gracious Expressions; we cannot but acknowledge, that the Matter of it gives a great Measure of Quiet to our Minds, and more than ordinary Expectations of the Enjoyments of much Tranquillity and Happiness under his Majesty's Government.

And in the General Indemnity, and Liberty to tender Consciences; and discharge of their Arrears, &c.

And that they will answer the Obligations for which they were first raised, the Preservation of the true Protestant Religion, the Honour of the King, the Privileges of Parliament, the Liberty of the Subject, and the fundamental Laws of the Land.

The free and general Indemnity offered by his Majesty, with a Liberty to tender Consciences, Satisfaction of Arrears, his Readiness to consent to a Confirmation of Sales, and other Grants and Purchases of Estates to all Persons now in Possession of the same, is that of which we cannot doubt of the real Performance, being left by his Majesty to the Parliament's Determination, so we believe it is the most probable Way to bring the Nations to their desired Settlement. And we hope to evince to his Majesty, and all the World, that we, and all those that have been engaged in the Parliament's Cause, are his Majesty's most loyal Subjects, and that your Excellency, and the Armies under your Command, have complyed with the Obligations, for which they were first raised, for the Preservation of the true Protestant Religion, the Honour and Dignity of the King, the Privileges of Parliament, the Liberty and Prosperity of the Subject, and the Fundamental Laws of the Land.

The Speaker's Speech to him.

Mercurius Publicus, 4to. No. 19.

I need not tell you with what grateful and thankful Hearts the Commons now assembled in Parliament have received his Majesty's gracious Letter, Res ipsa loquitur, you yourself have been auricularis & ocularis Testis de Rei Veritate. Our Bells and our Bonfires have already begun the Proclamation of his Majesty's Goodness and of our Joys. We have told the People, that our King, the Glory of England, is coming home again, and they have resounded it back again in our Ears, that they are ready, and their Hearts are open to receive him: Both Parliament and People have cried aloud in their Prayers to the King of Kings, Long live KING CHARLES the Second.

With a Present of five hundred Pounds.

I am likewise to tell you, that the House doth not think fit that you should return to our Royal Sovereign, without some Testimony of their Respects to yourself; they have ordered and appointed five hundred Pounds shall be deliver'd unto you, to buy a Jewel, as a Badge of that Honour which is due to a Person whom the King hath honoured to be the Messenger of so gracious a Message; and I am commanded in the Name of the House to return you their very hearty Thanks.

The Lord Clarendon's Remarks on this great and sudden Change.

Lord Clarendon's History, Vol. III. p. 594.

So great and sudden a Change was this, that a Servant of the King's, who for near ten Years together, had been in Prisons, and other Confinements, only for being the King's Servant, and would but three Months before have been put to have undergone a Shameful Death, if he had been known to have ſeen the King. Should be now rewarded for bringing ſuch a Meſſage from him: From this Time there was ſuch an Emulation and Impatience in Lords and Commons and City, and generally over the Kingdom, who ſhould make the moſt lively Expreſſions of their Duty and of their Joy, that a Man could not but wonder where thoſe People dwelt who had done all the Miſchief, and kept the King ſo many Years from enjoying the Comfort and Support of ſuch excellent Subjects.

The City preſent his Majeſty with ten thouſand Pounds.

And one thouſand to the Duke of York, and a like Sum to the Duke of Gloceſter.

And ſend a Committee of Aldermen and other Citizens with it.

Philips or Clarges Continuat. of the Hiſt. of Great-Britain, Fol. p. 729.

In a Common-council of the City of London were read his Majeſty's Letter and Declaration, and immediately they ordered ten thouſand Pounds to be preſented to his Majeſty, a thouſand Pounds to the Duke of York, and a thouſand Pounds to the Duke of Gloceſter: And that Alderman Langham, Alderman Reynoldſon, Alderman Brown, Alderman Thompſon, Alderman Frederick, Alderman Wale, Alderman Adams, Alderman Bateman, Alderman Robinſon, Mr. Recorder Wild, Sir Nicholas Criſp, Mr. Vincent, Mr. Bildolph, Mr. Ford, Mr. Bloodworth, Sir James Bunce, Mr. Lewis, and Mr. William Bateman, ſhould from this City attend his Majeſty, with a Preſentment of their moſt dutiful Acknowledgments for his Clemency and Goodneſs towards them.

A Committee of Lords ſent over to the King,

The Houſe of Lords reſolved, that the Earls of Oxford, of Warwick, and of Middleſex, Lord Brook, Lord Berkley, and Lord Viſcount Hereford be ſent to attend his Majeſty.

With a Letter of the Houſe to his Majeſty;

The Letter of the Lords to the King.

With Thanks for his Gracious Letter and Declaration,

And for his Confidence in them.

Moſt gracious Sovereign,

Your loyal Subjects the Peers now aſſembled, do with all Humility and Thankfulneſs return their Acknowledgments to your Majeſty for your gracious Letter and Declaration, and do eſteem it their greateſt Honour, that your Majeſty is pleaſed to expreſs a Confidence of their Counſels and Endeavours for the compoſing of the ſad and unhappy Diſtractions of your Kingdoms: And they own this as their great Advantage, that they may now act in Diſcharge of their own Duty by your Majeſty's Command.

That the Peers had ſuffered with the Crown,

Your Majeſty's great and many Sufferings have long affected their Hearts with deep Reſentments of Trouble and Sorrow, but the ſame Power that uſurped and prophaned your Sceptre, diveſted them of their Rights and Privileges, and kept them under ſuch Preſſures and Difficulties, as they were rendred incapable of ſerving your Majeſty in order to thoſe Ends, to which their Duty and Allegiance did engage them. It hath been their conſtant Deſire that the Nation had continued happy and innocent; but your Majeſty's Piety and Wiſdom hath ſhewed you to what Degree your Clemency is to be extended: And we hope all your Subjects will anſwer your Majeſty's Grace and Favour to the utmoſt Point of Fidelity and Obedience.

And had a more particular Dependance on it,

By the Preſcriptions of Law, and by their own Affection and Duty.

The Peers have a more juſt Ground to own a more particular Dependance and Subſervience to the Throne of Majeſty, not only by the Preſcriptions of Law, but by that Affection and Duty which is fixed in their Hearts upon the Foundations of Loyalty, ———

Weſtminſter this 3d of May, 1660.

The Committee of Commons ſent over to attend his Majeſty.

The Commons appointed the Lord Fairfax, Lord Bruce, Lord Falkland, Lord Caſtleton, Lord Herbert of Worceſter, Lord Mandeville, Sir Horatio Townſhend, Sir Anthony Aſhley Cowper, Sir George Booth, Sir John Holland, Sir Henry Cholmeley, and Denzil Hollis, Eſq; to attend his Majeſty from his Houſe, and to make the quickeſt Preparation they can for their Journey, to deſire his Majeſty to make a ſpeedy Return to his Parliament, to the Exerciſe of his Kingly Office.

A Let-

Mr. Sharp's Letter to Mr. Douglas upon his going over to attend his Majesty by Order of General Monk.

Woodrow's History of the Church of Scotland, Introduction, p. 21.

A Letter of the reverend Mr. James Sharp, Agent for the Kirk of Scotland, to the reverend Mr. Douglas Minister in Edinburgh, dated May 4, 1660. acquainting him, that he was preparing to go over to Breda, being preſſed thereto by the General. —— That the Preſbyterian Miniſters of the City had reſolved to ſend over next Week ſome Miniſters from the City of Oxford and Cambridge to congratulate the King; and (ſays he) I am deſired to acquaint the King of their Purpoſe, and diſpoſe for their Reception; and if it be poſſible, that he would write to both Houſes by Way of Prevention, that they would ſecure Religion in reference to ſome Points, &c.

For ſecuring Religion, i. e. Preſbytery.

He had ſome Particulars of Secrecy from the General, and a Letter to the King, and another to the prime Miniſter Chancellour Hyde.

Some Particulars of Secrecy the General hath recommended to me, and given Orders to tranſport me in a Fregate. I have got a large Letter to the King, and another to his prime Miniſter. Providence hath ordered it well, that my going carries the Face of ſome Concernment in reference to England; but I ſhall have hereby the better Acceſs and Opportunity to ſpeak what the Lord ſhall direct, as to our Matters, and give a true Information of the Carriage of Buſineſs. I think I need not ſtay above ten Days. It will be beſt to addreſs the King by a Letter. Preſbyterians here are few, and all are Engliſhmen, and theſe will not endure us to do any thing that may carry a Reſemblance in preſſing Uniformity. For my Part, I ſhall not be acceſſary to any thing prejudicial to the Preſbyterian Government, but to appear for it in any other Way than is within my Sphere is inconvenient, and may do Harm, and not Good.

English Preſbyterians will not concert with the Scots.

However he promiſes to do nothing prejudicial to the Preſbyterian Government, tho' he hardly knows how to ſerve it.

Biſhop Burnet's Remarks on this Miſſion of Mr. Sharp.

Biſhop Burnet's Hiſtory of his own Times, Fol. p. 92.

Very ſevere upon him, and accuſing him of Diſſimulation and Treachery.

As ſoon as it was fixed, that the King was to be reſtored, a great many went over to make their Court: Among theſe Sharp, who was employ'd by the Revolutioners in Scotland, was one; he carried with him a Letter from the Earl of Glencairn to Hyde, made ſoon after Earl of Clarendon, recommending him as the only Perſon capable to manage the Deſign of ſetting up Epiſcopacy in Scotland: Upon which he was received into great Confidence. Yet as he had obſerved very carefully the Succeſs of Monk's ſolemn Proteſtations againſt the King and for a Common-wealth, it ſeems he was ſo pleaſed with the Original, that he reſolved to copy after it, without letting himſelf be diverted from it by Scruples: For he ſtuck neither at ſolemn Proteſtations, both by Word of Mouth and by Letters, (of which I have ſeen many Proofs) nor at Appeals to God of his Sincerity in acting for the Preſbyters both in Prayers and upon other Occaſions, joyning with theſe many dreadful Imprecations on himſelf if he did prevaricate. He was all the while maintained by the Preſbyterians as their Agent, and continued to give them a conſtant Account of the Progreſs of his Negociation in their Service, while he was indeed undermining it. This Piece of Craft was ſo viſible, he having repeated his Proteſtations to as many Perſons as then grew jealous of him, that when he threw off the Maſk within a Year after this, it laid a Foundation of ſuch a Character of him, that nothing could ever bring to any tolerable Thoughts of a Man, whoſe Diſſimulation and Treachery was ſo well known, and of which ſo many Proofs were to be ſeen under his own Hand.

The loyal Behaviour of the Fleet upon Admiral Mountague's communicating the King's Expreſs to him.

Publick Intelligence by Authority, 4to.

Letters from the Fleet dated from the Naſeby, May 4. adviſe, That the Lord Montague upon the Receipt of the Expreſs on the third of May, wherein were incloſed the gracious Meſſage of his ſacred Majeſty to the Houſe of Commons, the gracious Letter to his Excellency, and his Majeſty's Declaration, commanded a great Gun to be ſhot off, the uſual Summons to call his Officers together. Immediately the Commanders came aboard him, and a Council of War was held, at which were preſent the General, Vice-Admiral, Rear-Admiral, Captain Cuttance, Captain Clark, Captain Heyward, Captain Wager, Captain Sparling, Captain Mootham, Captain Penroſe, and Captain Parks. The General communicated his Majeſty's Letters bearing Date April 4, 1660. as alſo the Declaration of his Majeſty, during the Reading of which all the Commanders ſtood up bare. The Lord Montague received two other Letters directed to himſelf, the one from his moſt ſacred Majeſty, the other from the moſt illuſtrious Prince the Duke of York. It was Reſolved, Nemine Contradicente,

Their Reſolution of Loyalty and Duty to his Majeſty.

That the Commanders and Officers of the Fleet do receive the gracious Declaration of his Majeſty, as alſo the Expreſſions of his gracious Purpoſes to them and the whole Fleet (communicated in a Letter to the Generals) with great Joyfulneſs of Heart, and for them return unto his Majeſty their moſt humble Thanks, declaring and profeſſing their exact Loyalty and Duty unto his Majeſty, and deſiring the Generals of the Fleet humbly to preſent the ſame to his Majeſty.

Their great Acclamations and other Expreſſions of Joy.

Reſolved, That the ſaid Letter, Declaration, and Vote ſhall be publickly read to the reſpective Ships Companies of the Fleet now in the Downs, to know their Senſe concerning the ſame.

Which being accordingly performed, they did by loud Acclamations and other Expreſſions of Joy, declare their Aſſent to the ſaid Vote, not one Perſon in the whole Fleet manifeſting any Diſſent thereunto, the General fired the firſt Gun himſelf, and cryed, God bleſs his Majeſty: Then might you ſee the Fleet in her Pride, with Pendants looſe, Guns roaring, Caps flying, and loud Vive le Roys echoed from one Ship's Company to another, which were anſwered with the great Guns from Deal and Sandwich Caſtles. The General gave two Pipes of Canary to the Commanders and Gentlemen in his Ship.

Mr. Moreland, afterwards Sir Samuel, waits on the King at Breda, and makes a Diſcovery of ſeveral important Matters to him.

Sir William Lower's Journal, Fol 1660. p. 12.

We think fit to relate here as a Thing moſt remarkable, that on this $_{16}^{6}$th of May, Mr. Moreland chief Commiſſioner under Mr. Thurloe, who was Secretary of State unto Oliver Cromwell, his chief and moſt confident Miniſter of his Tyranny, arrived at Breda, where he brought divers Letters and Notes of very great Importance, foraſmuch as the King diſcovered there a Part of the intricate Plots of the inter Reign, and likewiſe the Perfidiouſneſs of ſome of thoſe who ow'd him no doubt the greateſt Fidelity in the World. The King receiv'd him perfectly well, made him Knight, and rendred him this publick Teſtimony, that he had received moſt conſiderable Services from him for ſome Years paſt.

The Caſe of Col. Ingoldſby, who had been one of the King's Judges, and yet had merited his Pardon, which he afterwards obtain'd.

Lord Clarendon's Hiſtory, Vol. III. p. 595.

There was one Inſtance that perplexed the King at Breda, which was the Caſe of Colonel Ingoldſby; who was in the Number of the late King's Judges, and whoſe Name was in the Warrant for his Murther. He, from the Depoſal of Richard had declared, that he would ſerve the King, and told Mr. Mordaunt, that he would perform all Services he could, without making any Conditions; and would be well content, that his Majeſty, when he came home, ſhould take his Head off, if he thought fit; only he deſired that the King might know the Truth of his Caſe; which was this.

Having abſented himſelf from all the ſeveral Seſſions: And yet forc'd by Cromwell, guiding his Hand to ſign the Sentence.

He was a Gentleman of a good Extraction, and near allied to Cromwell, who had drawn him into the Army before, or about the Time when he came firſt to Age, where he grew to be a Colonel of Horſe, and to have the Reputation of great Courage againſt the Enemy, and of equal Civility to all Men. It is very true, he was named amongſt thoſe who were appointed to be Judges of the King; and it is as true, that he was never once preſent with them, always abhorring the Action in his Heart, and having no other Paſſion in any Part of the Quarrel, but his perſonal Kindneſs to Cromwell. The next Day after the horrid Sentence was pronounced, he had an Occaſion to ſpeak with an Officer, who, he was told, was in the Painted Chamber; where, when he came thither, he ſaw Cromwell, and the reſt of thoſe who had ſate upon the King, and were then as he found afterwards, aſſembled to ſign the Warrant for the King's Death. Aſſoon as Cromwell's Eyes were upon him, he run to him, and taking him by the Hand, drew him by Force to the Table; and ſaid, though he had eſcaped him all the while before, he ſhould now Sign that Paper as well as they; which he ſeeing what it was, refuſed with great Paſſion; ſaying, he knew nothing of the Buſineſs; and offered to go away. But Cromwell, and others, held him by Violence, and Cromwell with a loud Laughter, taking his Hand in his, and putting the Pen between his Fingers, with his own Hand writ Richard Ingoldſby, he making all the Reſiſtance he could: And he ſaid if his Name there were compared with what he had ever writ himſelf, it could never be look'd upon as his own Hand.

Though his Majeſty had within himſelf Compaſſion for him, he would never ſend him any Aſſurance of his Pardon; preſuming that if all theſe Allegations were true, there would be a Seaſon when a Diſtinction would be made, without his Majeſty's declaring himſelf between him and thoſe other of that bloody Liſt, which he reſolv'd never to pardon. Nor was Ingoldſby at all diſhearten'd with this, but purſued his former Reſolutions, and firſt ſurpriſed the Caſtle of Windſor (where there was a great Magazine of Arms and Ammunition) and put out that Governour whom the Rump had put in; and afterwards took Lambert Priſoner, as is before remembred.

ir Arthur Haslerigg, another of the King's Judges applies himſelf to General Monk for Indemnity, Philips or Clarges Continuat. K. Ch. II. Fol. p. 741.

Sir Arthur Haſlerig, one of thoſe who were eſteemed to be ſo maliciouſly active in Oppoſition to his Majeſty's Government, as to be afterward excepted in the Act of Indemnity from any Conditions of Pardon, had lately come to General Monk, when he perceived the Revolution to haſten towards the Reſtauration of the King and his Government, and expoſtulated with him about it, in reference to the Security of his own Condition. The General was unwilling to make him deſperate, becauſe he had at that Time a Regiment of Horſe, and a Regiment of Foot in the Garriſons of Newcaſtle, Tinmouth, Barwick, and Carliſle, under his Government; which (if he had oppoſed) could not have been reduced to Obedience without the Effuſion of Blood, which his Excellency much endeavoured to avoid in all the Progreſs of his Actions; and therefore told him, If he would quietly give up his Command, and retire to his Houſe, he would endeavour to ſecure him in his Life and Eſtate, and doubted not to effect it. This being made known at a following Conference by the Houſe of Commons, was juſtified with great Modeſty by the Duke of Albemarle in the Houſe of Peers, and his Life was thereupon pardoned in the Act; and a ſmall Time after, his Eſtate alſo was, at the Mediation of the Duke, granted to his Heir, a Man averſe to his Father's diſloyal Principles. Sir Arthur himſelf a while after his Impriſonment dying of a Fever in the Tower.

Who promis'd his Endeavours to ſave his Life and Eſtate, if he would give up his Command and retire to his Houſe.

By which means at the General's Interceſſion he did afterwards eſcape.

The Arrival of Dr. Thomas Clarges at Breda; Brother in Law and great Confident of General Monk.

Sir William Lower's Journal, Fol. p. 10.

Rather on May 8. as Sir Tho. Clarges or his Writer affirms.

Philips or Clarges Contin. Ch. II. Fol. p. 728.

Mr. Clarges, Brother-in-law to General Monk, arrived at Breda, and brought to his Majeſty the Proteſtations of Fidelity and Obedience from the Army, and the Confirmation of what they had already heard of the Declaration of the Parliament.

The Addreſs of the Officers of the Army had been at the Motion of General Monk, read and approved in the Houſe of Commons. His Excellency then told them, He intended to prepare a Letter, to be ſent to his Majeſty, and did with their Leave purpoſe, to ſend that Addreſs to him, that his Majeſty might thereby perceive, the Armies were at his Devotion; and deſigning to ſend it by Commiſſary Clarges, who was as well a Member of their Houſe, as an Officer of the Army, he requeſted their Permiſſion for him to go. The Houſe then ordered he ſhould have Leave to go from his Excellency to the King. On the fifth of May, Clarges began his Journey, and at his parting from the General, he gave him no other Inſtructions but to give the King all manner of Aſſurance of his Fidelity to him, and his Reſtauration, to improve all Opportunities to his Service; deſiring him not to move any thing to his Majeſty, either for himſelf, or him, or any other in his Company, that his Majeſty might ſee that both he, and thoſe ſo nearly concerned with him in his Reſtauration, ſought more the publick Good of their Country, than their own private Honour or Profit; which he did faithfully obſerve at that Time and ever after.

Carried ſhort Inſtructions with him.

And a Charge not to move for the General's Intereſt.

But only to preſent a Letter and Addreſs to the King.

The Letter he preſented to his Majeſty, wherein was incloſed the Addreſs.

May it pleaſe your Majeſty,

The Parliament being ſitting at my Receipt of your Majeſty's gracious Letter to me, I thought myſelf obliged in Duty to preſent it to the Houſe of Commons, whoſe Senſe of it, and of that other your Majeſty was pleaſed to ſend to them by Sir John Greenvill, I doubt not but your Majeſty will receive an Account by ſome of their own Members. I have alſo communicated your Majeſty's Letter and Declaration to as many of the chief Officers of the Army as were preſent in or about London, who reſented your Majeſty's Clemency and Grace to them with very great Duty and Affection, as your Majeſty may perceive in the incloſed Addreſs, which within few Hours after their Convention they deliver'd to me. By all which Circumſtances, I hope I may aſſure your Majeſty, that as the Army hath been very inſtrumental in their Endeavours to further the Settlement, Peace and Proſperity of your Majeſty's Kingdoms and Dominions; ſo nothing will be dearer to them and me, than to be found in our Generations purſuing thoſe good Ends, which may render us ſerviceable and acceptable to our Country, to give unto Cæſar the Things that are Cæſar's, and to God the Things which are God's.

May it pleaſe your Majeſty,

May the 5th. Your Majeſty's moſt humble and obedient Servant and Subject,

George Monk.

With another private Letter in his own Hand.

This Letter was dictated by his Excellency in the Preſence of many Officers of the Army, but he writ another ſhort Letter with his own Hand, wherein he acquainted his Majeſty, that he choſe to ſend Mr. Clarges to him, becauſe he was the only Perſon he truſted in the neareſt Concernments and Conſultations for his Reſtauration, as one to whom he deſired his Majeſty to give Credit to what he ſhould ſay on that behalf.

The Bearer knighted by the King.

After the reading of theſe Letters, and the Addreſs incloſed in the former of them, his Majeſty knighted him, and by many kind Expreſſions demonſtrated his Senſe of his Merit and Service to him, &c.

Two Letters from Amſterdam to Mr. Jeſſey and to Mr. John Durie, one dated May 7, the other May 20, 1660.

Amſterdam, May 7, 1660.

A young Scholar a Foreigner had happen'd to foretel the King's Return.

Tho' little Regard was had to him.

Yet he was very poſitive in it.

I cannot but make known unto you, that there is here a young Man aged about twenty one Years, of a very good Family, a Scholar, who hath been in October 1658. with the King at Bruſſels, and told him, that it was revealed unto him, that the King ſhould come upon his Throne in the eleventh Year of his Exile, a Year and a half after that Time when this young Man was with him, and that his People ſhould call him and joyn their Hands together, that they may have him for their King. I heard of this long ago, but becauſe we all ſlighted it, I ſpoke not with the young Man; but now I have ſpoken with him, he told me, that it was ſo, that he was three Weeks at Bruſſels in October 1658. and ſpoke to the King twice per interpretem one of the King's Chaplains; for the young Man ſpeaks neither Engliſh nor French, but Latin, he told me, that he hath ſuffer'd ſuch Scoffs and Deriſions from his Friends, that it is incredible, and that he had theſe inward Stirrings a Year before he went to Bruſſels, yet he could not poſſibly go ſooner, and then he went ſecretly, his Friends not knowing of it. I aſked him whether he had this in a Viſion or Dream, he ſaith no, but by ſuch ſtrong Injections and Inſpirations that he could not be at Reſt. He never kept any Correſpondency with England, nor (which is remarkable) his Friends. He told me he did as firmly believe it then, when neither Man nor Devil could imagine

The King wiſely promis'd a Recompence, when it came to paſs.

imagine it, that if the King ſhould have laid him in Priſon, giving him Water and Bread till it was done, he ſhould moſt willingly have undergone it. He told me, that it was revealed to him a Year and a half ago, that Cromwell ſhould die, but he durſt tell it no body. The King told him, that if it ſhould be fulfilled what he foretold him, that he ſhould come to him, and he would recompence it. He is to come to me again, for methinks he ſaith, that this King or his Son ſhall be ſo glorious, that under him the Jews ſhall be converted. Sir, I moſt earneſtly intreat you not to publiſh this as yet, although it be very true, what I write. The Friends of this young Man are of very good Quality, and well known to me, but they will not have that any Man ſpeak of it.

Mr. Durie, Amſterdam, May 20. 1660.

A Letter for carrying on the common Concernment of the Goſpel.

The Time drawing on for Converſion of the Jews.

Who have been hitherto ill treated by the Chriſtians.

And muſt be now more kindly uſed.

To be overcome by Charity and Love.

The King's Return might encourage theſe Hopes.

Eſpecially when there have been Predictions of the King's being inſtrumental in this great Work of the Converſion of the Jews.

Dear Brother in the Lord, your moſt acceptable of the preſent, I received laſt Week, with an incloſed from our common endeared Friend, Mr. Sprigge unto Mr. Hoyer, which I preſently delivered, as by this Return of his will appear. As for the Intercourſe of our Chriſtian Converſation, in the common Concernment of Goſpel, I ſhall be glad it may continue amongſt us. For the more I conſider the preſent Condition of the Chriſtian Church in her extreameſt Diviſions and Diſtractions; and on the other ſide, the Condition of the poor Jewiſh Nation in their extream Poverty and Diſtreſs, laying at our Doors and deſiring our Help; the more I find my ſelf bound in Conſcience to ſtir up my ſelf, and others of my Chriſtian Acquaintance, to mind, and ſeriouſly to take to heart this Time of our and their Viſitation. Our Viſitation, leſt we, as unworthy of that noble Olive Tree, wherein by the Goſpel we were ingrafted, be cut off, and caſt into the Fire of God's approaching Judgment if no Fruits worthy of Chriſt, and of his Love towards the poor Remnant of this his long chaſtiſed People be found in us. Their Viſitation, ſeeing the Time is drawing near, that the Lord will reduce the Captivity of his People, and revivify again the Dead, and dry Bones of the Houſe of Jacob. For though they themſelves little think on ſuch an undeſerved and unexpected Grace, which God is reſerving for them; yet we that know, and are ſure of it, how provident ought we to be ſo to behave our ſelves towards them, that they might not only hear of us, but alſo ſee in us the unmoveable Conſtancy of our Saviour's Love towards them, even unto this Day. For ſhall once their Hearts be ſo convinced, as to ſay Hoſanna, bleſſed is he that cometh in the Name of the Lord. Then indeed they muſt firſt have had ſome lively and moſt ſenſible Experience of ſome Soul-quicking Excellency in thoſe, that came from the Lord; which make them long for any that came in his Name. Hitherto this poor People has been very unkindly dealt with, which encreaſed the Averſion they had from Chriſt more and more. But now if we that know the Mind of the Lord towards them, might have that Grace, as ſo to behave our ſelves in their behalf, that they might perceive in us the long Forbearance, Kindneſs and Love of Chriſt towards them; ſurely their Hearts are not ſo hardned, but this would make them melt; they are not ſo ſtiff-necked but this would at length make them yield and ſubmit. And what a Joy, yea, what a Glory would it be for us! what an acceptable Offering unto our Lord, to have brought down unto him his Benjamin, and by the Cords of his Love in us to have drawn up unto him, theſe his long expected and longed for, Brethren? This I thought fit to remember you of, more and more to encourage you in the Service, you have already done unto Chriſt in behalf of this People; and to teſtify unto you the Joy of my Heart, having ſeen in your laſt Letter the Concurrence of our Underſtanding and Mind in this Cauſe; when you ſay, who knoweth, but if we be as conſtant in well doing, and in provoking them to Love and good Works, anſwerable to Repentance, as they are to Stubbornneſs and Rebellion; but that their Evil through God's Bleſſing will be overcome by our Good? Who knoweth indeed what the Lord might yet do, even in our Days? Therefore I beſeech you for the Lord's ſake, to obſerve all Opportunity of provoking amongſt you and continuancy of this great Work. I hope the Re-eſtabliſhment of your King will be no Obſtacle unto it, but much more a pregnant Occaſion for it, as bearing ſome Shadow and Type of that great Reſtitution of the Kingdom in Iſrael: And beſides I hinted laſt Week unto Mr. Jeſſey, an Hiſtory of a young Student of Divinity in this Town, who in the Year 1657. in October, had a Manner of Revelation, whereby he was taught, that in the Year 1660. King Charles II. ſhould be reſtored on the Throne of his Father, yea and ſhould be invited to it with great Solemnity; and that his Glory ſhould be greater than ever his Fathers were, and that under his Government great Things ſhould be wrought; and amongſt other Things, that his Family would be inſtrumental towards the Converſion of the Jews. This he related to his Mother and other Friends, but they ſlighted it, and would not permit him to go and acquaint the King of it: Yet in the Year 1658, he took occaſion to go to Bruſſels, and there he related this to his Majeſty, and was about a Fortnight by him, and thence came hither again. And now ſeeing the Matter grows very probable, more Account is made of it: Beſides I find yet this Encouragement, that though that Nation of the Jews generally have a great Averſion from Chriſtians, yet ſome there are amongſt them, that ſhew a great Reſpect and Eſtimation unto us, deſiring their Souls might fare as well as they aſſure themſelves our ſhall fare; repute us as their Fathers and Mothers, and proteſt that if in their Land they had ever known ſuch Chriſtians, they would have been more godly and pious in their Converſation.

verſation. Others ſay, when the Meſſias ſhall be come, and ſhall have reconciled our Hearts, ſhall we then be otherways minded, as we ſee theſe Chriſtians? Yea ſome are ſo honeſt of Heart and modeſt, that you muſt even force upon them their neceſſary Food and Raiment, they ſtill preſuming they can paſs with leſs, and are loath to be chargeable to any. Laſt Week we had one well learned Rabbi, that came from Campen, where he had been by Mag. Juſtin Braw, and Malls, Drudius, who found himſelf very much convinced by their Converſation, and the Sermons which he heard of Mr. Braw: And preſents himſelf to tranſlate our New Teſtament in Dutch into Hebrew to make it legible and intelligible unto his Nation. But becauſe this muſt be kept cloſe, and muſt be wrought out ſecretly in our Houſes, under the Inſpection of ſome of our Chriſtians we are about to procure a Stock for that Work, to relieve this Man out of his Poverty and to allow him an honeſt Salarium, all the while he ſhall be at work: And what may further be requiſite for the printing of his Tranſlation, or the cauſing it to be written out oftentimes, even from Jews, as ſhall then be found moſt fit. And if you can procure there ſomething towards this Work, we ſhall ſee it well beſtowed, and endeavour by it to provoke others alſo, &c.

TUESDAY May 8.
A Paſs granted to the London Miniſters going to attend the King.

In the Houſe of Peers. Prayers by Mr. Hodges. Moved, that a Paſs be granted to divers Miniſters in the City of London, to go and attend the King, which was granted to Dr. Reynolds, Dr. Spurſtow, Mr. Calamy, Mr. Hall, Mr. Manton, Mr. Caſe; and they were acquainted that this Houſe takes in good Part their Reſpects in communicating the Addreſs they are to make to his Majeſty.

Inſtructions given to the Lords in order to their waiting on his Majeſty.

Ordered, That the Lords that are to go to his Majeſty be impowered with Inſtructions to deſire that his Majeſty will pleaſe to haſten his Coming into England.

The Inſtructions are as followeth:

To make what ſpeed they could.

Philips or Clarges Ch. II. p. 731.

You are to begin your Journey towards his Majeſty on Friday next, and make a ſpeedy Repair to ſuch Place where his Majeſty ſhall be, and humbly to preſent the Letters wherewith you are reſpectively entruſted by both Houſes of Parliament.

To acquaint his Majeſty with his having been proclaimed here with univerſal Joy.

You are to acquaint his Majeſty with what great Joy and Acclamation he was proclaimed in and about the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, upon the eighth Day of May inſtant, and preſent the Proclamation itſelf to his Majeſty, and to acquaint him with the Orders of both Houſes, to have the ſame proclaimed throughout the Kingdoms of England and Ireland, and the Dominion of Wales, and the Town of Berwick upon Tweed.

That the Miniſters have been enjoin'd to pray for his Majeſty and Royal Family.

And that both Houſes have ordered, That all and every the Miniſters throughout the Kingdoms of England and Ireland be enjoyned in their publick Prayers to pray for his moſt excellent Majeſty, and for the moſt illuſtrious Prince James Duke of York, and the reſt of the royal Progeny. And alſo have ordered, That the aſſumed Arms of the late pretended Commonwealth, where-ever they are ſtanding be taken down, and that his Majeſty's Arms be ſet up inſtead thereof.

That it is the earneſt Deſire of both Houſes for his Majeſty to make a ſpeedy Return.

You are to acquaint his Majeſty with the earneſt Deſire of both Houſes, that his Majeſty will be pleaſed to make a ſpeedy Return to his Parliament, and to the Exerciſe of his Kingly Office: And that in Order thereunto both Houſes have given Direction to General Montague, one of the Generals at Sea, and other Officers of the Fleet, to obſerve ſuch Commands as his Majeſty ſhall pleaſe to give him or them for Diſpoſal of the Fleet, in order to his Majeſty's Return: And you are to communicate to his Majeſty the Reſolution of both Houſes relating to this Inſtruction.

JOHN BROWN, Cler. Parl.

Additional Inſtruction to the Members of the Houſe of Commons.

The Houſe of Commons added one more Inſtruction to the Commiſſioners, which was,

For the better Reception of his Majeſty.

To beſeech his Majeſty, that the Parliament may know where he purpoſeth to take Shipping, and to land at his coming over, that Preparation may be made for his Reception; and which of his Majeſty's Houſes he intendeth to make Uſe of at his firſt coming to London: And whether he will come all the Way by Land after he comes on Shoar; or whether he will pleaſe to come by Water from Graveſend to London? And that his Majeſty will declare in what manner he is pleaſed to be received.

Conferences of Lords and Commons to prepare for his Majeſty's Coming.

By a ſolemn Proclamation.

In Weſtminſter and London.

The Lords and the Commons now conferr'd together, how they might with more Luſtre perform thoſe Reſpects that might be preparatory to his Majeſty's Return. They remembred, that upon the Murther of the late King, there was a Declaration that no Man upon Peril of his Life, and Forfeiture of his Eſtate, ſhould preſume to proclaim his Succeſſor; which ſo terrify'd the People, that they ſcarce dared ſo much as to pray for him. Wherefore though this Parliament had now by all the Ways they could think of, publiſhed their Return to their Obedience, yet they thought it neceſſary for the better Information and Conviction of the People; to make ſome ſolemn Proclamation of his Majeſty's undoubted Right to the Crown, and to oblige all Men to pay that Reverence and Duty to him, which they ought to do by the Laws of God and of the Land. Whereupon they gave Order to prepare ſuch a Proclamation; which being done, the Lords and Commons, the General having concerted all

With great Acclamations and all poſſible Tokens of Joy.

Mr. Biſh dictated, and Mr. Ryley King at Arms repeated the Words of the Proclamation.

Things with the City, met in Weſtminſter-Hall upon the Eighth of May, within ſeven Days after the Receipt of the King's Letter, and walked into the Palace-Yard, where they all ſtood bare, whilſt the Heralds proclaimed the King. Then they went to White-Hall, and did the ſame, and afterwards at Temple-Bar; where the Lord-Mayor, and Alderman, and all the Companies of the City received them, when the like Proclamation was made in like manner there; and then in the uſual Places of the City; which done, the Remainder of the Day, and the Night, was ſpent in thoſe Acclamations, Feſtivals, Bells, and Bonfires, as are the natural Attendants upon ſuch Solemnities. And then nothing was thought of, but to make ſuch Preparations as ſhould be neceſſary for his Majeſty's Invitation and Reception. The Proclamation was made in theſe Words:

The Form of the Proclamation.

Although it can no Way be doubted, but that his Majeſty's Right and Title to his Crown and Kingdoms, is, and was every Way compleated by the Death of his moſt Royal Father of glorious Memory, without the Ceremony or Solemnity of a Proclamation; yet ſince Proclamations in ſuch Caſes have been always uſed, to the End that all good Subjects might, upon this Occaſion, teſtify their Duty and Reſpect, and ſince the armed Violence, and other the Calamities of many Years laſt paſt, have hitherto deprived us of any ſuch Opportunity, whereby we might expreſs our Loyalty and Allegiance to his Majeſty, We therefore, the Lords and Commons now aſſembled in Parliament, together with the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, and other Freemen of this Kingdom now preſent, do, according to our Duty and Allegiance, heartily, joyfully, and unanimouſly acknowledge and proclaim, that immediately upon the Deceaſe of our late Sovereign Lord King Charles, the imperial Crown of the Realm of England, and of all the Kingdoms, Dominions, and Rights belonging to the ſame, did, by inherent Birth-right, and lawful undoubted Succeſſion, deſcend and come to his moſt excellent Majeſty Charles the ſecond, as being lineally, juſtly, and lawfully next Heir of the Blood Royal of this Realm; and that by the Goodneſs and Providence of Almighty God, he is of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, the moſt potent, mighty, and undoubted King; and thereunto we moſt humbly and faithfully do ſubmit, and oblige ourſelves, our Heirs, and Poſterity for ever.

Dated May 8, 1660.

Reſolved by the Commons, That the Arms of the Commonwealth that were placed over the Speaker's Chair in this Houſe be taken down, and the King's Arms be ſet up in the Place.

All Proceedings to be in the King's Name.

Reſolved, That all Proceedings be in the King's Majeſty's Name, and that the preſent Great Seal in England and Ireland be made Uſe of till further Order, that there may be no Hindrance or Stop in the carrying on of Juſtice.

The neceſſary Bills in a way of Diſpatch.

The Commons aſſembled in Parliament declare that theſe Acts following, that is to ſay, An Act for procuring the Proteſtant Religion, and Encouragement and Settling of a learned and pious Miniſtry, and of both the Univerſities in order thereunto, with a due Care of tender Conſciences. One other general Act for Oblivion, Indemnity, and free Pardon. An Act for Confirmation of judicial Proceedings in the ordinary Courts of Juſtice. An Act touching the Confirmation of Grants and Sales. And an Act for ſecuring unto the Army and Navy their Arrears are already under Conſideration; and that a good Progreſs is made in them, and Directions given for the ſpeedy perfecting of them.

Mr. Douglas to Mr. Sharp.

Woodrow's Introduction to the Hiſtory of the Church of Scotland, Vol. I. p. 21.

A Letter of the reverend Mr. Robert Douglas, a Miniſter of Edinburgh, to Mr. James Sharp Agent for the Kirk, going over to attend his Majeſty in Holland, dated May 8. 1660.

Neglect of the Covenant will provoke the Lord to wrath.

His great Errand to the King muſt be for the Kirk.

The King need not declare Liberty of Conſcience in Scotland.

——— I perceive by all that you write, that no Reſpect will be had to the Covenant in this great Tranſaction, which if neglected altogether, it fears me, that the Lord will be highly provoked to Wrath. ——— Your great Errand will be for this Kirk. I am confident the King will not wrong our Liberties, whereunto he himſelf is engaged. He needs not declare any Liberty to tender Conſciences here, becauſe the generality of the People, and whole Miniſtry have embraced the eſtabliſhed Religion by Law with his Majeſty's Conſent.

Richard Cromwell, lately Lord Protector, upon a patient Foreſight of the King's Reſtauration, reſigned his Office of Chancellour of the Univerſity of Oxford, by a Letter ſent to the Univerſity, dated at Hurſley in Hampſhire, May 8. 1660. read in Convocation the 16th, whereupon the Right Honourable William Lord Marquis of Hertford was reſtored to his Place of Chancellour by the Houſe of Lords on the 26th following; and on the 6th of June was confirmed by the Convocation.

About the ſame Time, Oliver St. John, in the late Times Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, was diſcharged from being Chancellour of the Univerſity of Cambridge, and that honourable Office was reſtored to Edward Mountague Earl of Mancheſter.

Richard Cromwell's Letter to the Univerſity of Oxford.

For the Vice-Chancellor and Convocation of the Univerſity of Oxford.

Gentlemen,

I do and always ſhall retain a hearty Senſe of my former Obligations to you in your free Election of me to the Office of your Chancellour; and 'tis no ſmall Trouble to my Thoughts, when I conſider how little ſerviceable I have been to you in that Relation. But ſince the All-wiſe Providence of God (which I deſire always to adore and bow down unto) hath been pleaſed ſo to change my Condition, that I am not in a Capacity to anſwer the Ends of that Office, I thought I ſhould not be faithful to you, if I did not reſign it up into your Hands, that you might have Opportunity to chuſe ſome other Perſon, who in the preſent State of Things may be more fit and able to ſerve you. I do hereupon moſt freely give up and reſign all my Right and Intereſt in that Office, but ſhall always retain my Affection and Eſteem for you, with my Prayers for your continual Proſperity, that amidſt the many Examples of the Inſtability and Revolutions of human Affairs, you may ſtill abide flouriſhing and fruitful.

Gentlemen,

Hurſley, May 8. Your affectionate Friend and Servant,
1660. R. CROMWELL.

Soon after the Abdication of his Protectorſhip, he wrote a very civil Letter to the Vice-Chancellour and Convocation of the Univerſity of Oxford. Theſe.

Gentlemen,

The ſignal Changes of the Hand of God towards me, have not ſequeſtred my Thoughts from the Diſcharge of that Office, wherein I ſtand engaged unto you. And whereas the Revolution of Time requireth, that either your preſent Vice-Chancellour be reinſtated in his Office, or another choſen to ſucceed him; conſidering what abundant Teſtimony your preſent Vice-Chancellour Dr. Conant hath given of his entire Qualification for ſo great a Truſt, I do hereby nominate and recommend him to you, to bear the ſame Office for this next Year alſo, promiſing to myſelf the chearful Concurrence of your unanimous Votes in the reiterated conferring of this Dignity upon a Perſon, who by his Labours and exemplary Converſation amongſt you, is a great Ornament to your Univerſity.

Gentlemen, Your ready Complyance to this Propoſal will demonſtrate the Continuance of your Reſpects towards me, whoſe high Eſteem of Learning and Learned Men you might have more fully experimented, had not the moſt wiſe Diſpoſition of the Almighty hindred the more real and fruitful Manifeſtations of the ſame unto you. And I aſſure you, that I am ſo affected to the flouriſhing of your Eſtate, that as I accepted of the Honour of your Chancellourſhip with earneſt Deſires to become inſtrumental towards your Proſperity, ſo I ſhall readily diveſt myſelf of that Honour, when by ſo doing I may at leaſt occaſionally contribute any thing to the attaining of that great End. Gentlemen,

Mr. Philips is commended by this Writer for taking great Care to pay the Fifths to the ſequeſtred Miniſter his Wife and Children; and wherever Providence diſpos'd of them, he would find them out. A Juſtice deny'd in many other Places, as at Kiſlingburg in the ſame Dioceſe, Mr. Holloway, the ejected Miniſter with ten Children, could get nothing of the Intruder, who diſobey'd all Orders that had been procur'd for the Payment of the Fifths to the Predeceſſor, ibid. Part I. p. 103.

Walker's Sufferings of the Clergy, Fol. Part II. p. 61.

Upon this clear Proſpect of the King's Return, ſome few of the Intruders into Eccleſiaſtical Livings thought it beſt to retire and give Place to the right Owners. Particularly in the Dioceſe of Peterborough, Mr. Thomas Philips poſſeſs'd of the Rectory of Glaſton Com. Rutl. after the Ejectment of Mr. William Halls, A. M. Prebendary of Peterborough, upon the King's being proclaimed, before his Return, ſent to Mr. Halls, and invited him to come and take Poſſeſſion of his Living. I the rather mention this, for the great Rarity of it, and ſhould gladly have told the Story, if Mr. Philips had in reality been (what the Abridgment would make him) an ejected Miniſter, but from this Account it is plain, he was not ſo, and what is more, he alſo died in the actual Service of a conſiderable Cure at Elton.

And to return Thanks to God for the Steps leading to his Return.

Reſolved by the Lords and Commons in Parliament aſſembled, that the Miniſters appointed to preach before the Houſes upon the publick Thankſgiving, and all others, be enjoined to return Thanks to Almighty God for his Majeſty's ſeveral gracious Letters to both Houſes of Parliament, and to the Commanders in chief of the Forces both by Sea and Land, and to the Lord Mayor and Common Council of the City of London, together with the Declaration incloſed, and the juſt and honourable Conceſſions therein contained. And that the Miniſters on Thurſday Fortnight be enjoyned to read his Majeſty's Letters and Declaration to both Houſes in the ſeveral Churches and Chapels at the ſame Time. And to give Thanks for the juſt and honourable Conceſſions therein contained, and for the hearty, loyal and dutiful Conjunction of the Lords and Commons now aſſembled in Parliament, and the univerſal Concurrence of all the Commanders and Forces both by Land and Sea to receive his Majeſty into his Dominions and Government according to their bounden Duty and the Laws of the Land.

Among other Party Delegates ſent over to addreſs the King, the Papiſts employ'd a noble Lord to be their Sollicitor to the King at Breda, the Lord Viſcount Stafford, who long after made this Declaration before the Houſe of Peers after his Condemnation for the Popiſh Plot, "That there had been at divers " Times Endeavours uſed, and Overtures made to obtain an Abrogation, or " at leaſt a Mitigation of Severities againſt Catholicks; but this to be procured " no otherwiſe than by legal and parliamentary Means: That he himſelf went " to Breda, whilſt the King was there, and propounded one hundred thou- " ſand Pounds in Behalf of the Catholicks, to take off the Penal Laws. That " after the King came in there was a Bill brought into the Houſe in Favour of " Catholicks, but it was oppoſed by my Lord Chancellour Hyde.

" Since his Majeſty's happy Reſtauration, I do conceive, and I think I may " ſafely ſay it, (for you all know he was gracious and good to all Diſſenters, " particularly to them of the Romiſh Church) they had Connivance and Indul- " gence in their private Houſes; and I declare to your Lordſhips, I did then " ſay to ſome that were too open in their Worſhip, that they did play foul in " taking more Liberty upon them than was fitting for them to do, and that " brought the Misfortune upon me which I ſhall not name.

Thankſgiving-Day.

In the Service of the Common Prayer.

Both Houſes of Parliament went this Day (according to former Order) to return Thanks unto the Lord, who had ſo ſtrangely delivered the Nation from that Oppreſſion it lately groaned under. The Lords met at Weſtminſter Abbey, where after Divine Service was performed by Mr. Marſton in his Formalities according to the Common-Prayer Book, Mr. Buck carried on the Work of the Day. The Commons met at St. Margaret's, where Mr. Price (his Excellency the Lord General Monk's Chaplain) preached before them. Both of them according to the late Reſolves of Parliament, prayed for the King's moſt excellent Majeſty by Name and Title.

Text. Rom. vii. 25. I thank God through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.

Epiſt. Ded. To the right honourable the Lords aſſembled in Parliament.

My Lords,

The Peers had ſuffered more than the Commons.

——— Though in this Juncture of the greateſt Benefits, the whole Kingdom is bound more than any Nation to be thankful; yet in the common Bleſſings the Peers are eſpecially obliged to Gratitude, by Reaſon that others ſuffer'd with you only in their Eſtates, your Lordſhips alone ſuffer'd in your Honours. The Forces that, ſo far as in them was, aboliſh'd Kingſhip, put Peerage down as uſeleſs, &c.

And ſhould now the more rejoice, and remember their Regard to the Poor, and their Reſpect to the Levite.

My Lords, conſidering how eaſy it was with God to lay the higheſt Honours low, even by and under contemptible Creatures, now that his Favour ſhines again upon you, let Ingenuity perſuade your Lordſhips to walk officiouſly with our dear Lord, and ſacrifice Thank-Offerings beſeeming Chriſtian Grace and English Grandeur: In which kind Almighty God throughout his Law calls for Regard of the Poor, and Reſpect to the Levite.

The Poor to be reliev'd without Begging.

On Behalf of the Poor, I beſeech you give me Leave to remind your Lordſhips, what Floodgates of Sin it will ſtop, and what a Door it will open for amending the Manners of the moſt Neceſſitous, and the training up their Infantry to Induſtry and Virtue; to anticipate all Begging by fit Relief, and ſetting all able Hands to ſome Taſk towards their living. There be indeed excellent Laws already to this Purpoſe; but nevertheleſs I am an humble Suppliant to your Lordſhips, that a Courſe may ſpeedily be taken for a Poſſibility to effectuate thoſe Laws by Work-houſes and ſufficient Stocks in theſe populous and wealthy Cities, from which the Pattern will ſoon iſſue forth in all the Land.

By ſetting up Work-houſes with ſufficient Stocks.

The Church and Clergy to be re-ſettled with the King.

As for due Countenance to the Levite, I held it neither opportune nor needful to ſollicite your Lordſhips in my Preaching, becauſe the Propenſity and Inclination of your noble Souls is tranſparent, that his Majeſty ſhall be no ſooner repoſed in his Regalities, and the Kingdom re-ſettled in its Laws and Liberties, but your Honours will ſhew yourſelves munificent Patrons and Providers for the Church, and the reverend Fathers and very learned Miniſters thereof, that be Super-vivours to the manifold Sufferings and Injuries which have been illegally inflicted on them theſe twenty Years by paſt. Undoubtedly the Eſtimate of a Clergy cannot be upheld without Endowments, Benefits, and Salaries. —— How can your Lordſhips wiſh a learned, pious, and painful Miniſtry in every Corner of the Realm, unleſs a Competency be before prepared for their Maintenance and Encouragement? Wherefore when once your Lordſhips ſhall have re-eſtabliſhed the Fundamentals of the State, you will credit your Memories in all Poſterity, to accommodate the Church with Neceſſaries for Decency of Degree in Church-men; and continue a bountiful Conveniency for the Paſtor of every Pariſh, by uniting ſmall adjacent Livings, and like Expedients, which ſo wiſe a Council will not fail quickly to find out, when they intend it as a ſerious Piece of their Buſineſs. For which Proviſions for the Poor in honeſt Labour, and for Eccleſiaſticks in godly Works, your Honours ſhall inherit the Benediction of the Church, and the Bleſſings of the Poor.——

And a competent Maintenance to be provided, for the Miniſter of every Pariſh.

By uniting ſmall Livings, and by ſome other Expedients,

The Scope of the Sermon is to ſhew that ſpiritual and heavenly Bleſſings are the proper Objects of Joy. ——In his Application to the Day, he ſays, P. 43. It is a Mercy to be thankful for, that thus the Church is notably fortified againſt ever relapſing into Hereſie or Schiſm for the Time to come. —— P. 44. I muſt profeſs that my Hopes of ſaving of many that are dear to me, by the Furtherance of this Providence, is Matter of ſo much Thankfulneſs to me, that were I ſure to ſuffer with them, I would yet give Thanks. —— P. 46. While profane Oppoſers of Religion did boaſt and vapour, and ſwear and curſe, and drink Healths for his Majeſty's Reſtitution, it is thoſe whom they reproached, that have ſilently and effectually accompliſhed it, and that with Speed as ſoon as they had Power. —— It is ſome Matter of Thankfulneſs to me, that whereas to our perpetual Shame we could not in ſo many Years compoſe the Diſagreements in Church Affairs among us, we are not altogether without Hope, that Agreement may be now more effectually procured, &c.

The City of London was to keep a Day of ſolemn Thankſgiving for General Monk's Succeſs; and the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen deſired me to preach before them, at St. Paul's Church: Wherein I ſo endeavoured to ſhew the Value of that Mercy, as to ſhew alſo how Sin and Mens Abuſe might turn it into Matter of Calamity, and what ſhould be the right Bounds and Qualifications of that Joy. The Moderate were pleaſed with it; the Fanaticks were offended with me for keeping ſuch a Thankſgiving; the dioceſan Party thought I did ſuppreſs their Joy. The Words may be ſeen in the Sermon ordered to be printed.

How few were pleas'd with it.

His profeſſing an Agreement with Biſhop Uſher coſt him much trouble.

But the other Words about my Agreement with Biſhop Uſher, in the Sermon before the Parliament, put me to moſt Trouble: For preſently many moderate epiſcopal Divines came to me to know what thoſe Terms of our Agreement were: And thinking verily that others of their Party had been as moderate as themſelves, A Meeting at Dr. Bernard's Lodgings in Grays-Inn.

themſelves, they entred upon Debates for our general Concord; and we agreed as eaſily among ourſelves in private, as if almoſt all our Differences were at an End. Among others I had Speech about it with Dr. Gauden, who promiſed to bring Dr. Morley, and many more of that Party to meet with ſome of the other Party at Dr. Bernard's Lodging in Gray's-Inn: There came none on that Side but Dr. Gauden and Dr. Bernard, and none on the other Side but Dr. Manton and myſelf; and ſo little was done but only Deſires of Concord expreſſed: But whereas I told Dr. Gauden, That for the Doctrinal Part of the Common Prayer Book, though I knew that there were many Exceptions againſt it, yet I remembred nothing which I could not aſſent to, allowing it but the favourable Interpretation which the Writings of all Divines are allowed: He took Advantage from theſe Words to praiſe my Moderation in the next Book which he printed, as if I had ſpoke this of the Liturgy in general, as a Frame of Worſhip, leaving out the firſt Words, As to the Doctrinal Part, to which only I limited my Aſſent: So that I was put in Print ſo far to vindicate myſelf, as to ſet down the true Words, which he never contradicted. Thus Men were every Day talking of Concord, but to little Purpoſe, as appeared in the Iſſue.

A Meeting with Dr Morley, who ſpake for Moderation and againſt Extempore Prayer.

And becauſe I heard that Dr. Morley was a moderate orthodox Man, and had often Meetings with Dr. Manton and others, whom he encouraged with pacificatory Profeſſions, and that he had great Intereſt in the King and the Lord Chancellour, I had a great Deſire to have one Hour's Diſcourſe with him, to know whether really Concord was intended: And when he gave me a Meeting, and we had ſpent an Hour in Diſcourſe, I found that he ſpake of Moderation in the general, but came to no particular Terms, but paſſed by what I mentioned of that Nature: But ſpeaking much for Liturgies againſt extemporary Church Prayers, he told me at laſt, that the Janſeniſts were numerous among the Papiſts, and many among the French inclined to Peace, and that on his Knowledge, if it were not for the Hindrances which Calvin had laid in the Way, moſt on this Side the Alps would come over to us. And this was all I could get from him.

Vita Joh. Barwici, S. T. P. Append. N°. xxxiv.

Acknowledging his extraordinary Affection and diſcreet Conduct.

Adviſing ſome Severity againſt thoſe who are contriving Miſchief.

Renewing his Royal Promiſes to the General and his Friends.

Conjuring him to haſten his Return to England.

And to remove all Obſtructions laid in the Way of it.

That his Preſence may provide for a full and general Security.

He is going now to the Hague as the neareſt to imbark.

General Monk,

I was the laſt Week diſpatching Bernard Greenvill with my Anſwer to yours of the 20th of laſt Month; when in the inſtant, as he was departing, I received the good News of what was done on May Day, upon the Reception of my Letters and Declaration in the two Houſes; which made moſt of what I had writ to you unneceſſary to be ſent; and ſo I kept the Meſſenger ſtill here. I have ſince received yours of the 5th by Sir Thomas Clarges, with the Addreſs the Officers of the Army made to you; upon which I ſhall not enlarge till the Return of the ſame Meſſenger. I have likewiſe another from you of the ſame Date: Upon all which (beſides the great Miracle, which God Almighty hath wrought upon the Hearts of the Nation) I muſt ever acknowledge your extraordinary Affection to me, and your very diſcreet Conduct of this great Work; in which you have had to do with Perſons of ſuch different Humours, and contrary Affections, which you have wonderfully compoſed. And yet you cannot but expect, that there are many Perſons ſtill contriving the ſame Miſchiefs againſt me and you; and who muſt be rather ſuppreſſed by your Authority and Power, than won and reconciled by your Indulgence: And it may be a little Severity towards ſome, would ſooner reduce the reſt, than any thing you can elſe do. You may be moſt confident, and I do again renew my Promiſe to you (for the Performance of which you may engage your Life) that I will make good whatever you have found neceſſary to promiſe to thoſe who have and ſhall adhere to you, to make your Work the more eaſy. And I am moſt confident, if I were with you, I ſhould in a much ſhorter Time ſatisfy them, and put them into a full Security than will be done by thoſe formal Ways, which I hear ſome Men endeavour to go about, and in which many Obſtructions will be found, which I could eaſily remove and prevent; and if any Courſe be taken, in which a juſt Diſcontent remains with any, and Juſtice itſelf is wounded, the Foundation is not well laid for a laſting Security. I am confident, I ſhall prevent all Inconveniencies of this kind, when I am with you; which I muſt conjure you to haſten with all your Intereſt. And I tell you again, I will not leave myſelf Bread, rather than every thing ſhall not be performed, which you promiſe to your Officers and Soldiers on my Behalf. I am confident, you know there hath been, and is ſtill a Cabal, which endeavours to infuſe and keep alive all ill Humours and Diſſatisfactions in the Army, and to obſtruct in the Houſes, and defer my being ſent for; which by the Bleſſing of God can only put an End to all Diſtempers; and therefore I muſt conjure you to uſe all your Intereſt for the Removal of all thoſe Obſtructions, and all unneceſſary Formalities which may retard my coming. And you may be as confident, as of any thing in the World, that if it were in my Power to recede from any thing I have promiſed in my Declaration or Letters, I would as much abhor the doing it, as any Wickedneſs that can be imagined: And ſurely a full and general Security, which no Man is more ſollicitous to eſtabliſh than I am, can never be ſo well provided for, as by my Preſence with you, which by God's Bleſſing would diſappoint all ill Deſigns, which are contrived againſt me, and you, and the Peace of the Nation. I expect within few Days the Arrival of the Committee from the Parliament: And for their better Reception and Accommodation, this Town being already ſo full, I reſolve to accept the States Invitation, and to go on Monday next to the Hague, as the neareſt and moſt commodious Place, from whence I may embark, for which you will eaſily believe I have longing enough, that I may ſee you, and let the World ſee the Senſe I have of the great Service you have done for General Monk, Breda, May 20, 1660.

The kind Meſſage I have received from you by Sir Thomas Clarges hath added very much to the Contentment I have found, in that it hath pleaſed God to make you ſo eminently inſtrumental in the unexpected Happineſs of his Majeſty and his Subjects, to the perfecting of which good Work, I ſhall bring my utmoſt Endeavours, with all poſſible Reſignation of any private Concernment; and deſire you to be aſſured, that as I have taken up the ſame Profeſſion of Life with you, ſo I ſhall think it no Diminution to imitate you in continuing it, or in laying it down, as his Majeſty and his well-affected Subjects ſhall think moſt expedient: And that no Man rejoiceth more heartily than I do, in the great Senſe his Majeſty and his three Kingdoms have of the Obligation you have laid on them, by your ſteddy and prudent Conduct in this glorious Deſign of our Recovery, being reſolved to give you all the Proofs within my Power of my being with a great deal of Truth,

Your moſt Affectionate Friend,

SIR,

The Obligations that we received from you in the general, are of ſuch a Nature, that I could not chuſe, having the Opportunity of this Bearer, but let you know the great Senſe I, in my own particular, have of them, which I do hardly know how to expreſs. I ſhall deſire you to believe, that there is no body has a greater, nor will be more ready to let you know it, and ſtrive by all Means that are in my Power, to let you ſee how much I am really, Sir,

They beg he may lay out himſelf for the Good of the Church, that ſhe may enjoy all her Liberties eſtabliſhed by Law. That he knows the conſtant Adherence of the Body of Miniſters to the King during the late Revolutions, and how cordial they have been in the late Change: That he knows likewiſe how much the People adhere to the Eſtabliſhment of the Church, ſo that there is no Pretext for an Indulgence to ſuch as ſhall recede from it, but many Inconveniencies would enſue upon the granting it.

An Addreſs from the Commiſſioners of the Kingdom of Ireland.

Publick Intelligence, 4to. by Order, No. 20.

The Commiſſioners for the Kingdom of Ireland did this Day preſent an Addreſs to both Houſes of Parliament, wherein they ſhewed, that in regard his Majeſty in his gracious Letters and Declarations to both Houſes, had taken no Notice of the Kingdom of Ireland, which by the late bloody Rebellion hath been brought to great Deſtruction and Diſorder, and conſequently ſtands in need of ſome to heal their Breaches, they would be pleaſed to grant them their Aſſiſtance and Concurrence, to his Majeſty, for the calling and holding a Parliament there, whereby that Kingdom may be once again ſettled.

The two Houſes to addreſs his Majeſty for a Proteſtant Parliament in Ireland.

Thereupon both Houſes agreed, that it be offered as their Deſire to his Majeſty, that a Parliament be ſpeedily called in Ireland, conſiſting of Proteſtant Peers and Commons, for the ſettling of that diſtracted Nation.

Order for reſtoring the Charity Money collected for Relief of the Proteſtants in Piedmont and Poland; which had been ſeiz'd and applied to publick Uſes.

Ordered, That all and every ſuch Sum and Sums, part of the Money heretofore collected for Relief of the poor Proteſtants of Piedmont and Poland reſpectively, as remain in the Hands of any Sheriffs or Collectors, be forthwith paid by ſuch Sheriffs and Collectors to the Hands of Alderman Thomas Viner and Alderman Chriſtopher Pack, Treaſurers for the ſaid Collection Monies; and that it be referred to the Council of State to ſee this Order put in Execution.

Sermon of Monſieur Hulſius, preached at Breda, intitled The Royal Joy.

Printed by John Bill, 1660. 4to.

The Royal Joy. Or a Sermon of Congratulation upon the five firſt Verſes of Pſalm XXI. Made upon the Occaſion of the firſt News of the Proclamation of CHARLES II. King of Great-Britain, brought to his Majeſty in the Town of Breda the 21ſt of May 1660. Preached at the Walloon Church of the ſaid Town the 23d of May, the Day before his Majeſty's Departure. By Anthony Hulſius Paſtor of the ſaid Church.

Epiſtle Dedicatory to the Princeſs of Orange.

Epiſtle Ded. To her Highneſs the Princeſs Royal.

Madam,

Full of Affection and Zeal for the King.

This Sermon which I make bold to preſent to your Highneſs bears upon its Front The Royal Joy, a Title given unto it in the Text, but we bear another upon the Front of our Hearts, viz. The popular Joy. The King's Joy hath been made the Subject of the Publick Joy: It hath chiefly appeared upon the Countenances of all your faithful Subjects of the Town of Breda in an extraordinary Manner.——We never ſaw him coming in or going out of this Town, during the Time of his Affliction, but we made Vows for his Deliverance: Yea and we would have carried him upon his own Throne, had our Strength been equal to the Motions of our Hearts. ——Bleſſed be that auguſt Day, wherein his Majeſty being in the Midſt of us hath received by an unanimous Accord the Homage of his Subjects. Let it henceforth be called The Day of Breda.

His Majeſty's great Civility and Goodneſs to all Eſtates and Perſons.

But that which we do eſteem above all, Madam, is the admirable Goodneſs and Sweetneſs wherewith his Majeſty hath received the Viſits of all Sorts of Perſons: Thoſe affectionate and reiterated Proteſtations and Promiſes he hath made to our Sovereign Lords the States, as alſo to our venerable Magiſtrates, to the Paſtors, and to the other Perſons, both Political and Eccleſiaſtical of this Town, of the Sincerity of his Affection towards the true Reformed Religion, and towards all the Proteſtant Princes and States, and chiefly towards the States of theſe United Provinces, promiſing unto them the Continuation of the Affection his Anceſtors have ſhew'd unto them, and particularly of the favourable Remembrance and good Will he would ſtill keep for the Town of Breda, where he had received the News of his Reſtauration, and known the Effects of the Inclination ſhewed to his Perſon and to his Subjects. That Language, Madam, hath raviſhed our Spirits, hath filled our Hearts with Joy, and our Mouths with Vows and Acclamations.——Dated from Breda May 24. 1660.

His Prayer for his Majeſty's ſafe and happy Return.

The Sermon concluding with a Prayer to God, to accompliſh the Work he hath begun, and lead the King in his Journey, and bring him ſafe into his Kingdom.——That he may keep a holy Correſpondence with the States of theſe United Provinces, and have a fervent Zeal to the Repurgation of the Church of Jeſus Chriſt, of all thoſe Sects and Hereſies that have crept into that Kingdom, and have been the Supporters of Rebellion during the Times of Confuſion, &c. Then followeth a Speech made to the King in the Caſtle of Breda, by Anthony Hulſius Paſtor, in the Name, and in the Preſence of the Conſiſtory of the Walloon Church.

This a Day of publick Thankſgiving at Breda.

Journal of Sir Will. Lower, Fol. p. 21.

Sunday, May 23. At Breda ſolemn Thanks were rendred to God in all the Churches, on the Revolution of the Affairs in England on behalf of the King. All the Miniſters of the Churches, Engliſh, Dutch and French expounding Texts proper for the Matter. After the Sermon, the Magiſtrates and Conſiſtory made their Complements to his Majeſty and to their Royal Highneſſes; and at Evening were Bonfires of Joy, Ringing of Bells, and Volleys of the Artillery.

MONDAY May 14.
Proceedings in the Bill of Oblivion.

Publick Intelligencer by Order, 4to. No. 21.

The Houſe of Commons made a very conſiderable Progreſs in the Bill of Oblivion, and agreed that ſeven Perſons be excepted out of the ſaid Bill, that ſate as Judges for the Tryal of his late Majeſty.

The King's Departure from Breda.

Lord Clarendon's History, Vol. III. p. 599.

All Things being in Readineſs, and the States having ſent their Yachts and other Veſſels for the Accommodation of his Majeſty and his Train, as near to Breda as the River would permit, the King with his Royal Siſter and Brothers left that Place in the beginning of May, and within an Hour embark'd themſelves on board the Yachts, which carried him to Rotterdam, Dort, and the other Places near which they paſſed, making all thoſe Expreſſions of Joy, by the Conflux of the People to the Banks of the River, and all other ways, which the Situation of thoſe Places would ſuffer. At Rotterdam they enter'd into their Coaches; from whence to the Hague, they ſeem'd to paſs through one continued Street, by the wonderful and orderly Appearance of the People on both Sides, with ſuch Acclamations of Joy, as if themſelves were now reſtored to Peace and Security.

Receiv'd by the States of Holland with great Honour and Magnificence.

The Entrance into the Hague, and the Reception there, and the conducting his Majeſty to the Houſe provided for his Entertainment was very magnificent, and in all Reſpects anſwerable to the Pomp, Wealth, and Greatneſs of that State. The Treatment of his Majeſty, and all who had Relation to his Service, at the States Charge, during the Time of his Abode there, which continued many Days, was incredibly noble and ſplendid, and the univerſal Joy ſo viſible and real, that it could only be exceeded by that of his own Subjects. The States General in a Body, and the States of Holland in a Body apart, perform'd their Compliments with all Solemnity; and then ſeveral Perſons, according to their Faculties, made their Profeſſions; and a ſet Number of them was appointed always to wait in the Court, to receive his Majeſty's Commands. All the Ambaſſadors and publick Miniſters of Kings, Princes, and States, repaired to his Majeſty, and profeſſed the Joy of their Maſters on his behalf; ſo that a Man would have thought this Revolution had been brought to paſs by the general Combination, and Activity of Christendom, that appeared now to take ſo much Pleaſure in it.

Minutes in the Journal of Admiral Mountague.

Minutes of the Fleet ſailing to bring over his Majeſty.

Journal of Edward Earl of Sandwich, Fol. MS.

Saturday, May 12. About eight of the Clock in the Morning we ſet Sail and turned to Windward, and in the Afternoon anchored again, the South Foreland bearing W. S. W. about four Leagues off.

Sunday, May 13. We weighed again the Wind fair. About five of the Clock in the Afternoon, we made the Iſland of Walcheren, when the Aſſiſtance Frigate overtook us with a Pacquet from England.

Monday, May 14. The Fleet came to an Anchor off Schiveling in Holland, diſtant about a League and a half. In the Morning early, Mr. Edward Bertie and Mr. Edward Pickering went aſhore with Letters to his Majeſty. Mr. North alſo went aſhore to the Hague to preſent the General's [Mountague] Service to the Queen of Bohemia and Prince of Orange. And about eight in the Evening, the Hampſhire and Yarmouth came into Schevelinge Bay with the Commiſſioners of the Commons Houſe in Parliament, and the Norway with the Citizens of London; and the next Morning, the Centurion came into Schevelinge Bay with the Lords Commiſſioners from the Houſe of Peers, who dined aboard the Naſeby, and after went aſhore to Schevelinge.

Lord Clarendon's History, Fol. Vol. III. p. 599.

Admiral Mountague in forward Zeal ſet out before his Time,

And before the coming of the Parliament Commiſſioners.

Never forgiven by ſome of them.

The King had been very few Days at the Hague, when he heard that the Engliſh Fleet was in Sight of Scheveling; and ſhortly after an Officer from Admiral Mountague was ſent to the King, to preſent his Duty to him, and to the Duke of York their High Admiral, to receive Orders. As ſoon as Mountague came on board the Fleet in the Downs, and found Lawſon and the other Officers more frank in declaring their Duty to the King, and Reſolution to ſerve him, than he expected, that he might not ſeem to be ſent by the Parliament to his Majeſty, but to be carried by his own Affection and Duty, without expecting any Command from them, the Wind coming fair, he ſet up his Sails, and ſtood for the Coaſt of Holland, leaving only two or three of the leſſer Ships to receive their Orders, and to bring over thoſe Perſons, who, he knew were deſigned to wait upon his Majeſty; which Expedition was never forgiven him by ſome Men, who took all Occaſions afterwards to revenge themſelves upon him.

Account given by Sir William Lower.

Sir William Lower's Journal, Fol. p. 27.

The King left Breda, but before he took Coach, the Burgo-Maſters and Council of Ten preſented themſelves again to the King, and Mr. Snel, who had before welcomed him to Breda, made again the Speech following, &c.

The Return of Sir John Greenvill, who arrived from England whilſt the King dined, and reported, that the Parliament was reſolved to beſeech his Majeſty to come to take Poſſeſſion of the Crown, without any Condition or Reſerve, and that Admiral Mountague was at Sea, with a good Number of Ships to come to receive him in Holland, to tranſport him unto his Kingdom. And his Majeſty received Advertiſement at the ſame Time by an Expreſs, that that Fleet appeared in the Morning in Sight of Scheveling, and at nine a Clock had caſt Anchor in the Road about half a League from the Shore.

The King came to the Hague, and was received in the Houſe of Prince Maurice of Naſſau, which the Eſtates of Holland had cauſed to be furniſhed and accommodated

The ſtrong Man ejected by a ſtronger than he: In a Sermon preached at Glouceſter, May 15, 1660. being the Day his Royal Majeſty King Charles the Second was proclaimed. By W. Bartholomew, M. A. Vicar of Cambden in Glouceſterſhire.

Viſitation of Love to the King, 1660. 4to, p 23.

To Charles Stuart who is proclaimed King: And to all you that are called and known by the Name of Royal Party and Cavaliers, and who have ſuffered in your Cauſe and for your Principle.

Friends,

The Lord God who is greater than all, that doth whatſoever he will, hath given you a Day, and you are raiſed up again out of your ſuffering State. Oh, that you would conſider the End of it, and wherefore the Lord hath done, and ſuffer'd it to be done, and that you would make right Uſe and Improvement unto God and this Nation of this your Deliverance and Promotion! For certainly there hath been an abſolute Purpoſe in the Counſel of the Lord, that theſe Things ſhould be thus, and his Hand hath even ſuffered it to be accompliſhed, even in a ſtrange marvellous Way, through the confounding of your Enemies, and giving them up to the Folly of their own Hearts in their Councils, that they ſhould deſtroy themſelves, and bring in you over their Heads, and make you a Mountain, and break down their Mountain, and make it as a low Valley, and certainly theſe Things are in the Juſtice of the Lord's Hand, &c. ſent from a Lover of your Souls, Edward Burrough. This was written about the Middle of the third Month called May, 1660.

Arrival of the Parliament Commiſſioners. The Earl of Oxford*'s Speech for the Lords.*

Sir William Lower's Journal, Fol. 1660.

The Commiſſioners of the two Houſes of Parliament arrived yeſterday at the Hague, and had this Day Admiſſion to his Majeſty: The Earl of Oxford ſpake for the higher Houſe. But thoſe that were there at that Action agreed in Opinion, that never Perſon ſpake with more Affection, nor expreſſed himſelf in better Terms, than Mr. Denzil Holles deputed from the Lower Houſe, to whom thoſe of London were joined. He inſiſted chiefly on the Miſeries under which that Kingdom had groaned for ſo many Years; and upon the Government of Cromwell, who tyrannized the Engliſh in their Lives, in their Goods, and in their Conſciences: Whereas on the contrary they could hope from the Goodneſs of his Majeſty nothing but Repoſe, but Sweetneſs, and a lawful Liberty, beſeeching him forthwith to return into his Kingdom, and to take again the Scepter of his Anceſtors, without any Condition.

Acceſs of the Lords and Commons to the King.

Supplicate for his Return.

And make their Preſents.

And were kindly treated.

Lord Clarendon*'s Hiſtory, Vol.*III *p.*600.

When the Committee of the Lords and Commons arriv'd at the Hague, the States took Care for their decent Accommodation. And the next Day they deſir'd Admiſſion to his Majeſty, who immediately receiv'd them very graciouſly. They preſented the humble Invitation and Supplication of the Parliament, that his Majeſty would be pleaſed to return, and take the Government of the Kingdom into his Hands; where he ſhould find all poſſible Affection, Duty, and Obedience, from all his Subjects. And leſt his Return ſo much longed for, might be retarded by the Want of Money, to diſcharge thoſe Debts, which he could not but have contracted, they preſented from the Parliament the Sum of 50000 l. to his Majeſty; having likewiſe order to pay the Sum of 10000*l.* to the Duke of York, and 5000*l.* to the Duke of Gloceſter; which was a very good Supply to their ſeveral Neceſſities. The King treated all the Committee very graciouſly together, and every one of them ſeverally and particularly very obligingly. So that ſome of them who were conſcious to themſelves of their former Demerit, were very glad to find that they were not to fear any Bitterneſs from ſo princely, and ſo generous a Nature.

Admiſſion of the Citizens of London.

Their Addreſs.

The City of London had had too great a Hand in driving the Father of the King from thence, not to appear equally Zealous for his Sons return thither. And therefore they did, at the ſame Time, ſend fourteen of the moſt ſubſtantial Citizens to aſſure his Majeſty of their Fidelity, and moſt chearful Submiſſion; and that they placed all their Felicity, and hope of future Proſperity in the Aſſurance of his Majeſty's Grace and Protection; for the meriting whereof, their Lives and Fortunes ſhould be always at his Majeſty's Diſpoſal; and they preſented

And their Preſent.

For which they were all knighted.

ed to him from the City, the Sum of 10000*l.* The King told them, he had always had a particular Affection for the City of London, the Place of his Birth; and was very glad, that they had now ſo good a Part in his Reſtoration; of which he was informed; and how much he was beholding to every one of them; for which he thanked them very graciouſly, and knighted them all; an Honour no Man in the City had receiv'd in near twenty Years, and with which they were much delighted.

The Bills of Exchange were hard to be turn'd into ready Money.

And were forc'd to be taken back in Bills drawn to London.

It will hardly be believed, that this Money preſented to the King by the Parliament and the City, and charged by Bills of Exchange upon the richeſt Merchants in Amſterdam, who had vaſt Eſtates, could not be received in many Days, though ſome of the principal Citizens of London, who came to the King, went themſelves to ſollicite it, and had Credit enough themſelves for much greater Sums, if they had brought over no Bills of Exchange. But this was not the firſt Time (of which ſomewhat hath been ſaid before) that it was evident to the King, that it is not eaſy in that moſt opulent City, with the Help of all the rich Towns adjacent, and upon the greateſt Credit, to draw together a great Sum of ready Money; the Cuſtom of that Country, which flouriſhes ſo much in Trade, being to make their Payments in Paper by Aſſignations; they having very rarely occaſion for a great Sum in any one particular Place. And ſo at this Time his Majeſty was compell'd, that he might not defer the Voyage he ſo impatiently long'd to make, to take Bills of Exchange from Amſterdam upon their Correſpondents in London, for above 30000*l.* of the Money that was aſſign'd; all which was paid in London as ſoon as demanded.

And of Oliver Cromwell's Widow.

Intelligence by Order, 4^to^.

Information had been given, that there were ſeveral of his Majeſty's Goods at a Fruiterer's Warehouſe near the Three Cranes in Thames-Street, London, which were there kept as the Goods of Mrs. Elizabeth Cromwell, Wife to Oliver Cromwell deceaſed, ſometimes called Protector, and it being not very improbable that the ſaid Mrs. Cromwell might convey away ſome ſuch Goods, the Council ordered Perſons to view the ſame; and there were diſcovered ſome Pictures and other Things belonging to his Majeſty; and the Remainder lay attached in the Cuſtody of Lieutenant Colonel Cox.

Diſcovery of the braſs Statue of Charles I. on Horſeback now at Charing-Croſs.

Upon Information to the Houſe of Lords, that the Earl of Portland having lately diſcovered where a braſs Horſe is with his late Majeſty's Figure upon it, which in juſtice he conceives belongs to him, and there being no Courts of Juſtice now open wherein he can ſue for it, doth humbly deſire the Lords to be pleaſed to order that it may not be removed from the Place where it now is, nor defaced, &c.

Sir Thomas Clarges diſpatch'd to give Notice of the King's Voyage to Dover, &c.

Continuation of the Hiſtory of Great-Britain by Mr. Philips from Sir Thomas Clarges, Fol. p. 732.

This Evening his Majeſty at the Hague gave his Diſpatch to Sir Thomas Clarges, and commanded him to acquaint the General, he intended to take Shipping at the Bay of Scheveling on Monday after, and to ſail to Dover and land there; from whence he would immediately go to Canterbury, and ſtay there ſome Time to determine of the Manner of his Entrance into London. His Majeſty likewiſe ſent by him a Letter directed:

The King's Letter to General Monk.

To our Truſty and Well-beloved General Monke to be communicated to the Officers of the Army.

CHARLES R. May 26. 1660.

Acknowledging the Mercy of God.

Truſty and well-beloved, we greet you well. You will eaſily believe that your Letter of the fifth of this Month by Sir Thomas Clarges, was very welcome to us: And that, as we muſt always acknowledge the infinite Mercy of God Almighty in diſpoſing the Hearts of the Army in ſuch an entire Obedience to you, for the promoting and carrying on our Service, and the Peace of the Kingdom; ſo we can never be without a juſt Eſteem of ſuch a great and well diſciplin'd Army, upon which the Eyes of the World are ſo much fixed. We muſt deſire you to return our very hearty Thanks to the Officers and Soldiers for their Affection and Obedience to us; and to aſſure them from us, that we ſhall always have an entire Confidence in them, and ever acknowledge them to be the great Inſtruments of reſtoring us to Peace and Happineſs, and Security to us all: And therefore they may not only with all imaginable Confidence aſſure themſelves that we will punctually perform whatever we have promiſed to them in our Declaration or Letter, but that we will take them into our particular Care and Protection. And if the Licence and Diſtemper of the Time ſhall ſo far tranſport any Men, as to preſume upon Memory of former Animoſities, and of what is paſt, to uſe any any Reproaches towards them, we will look upon ſuch Perſons as Diſturbers of the Peace and Security of the Kingdom, and ſhall cauſe them to be proſecuted accordingly. And towards this Settlement and Compoſure, and for the Prevention of many Inconveniences which may fall out, we think nothing ſo neceſſary as our Preſence with you, by which (in a very ſhort Time) every Member of the Army, who ſhall faithfully adhere to you in Advancement of the publick Peace, ſhall with the Bleſſing of God find himſelf ſecured and provided for to his Satisfaction. And longing for that bleſſed Time, we bid you heartily farewell.

A Letter from a Londod Merchant to Mr. Thomas Maynard, Conſul at Oporto, dated London, May 1660.

Sir,

The miraculous Reſtauration of the young King.

See Aug. 25. 1660.

The foregoing is a Copy of my laſt, to which I refer myſelf. I only add, that what I then hinted and hoped of the young King, God miraculouſly effected without Blood-ſhedding, to whom be Glory for ever. The City Commiſſioners that are ordained to wait upon him went away the 14th Currant from London, which Day the Fleet out of the Downs (excepting nine Sail) went thence to wait upon his Majeſty's Commands. The Patent is ſigned, but I think lies ſtill at the Office, which hath been the leſs minded, for that I ſuppoſe it muſt be confirmed or renewed by the King, to whom all Offices will fall in Courſe, he being proclaimed and declared King from his Father's Death upon it, to make a Trip home, ſomething may be contrived for to ſend you, as the Merchant's Congratulation and Petition for your Continuance, &c.

Sir Tho. Clarges had a difficult Paſſage to England.

Continuat. of the Hiſt. of Great Britain, Fol. p. 732.

Early in the Morning Sir Thomas Clarges attempted by Boat from Scheveling to get on Board the Admiral, but the Weather was ſo ſtormy he could not do it, till towards the Evening; and then General Mountagu ordered the Norwich Frigate for his Tranſportation: The Winds were ſo contrary, and the Weather ſo ſtormy, that the Pilot could not make any land in England till Monday Morning at which Time he landed at Aldborough in Suffolk, and ſent thence immediately an Expreſs to the General, and the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, with Intimation of his Majeſty's Reſolutions. Whereupon his Excellency with a great and gallant Company of the chiefeſt of the Nobility and Gentry of England ſet forward from London the 22d of May.

Publick Intelligence by Authority, 4to. No. 21.

Whereas in a late printed Paper entituled, A Liſt of the Names of ſuch Perſons who ſate upon the Tryal of the late King, printed by Edward Huſbands, and alſo in ſome other printed Paper or Book reciting the ſame, John Gurdon, Eſq; is therein mentioned to be one of the Perſons which ſate upon the ſaid Tryal: The ſaid Edward Huſbands doth hereby give Notice unto all Perſons, that his Author was miſinformed, and that thereby the ſaid Mr. Gurdon hath been very much wronged; as appears by the Certificate of Mr. Jeſſop Clerk of the Parliament.

I have peruſed the Journal of the Proceedings of the High Court of Juſtice, erected for the Trying of the late King Charles, and do not find that John Gurdon, Eſq; was ever preſent at any of the Meetings of the Commiſſioners in the ſaid High Court of Juſtice, or his Name inſerted in the ſaid Journal, as acting upon any Occaſion whatſoever relating to the ſaid Tryal, or any Thing purſuant thereunto.

The ejected Fellows of New College, Oxon. reſtor'd;

Upon Report from the Committee of Petitions by the Earl of Pembroke concerning the Fellows of New-College in Oxford, that were unjuſtly put out, it is hereby ordered, that they ſhall be reſtored to their Places, and that thoſe put in by the Viſitors ſhall be put out; and that an Order be ſent to the Warden of New-College accordingly.

And thereby Tho. Tanner, Proctor, removed to make way for the right Owner.

A Change in the Face of Men and Things.

Faſti Oxon. ſub anno 1660. Vol. II pag. 804.

Thomas Tanner, one of the Fellows of New-College was now ſenior Proctor of the Univerſity, but was ejected thence in Auguſt following by his Majeſty's Commiſſioners, to make room for thoſe that had been turned out by the Viſitors appointed by Parliament. So that then he retiring to Hart-Hall, he ſpent the Remainder of his Proctorſhip there. —— The Scene of all Things was now changed, and Alterations made in the Countenances, Manners and Words of all Men. Thoſe that for twelve Years laſt paſt had governed and carried all Things in a Manner at their Pleaſure, did now look diſcontented and were much perplex'd, foreſeeing that their being in the Univerſity muſt inevitably vaniſh. Thoſe that had laid under a Cloud for ſeveral Years behind, appear with chearful Looks, while others that had flouriſhed, droop'd or withdrew themſelves privately, they knowing very well, that they had eaten the Bread of other Men, and that if they ſhould continue in the Univerſity, ſhould undergo a Viſitation and Cenſure by thoſe Perſons, whom they themſelves had formerly viſited and ejected.

To prevent Waſte upon the King's Lands.

Publick Intelligence by Order, 4to.

The Lords and Commons concurred in an Order for the ſtopping the committing of any waſte in the Houſes or Lands of the King's Majeſty that are unſold, and for the preventing the felling of any Timber or Wood, &c.

Colonel Thomlinſon to be indemnified.

The Houſe of Commons reſolved, that Colonel Matthew Tomlinſon ſhall not be ſecured, nor his Eſtate ſeized on.

Concurrence of the Commons with the Council of State.

Upon Report of the Council of State of Perſons lately committed and releaſed by their Order and Warrant, the Houſe approved of what they had done therein, and ordered, that those Perſons whom they have committed, ſhall either continue in Cuſtody or be releaſed, as they ſhall think fit for the Service of the Publick. They likewiſe reſolved, that the Eſtates of thoſe Perſons that were ordered to be taken into Cuſtody and are ſince fled, ſhall be forthwith ſecured; and that the Concurrence of the Lords be deſired hereunto.

The City Clergy attend, and addreſs the King.

All Preſbyterian Divines to be Repreſentatives of that Party.

Audience given to them;

Preſent their Duty and Affections:

Lord Clarendon's Hiſtory, Vol. III. *p.*601.

With the Commiſſioners from the Parliament and from the City, there came a Company of their Clergy-men, to the Number of eight or ten, who would not be look'd on as Chaplains to the reſt, but being the popular Preachers of the City (Reynolds, Calamy, Caſe, Manton, and others, the moſt eminent of the Preſbyterians) deſired to be thought to repreſent that Party. They intreated to be admitted all together to have a formal Audience of his Majeſty; where they preſented their Duties, and magnified the Affections of themſelves and their Friends; who they ſaid, had always, according to the Obligation of their Covenant, wiſhed his Majeſty very well; and had lately, upon the Opportunity that God had put into their Hands, inform'd the People of their Duty; which, they preſumed, his Majeſty had heard had proved effectual, and been of great Uſe to him. They thanked God for his Conſtancy to the Proteſtant Religion; and profeſſed, that they were no Enemies to moderate Epiſcopacy; only deſired that ſuch Things might not be preſſed upon them in God's Worſhip, which in their Judgment who uſed them were acknowledged to be Matters indifferent, and by others were held unlawful.

No Enemies to moderate Epiſcopacy.

The King's Anſwer wiſe and good.

The King ſpoke very kindly to them; and ſaid, that he had heard of their good Behaviour towards him; and that he had no purpoſe to impoſe hard Conditions upon them, with Reference to their Conſciences: That they well knew, he had referr'd the ſettling all Differences of that Nature to the Wiſdom of the Parliament; which beſt knew what Indulgence and Toleration was neceſſary for the Peace and Quiet of the Kingdom. But his Majeſty could not be ſo rid of them, they deſired ſeveral private Audiences of him, which he never denied; wherein they told him, the Book of Common-Prayer had been long diſcontinued in England, and the People having been diſuſed to it, and many of them having never heard it in their Lives, it would be much wondered at, if his Majeſty ſhould, at his firſt landing in the Kingdom, revive the Uſe of it in his own Chapel, whither all Perſons would reſort; and therefore they beſought him, that he would not uſe it entirely and formally, but have only ſome Parts of it read, with Mixture of other good Prayers, which his Chaplains might uſe. The King told them with ſome Warmth, that whilſt he gave them Liberty, he would not have his own taken from him. That he had always uſed that Form of Service, which he thought the beſt in the World, and had never diſcontinued it in Places where it was more diſliked than he hoped it was by them. That when he came into England he would not ſeverely inquire how it was uſed in other Churches, though he doubted not he ſhould find it uſed in many; but he was ſure he would have no other uſed in his own Chapel. Then they beſought him with more Importunity, that the Uſe of the Surplice might be diſcontinued by his Chaplains, becauſe the Sight of it would give great Offence, and Scandal to the People. They found the King as inexorable in that Point as in the other; he told them plainly, that he would not be reſtrain'd himſelf, when he gave others ſo much Liberty; that it had been always held a decent Habit in the Church, conſtantly practiſed in England till theſe late ill Times; that it had been ſtill retain'd by him; and though he was bound for the preſent to tolerate much Diſorder and Undecency in the Exerciſe of God's Worſhip, he would never, in the leaſt Degree, by his own Practice, Diſcountenance the good old Order of the Church, in which he had been bred. Though they were very much unſatisfy'd with him, whom they thought to have found more flexible; yet they ceaſed farther troubling him, in hope and preſumption, that they ſhould find their Importunity in England more effectual.

Not well ſatisfied, they obtain'd private Audiences.

Wherein they expreſs'd their diſlike of the Common-Prayer, and deſir'd that his Majeſty at his firſt coming over would not uſe it in his own Chapel.

The King's Reply with ſome Warmth for his Liberty of Conſcience.

They deſire his Chaplains may diſcontinue the Uſe of the Surplice.

The King's Plea for the Decency of it:

And for other good old Orders of the Church.

The Divines unſatisfied adjourn their Importunities 'till they come into England.

SUNDAY May 20.

The Service and Behaviour of the King and Court on a Sunday at the Hague.

Mr. Hardy to preach before his Majeſty after the French Congregation had done;

But the French out of Curioſity refuſed to give Place to the Engliſh,

However exhorted by the Reader and Paſtor.

The King forced to chuſe another Place.

The King (at the Hague) would in the Morning hear a Sermon; and to that Purpoſe it was ordered, that Mr. Hardy, one of the Miniſters which came from England with the Commiſſioners of the City of London, ſhould preach before the King in the Chapel of the Court, which ſerves for Church to the French that live at the Hague, at eleven a Clock in the Forenoon, as ſoon as the French had ended their ordinary Devotions. And to that End to prevent the Diſorder among the People which were come there in Crowds from the Neighbour Towns, the Company which had the Guard, was commanded to ſeize themſelves of the Avenues of the Chapel, and particularly to poſſeſs the Door, which leads into a little Partition, where the Princeſs of Orange heretofore cauſed a Bench to be made, cloathed with black Velvet, and covered with a Canopy of the ſame Stuff for themſelves and for Perſons of Quality, that were ordinarily of their Train; but they dreamed not to remedy another Inconvenience, which deceived all the other Precautions that they uſed. For the French inſtead of giving Place to the Engliſh, and of uſing the Civility, which they were accuſtomed to have for Strangers, would not go out of the Church; and even the Perſons of Condition, which ſate in the little Partition (whereof we have ſpoken) and who were for the moſt part Dutch, refuſed to make Place for the Lords, which were in great Number about the King's Perſon, without conſidering that this very Incivility hindred them abſolutely to ſatiſfie the Curioſity they had to ſee the King, and to be preſent at the Engliſh Liturgy. The Reader of the Church exhorted the People to withdraw, and likewiſe the Paſtor, who made the Sermon, went up again into the Pulpit, and repreſented to them the Wrong they did themſelves, as well as their Brethren of the ſame Religion, and Strangers as well as them in this Country, in obſtinately ſtaying thus in their Seats, after having heard the Word of God in a Place where they had been fed, and in failing of Reſpect to the King, to whom that very Temple was given by their Superiors, and where the Engliſh were to hear after them in their Tongue. But theſe Exhortations made no Impreſſion on Spirits prepoſſeſſed. So that the King was enforced to have his Devotions in the Place, where her Royal Highneſs is accuſtomed to have her Preaching particularly, ſince moſt important Conſiderations hindred her from going to the Engliſh Church; where there entred as many as it could hold of the Lords of that Nation.

Account of the Sermon.

The Miniſter took his Text in the 26th Chapter of the Prophet Iſaiah, v. 19. which he applied to the preſent Eſtate of the Affairs of England, and made ſo learned and ſo pathetick a Diſcourſe, that there was not any one there, which was not touched and edify'd therewith.

His Majeſty's Cure of the King's Evil with the Order and Ceremonies in Healing.

After the Liturgy and Sermon were ended, there preſented themſelves many Perſons ſick of the Evil, whom the King was to touch, after many others he had touched Friday and Saturday the 28th and 29th of this Month in private. —— They placed a great Chair for the King, in a Place ſomewhat diſtant from the People. And as ſoon as the King was ſate, one of the Clerks of the Cloſet ſtands at the right Side of the Chair, holding on his Arm, or rather in his right Hand, as many gold Angels, every one tyed to a Ribband of white Silk, as there were ſick to be touched; which were then to the Number of eight and forty.

A Sermon by

Dr. Brown the aſſiſting Chaplain.

But foraſmuch as the Angels, which is a kind of Gold ſo named, becauſe it hath the Figure of an Angel upon it, are ſo rare, that they can ſcarce be gotten, eſpecially in theſe Provinces; the King uſeth ordinarily, as he did on this preſent Occaſion the ten Shilling Pieces, which are near of the ſame Value. The Chaplain that makes the Sermon before the King, and who for this Purpoſe takes ordinarily a Text proper for the Ceremony, performs the Office afterward, and ſtands on the left Side of the Chair; whilſt the Chirurgeon takes Place with the Sick, right over-againſt the King, but at a certain Diſtance. Notwithſtanding in the Occaſion whereof we ſpeak now, the Miniſter's Text had nothing common with that Ceremony, and it was not the Paſtor which made the Sermon that aſſiſted there, but Dr. Brown, Chaplain to the Princeſs Royal, who did all the Function thereof, repreſenting the King's Chaplain, as he did on all the like Occaſion at Breda, whilſt his Majeſty reſided there.

His Office in it, to read the Goſpel.

And at certain Words in it, the King lays his Hands on the Sick.

After his Majeſty had taken his Place, having by his Side the Secretary or Clerk of the Cloſet, and the Chirurgeon before him; the Chaplain who held a New Teſtament in his Hand, read there the Text in the Goſpel of St. Mark the 16th Chapter, from the 14th Verſe to the End of the Chapter; and at the ſame Time the Chirurgeon taking one of the Diſeaſed by the Hand, after having both made three low Reverences, came with him to put themſelves on their Knees before the King cloſe to the Chair, and whilſt the Chaplain pronounced theſe Words of the ſame Goſpel, they ſhall lay their Hands on the Sick, and they ſhall be healed, the King laid his Hand on the two Cheeks of the Sick, this being done, he that was touched retired himſelf, and they brought another to the King, who touched him in the ſame Manner, the Chaplain repeating the ſame Words as many Times as there were Sick for the King to touch, and as they brought them one after another at his Majeſty's Feet. The Chirurgeon, who was always on his Knees, whilſt the King touched, aroſe not till the King had made an End of Touching, and then he made again three low Reverences, and retired with the Sick to the Place where they were before, and ſtood there till the Chaplain had made an End of Reading the reſt of his Text; which he continued

A ſecond Goſpel read.

The particular Words for putting on the Ribband.

Concluding with the Lord's Prayer and a Collect.

tinued to read, till after the King had touched the laſt of the Sick: This being done the Chaplain began again another Goſpel, taken out of the firſt Chapter of St. John, from the 1ſt Verſe to the 15th, and whilſt he read it, the Chirurgeon brought again the Perſons touched to the King in the ſame Manner as he did before; and his Majeſty taking from the Secretary of the Cloſet, whilſt the Chaplain pronounced theſe Words of the Goſpel, That was the true Light, which lighteth every Man that cometh into the World, one of theſe gold Angels hanging on a ſilk Ribband, and put it on the Neck of one of the Diſeaſed, which approached one after another, in the ſame Manner, as they did when the Chirurgeon brought them to be touched; the Chaplain repeating alſo thoſe Words, as many Times as there were Perſons touched. After this they all retired again to their firſt Place, and then the Chaplain made an End of Reading the Goſpel, to the Verſe which we have denoted. He read after that ſome other Paſſages of the Holy Scripture, and concluded the whole Service with the Lord's Prayer, and a Prayer which they make unto God, that it would pleaſe him to bleſs the Ceremony, which the King had performed.

Mr. Sands Gentleman-Uſher.

The Ceremony in the King's waſhing his Hands.

The Liturgy being finiſhed, the Gentleman-Uſher (it was then Mr. Sands, who performed that Function) brought a Baſon and Ewer, and a Towel, and being accompanied with two Lords, or Earls, viz. the Lord Leonel Cranfield Earl of Middleſex, and the Lord Henry German, to whom the King gave ſince the Quality of the Earl of St. Albans, he preſented the Baſon and Ewer to the youngeſt of the two, who ſtood on the left Hand of the Gentleman that carried the Towel, taking the right Hand of the elder of the two Lords. The laſt finding himſelf in the Midſt of them, they marched in this Order towards the King, and after making three low Reverences, they put themſelves all three on their Knees before his Majeſty, and whilſt the Earl of St. Albans poured forth Water on the King's Hands, the Earl of Middleſex took the Towel from the Gentleman-Uſher, and preſented it to his Majeſty, who wiped his Hands therewith. After this the two Lords and the Gentleman-Uſher, roſe up, made again three great Reverences to the King and retired. And after that, the King aroſe alſo, and went thence to the Princeſs Royal her Chamber.

The King's frequent Exerciſe of this Gift of Healing.

Multitudes reſorting from all Parts for the Benefit of it.

It is certain that the King hath very often touched the Sick as well at Breda, where he touched 260 from Saturday the 17th of April to Sunday the 23d of May, as at Bruges and Bruxels, during the Reſidence he made there; and the Engliſh aſſure, that not only it was not without Succeſs, ſince it was the Experience that drew thither every Day a great Number of thoſe Diſeaſed, even from the moſt remote Provinces of Germany; but alſo that there was no Perſon healed ſo perfectly, who was not infected again with the ſame Diſeaſe if he were ſo unfortunate to loſe, through Negligence, or otherwiſe, the Medal, which the King hangs on his Neck, after he hath touched him; without any Hope to be cured of it, if he be not touched again, and have another Angel about his Neck. We have been loath to have touched on this Particular, if many grave Perſons, whom one cannot ſuſpect of Superſtition or Deceit, ſpake not thereof, as of a moſt conſtant thing, and of which there is no Doubt.

Monday May 21.

The King preparing to embark has an Addreſs from the People called Quakers.

A mad or melancholy Set of Folks.

Impudent and proud.

Threatning the King with the Judgments of God, if he did not favour their Sect.

This laſt of May the King preparing to embark (as he intended, but the Croſſneſs of the Winds detained him) received Letters from a certain kind of People, which are called in England Quakers, becauſe that in the ordinary Hours, when they make their Devotions or Prayers, there takes them a ſort of Trembling in all Parts of the Body, which they ſay is a violent Motion cauſed by the Spirit of God, wherewith they would have Men believe that they are poſſeſſed. It would be very hard to ſay, whether theſe People are fanatick or hypocondriack, that is, mad or melancholy. But it muſt needs be, that ſo great a Diſorder of Spirit, as that which is obſerved in all their Actions, proceedeth from an ill Diſpoſition of the Body. They have not only loſt the Reſpect they owe to Princes and Magiſtrates, but they fail alſo in the Duties which are inſeparable from the civil Life: And they are ſo far from Humility, which is a Virtue not known but ſince the Birth of Chriſtianity, that hitherto there was never ſeen an Animal ſo impudent and ſo proud. The Letter was ridiculous and impertinent throughout; but particularly in moſt Places, it pronounced the Threatnings of God's Judgment againſt the King, if he protected not that Sect, and enter'd not into thoſe Thoughts. — Journal of Sir William Lower, Fol.

Some taken and committed.

The Houſe of Commons received Information of the apprehending of Colonel Deſborough near the Sea Coaſt in Eſſex; and alſo of the Eſcape of Colonel Valentine Walton and Colonel Hewſon at the ſame Time: Ordered, that the High Sheriff of Eſſex do bring up Colonel Deſborough in ſafe Cuſtody, to be diſpoſed of as the Parliament ſhall order. The Houſe approved of the Commitment of Major General Harriſon by the Council of State to the Tower of London, and ordered him to be kept cloſe Priſoner there.

The March of Gen. Monk toward Dover.

In great Order and Diſtinction.

Continuat. of Hiſt. of Gr. Brit. Fol. p. 732.

His Excellency General Monk with a great and gallant Company of the chiefeſt of the Nobility and Gentry of England, ſet forward from London this 22^d^ of May, and for the more Conveniency of quartering ſo numerous a Company, he adviſ'd them to divide themſelves into Troops according to the ſeveral Counties, and the Intereſt of the Noblemen preſent. At Rocheſter Sir Thomas Clarges met the General, and preſented unto him his Majeſty's Letter dated $\frac{26}{16}$ May, with royal and moſt endeared Aſſurances of Eſteem from the beſt of Kings, to the worthieſt and moſt deſerving of Subjects.

Account given by the General's Chaplain.

Dr. Gumble's Life of Monk. 8vo. p. 381.

The General, who always loved Order and good Government, and obſerving the incredible Numbers that reſolved to attend in this Journey, ordered them to ride in diſtinguiſhed Troops under ſeveral Noblemen, with ſeveral Colours for the more Conveniency of quartering; and to prevent Quarrels upon that Occaſion, and that they might have the better Accommodation, he left his own Forces and Officers at home, except ſome of the chief, who could not be denied that Bounty, which with ſo much hazard they had aſſiſted him to obtain for the three Nations. Several great Troops of thoſe rode under the Command of the now Duke of Richmond, the Earl of Northampton, the Earl of Cleveland, the Lord Gerard, and many others, which I do not remember; and the loyal Citizens under Sir John Robinſon muſt not be forgotten. In this Journey the General behav'd himſelf with an Exceſs of Humility, &c.

Upon Information this Day given to the Houſe of Peers, that there is a great Waſte by cutting and felling of Timber in Wappenham and Wedon Coppices, in the County of Northampton, which belong to the College of All-Souls in Oxford: Ordered, that there ſhall be no more Waſte made there, or in any other Place belonging to the ſaid College.

Letter from the Lords ſent to attend his Majeſty at the Hague.

This Day Philip Howard, Son to the Right Honorable the Earl of Berkſhire, brought a Letter from the Lords Commiſſioners at the Hague, directed to the Right Honourable the Earl of Mancheſter, Speaker to the Houſe of Peers, for which he received the Thanks of the Houſe.

And from the Commiſſioners of the Commons.

The Houſe of Commons read a Letter of the Members of Parliament ſent to attend his Majeſty, dated at the Hague the 17^th^ of May.

A Bill for the Rights and Privileges of Parliament; And for general Pardon and Oblivion.

A Bill was this Day read in the Houſe of Commons, for the Maintenance of the juſt Rights and Privileges of Parliaments, in Confirmation of the Fundamental Laws, and ordered to be read again to Morrow.

An Act for general Pardon and Oblivion was ordered to be reported on Saturday next.

The Moderation of the Commons in the Progreſs of this Bill.

In preparing the general Act of Pardon, the Commons proceeded with all Tenderneſs and Caution, eſpecially with relation to the late Civil War; in which they were very unwilling totally to condemn the Parliament's Part in it. This particularly appear'd in the Treatment they gave to Mr. Lenthall, a Member of the Houſe, who in the Debate of the Bill took the Freedom to ſay, he that firſt drew his Sword againſt the late King, committed as great an Offence as he that cut off his Head. Upon which, being ſeiz'd by the Serjeant, he was brought to the Bar, where the Speaker, by Order of the Houſe, gave him this following Reprimand.

A Reproof given to Mr. Lenthal.

Eachard's Hiſt. Ch. II. p. 907.

Tender of condemning the two Houſes for what might be thought a defenſive War, before the Violence in 1648,

While they had no Thoughts againſt the Perſon, much leſs againſt the Life of the King.

Sir, The Houſe has taken very great Offence at ſome Words you have let fall upon the Debate of this Bill of Indemnity; which in the Judgment of the Houſe, contain as high a Reflection on the Juſtice and Proceedings of the Lords and Commons of the laſt Parliament, in their Actings before 1648. as could be expreſs'd. They apprehend there is much of Poyſon in the ſaid Words; and that they were ſpoken out of Deſign to inflame; and to render them who drew the Sword to bring Delinquents to Puniſhment, and to vindicate their juſt Liberties, into Ballance with them who cut off the King's Head: Of which Act they expreſs their Abhorrence and Deteſtation; appealing to God, and their Conſciences bearing Witneſs, that they had no Thoughts againſt his Perſon, much leſs againſt his Life. Therefore I am commanded to let you know, that had theſe Words fallen out at any other Time in this Parliament, but when they had Conſiderations of Mercy, Pardon and Indemnity, you might have expected a ſharper and ſeverer Sentence than I am now to pronounce. But the Diſpoſition of his Majeſty is to Mercy; he hath invited his People to accept of it; and it is the Diſpoſition of the Body of this Houſe to be Healers of Breaches, and to hold forth Mercy to Men of all Conditions, ſo far as may ſtand with Juſtice and Juſtification of themſelves before God and Man. I am therefore commanded to let you know, that that being their Diſpoſition, and the preſent Subject of this Day's Debate being Mercy, you ſhall therefore taſte of Mercy: Yet I am according to Command, to give you a ſharp Reprehenſion, and I do as ſharply and ſeverely as I can, reprehend you for it.

Directed to the Right Honourable the Earl of Mancheſter, Speaker of the Houſe of Peers.

A Letter from the Lords that were ſent from this Houſe to his Majeſty was read.

My Lord,

The King notifies his Departure, his Landing Place, and his Stages to Whitehall.

We have delivered the Letter and Meſſage entruſted to us by the Houſe of Peers, and found a moſt gracious Reception from his Majeſty, who is pleaſed to declare (which we deſire your Lordſhip to communicate to the Houſe) that he intends to part from hence on Monday next, being the 21ſt of this Month, to land at Dover, and after a ſhort Stay at Canterbury, to continue his Journey to London, and there to reſide with his Court at Whitehall. This we are commanded to impart to your Lordſhip from his Majeſty and remain your Lordſhip's

Minutes in the Journal of Admiral Mountague.

The beſt Account of the King's Voyage is given by Admiral Mountague in his Journal MS. communicated by his Son Edward Wortley Mountague, Eſq; Member of Parliament for the City of Peterborough.

Tueſday, May 22. Their Royal Highneſſes the Dukes of York and Glouceſter, and Admiral Opdam, came and dined aboard the Naſeby, and went off again in the Evening, when the Prince Maurice of Naſſau came on board to ſee the Ship.

The King imbark's for England.

Wedneſday, May 23. In the Morning the General [Mountague] went in his Barge cloſe to the Shore ſide at Scheveling, where was prepared a Dutch Veſſel to carry his Majeſty on board the Naſeby, and about ten of the Clock in the Morning, the King's moſt ſacred Majeſty came to the Shore ſide, and boarded the ſaid Veſſel, but before ſhe was launched from the Shoar, his Majeſty went off her into the Rear Admiral's Boat, and came preſently on Board the General's Barge, as did alſo the Dukes of York and Glouceſter, the Princeſs Royal, the Queen of Bohemia, and the Prince of Orange, and ſo were rowed for the Naſeby, which Ship they boarded about eleven of the Clock in the Morning.

A Croud of Spectators.

There were upon the Shoar at Scheveling, many Troops of Horſe and Foot of the States, and about forty Piece of Ordinance, all which ſaluted the King, and a vaſt Multitude of People were Spectators ſuppoſed to be 100,000 at the leaſt.

The Fleet ſet ſail for Dover.

The Ships ſaluted the King with all their Guns twice, once before he came on Board, and once over after he came on board, and once more at the going off of the Princeſs Royal, the Queen of Bohemia, and Prince of Orange, which was about three of the Clock in the Afternoon, immediately after which the Fleet ſet Sail bound for Dover.

This Day his Majeſty was pleaſed to change the Name of the Naſeby, into the Charles, and new nam'd divers other Ships, the Richard was named the Royal James, his Royal Highneſs the Duke of York embarqued in the London when we ſet Sail, as did the Duke of Glouceſter into the Swiftſure.

Monſieur Opdam, the Holland's Admiral, came aboard the Naſeby in the Dutch Veſſel prepared for the King, but ſtayed not to go off with the Princeſs of Orange, and went away before Dinner in another Boat by himſelf.

Sir William Lower's Account of the Voyage.

Wedneſday paſt Eleven. The King arrived at the Fleet, and as ſoon as his Majeſty was a little diſengaged of a Part of thoſe that would follow him to the Ship, he he put himſelf at a Table in the Gallery of the Poop, with the other Royal Perſons; and cauſed ſome Perſons of Condition, and the moſt confident of his Majeſty, to be entertained in the other Apartments. The Lord Mountague making as fair an Expence at this Repaſt, and all the others following, as at this Paſſage of the King, which was but of two Days, he employ'd more than two thouſand Jacobus's, though the Lords the Eſtates had provided his Ship, and the reſt of the Fleet, with all kinds of Proviſions and Refreſhments neceſſary, beyond what needed for ſo little a Paſſage.

The Lord Mountague's great Expence in entertaining his Majeſty on Ship-board.

The King takes his Leave of the Deputies of the States General,

After Dinner, the King received again the laſt Complements of ſome particular Perſons, expreſs'd great Civilities to the Deputies of the Eſtates of Holland, and ſent them away with new Proteſtations of Affection and Amity. The Sea was calm, and the Heavens ſo clear, that the King had a Deſire to diſcover once again a Country, where he had received ſo many Teſtimonies of Reſpect and Love: To this purpoſe he went up to the Top of the Poop, and ſeeing that the People, with which he had left the Downs covered, remained there ſtill, he could not chuſe but ſay, that he muſt confeſs it was impoſſible that his own Subjects could have more Tenderneſs for him than thoſe People, in whoſe Affections he ſaw he reigned no leſs, than he was going to reign in the Wills of the Engliſh.

And of the young Prince of Orange his Nephew,

And Queen of Bohemia his Aunt,

And his Siſter the Princeſs Royal of Orange.

After this, he embraced the Prince of Orange with the ſame Tenderneſs as he could have had for his own Son, and gave him his Bleſſing; and took Leave of the Queen of Bohemia. But when he was to part with the Princeſs Royal his Siſter, that Princeſs who had with ſo much Courage, and without Grief almoſt look'd all paſt Misfortunes in the Face, and who had Virtue enough to fortify that of her Brother's, had need of all his Conſtancy, to reſolve herſelf to ſuffer this Separation, which ſhe had wiſhed with ſo much Impatience, and whoſe Conſequences were to be ſo glorious both to one and t'other. The King himſelf, who had Reſolution enough to witneſs no Weakneſs in his greateſt Misfortunes, cannot reſiſt the Tears of a Siſter, whom many other Conſiderations, as ſtrong as thoſe of Birth, render extreamly dear unto him. She would have been inconſolable, but for the Hope ſhe had to ſee again ſhortly the King her Brother in his Kingdom. And they would have been troubled to diſengage her from the Arms of his Majeſty, if Admiral Mountague had not cauſed the Anchors to be weighed, and giving Signal to the other Ships to ſet ſail. The Admiral's Ship was already under ſail for England, when the Queen of Bohemia, the Princeſs Royal, and the Prince of Orange deſcended into the Bark, which was to bring them back again to the Land. All the Artillery of the Fleet ſaluted thoſe royal Perſons, and the Battery of the Downs anſwered it, with the ſmall Shot of the Citizens and Guards.

Admiral Mountague weighs Anchor.

And the Fleet ſet ſail.

It was about four of the Clock in the Afternoon that the Fleet did ſet ſail, and at five a Clock it was gotten ſo far off, that the People which ſtirr'd not from the Downs, having loſt Sight of it, retired themſelves, whilſt the King continued his Way towards his Kingdoms, with the ſame Proſperity which was ſeen lately to accompany all his Affairs. Finis. [End of Sir William Lower's Account.]

Text. Ecclef. x. 17. Bleſſed art thou, O Land, when thy King is the Son of Nobles, and thy Princes eat in due Seaſon, for Strength and not for Drunkenneſs. ——

Great Hopes given of the King's Virtue.

It has been our very great Unhappineſs to know him yet but little by Experience; but all the Fame and the Report of thoſe that know him, ſpeaks him to be a rare and moſt accompliſhed Prince. And yet I hope that his Wiſdom and Goodneſs will hereafter ſo much exceed our preſent Expectations, that we ſhall ſay as the Queen did to Solomon, It was a true Report which we heard, but the half was not told us. In the mean time, I ſhall give you two ample and honourable Teſtimonies of him (when he was nine or ten Years younger than now he is) from two dying Lords, who being Perſons of Honour, and at the Point of Death, are two great Arguments that they ſpake the Truth, according to the beſt of their Knowledge, the one (Lord Capel) thus expreſſeth it, Truly I never ſaw greater Hopes of Virtue in any young Perſon than in him, great Judgment, great Underſtanding, ſtrong Apprehenſion, much of Honour in his Nature, and a very perfect Engliſhman in his Inclinations. The other (the Earl of Derby) gives him, &c.

Two remarkable Teſtimonies of it.

Dr. Gumble's Life of General Monk, 8vo. p. 193.

General Monk went this Day to Canterbury, in his Way to Dover, to receive and wait upon his Majeſty up to London. This puts me in Mind of a Paſſage, that while he was at a Window in his Quarters at Canterbury, and looked upon many brave and finely adorned Troops that marched by, who were Gentlemen Volunteers to welcome his Majeſty home to his three Kingdoms: He looking upon them and commending them, one Stander-by told him, he had none of theſe in Coldſtream; but the ſame Perſon continuing the Diſcourſe (upon ſeeing a new Troop coming forward with green Scarfs and Feathers in a Summer Gaiety) ſaid, 'Tis true indeed Graſhoppers and Butterflies never come abroad in froſty Weather, and at the beſt Seaſon there are never many in Scotland. This was ſo much Truth, that the General was pleaſed with it, and thanked God for his good Deliverance at that Time, &c.

General Mountague's Letter to the Earl of Mancheſter, Speaker of the Houſe of Peers.

My Lord,

Having appointed a Rendezvous of as many Ships as could be got together in the Bay of Scheveling, that I might the better receive his Majeſty's Commands in order to his happy Return for England, it pleaſed his moſt gracious Majeſty this Day about Noon to embark himſelf in the Naſeby riding before Scheveling; their Royal Highneſſes the Dukes of York and Glouceſter, the Princeſs Royal, Queen of Bohemia, and Prince of Orange accompanied his Majeſty on Board, and about three Hours after, the Duke of York embarking in the London, the Duke of Glouceſter in Swiftſure, the Princeſs Royal, Queen of Bohemia, and Prince of Orange returned to Scheveling, and the Fleet ſet ſail by his Majeſty's Command bound for the Port of Dover, whither I truſt God will give us a ſpeedy and proſperous Voyage. I apprehended it my Duty to give your Lordſhip the ſooneſt Advertiſement thereof I could, and ſo remain, &c.

A Bill for taking away the Court of Wards, a great Grievance to the Nobility and Gentry.

In the Houſe of Commons a Bill for taking away the Court of Wards, &c. was referred to a Committee of the whole Houſe; and it is Ordered, That in lieu thereof one hundred thouſand Pounds per Annum ſhall be ſettled on his Majeſty.

A Letter from Admiral Mountague to the Houſe of Commons, who ſend a congratulatory Letter to the King.

The Houſe had a Letter from General Mountague, dated from the Naſeby May 23, ten Leagues from the Bay of Scheveling, ſignifying his Majeſty's Approach to England. Whereupon the Houſe reſolved upon the ſending a Letter congratulatory to his Majeſty, to be delivered by their Commiſſioners at the Time of his Majeſty's ſafe Arrival in England.

Declaration againſt the Iriſh Rebels.

The Commons deſired the Lords Concurrence to a Declaration concerning the Iriſh Rebels, the Effect whereof is as followeth; That in Regard there are yet many Natives of that Kingdom deeply guilty of that Rebellion, who have of late murdered, robbed, and deſpoiled ſeveral Engliſh Proteſtants planted there; and others of them have entred upon, and diſquieted the Poſſeſſion of ſeveral Soldiers and Adventurers. The Houſe being very ſenſible of the innocent Blood of ſo many thouſand Proteſtants formerly ſlain by thoſe barbarous Rebels, and for Vindication of his ſacred Majeſty, and both Houſes of Parliament, from the leaſt Allowance thereof, do declare, that all Iriſh Rebels, except ſuch as came in upon Article, and have not ſince forfeited the ſame, be apprehended and proceeded againſt according to Law, and that the Adventurers and Soldiers, their Heirs, &c. be not diſturbed in their Poſſeſſions, until the Parliament here, or the Parliament to be called there, do take further Order, or they be legally evicted by due Courſe of Law. —— Upon which the Lords deſired a Conference.

Account of the King's Landing at Dover, given in the Journal of Admiral Mountague.

Journal of Edward Earl of Sandwich, MS.

The 25th of May, Friday about ten of the Clock in the Morning, the Fleet came to an Anchor in Dover Road. About one of the Clock in the Afternoon, the King and the Dukes of York and Glouceſter went off on board into the General's Barge, Captain Cuttance ſteering the Barge, and the General ſtanding before the Houſe of the Barge: Beal's Brigantine rowed into the Shore a head of the Barge; the Vice-Admiral upon the Star-board Quarter, and Rear-Admiral upon the Lar-board, divers other Boats in the Fleet in Company, and between three and four a Clock in the Afternoon, the King's moſt ſacred Majeſty, and their royal Highneſſes the Dukes of York and Gloceſter went on Shore on the Strand a little to the Northward of Dover Pier, where immediately General Monk met him; and when General Mountague had attended his Majeſty and the Dukes unto General Monk, having had the Honour to kiſs their Hands he preſently went back on board the Charles, and ſailed that Night into the Downs. The Charles fired three Rounds, and the reſt of the Fleet five Rounds in Salutes.

Lord Clarendon's Account.

Lord Clarendon's Hiſtory, Fol. Vol. III. p. 602.

After eight or ten Days ſpent at the Hague, in Triumphs and Feſtivals, which could not have been more ſplendid if all the Monarchs of Europe had met there; and which were concluded with ſeveral rich Preſents made to his Majeſty. The King took his Leave of the States, with all the Expressions of Amity their Civilities deserved, and embarked himself on the Royal Charles, which had been before called the Naseby, but had been new christened the Day before, as many others had been in the Presence, and by the Order of his royal Highness the Admiral. Upon the four and twentieth Day the Fleet set sail, and in one continued Thunder of Cannon, arrived so early on the six and twentieth near Dover, that the King disembarked, and being received by the General on the Brink of the Sea (whom he met and embraced with great Demonstrations of Affection) he presently took Coach and came that Night to Canterbury.

His Lordship mistaken in the Date of Days.

Conducted to the Shoar by Mr John Talbot, who was the first Man his Majesty knighted in England.

Interview of the King and General Monk.

On Friday about one in the Afternoon his Majesty landed at the Beach near Dover Peer, with the Duke of York and the Duke of Glocester, and many Noblemen and Gentlemen. All that were present put themselves in a Posture, to see the meeting of the King and the General: The Admirers of his Majesty were jealous on his Majesty's Behalf of too low Condescension, and the Lovers of Duty fearful on the other Side, of an Ostentation of Merit. But such an humble Prostration was made by the General, and so generous a Reception by his Majesty, kissing and embracing him, that all Persons were satisfied to Admiration. ——

The King's Walk toward the Town.

His Majesty walked from the Water-side towards the Town with the General, a Canopy being carried over his Head, and a Chair of State by him, and upon his Excellency's Motion for going to Canterbury (because there was not Accommodation for his Majesty and the fourth Part of his Train at Dover) he hasted to his Coach, in his Passage to which, he was met by the Mayor and Aldermen of the Town, with Mr. Reading their Minister, who presented his Majesty with a large Bible with gold Clasps: At one End of the Coach next the King sate the Duke of York, and at the other the Duke of Glocester and the General, and the Duke of Buckingham sate in the Boot. About two Miles from Dover, his Majesty took Horse, his royal Brothers rode on his right Hand, and the General on his left; after whom the Duke of Buckingham, and several other Noblemen and Gentlemen followed in gallant Equipage.

Met by the Mayor and Jurates with a Speech by their Minister Mr. John Reading, soon after Rector of Cheriton and of Chartham, and Prebendary of Canterbury.

The King's Entrance into Canterbury.

At his Majesty's Entrance into Canterbury, he was met by the Mayor and Aldermen, and Mr. Lovelace the Recorder, who made an eloquent Speech to him; the Mayor also presented him with a Tankard of massie Gold, and then conducted him to the Palace, where he remained till Monday.

The manner of the King's Reception of General Monk, as related by the General's Chaplain then present.

Dr. Gumble's Life of General Monk, 8vo. p. 384.

At Landing the General received his Majesty with becoming Duty, but his Majesty approached him with an Affection so absolutely entire and vehement, as higher could not be expressed by a Prince to a Subject, he embraced and kissed him. This Relater had the Honour to be at the General's Back, and the third Person that kissed the Hem of his Majesty's Garments after he set Foot in England. He set himself to observe his Majesty's Countenance at the first Landing, where he did see a Mixture of other Passions with Joy in his Face, &c. ——The Town of Dover had provided a Canopy, and there on the Beach were the Mayor, Aldermen, and their Minister, with a large Bible, with gold Clasps embossed, which they presented, and a short Speech; the Parson would have been longer, but the General suggested that Dover was not commodious for such a Resort. So he with his two royal Brothers took Coach, and the General in the same with his Majesty, and hasted to Canterbury.

The King at the Cathedral of Canterbury to hear the Common-Prayer.

The King gave Garters to the Marquis of Hertford, the Earl of Southampton and Admiral Mountague.

The King in his Stay at Canterbury this Sunday went to his Devotions to the Cathedral, which he found very much dilapidated and out of Repair; yet the People ſeem'd glad to hear the Common-Prayer again. Thither came very many of the Nobility, and other Perſons of Quality to preſent themſelves to the King; and there his Majeſty aſſembled his Council; and ſwore the General of the Council, and Mr. Morrice whom he there knighted, and gave him the Signet, and ſwore him Secretary of State. That Day his Majeſty gave the Garter to the General, and likewiſe to the Marquis of Hertford, and the Earl of Southampton (who had been elected many Years before) and ſent it likewiſe by Garter Herald and King at Arms, to Admiral Mountague who remain'd in the Downs.

A Let-

Admiral Mountague*'s Letter to the Duke of York, Lord High Admiral. Giving Account of his diſpoſing the Ships according to his Royal Highneſs's Command.*

Journal of Edward Earl of Sandwich, MS.

A Letter of Vice-Admiral Mountague to his Royal Highneſs the Duke of York, dated from aboard his Majeſty's Ship the Charles in the Downs, May 28. 1660.

May it pleaſe your Royal Highneſs,

In Obedience to your Commands from Canterbury, I have diſmiſſed divers Ships out of the Downs, ſome to Stations, ſome into Port to victual and clean, and ſome to Dunkirk, Maiſland-Sluice and Diepe, to perform your Royal Highneſſes Commands there: All which the incloſed Liſt will give your Royal Highneſs a more perfect Account of, as alſo how all our Ships are victualed at preſent; that ſo fitting Care may be taken for their timely Supply. On Saturday laſt in the Morning the Preſident Frigate came into the Downs, and brought with her a Prize from Kingſale in Ireland, the Preſident having no Victuals left, and alſo being neceſſitated to go into a Dock, before ſhe be fit for Service; I have ordered her into Chatham. The Prize is a Veſſel about 120 Tun, an Inventory of what is in her I here ſend your Royal Highneſs, and keep the Veſſel here in the Downs, until I have order from your Royal Highneſs whither to ſend her and to diſpoſe of her.

And of a Prize taken.

And deſires ſpecial new Commiſſions for the ſeveral Commanders.

The Commanders of the Fleet many of them have their Commiſſions from me, by Virtue of my laſt Commiſſion, (which ſignifies nothing) divers of them have no new Commiſſions, but only ſuch as they had from the Rump Parliament; I humbly think it were for his Majeſty's Service, that they were all commiſſioned in the regular and lawful Way from your Royal Highneſs, and that your Royal Highneſs would be pleaſed to appoint ſome Way, how ſuch of the Commanders as ſhall be thought fit to be continued may have ſuch Commiſſions.

And propoſes that the three Caſtles neareſt to the Downs, may be beſtow'd as formerly on the Commanders of the three Flag Ships.

Here are three Caſtles on the Shoar by the Downs, Deal-Caſtle, Sandwich-Caſtle, and Walmer, all three formerly belong'd to the three Flag Ships of the Fleet for their Accommodation, and have been alienated in the late Times of Trouble, it is very convenient they ſhould be again returned to the former Uſe, and your Highneſs will be pleaſed to pardon me for putting your Highneſs in mind of it, before his Majeſty be engaged to any other Diſpoſal of them.

This is all at preſent needful to give your Royal Highneſs the Trouble; and ſo I humbly take Leave to ſubſcribe

May it pleaſe your Highneſs,
Your obedient, faithful,
and for ever obliged Servant,
E. MOUNTAGUE.

TUESDAY May 29. The King went early from Rocheſter to reach London this Night.

Publick Intelligence by Order, 4to.

An Addreſs of the Regiments of Horſe preſented at Dartford.

His Majeſty took his Journey from Rocheſter betwixt four and five in the Morning, the Militia Forces of Kent lining the Ways, and Maidens ſtrewing Herbs and Flowers, and the ſeveral Towns hanging out white Sheets. At Dartford an Addreſs to his moſt excellent Majeſty was preſented by Colonel Knight from the Officers of the ſeveral Regiments of Horſe under the Command of his Excellency the Lord General Monk, wherein after their Expreſſions of a Joy flowing from Reverence and Love, and their Reflection on the publick Good, they declare, we bleſs God to ſee that Day, when the Serenity of every Man's Countenance diſcovers the Tranquillity of his Mind; for this ſhews your Majeſty to be the true Soul of the People, ſince during your Abſence the whole Nation was caſt into ſuch Diſtractions as we have no Pleaſure to remember, but had rather turn our Thoughts and grateful Acknowledgments to the happy Conduct of our noble General, who thus far led us in our Duty to your royal Perſon. ——— We profeſs and declare, that as we have not been altogether uſeleſs in the Reſtauration as well of your ſacred Maieſty to your Crown and Kingdoms, as of your People to their juſt Rights, ſo we ſhall for the future chearfully ſacrifice our Lives, or whatſoever can be more dear to us, in the Service of your Majeſty againſt all Oppoſitions whatſoever.

The King's March to Blackheath where the Army was drawn up.

Contin. Hiſt. of Gr. Brit. Fol. p. 734.

From thence his Majeſty marched to Blackheath, where the Army was drawn up, and was much pleaſed with the Sight of it; for indeed they ſeemed all Men of one Age and one Mind, and were for their Number as gallant Troops as were to be ſeen in the World. They received his Majeſty with loud Shoutings and Rojoycings.

In St. George*'s Fields, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen receive and entertain his Majeſty.*

When his Majeſty came to St. George's Fields, the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen were in a Tent ready to receive him, and reverenced him humbly on their Knees, and the Lord-Mayor preſented his Sword, which his Majeſty gave back to him; and after a little Collation in the Tent, his Majeſty went towards White-hall in this manner:

The manner of the King's Proceſſion thro' the City to Whitehall.

All the Streets were richly adorned with Tapeſtry from London-Bridge to White-hall; and as far as Temple-Bar were equally ranked in good Order, the Trained-Band Forces on the one Side of the Streets, and the ſeveral Companies in their Liveries on the other: From Temple-Bar to White-hall, the Trained-Bands of Weſtminſter and the Parts adjacent on one Side, and ſome Companies of the Army on the other, to whom was joyned a gallant Company of the late King's Officers commanded by Sir John Stawell.

At the Head of the Proceſſion Major General Brown, with a Troop of fine Citizens.

The Proceſſion was led by Major-General Brown, who had a Troop of three hundred, all in Cloth of ſilver Doublets; then followed twelve hundred in velvet Coats, with Footmen and Liveries attending them in Purple; then another

Then followed a Troop of Horſe with white Colours, and after them the General's Life-Guard led by Sir Philip Howard. Then five Regiments of the Army Horſe led by Colonel Knight: And after them two Troops of Noblemen and Gentlemen.

Thus was his Majeſty conducted to his royal Palace at White-hall on the 29th of May, his Birth-Day, and with him Peace and Happineſs returned to his Kingdoms and People.

The King's Reception of the Lords.

When the Lord-Mayor had taken Leave of his Majeſty, he went to the Lords, where he was entertained with a grave but eloquent Speech of the Earl of Mancheſter as Speaker of the Houſe of Peers.

Speech of the Earl of Mancheſter.

London, Printed by John Macock and Francis Tyton Printers to the Houſe of Lords, 1660.

That this Day may prove happy to your Majeſty is the Hope, the Expectation, and the earneſt Deſire of my Lords the Peers, whoſe Commands are upon me to make this humble Tender to your Majeſty of their loyal Joy for your Majeſty's Return to your native Kingdom; and for this happy Reſtoration of your Majeſty to your Crown and Dignity after ſo long and ſo ſevere a Suppreſſion of your juſt Right and Title.

I ſhall not reflect upon your Majeſty's Sufferings, which have been your People's Miſeries; yet I cannot omit to ſay, that as the Nation in general, ſo the Peers with a more perſonal and particular Senſe have felt the Stroke that cut the Gordian Knot which faſtened your Majeſty to your Kingdom, and your Kingdom to your Majeſty.

For ſince thoſe ſtrange and various Fluctuations and Diſcompoſures in Government, ſince thoſe horrid and unparallell'd Violations of all Order and Juſtice, Strangers have ruled over us, even with a Rod of Iron: But now with Satisfaction of Heart, we own and ſee your Majeſty our native King, a Son of the wiſe, a Son of the ancient Kings, whoſe Hand holds forth a golden Scepter.

Great King! Give me Leave to ſpeak the Confidence, as well as the Deſires of the Peers of England: Be you the powerful Defender of the true Proteſtant Faith, the juſt Aſſerter and Maintainer of the Laws and Liberties of your Subjects; ſo ſhall Judgment run down like a River, and Juſtice like a mighty Stream; and God, the God of your Mercy, who hath ſo miraculouſly preſerved you, will eſtabliſh your Throne in Righteouſneſs and in Peace.

Dread Sovereign! I offer no flattering Titles, but ſpeak the Words of Truth: You are the Deſire of three Kingdoms, the Strength and the Stay of the Tribes of the People, for the moderating of Extremities, the reconciling of Differences, the ſatisfying of all Intereſts, and for the reſtoring of the collapſed Honour of theſe Nations. Their Eyes are toward your Majeſty, their Tongues with loud Acclamations of Joy, ſpeak the Thoughts and loyal Intentions of their Hearts, their Hands are lift up to Heaven with Prayers and Praiſes; and what oval Triumph can equal this your Pomp and Glory?

Long may your Majeſty live and reign; a Support to your Friends, a Terrour to your Enemies, an Honour to your Nation, and an Example to Kings, of Piety, Juſtice, Prudence, and Power; that this prophetick Expreſſion may be verified in your Majeſty, King Charles the Second ſhall be greater than ever was the greateſt of that Name.

The King's Anſwer thereunto.

The King's Anſwer.

My Lord,

I am ſo diſordered by my Journey, and with the Noiſe ſtill ſounding in my Ears (which I confeſs was pleaſing to me, becauſe it expreſſed the Affections of my People) as I am unfit at the preſent to make ſuch a Reply as I deſire, yet thus much I ſhall ſay unto you, that I take no greater Satisfaction to my ſelf in this my Change, than that I find my Heart really ſet to endeavour by all Means for the Reſtoring of this Nation to their Freedom and Happineſs, and I Hope by the Advice of my Parliament to effect it. Of this alſo you may be confident, that next to the Honour of God, from whom principally I ſhall ever own this Reſtauration to my Crown, I ſhall ſtudy the Welfare of my People; and ſhall not only be a true Defender of the Faith, but a juſt Aſſerter of the Laws and Liberties of my Subjects.

The King went to the Banqueting-Houſe, where the whole Houſe of Commons attending him, the Speaker in their Names expreſſed the joyful Senſe they all had to behold his Majeſty returned in Safety, and that thereby an End was put to that Tyranny and Slavery his good People had endured.

His Majeſty's good Intention to go to Weſtminſter-Abbey to return ſolemn Thanks to God;

But diverted from that Intention, he gave Thanks in the Preſence-Chamber.

After the Concluſion of theſe Ceremonies his Majeſty intended to go to Weſtminſter-Abbey to offer up a Thankſgiving to God, for all his Deliverances and Mercies towards him; but by the Wearineſs he had contracted through the Toil (however grateful) of that Day's Action, he was diverted from his Intention of going thither; yet would he not for any Conſideration be withheld from his Devotion, and his Oblations of Thanks to God, which at that Time he made in his Preſence Chamber, becauſe his Chapel was not yet prepared for his Reception.

Epiſt. Ded. To his moſt ſacred Majeſty CHARLES II.

Moſt Dread Sovereign,

In Language affected with Zeal and Joy.

Though your Court be now much fuller of Gratulations to you, than once your Camp was with Bullets againſt you; though your Royal Palace be as much beſet with the chearful Duties of Men, as your Royal Oak was pitched about with the Miniſtry of Angels, and the trembling Prayers of three Kingdoms: Yet I humbly crave Leave, that one Shrub among ſo many Cedars may teſtify his Joy, &c. —— Your Majeſty's humbleſt Votary from the firſt famous 29th of May, and moſt dutiful Subject twelve Years before the ſecond, when your Majeſty entred the Imperial City of London.

WILLIAM TOWERS.

In his Apoſtrophe to the King.

Expreſſing a hearty and paſſionate Loyalty.

I muſt have Time well to digeſt my Joy, before I can be able well to pen it; and yet I lie under another Impotency, it being impoſſible for me to rule or ſtifle my Joy; or to eſteem myſelf leſs than Traytor, unleſs I am ſo bold to make even irreverent Haſte, and to tell to your royal Face, that I have always been almoſt more than loyal, the Honour of my Poverty bears me witneſs, and I would rather periſh ſtill, than to have been rich. Nor yet flies my Ambition beyond a Touch or a Glance; one Look from your Eye, one Kiſs of your Hand, will out-value all eccleſiaſtical Preferment. —— My dread Sovereign, I fall down with my very Soul at your Majeſty's Feet, to tell you, I am your Majeſty's moſt allegiant Subject.

Letter of Mr. Sharp, Agent for the Kirk of Scotland, giving an Account of his Negotiation at Breda.

A Letter of the reverend Mr. Sharp at London, to Mr. Douglas at Edinburgh, dated May 29, 1660. Giving him a large Account of his going to Breda, he ſays, General Monk's Deſign in my going was, that I might give his Majeſty an Account of all the Paſſages of his Undertaking, from his coming from Scotland to the Parliament's owning the King, that I might acquaint him how neceſſary it was to follow Moderation in his After-Management, and to move the King to write to ſome of the City Miniſters, by them to be communicate to all Preſbyterians, intimating his Majeſty's Deſign to ſuppreſs Profanity, and countenance Religion with Power. I inſiſted on ſeveral Things in Your's to me, and was the firſt Miniſter of the three Kingdoms, who avowedly addreſſed the King. I made my Addreſs in the Name of the Miniſtry of the Church of Scotland. I was moſt kindly entertained, and the King hath a great Affection for our Country and Kirk. After I had been ſeveral Times with his Majeſty, and he naming a particular Time to me to wait on him for his Diſpatches to England, and Letter to the City Miniſters; I began to ſpeak about Scotland, when he told me, he would reſerve a full Communing about that till his coming to England. I found his Majeſty moſt willing to reſtore our Kingdom to its ancient Privileges, and preſerve the ſettled Government of our Church, in both which I was bold expreſly to move, and had a very gracious ſatisfying Anſwer. The Engliſh Miniſters were much ſatisfied with the King's receiving of them. I kept much Company with the Miniſters that came over, and returned to England with them, and by Converſation I can make a probable Conjecture of the Tendency of Matters as to Religion in England. I have much to ſay on this Head, which I cannot write at preſent: I ſhall only ſay this, that for me to preſs Uniformity for Diſcipline and Government upon the King and others, I find would be a moſt diſguſtful Employment and ſucceſsleſs: For though the King could be induced to be for it, it were not in his Power to effectuate it, the two Houſes of Parliament and the Body of this Nation being againſt it. And if I may ſpeak what I know and can demonſtrate to you, 'tis already paſt remedying. I know very few or none who deſire it, much leſs appear for it. And whoever do report to you, or believe that there is a conſiderable Party in England, who have a Mind for Covenant-Uniformity, they are miſtaken. —— I ſhall preſent your Letter to his Majeſty, as ſoon as the Throng upon his coming to White-hall is over.

The two Houſes of Parliament and Body of the Nation againſt Preſbytery.

A ſevere Character of Mr. Sharp, given by Mr Douglas the rigid Preſbyterian.

Mr. Douglas in his Account of the Introduction of Prelacy writeth thus: I profeſs I did not ſuſpect Mr. Sharp in reference to Prelacy more than I did myſelf, no more than the Apoſtles did Judas before his Treachery was diſcovered: I did not ſuſpect him for that, more than I did ſuſpect him for taking the Tender, after he came out of the Tower ſo long before us. But ſince I find that has been his Truckling; and when he went over to Holland he had a Letter from a prime Nobleman to the King, ſignifying, that he was Epiſcopal in his Judgment. This was revealed to me after he was made a Biſhop. The firſt Thing that gave me a Diſlike at him was, when he was in Holland he wrote to me in Commendation of Hyde, an Enemy to our Nation and Preſbyterial Government. I durſt not as yet believe myſelf in this, having no more ſave his Commendation of Hyde; but it appeared afterwards that in Holland, he was a great Enemy to the Preſbyterian Intereſt, and when we wrote a favourable Letter for the Earl of Rothes, and with him a Letter to the King, he diſſuaded the Earl from delivering the Letter. When at London, he was enraged that we had written to the Miniſters of London. He dealt alſo treacherouſly with the Brethren who came from Ireland, in diſſuading their Addreſſes to the King. When he came to Scotland, he dealt earneſtly againſt all Addreſſes made to the Parliament againſt Prelacy. He dealt treacherouſly with the King, making him believe, that there were no conſiderable Perſons againſt Prelacy; but would have perſuaded the King, that all our Lives were in his Hand, and he might do what he pleaſed; and the Man never reſted, till he was brought himſelf to a Chair.

Proclamation againſt vitious and debauched and profane Perſons.

London by Chriſt. Barker and John Bill. One Large Sheet.

By the King. A Proclamation, againſt vitious, debauched, and profane Perſons.

Charles R.

Since it hath pleaſed the Divine Providence in ſo wonderful a Manner, and by Ways and Means no leſs miraculous, than thoſe by which he did heretofore preſerve and reſtore his own choſen People, to reſtore us and our good Subjects to each other, and to ſhew us a very hopeful Proſpect, if not to put us already in Poſſeſſion of that Peace, Happineſs, and Security with which this our Kingdom hath been heretofore bleſſed. It will become us all in our ſeveral Stations to acknowledge this tranſcendent Goodneſs of Almighty God, in ſo ſeaſonable a Conjuncture, with ſuch a Circumſpection, Integrity, and Reformation in our Lives, that we may not drive away that Mercy which ſo near approacheth us, by making ourſelves wholly unworthy of it. And in order hereunto, we think it high Time to ſhew our Diſlike of thoſe (againſt whom we have been ever enough offended, though we could not in this Manner declare it) who under Pretence of Affection to us and our Service, aſſume to themſelves the Liberty of reviling, threatening, and reproaching others, and as much as in them lies, endeavonr to ſtifle and divert their good Inclinations to our Service, and ſo to prevent that Reconciliation and Union of Hearts and Affections, which can only with God's Bleſſing make us rejoyce in each other, and keep our Enemies from rejoycing.

Againſt the High-Flyers, who under a Pretence of greater Loyalty, repreſent others as diſaffected.

Againſt the looſe and riotous Cavaliers, whoſe Loyalty conſiſted in the drinking of Healths and railing at thoſe who would not revel with them.

There are likewiſe another ſort of People, of whom we have heard much, and are ſufficiently aſhamed, who ſpend their Time in Taverns, Tipling Houſes, and Debauches, giving no other Evidence of their Affection to us, but in drinking our Health, and inveighing againſt all others, who are not of their own diſſolute Temper, and who in Truth have more diſcredited our Cauſe by the Licence of their Manners and Lives, than they could ever advance it by their Affection or Courage. We hope that this extraordinary Way of delivering us all from all we feared, and almoſt bringing us to all we can reaſonably hope, hath and will work upon the Hearts, even of thoſe Men, to that degree, that they will cordially renounce all that Licentiouſneſs, Profaneneſs, and Impiety with which they have been corrupted and endeavoured to corrupt others, and that they will hereafter become Examples of Sobriety and Virtue, and make it appear, that what is paſt was rather the Vice of the Time than of the Perſons, and ſo the fitter to be forgotten together.

A ſubſequent Proclamation directed this to be read in all Churches and Chapels in England and Wales. And a third Proclamation given Aug. 22. 1663. doth command each Miniſter to read the ſaid Proclamation once every Month, for the Space of ſix Months.

Complaining of the Licence and Corruption of the Times.

And becauſe the Fear of Puniſhment, or apprehenſion of our Diſpleaſure, may have Influence upon many, who will not be reſtrained by the Conſcience of their Duty, we do declare, that we will not exerciſe juſt Severity againſt any Malefactors ſooner, than againſt Men of diſſolute, debauched, and profane Lives, with what Parts ſoever they may be otherwiſe qualified and endowed: And we hope that all Perſons of Honour, or in Place and Authority, will ſo far aſſiſt us in diſcountenancing ſuch Men, that their Diſcretion and Shame will perſuade them to reform what their Conſcience would not, and that the Diſpleaſure of good Men towards them, may ſupply what the Laws have not, and it may be cannot well provide againſt; there being by the Licence and Corruption of the Times, and the depraved Nature of Men, many Enormities, Scandals, and Impieties in Practice and Manners, which Laws cannot well deſcribe, and conſequently not enough provide againſt, which may by the Example and Severity of virtuous Men be eaſily diſcountenanced, and by Degrees ſuppreſſed.

Againſt profane Curſing and Swearing, diſturbing of Miniſters, and deſpiſing the publick Worſhip of God.

However for the more effectual reforming theſe Men, who are a Diſcredit to the Nation, and unto any Cauſe they pretend to favour, and to wiſh well to: We require all Mayors, Sheriffs and Juſtices of Peace, to be very vigilant and ſtrict in the Diſcovery and Proſecution of all diſſolute and profane Perſons, and ſuch as blaſpheme the Name of God by prophane Swearing and Curſing, or revile or diſturb Miniſters, and deſpiſe the publick Worſhip of God, that being firſt bound to the good Behaviour, they may be further proceeded againſt, and expoſed to Shame in ſuch a Manner, as the Laws of the Land, and the juſt and neceſſary Rules of Government ſhall direct or permit.

Given at our Court at Whitehall, the thirtieth Day of May in the twelfth Year of our Reign.

Order of the Lords upon diſturbing Mr. Forde, Miniſter of Chipping-Norton Com' Oxon. in the Duty of his Church.

Journal of the Houſe of Peers.

Upon Information given to the Lords, that Mr. Beeſley and other inſolent Perſons came into the Church of Chipping-Norton in the County of Oxon; and when Mr. Stephen Forde, Miniſter of the ſaid Pariſh was going to exerciſe the Duty of his Place by Prayer and Preaching, they fell violently upon him, pulled him by the Neck and Throat, and by the Hair of the Head, and wounded him and pulled him out of the Church, calling him Rogue and Raſcal, and other opprobrious and odious Words without any Cauſe or Provocation of the ſaid Mr. Forde, and afterwards proudly and inſolently ſaid, let the Juſtices of the Peace relieve him, or do any thing herein for him at their Peril. Ordered by the Lords, that the Juſtices enquire and puniſh, &c.

THURSDAY May 31.

Concurrence of the Lords with the Commons, for a Day of Publick Thankſgiving on the 29th of May.

Journal of the Houſe of Peers, MS.

Die Jovis Maii 31. 1660.

A Meſſage from the Commons, that they, taking into ſerious Conſideration the great Revolution of Affairs, and the great Mercy in giving his Majeſty a happy and ſafe Arrival, have thought it their Duty to preſent an humble Petition to keep a ſolemn Day of Thankſgiving for the ſame, wherein they deſire their Lordſhip's Concurrence. Read and agreed to.

The King moved to paſs an Act of Parliament to that purpoſe.

Ordered by the Lords, that his Majeſty be moved, that he would be pleaſed, that an Act might be paſſed for the keeping of the twenty ninth Day of May, as an Holy-Day and Thankſgiving Day, in Commemoration of his Majeſty's happy Return into this Kingdom, and the Day of his Majeſty's Nativity.

Form of Prayer in the Houſe of Lords reſtored.

The Form of Prayers formerly uſed in this Houſe was read, and it is ordered, that the Form of Prayers now read ſhall be uſed in this Houſe: Provided that no Penalty, Prejudice, or Reflection ſhall be on any that are not preſent at Prayers.

Addreſs of Lords and Commons for a Day of Thankſgiving upon his Majeſty's Reſtitution to his Throne.

Addreſs of the Lords and Commons to the King's moſt Excellent Majeſty.

Humbly ſhew unto our Sovereign Lord, the Lords and Commons in Parliament Aſſembled:

That ſuch is the ineſtimable Bleſſing of your Majeſty's Reſtitution to your royal Throne (which at once hath put a Period to the Calamities of three Kingdoms, and to all the Sorrows and Sufferings of your Royal Perſon and Family) that we cannot but account it as an Entrance into that State of Joy and Happineſs which obligeth all your Subjects to render an everlaſting Tribute of Praiſe and Thankſgiving to Almighty God, for theſe glorious Mercies which he hath vouchſafed to his afflicted People.

And to the end that ſome ſolemn Time may be ſet apart for the publick Performance of this Duty, and that all your Majeſty's Subjects in England and Wales, and the Town of Berwick upon Tweed, who equally ſhare in the Joys of this Deliverance, may be united in theſe Devotions which are offered for it.

We humbly therefore beſeech your Majeſty, that your Majeſty will be pleaſed by your royal Proclamation, to ſet apart ſome ſuch Day for a publick Thankſgiving throughout all theſe your Majeſty's Dominions, as to your Majeſty's great Wiſdom ſhall ſeem meet.

Proceeding of the Commons in the Bill of Indemnity.

Excepting the King's Judges, and thoſe who were immediately concern'd in his Tryal and Execution.

The Houſe of Commons applyed themſelves to the perfecting of an Act of General Pardon, which was read twice this Day in the Houſe; thereby complying with that great Clemency and Indulgence of his Majeſty to his People, expreſſed in his moſt gracious Letter from Breda. They had in the firſt Propoſition of this Act, deſigned to except from Pardon ſeveral of the Judges of the late King, and others inſtrumental in the Perpetration of that horrid Treaſon; of which they had in Cuſtody eight Perſons, viz. Harriſon, Carew, Clement, and Jones of the Judges; Cook who was the Proſecutor, Hacker Captain of the Halberdeers, Colonel Quoted above, and Hugh Peters the Miniſter, a virulent Incendiary in the Action, who for a while had been ſculking up and down in Secret, and was at laſt taken in Southwark. There were others that had been ſeduced into that Treaſon, viz. Colonel Richard Ingoldſby, Francis Laſſels, and John Hutchinſon: But ſo much was ſaid in the Houſe in their Favours, that they were not made culpable with the reſt. As for Ingoldſby it was made to appear, that Oliver Cromwell without his Conſent, ſet his Hand and Seal to the Warrant for Execution of the King: Beſides that, by many Actions of his Loyalty ſince, and his Engagement in Sir George Booth's Buſineſs, and againſt Lambert, he had given evident Teſtimony of his Abhorrency of ſo foul a Crime. Laſſels had never been in the High Court of Juſtice, and but once at any Meeting with them, and at that Time he declar'd his Diſſent to their Proceedings: And Hutchinſon had been a very early Convert, and appear'd much againſt that execrable Oath of Abjuration of the King's Perſon and Poſterity, in that Part of the Parliament which ſate at the Time of General Monk's March into London.

Character of King Charles the Martyr.

The Character of that glorious martyred King CHARLES I. Being a brief Deſcription of his religious Reign, from his Coronation to his unhappy Death. Wherein is laid open, 1. His outward Actions. 2. His Piety. 3. His Zeal to God's Ordinances. 4. His Wiſdom. 5. His Juſtice. 6. His Mercy. 7. His Humility. 8. His Bounty. 9. His wonderful Patience. By *W. The State of the Clergy reſtored with the King.

The Life of Biſhop Sanderſon by Mr. Walton.

When the King was by our good God reſtored to us, and we to our known Laws and Liberties, and then a general Joy and Peace ſeem'd to breath thro' the three Nations; the ſuffering and ſequeſtred Clergy (who had like the Children of Iſrael, ſate long lamenting their ſad Condition, and hang'd their neglected Harps upon the Willows that grow by the Rivers of Babylon) were after many thoughtful Days and reſtleſs Nights, now freed from their Sequeſtration, reſtored to their Revenues, and to a Liberty to adore, praiſe, and pray to Almighty God publickly in ſuch Order as their Conſciences and Oaths had formerly obliged them. And the Reader will eaſily believe that Dr. Sanderſon and his ejected Family rejoyced to ſee this happy Day, and be of this Number. At this Time of the conformable Clergy's Deliverance from the Preſbyterian Severities, the Doctor ſaid to a Friend; "I look back on this ſtrange and happy "Turn of the late Times, with Amazement and Thankfulneſs, and cannot "but think the Preſbyterians ought to read their own Errors, by conſidering, "that by their own Rules the Independents have puniſhed and ſupplanted "them, as they did the conformable Clergy, who are now (ſo many as ſtill live) "reſtored to their lawful Rights; and as the Prophet David hath taught me, ſo "I ſay with a thankful Heart, Verily there is a God that judgeth the Earth, "and a Reward for the Righteous."

Mr. Baxter's Opinion of the preſent State of Religion.

The Life of Mr. Richard Baxter, Fol. Lib. I. Part II. p. 229.

When the King was received with the general Acclamations of his People, the Expectations of Men were various according to their ſeveral Intereſts and Inducements. Some plain and moderate epiſcopal Men thought of Reconciliation and Union with the Preſbyterians, yea, and a Reward to the Preſbyterians for bringing in the King. The more politick Men of the Dioceſan Way, underſtood that upon the King's Return, all the Laws that had been made in nineteen Years, viz. ſince his Father's departing from the Parliament, were void, and ſo that all ancient Power, and Honour, and Revenues would fall to them without any more ado, and that they had nothing more to do, but to keep the Miniſters and People in Quietneſs and Hopes, 'till Time ſhould fully do the Work. Some few Preſbyterians thought the King would favour them as well as others, for ſtirring up the Soldiers and City to reſtore him. In London, I found that Mr. Calamy, for his Age and political Underſtanding, and Intereſt in the Earl of Mancheſter, who kept Correſpondence with him in ſuch Matters, was much valued and followed by the London Miniſters, as their Guide; and many frequently met at his Houſe: Mr. Calamy took Dr. Reynolds along with him, as one whoſe Learning and Reputation would be of Uſe: And he took Mr. Aſh along with him, as one whoſe eminent Holineſs and Simplicity made him much loved and honoured by all: And he had been the Earl of Mancheſter's Chaplain in the Wars, and had concurred with him to bring in the King: Theſe were the leading Men that kept Correſpondence with the Lords, and had moſt Intereſt ſeemingly at Court, as having been moſt ſerviceable to them: To them joyned Dr. Bates, Dr. Manton, and moſt of the City Miniſters. But Dr. Seaman, and Mr. Jenkins, and ſome few more were a little eſtranged from them, and hardlier ſpoken of at Court. Mr. Calamy's Party (and all that brought in the King) were for Conſultations with their Friends at Court, for the preſerving of the Churches Intereſt. Dr. Seaman's Party meddled not with them, not as being unwilling, but becauſe the Court did give them no Encouragment.

Publick Intelligence, 4to.

The Lords received the Heads of a Proclamation from the Houſe of Commons, requiring all thoſe who ſate as Judges upon his late Majeſty to ſurrender themſelves by a certain Day, or otherwiſe to forfeit Life and Eſtate; unto which their Lordſhips returned, that they would ſend Anſwer by Meſſengers of their own.

One of the King's Judges taken, and by Miſtake let go.

Information given by Mr. Will. Lilly, that the late King's Executioner was Cornet Joyce.

A Report being made to the Houſe, that William Lilly had in Print declared, that he knew who was the King's Executioner, the Houſe thereupon ordered, that William Lilly be taken into Cuſtody by the Serjeant at Arms attending the Houſe, until he reveal who was the Perſon who committed the horrid Murder upon his late Majeſty. —— On Monday following Mr. William Lilly, the Aſtrologer, was brought in cuſtody by the Serjeant at Arms into the Lobby, but by reaſon of the great Affairs of the Houſe he could not be examined. —— On Wednesday the ſixth of June, a Committee being appointed to examine Mr. William Lilly, touching the Perſon who committed the horrid Murder upon his late Majeſty, report, that he had informed them, that one George Joyce, commonly known by the Name of Cornet Joyce, was the Perſon that performed that to be abhorred Action.

The Members take the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy.

Upon a Report made to the Houſe of Commons, that the Lord Steward of his Majeſty's Family was ready, when the Houſe would appoint, to tender the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy unto all the Members thereof according to the ancient Cuſtom.

Ordered, That all the Members of this Houſe do take the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy; and that the Lord Steward be deſired to obtain a Commiſſion to enable ſuch Members of the Houſe as ſhall therein be nominated, to adminiſter the ſaid Oaths to all ſuch as ſhall be admitted. —— On Monday the fourth of June, the Marquis of Ormond, Lord Steward of his Majeſty's Family, according to the Order of the Houſe on Saturday, attended in the Lobby, where a Table being placed, he tendered the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, the which the Members took before they went into the Houſe.

A Letter of Mr. James Sharp (afterwards Archbiſhop of St. Andrews) to the reverend Mr. Douglas, one of the chief Preſbyters at Edinburgh, dated from London, June 2, 1660. ——— Yeſterday the King went to the Houſe of Peers, paſſed ſome Bills, and emitted a Proclamation againſt Prophaneneſs. There is a Day of Thankſgiving appointed in England. I wiſh we may ſee ſome publick Teſtimony of our Senſe of the Mercy of the King's Return in Scotland. In the Houſe of Peers, upon a Motion made, that the Form of Prayer appointed in the Liturgy to be uſed in that Houſe be practiſed, 'tis done. The Service Book is not yet ſet up by both Houſes, but they will probably ſoon do it in all Churches. I ſhall next Week ſend a Copy of the Letter of the City Miniſters to the King in Holland. They reſent his Father's Murder, but not one Word of the Directory or Confeſſion of Faith. —— I was at a Meeting yeſterday at Sion College, with about ſixty Miniſters, where it was very ſolemnly debated, whether they ſhould petition his Majeſty and the two Houſes, that the Exerciſe of Religion by the Ordinance of Lords and Commons, according to the Confeſſion of Faith, and Directory for Worſhip, and Form of Church Government might be continued, until the Parliament ſhould provide otherwiſe. This after long Debate was referred to a Committee to be conſidered of againſt next Week. There is a Conference on Monday to be betwixt ſix Preſbyterians, and ſix moderate (as they call them) Epiſcopals; but I reſolve not to be at it. From any Obſervation I can make, I find the Preſbyterian Cauſe wholly given up and loſt. The influencing Men of the Preſbyterian Judgment are content with Epiſcopacy of Biſhop Uſher's Model, and a Liturgy ſomewhat corrected, with the Ceremonies of Surplice, Croſs in Baptiſm, Kneeling at the Communion, if they be not impoſed by a Canon ſub pænâ aut culpâ. And for the Aſſemblies Confeſſion, I am afraid they will yield it to be ſet to the Door, and that the Articles of the Church of England with ſome Amendments take Place. The moderate Epiſcopalians and Preſbyterians fear, that either the high epiſcopal Men be uppermoſt, or that the Eraſtians carry it from both. —— A knowing Miniſter told me this Day, that if a Synod ſhould be called by the Plurality of Incumbents, they would infallibly carry Epiſcopacy, &c.

Draught of a Proclamation againſt all Perſons acceſſary to the King's Murder.

At the Council Board Whitehall, June 4. 1660.

The Lord Chancellor did this Day preſent unto his Majeſty in Council, from the Lords and Commons in Parliament aſſembled, a Draught of a Proclamation againſt ſeveral Perſons who were acceſſary to the moſt horrid and execrable Murder of his Royal Father, of ever Bleſſed Memory, which was read and approved of at this Board, and ordered to be delivered to Mr. Secretary Nicholas to be engroſſed for his Majeſty's Signature, and to cauſe the ſame to be printed and publiſhed.

Council Book, MS.

By Order of Parliament the 4th of June, the Lord General was deſired to take an effectual Care, that the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy ſhould be adminiſtred to all the Officers and Soldiers of the Armies under his Command: And the Lord Chancellor to that end, was alſo deſired to iſſue forth Commiſſions under the Great Seal of England, to ſuch Perſons as the Lord General ſhould nominate and appoint, for adminiſtring the ſaid Oaths to the Officers and Soldiers accordingly. This Order was with all imaginable Care executed both by the General and the Chancellor. And to ſettle the Army ſo, as it might be moſt ſerviceable to his Majeſty, he removed ſeveral Colonels and other Officers; and placed divers of the loyal Nobility and Gentry in their Places.

Contin. of the Hiſtory of Great-Britain, Fol. p. 736.

This Day there came forth two Proclamations from his Majeſty, one concerning the Iriſh Rebels; the other for keeping of all Perſons, as well Miniſters as others, in their preſent Poſſeſſions, until the Houſes take further Order therein. Both which Proclamations are printed by his Majeſty's Printers.

Publick Intelligence, 4to.

Complaint of the Iriſh Rebels, who began to enter upon their forfeited Eſtates.

Upon Information that many Iriſh Rebels had in unuſual Numbers, reſorted from beyond the Seas to England and Ireland, and were ſo inſolent as to diſpoſſeſs many Soldiers and Adventurers in Ireland, who had poſſeſſion of their forfeited Eſtates, at the humble Requeſt of the Parliament, the King publiſhed a Proclamation, commanding all Iriſh Rebels (ſuch only excepted as by Articles had the Liberty of reſiding in his Majeſty's Dominions, and have not forfeited the ſame) that ſtill ſtay in, or ſhall reſort to England or Ireland, to be apprehended and proceeded againſt as Rebels and Traytors: And that the Adventurers and Soldiers ſhall not be diſturbed in their Poſſeſſions, until the King by Advice of Parliament ſhall take further Order, or they be legally evicted.

Proclamation for a Day of Thankſgiving on June 28.

By the King. A Proclamation for ſetting apart a ſolemn Day of Thankſgiving throughout the whole Kingdom, on the 28th Day of this Inſtant June.

London, by Chriſtopher Barker and John Bill, 1660. in two Sheets.

Whereas it hath pleaſed Almighty God to manifeſt his own immediate Goodneſs, Wiſdom and Power, in his late Providence towards Us and our Kingdoms. Wherein beyond all humane Means and Contrivances, as well of our Friends for us, as of our Adverſaries againſt us, he hath by the Interpoſition of his own Power and Wiſdom, after a long and tedious Exile, returned Us home to our People, and after a long and ſeemingly invincible Interruption, reſtored our People and Kingdoms to their ancient Rights, Liberties and Government: And all this brought about, by his moſt wiſe and over-ruling Hand, without any Effuſion of Blood: But inſtead thereof, filling the Hearts of Us and our People, as full of mutual Love, Confidence, and Joy, as became ſuch a Reſtitution of King and People, whereby the Mercy is not only advanced, but the Hopes of moſt happy Conſequences thereupon are increaſed. We cannot, upon the due Conſideration hereof, but with all Humility admire and adore the Mercy and Goodneſs of God, in theſe his ſignal Manifeſtations thereof; and we looked, and ſtill look upon them as Invitations from Heaven to Us and all our People, unto moſt entire Thankfulneſs for the ſame unto Almighty God, and publick and chearful Expreſſions thereof.

And whereas in the midſt of theſe our Conſiderations, both our Houſes of Parliament, by their Addreſs of the one and twentieth of May laſt, have humbly ſhewed unto Us, that ſuch is the ineſtimable Bleſſing of our Reſtitution to our Royal Throne, which at once hath put a Period to the Calamities of three Kingdoms, and to all the Sorrows and Sufferings of our Royal Perſon and Family, that they cannot but account it as an Entrance into the State of Joy and Happineſs, which obligeth all our Subjects to render an everlaſting Tribute of Praiſe and Thankſgiving to Almighty God, for theſe glorious Mercies to his afflicted People.

And to the End, ſome ſolemn Time may be ſet apart for the publick Performance of this Duty; and that all our Subjects in England and Wales, and the Town of Berwick upon Tweed, do equally ſhare in the Joys of this Deliverance, may be united in theſe Devotions, which are offered for it: They therefore humbly beſeech'd Us, that we would be pleaſed by our Royal Proclamation to ſet apart ſome Day, for a publick Thankſgiving throughout all theſe our Dominions. We willing that the juſt Tribute of Praiſe and Thankſgiving to our great Sovereign, the King of Heaven and Earth, be return'd by Us, and all our People, for theſe his Deliverances and Mercies; and that as his Mercy is of univerſal Concernment to Us and all our Subjects, ſo, to the End, that the publick Returns of our Praiſe to God, for the ſame, though it cannot equalize, yet it may in ſome meaſure anſwer the Amplitude of the Benefit. We do hereby publiſh and declare, that the 28th Day of this inſtant June, be ſet apart and obſerved as a Day of publick Thankſgiving to Almighty God, throughout our Kingdom of England, Dominion of Wales, and Town of Berwick, for this his great Mercy:

No Form of Publick Prayer and Thanksgiving yet appointed.

cy: And we do direct and appoint, that this our Proclamation be publickly read in all Churches and Chapels, on ſome Lord's Day, precedent thereunto, to the end that Notice be taken thereof, and due Thanks and Praiſe may, upon the ſaid twenty eighth Day of June, be offered up unto Almighty God by Us, and all our People, with one Heart; and that humble Supplications be poured out before him, for his continual Aſſiſtance and Improvement of this and all his Mercies, to the Honour of his great Name, and the Safety, Peace, and Benefit of all our Kingdoms and Dominions. We willing and ſtrictly commanding all Perſons within theſe our Dominions, with all Sobriety, Reverence, and Thankfulneſs, to ſet apart that Day to this Duty, and to obſerve the ſame as becomes ſo ſolemn an occaſion.

Given under our Sign Manual at our Court at Whitehall, the 5th Day of June, in the twelfth Year of our Reign, 1660.

Mr. John Carew one of the late King's Judges, who had once eſcaped, is again apprehended, and ordered to be brought up.

A Report being made this 5th of June to the Houſe of Commons, that Mr. John Carew, one of thoſe who ſate as Judges upon his late Majeſty, was apprehended in Devonſhire, and ſent Priſoner to Plymouth: Ordered, that the Sheriff of Devonſhire do bring in ſafe Cuſtody unto this Houſe Mr. John Carew, and that the Mayor of Plymouth do deliver him unto the Sheriff, to be brought up accordingly.

Publick Intell. by Order, 4to.

Major Harriſon to be excepted in the Act of Indemnity.

Reſolved, that Major General Harriſon, one of thoſe who ſate and pronounced Sentence of Death, in the pretended High Court of Juſtice, upon his late Majeſty of happy Memory, be exempted from the Benefit of the Act for a General Pardon and Oblivion.

Colonel Hutchinſon, confeſſing his Guilt, and imploring the Interceſſion of the Houſe, is ſet at Liberty.

The Houſe read a Letter from Colonel Hutchinſon, wherein he acknowledgeth his Guiltineſs in his being concerned in that horrid Murder committed on his Sovereign, humbly imploring the Interceſſion of the Houſe unto his Royal Majeſty in his behalf, and begging Liberty from his Impriſonment upon his Parole, the which the Houſe granted unto him accordingly.

The Bill of Indemnity depending long, the two Houſes lay hold of the Benefit of Pardon and Oblivion, and receive it from the King in a ſolemn Manner.

The Bill of Indemnity was the grand Buſineſs of both Houſes until it was finiſh'd: Nor could it be finiſh'd till after ſome conſiderable Time, and many large and ſerious Conſultations. In the mean Time, the two Houſes themſelves deſired to lay hold upon this Amneſty, in the Name of the whole Nobility and Commonalty of the Nation, which being eaſily granted by the King, the Ceremony was performed in the Banqueting-Houſe, where they waited upon his Majeſty to that End.

A Letter of Mr. Sharp, the Scots Commiſſioner at London, to Mr. Douglas at Edinburgh, dated June 5. 1660.

He prays from the Service-Book and Prelacy Lord deliver us.

Afraid the King ſhould follow the Advice of the two Houſes in Matters of Religion.

The Preſbyterians would rather depend on the King's Moderation and Condeſcenſions.

The Epiſcopalians driving furiouſly, and no hopes but in an Epiſcopacy of a new make.

Mr. Sharp deſpairs of preventing the Evil, and therefore deſires to return to his Charge in Scotland.

——— I pray the Lord keep them [the Miniſters at London] from the Service-Book and Prelacy. If the King ſhould be determined in Matters of Religion by the Advice of the two Houſes; 'tis feared that Covenanted Engagements ſhall not be much regarded. All ſober Men depend more upon the King's Moderation and Condeſcenſions, than what can be expected from others. The Epiſcopalians drive ſo furiouſly, that all Lovers of Religion are awakened to look about them, and to endeavour the ſtemming of that feared Impetuouſneſs of theſe Men: All that is hoped, is to bring them to ſome Moderation and Cloſure with an Epiſcopacy of a new make. You may eaſily judge how little any Endeavour of mine can ſignify to the preventing of this Evil; and therefore how deſirous I am to be taken off, and returned to my Charge. ——— Biſhop Wren preached laſt Sabbath in his Lawn Sleeves at Whitehall. Mr. Calamy and Dr. Reynolds are named Chaplains to his Majeſty. I hear Mr. Leightown is here in Town in private.

A Proclamation for all others who ſate in Judgment, or aſſiſted in that horrid and deteſtable Murder to ſurrender themſelves within fourteen Days.

By the King. A Proclamation to ſummon the Perſons herein named, who ſate, gave Judgment, or aſſiſted in the horrid and deteſtable Murder of his Majeſty's Royal Father of bleſſed Memory, to appear and render themſelves within fourteen Days after the publiſhing hereof, to the Speaker or Speakers of the Houſes of Peers or Commons, the Lord Mayor of the City of London, or the Sheriffs of the reſpective Counties in England and Wales, under Pain of being exempted from Pardon: And that no Perſon harbour or conceal them under Miſpriſion of Treaſon.

The Ministers of Edinburgh, in a Letter to Mr. Sharp, would have the King dealt with for preventing Episcopacy and the Liturgy.

Wodrow's History of the Church of Scotland.

A Letter of the Ministers of Edinburgh to their Commissioner at London, Mr. Sharp, dated June 7, 1660.

——— We suppose it is not a desperate Work, humbly to deal with his Majesty, (who is so excellent and moderate a Prince) for preventing of Episcopacy and the Liturgy, which by Experience they have found to bitter and prejudicial to themselves, and many others in England, and which, if they once be established, may very speedily revive the Complaints of godly Men. And we hope, that the great Pains of the learned Assembly of Divines (so heartily and unanimously approven in this Church, and so much owned in England) will not be so easily lost, but that godly honest Men will endeavour what they can to have those good Beginnings entertained, and yet further advanced, as Need requires.

—— Some leading Preſbyterians tell me, they muſt reſolve to cloſe in with what they call moderate Epiſcopacy, or elſe open Profanity will upon the one hand overwhelm them, or Eraſtianiſm (which may be the Deſign of ſome Stateſmen) on the other. I am often thinking of coming away; for my Stay here I ſee is to little Purpoſe. I clearly ſee the General will not ſtand by the Preſbyterians. Mr. Calamy is at a Stand, whether to accept of being King's Chaplain, and I think it will not be much preſſed upon him. The King has taken into his Council divers who were upon the Parliament Side, but none of them are againſt moderate Epiſcopacy, &c.

They told me, that it was his Majeſty's own Deſire, and that he would take it as an acceptable Furtherance of his Service. Whereupon I took an Oath (June 25, 1660.) from the Lord Chamberlain, as a houſhold Servant of his Majeſty's, to be true and faithful to him, and diſcover any Conſpiracy I ſhould know of, &c. And I received this Certificate from him,

Letter of Mr. Sharp to Mr. Douglas.

Recommending a Day of Thankſgiving in Scotland.

And making ſome Apology for himſelf, that he had done all he could for the Presbyterian Intereſt, tho' to little purpoſe.

Woodrow's Introduction, p. 36.

A Letter of Mr. Sharp, commiſſioned by the Miniſters of Scotland to ſollicite their Cauſe with King and Parliament, to Mr. Douglas at Edinburgh, dated June 12, 1660. Wherein he tells him, that ſince a Thankſgiving is ordered in England, they will conſider what is to be done in Scotland; that he has not yet got any Return from the King to their Letter, he is ſo throng. —— He adds, for my Part, whatever Conſtructions may be put on my Way here, I have a Teſtimony that my Endeavours have not been wanting for promoting the Presbyterian Intereſt according to the Covenant. I cannot ſay they have been ſignificant, as Matters are now ſtated, &c.

Dr. Gauden againſt the Covenant, ſo far as it relates to Epiſcopacy.

London, for Andrew Crook, 1660. 4to. p. 24.

ΑΝΑΛΥΣΙΣ. The Looſing of St. Peter's Bands. Setting forth the true Senſe and Solution of the COVENANT in point of CONSCIENCE ſo far as it relates to the Government of the Church by EPISCOPACY. By John Gauden, D. D.

To his honoured Friend Sir Lawrence Bromfield, Knight and Colonel in London.

It ſeems the Covenant had reconciled ſome to the Reſtauration of the King, but not of the Church.

Concluding.] Thus have I in two Days finiſhed my Anſwer and Solutions, as to the Bondage and Scruple of the Covenant in the Caſe of Epiſcopacy, wherein I have freely ſet down my moſt impartial Thoughts and Senſe of it, being willing to reconcile it to Reaſon and Religion, as far as may be, beyond which it can have no juſt Influence, Power, or Efficacy upon any Man's Conſcience: Nor would I have it ſo accurſed of God (though as yet it hath been no Procurer of any great Bleſſings to us in the Church) as to be made the Jeſuitick Wedge to keep us ever from cloſing with a right Epiſcopacy. Doubtleſs the Senſe of the Covenant hath lately quickened many Mens Conſciences in their Allegiance to the King, ſo as to bring him (as David) home with infinite Joy and Triumph: Nor do I deſpair, but it may be applied ſo (as in Truth and Juſtice it ought) for the Recovery and Reſtauration of the Church of England to ſuch an happy Order, Unity, and Government, as is moſt deſired by all good Biſhops, by all grave Presbyters, and by all gracious People, who have Zeal according to Knowledge, and are not like a Taylor's Gooſe, very heavy and hot, but blind and dark, apter to ſcorch and oppreſs, than to enlighten and direct themſelves or others.

A Letter of the reverend Mr. James Sharp at Westminster, to Mr. Douglas at Edinburgh, dated June 14, 1660.

Of Presbyterian Divines made Chaplains to the King, who should preach without using the Liturgy.

A Conference design'd between the Episcopal and Presbyterian Divines.

—— Mr. Calamy, Mr. Manton, and Dr. Reynolds are sworn Chaplains: Some say Mr. Baxter is to be admitted likewise; and when it is in their Course to officiate, they are not tied to the Liturgy, but others having performed that Service, they shall only preach, 'till they be clear to use it. The King hath ordered a Letter to Dr. Reynolds and Mr. Calamy, ordering them to nominate ten of themselves of their Judgment to meet in a Conference with twelve of the episcopal Party whom he will nominate.

This Petition was propos'd; but Mr. Sharp in his said Letter tells us, There hath been some Talk in the City of a Petition from the Ministers about Religion, but some leading Men not thinking it expedient, it was waved.
However Mr Crofton would publish a Copy of it.

Again aſſuring him, that he had done all he could for the Intereſt of his Country, and of the Covenant:

But he found no conſiderable Party in England for Preſbyterian Government.

And the ſober Party would yield to a Liturgy and moderate Epiſcopacy.

—— I have a Teſtimony that I have not been wanting to improve any Opportunity I had during theſe Tranſactions for the Intereſt of our Country and the Covenant. They will bear me up under the Conſtructions my Imployment at ſuch a tickliſh Juncture lays me open to. I truſt when I return to make it appear, I have purſued the publick Ends of Religion, as far as the Condition of Affairs would bear; and I have been byaſſed by no ſelfiſh Ends. —— I profeſs it ſtill to be my Opinion, that I know no conſiderable Number, and no Party in England that will join with you for ſettling Preſbyterian Government, and purſuing the Ends of the Covenant. —— The preſent Poſture of Affairs looks like a Ship founder'd with the Waves from all Corners, ſo that 'tis not known what Courſe will be ſteered. But diſcerning Men ſee, that the Gale is like to blow for the Prelatick Party, and thoſe who are ſober will yield to a Liturgy and moderate Epiſcopacy, which they phraſe to be effectual Preſbytery, and by this Salvo they think they guard againſt breach of Covenant. Mr. Baxter for an Agreement and Coalition of the two Parties, Epiſcopal and Preſbyterian.

Life of Mr. Rich. Baxter, Fol. Lib. I. Part II. p. 230.

By a Conference on both Sides.

When I was with the two Lords (Lord Brogbill and Lord Chamberlain) on this Occaſion (of being made Chaplain to his Majeſty) I told them what Conferences I had with ſeveral epiſcopal Men about the Terms of an Agreement or Coalition, and how much it concerned the Intereſt, both of the King and of Religion, that we might be ſo united, and what unhappy Conſequences elſe would follow, and how eaſie I thought an Agreement with moderate Men would be, and on what Terms Biſhop Uſher and I had agreed in a little Space. A little after the Lord Brogbill was pleaſed to come to me; and he told me, that he had told the King of the Buſineſs of a Conference for an Agreement, and that the King took it very well, and was reſolved to further it. And about the ſame Time the Earl of Mancheſter ſignified as much to Mr. Calamy: So that Mr. Calamy, Dr. Reynolds, Mr. Aſh, and myſelf went about it to the Earl of Mancheſter Lord Chamberlain, and after Conſultations of the Buſineſs with him, he determined

To this purpose the Presbyterian Divines wait on his Majesty,

And exercise Boldneſs with him.

Mr. Baxter is the chief Speaker.

[illegible] of a Day [illegible] to the King [illegible] Calamy (he [illegible] I, and I [illegible]. I think all the reſt, did leave the Nomination of the Perſons to be employed; adviſed, that they who were the King's Chaplains, of us might be called to the Conſultation, and that we might not ſeem to take ſo much upon us without others. So Dr. Wallis, Dr. Manton, and Dr. Spurſtow, &c. went with us to the King, who with the Lord Chancellour, and the Earl of St. Albans, &c. came to us in the Lord Chamberlain's Lodgings. We exerciſed more Boldneſs at firſt, than afterwards would have been born: When ſome of the reſt had congratulated his Majeſty's happy Reſtauration, and declared the large Hope which they had of a happy Union among all Diſſenters by his Means, &c. I preſumed to ſpeak to him of the Concernments of Religion, and how far we were from deſiring the Continuance of any Parties or Factions in the Church, and how much a happy Union would conduce to the good of the Land, and to his Majeſty's Satisfaction; and though there were turbulent and fanatick Perſons in his Dominions, yet that thoſe Miniſters and godly People, whoſe Peace we humbly craved of him, were no ſuch Perſons, but ſuch as longed after Concord, and were truly loyal to him, and deſired no more than to live under him a quiet and peaceable Life in all Godlineſs and Honeſty: And whereas there were Differences between them and their Brethren about ſome Ceremonies or Diſcipline of the Church, we humbly craved his Majeſty's Favour for the ending of thoſe Differences, it being eaſie for him to interpoſe, that ſo the People might not be deprived of their faithful Paſtors, nor ignorant, ſcandalous, unworthy ones obtruded on them! I preſumed to tell him, that the People that we ſpake for were ſuch as were contented with an Intereſt in Heaven, and the Liberty and Advantages of the Goſpel to promote it; and if this were taken from them, and they were deprived of their faithful Paſtors, and Liberty of worſhipping God, they would take themſelves as undone in this World, whatever Plenty elſe they ſhould enjoy: And the Hearts of his moſt faithful Subjects, who hoped for his Help, would even be broken: And that we doubted not but his Majeſty deſired to govern a People made happy by him, and not a broken-hearted People that took themſelves to be undone, by the Loſs of that which is dearer to them than all the Riches of the World! And I preſumed to tell him, that the late Uſurpers that were over us, ſo well underſtood their own Intereſt, that to promote it, they had found the Way of doing good, to be the moſt effectual Means; and had placed and encouraged many thouſand faithful Miniſters in the Church, even ſuch as deteſted their Uſurpation: And ſo far had they attained their Ends thereby, that it was the principal Means of their Intereſt in the People, and the good Opinion that any had conceived of them; and thoſe of them that had taken the contrary Courſe, had thereby broken themſelves to Pieces: Wherefore I humbly craved his Majeſty's Patience, that we might have the Freedom to requeſt of him, that as he was our lawful King, in whom all his People (ſave a few inconſiderable Perſons) were prepared to centre, as weary of their Diviſions, and glad of the ſatisfactory Means of Union in him; ſo he would be pleaſed to undertake this bleſſed Work of promoting their Holineſs and Concord; (for it was not Faction or Diſobedience which we deſired him to indulge): And that he would never ſuffer himſelf to be tempted to undo the Good which Cromwell or any other had done, becauſe they were Uſurpers that did it, or diſcountenance a faithful Miniſtry, becauſe his Enemies had ſet them up: But that he would rather out-go them in doing good, and oppoſing and rejecting the Ignorant and Ungodly of what Opinion or Party ſoever: For the People whoſe Cauſe we recommend to him, had their Eyes on him as the Officer of God, to defend them in the Poſſeſſion of the Helps of their Salvation; which if he were pleaſed to vouchſafe them, their Eſtates and Lives would chearfully be offered to his Service. And I humbly beſought him that he would never ſuffer his Subjects to be tempted to have favourable Thoughts of the late Uſurpers, by ſeeing the Vice indulged which they ſuppreſſed; or the godly Miniſters or People diſcountenanced whom they encouraged. For the common People are apt to judge of Governours by the Effects, even by the Good or Evil which they feel; and they will take him to be the beſt Governour who doth them moſt Good, and him to be the worſt that doth them moſt Hurt: And all his Enemies cannot teach him a more effectual Way to reſtore the Reputation and Honour of the Uſurpers, than to do worſe than they, and deſtroy the Good which they had done, that ſo he may go contrary to his Enemies; and ſo to force the People to cry out, We are undone in loſs of the Means of our Salvation: It being a hard Matter ever to bring the People to love and honour him, by whom they think they are undone, in Compariſon of thoſe that they think made them happy, though the one have a juſt Title to be their Governor, which the other hath not. And again I humbly craved, that no Miſrepreſentations might cauſe him to believe, that becauſe ſome Fanaticks have been factious and diſloyal, therefore the religious People in his Dominions, who are moſt careful of their Souls, are ſuch, though ſome of them may be diſſatisfy'd about ſome Forms and Ceremonies in God's Worſhip, which others uſe: And that none of them might go under ſo ill a Character with him, by Miſreports behind their Backs, till it were proved of them perſonally, or they had anſwered for themſelves: For we that better knew them than thoſe that were like to be their Accuſers, did confidently teſtify to his Majeſty on their Behalf, that they are reſolved Enemies of Sedition, Rebellion, Diſobedience, and Diviſions; which the World ſhall ſee, and their Adver-

For an happy Union,

And the ending of Differences about Ceremonies;

And not depriving the People of their faithful Paſtors, and the Liberty of worſhipping God;

Whereby they would take themſelves as undone in this World.

That even the late Uſurpers had placed and encouraged many thouſand faithful Miniſters;

And therefore our lawful King muſt not undo the good which Cromwell or any other had done;

But rather outgo them in doing good, defending his People in the Poſſeſſion of the Helps of their Salvation.

Otherwiſe they would be tempted to have more favourable Thoughts of the late Uſurpers.

And now to cry out, we are undone in the Loſs of the Means of our Salvation.

Some Fanaticks indeed had been factious and diſloyal;

But the religious People, tho' diſſatisfied about Forms and Ceremonies, were Enemies of Sedition, Rebellion, Diſobedience and Diviſions.

If his Majeſty's Wiſdom and Clemency do but remove the Occaſions of Scruple.

He craves Pardon for his Freedom and Plainneſs of Expreſſion.

He ſpeaks not for Preſbyterians or any Party, as ſuch, but for the religious Part of his Majeſty's Subjects.

And adviſes the Ways and Means of Union.

Adverſaries be convinc'd of, if his Majeſty's Wiſdom and Clemency do but remove thoſe Occaſions of Scruple in ſome Points of Diſcipline and Worſhip of God, which give Advantage to others to call all Diſſenters factious and diſobedient, how loyal and peaceable ſoever. And I humbly craved, that the Freedom and Plainneſs of theſe Expreſſions to his Majeſty might be pardoned, as being extracted by the preſent Neceſſity, and encouraged by our revived Hopes. I told him alſo, that it was not for Preſbyterians or any Party, as ſuch, that we were ſpeaking for, but for the religious Part of his Subjects, as ſuch, than whom no Prince on Earth had better, and how conſiderable a Part of the Kingdom he would find them to be: And of what great Advantage their Union would be to his Majeſty, to the People, and to the Biſhops themſelves, and how eaſily it might be procured, 1. By making only Things neceſſary to be the Terms of Union. 2. And by the true Exerciſe of Church Diſcipline againſt Sin. 3. And not caſting out the faithful Miniſters that muſt exerciſe it, nor obtruding unworthy Men upon the People. And how eaſy it was to avoid the violating of Mens ſolemn Vows and Covenants, without any Hurt to any others. And finally I requeſted, that we might but be heard ſpeak for our ſelves, when any Accuſations were brought againſt us.

Mr. Aſh ſpoke much to the ſame purpoſe.

Theſe with ſome other ſuch Things, I then ſpake, when ſome of my Brethren had ſpoken firſt. Mr. Simeon Aſh, alſo ſpake much to the ſame purpoſe, and of all our Deſires of his Majeſty's Aſſiſtance in our deſired Union.

The King gave a gracious Anſwer.

Which made old Mr. Aſh burſt out in Tears for Joy.

See June 24.

The King gave us not only a free Audience, but as gracious an Anſwer as we could expect: Profeſſing his Gladneſs to hear our Inclinations to Agreement, and his Reſolution to do his Part to bring us together; and that it muſt not be by bringing one Party over to the other, but by abating ſomewhat on both Sides, and meeting in the Midway; and that if it were not accompliſhed, it ſhould be long of our ſelves, and not of him: Nay, that he was reſolved to ſee it brought to paſs, and that he would draw us together himſelf: With ſome more to this purpoſe. Inſomuch that old Mr. Aſh burſt out into Tears with Joy, and could not forbear expreſſing what Gladneſs this Promiſe of his Majeſty had put into his Heart.

Three other of the King's Judges ſurrender themſelves.

A Meſſage from the King to the Commons, to haſten the Bill of Indemnity.

His Majeſty ſent a Meſſage in Writing to the Houſe, to deſire them to haſten the Bill of Pardon and Indemnity.

Contin. of the Hiſt. of Great Britain, Fol. p. 737.

This Meſſage in Writing was brought to the Houſe of Commons by Sir William Morrice to quicken their Debates about the Bill, as that which would beſt quiet the Minds of his Subjects.

His Majeſty's good and gracious Anſwer.

His Majeſty told them, he had too ample a Manifeſtation of their Affections and Duty towards him (the good Effects of which were notorious to the World) to make the leaſt Doubt of the Continuance and Improvement thereof, or in the leaſt Degree to diſlike what they had done, or to complain of what they had left undone: And that he knew well the Weight of thoſe Affairs which depended upon their Counſels, and the Time that muſt unavoidably be ſpent, where there muſt be naturally Difference of Opinions and Judgments, amongſt thoſe whoſe Deſires of the publick Peace and Safety were the ſame. And that neither he nor they muſt be over much troubled, if they found their good Intention and unwearied wearied Pains, taken to reduce thoſe good Intentions into real Acts for the Quiet and Security of the Nation, miſrepreſented, and miſinterpreted, by thoſe who are in Truth afflicted to ſee the publick Diſtractions, by God's Bleſſing, ſo near an End; and by others upon whoſe Weakneſs, Fears and Jealouſies, the Activity and Cunning of thoſe ill Men hath had too great an Influence.

That how wonderful and miraculous ſoever the great Harmony of Affections between him and his Subjects is, (it being ſo viſible to the World, that there ſcarce appears the View of any Cloud to overſhadow or diſturb it) yet it is not to be thought that God Almighty had wrought the Miracle to that Degree, that a Nation ſo miraculouſly divided for ſo many Years, would be ſo ſoon and entirely united in their Affections and Endeavours as were to be wiſhed; but that the evil Conſciences of many continued ſo awake for Miſchief, they would not be willing to take Reſt themſelves, or ſuffer others to take it: And that they all had too ſad Experience of the unhappy Effects of Fears and Jealouſies, how groundleſs and unreaſonable ſoever, not to think it very neceſſary to apply all timely and proper Remedies to thoſe Diſtempers, and to prevent the Inconveniencies and Miſchiefs which ſo naturally flow from thence: That he well foreſaw, that the great Violation which the Laws of the Land had for ſo many Years ſuſtained, had filled the Hearts of the People with a terrible Apprehenſion of Inſecurity to themſelves, if all they had ſaid and done ſhould be liable to be examined and puniſhed by thoſe Laws which had been ſo violated: And that nothing could eſtabliſh the Security of the King and People, but a full Proviſion that the returning to the Reverence and Obedience of the Law (which is good for all) ſhould not turn to the Ruin of any who were willing and fit to receive that Protection hereafter from the Law, and to pay that Subjection to it which were juſt and neceſſary; and therefore he ſaid he made a free Offer of a general Pardon in ſuch a manner as was expreſſed in his Declaration, and how ready and deſirous he was to make good the ſame, appeared by his Proclamation iſſued out upon and according to their Deſire: However, it was evident, that all he had offered or did offer, did not enough compoſe the Minds of his People; nor in their Opinions could their Security be provided for, 'till the Act of Indemnity and Oblivion were paſſed. He ſaid, he found great Induſtry uſed (by thoſe who did not wiſh that Peace to the Kingdom they ought to do) to perſuade his good Subjects that he had no Mind to make good his Promiſes, which he deſired to perform for his own Sake, as well as theirs. And that therefore he did very earneſtly recommend it to them, that all Expedition might be uſed in the paſſing that moſt neceſſary Act, whereby his good Subjects generally would be ſatisfied that their Security was in their own Hands, and depended upon their future Actions, and that they were free for all paſt, and ſo all the Endeavours of ill Men would be diſappointed, who would perſuade them not to do well now, becauſe they had done amiſs heretofore. And that he was the more engaged to this his Recommendation, becauſe upon the Reflection of their eminent Zeal and Affection for his Service, and hearty Concurrence with him in all Things deſired from them, Men were apt to perſuade others (though not believing it themſelves) that the paſſing of this Act was therefore not deſired, becauſe he did not enough preſs the Diſpatch of it; which he did deſire from his Heart, and was confident they would the ſooner do it, upon his earneſt Recommendation.

Hereupon the Houſe reſumed the Debate upon the Bill of Indemnity and Oblivion, and reſolved, that Charles Fleetwood, John Pyne, Major Creed, John Goodwyn, Richard Dean, Philp Nye, and Colonel Cobbet be of the twenty to be excepted out of the general Act of Pardon and Indemnity, to ſuffer ſuch Pains, Penalties, and Forfeitures, not extending to Life, as ſhould be inflicted on them, by an Act to be hereafter made to that Purpoſe.

Hulet and Peters to be excepted from Pardon.

This Meſſage did ſo much quicken their Debates, that they diſpatched the Bill in a very ſhort Time, and ſent it up to the Lords; and the Peoples Minds were much compoſed thereby, and the more for that his Majeſty by a Proclamation after it, did declare a kind of Impatience for the Delay thereof.

The Preferments of General Monk, with his Merits and Abilities.

Even in the Management of the Treaſury and Exchequer.

Dr. Skinner's Life of General Monk, 8vo. p. 313.

General Monk had been Maſter of his Majeſty's Horſe, and one of the Gentlemen of his Bed-Chamber. By the firſt he had a conſiderable Station in the Court, and the other gave him the conſtant Opportunity of Acceſs to his Majeſty's Perſon and Converſe. —— And becauſe in this preſent State of Things, nothing requir'd greater Care than the Management of his Majeſty's Exchequer, the General was choſen one of the Commiſſioners for the Treaſury. But that Office was ſome Time after intruſted in the Hands of a ſingle Perſon, the juſt and upright Earl of Southampton, after whoſe Death both the King and People were ſo perfectly ſatisfied with the General's Care and Faithfulneſs in that Truſt, that he was called to it again, and in which he continued to the Day of his Death. To this Employment he brought very conjenial Virtues, both by his unqueſtionable Integrity, and natural Frugality; ſo that he was a greater Huſband in the King's Expences, than in ſome of his own.

The King's Mandatory Letters to the Univerſity of Cambridge to confer upon theſe Perſons, Bernard Hales, Peter Gunning, Iſaac Barrow, John Barwick, John Aucher, William Chamberlain, the Degree of Doctors of Divinity, and create them ſuch within few Days after the Receipt of theſe our Letters, they promiſing to keep their Acts and other Exerciſes belonging to that Degree, within ſome convenient Time of the Year following: And becauſe through the long Interruption, which they ſuffered from the late unhappy Times, they may want ſome Things required by Statute to that Degree (though for their Time and Sufficiency we are enough aſſured) we hereby diſpenſe with all Irregularities whatſoever which may be objected againſt this their Proceeding. And further our Will and Pleaſure is, that whereas by the Diſturbance only of the late Times, they have been hindred from taking their Degrees, according to their ſeveral Seniorities, that therefore they being created Doctors, be alſo among thoſe of that Degree received to their ſeveral Seniorities accordingly, as if they had commenced each an ejected Fellow of St. Peter's College in Cambridge, *afterwards D. Tranſlation of the Life of Dr. John Barwick into Engliſh, 8vo. 1724.

In ſeveral of the following Mandates, this Clauſe is left out, and a very different are added, viz. without thoſe previous Uſages and Performances which are ordinarily required, &c. and without any ſubſequent Conditions upon which they ſhall not have Conveniency to attend, &c. Note of the Editor of the Latin and Tranſlator of the Engliſh Edition, Mr. Bedford.

These Perſons were the firſt of all that were regularly advanced to the Degree of Doctor at Cambridge, after the Senate of the Univerſity had been long ſince diſſolved by the Rebellion, all moſt dear Friends to one another. Every one of theſe immediately before they took their Degree, either performed the Exerciſe required by the Univerſity, or according to Cuſtom gave ſufficient Caution, that they would perform it within the Year; leſt they ſhould make an ill Precedent for others, who might afterwards abuſe the royal Favour to the Prejudice of the Univerſity. Indeed if all that were afterwards Candidates for that Degree had followed their Example, the Univerſity had not ſo much Reaſon to complain of her Sons ſeizing upon her Honours, whether they deſerv'd them or no.

It being the Cuſtom of the Univerſity, that whoever would qualify himſelf for a Doctor in Divinity's Degree, ſhould undertake ſcholaſtically to explain and determine ſome theological Queſtion in the publick Schools, Mr. Barwick for his Diſſertation on that Occaſion made Choice of the Theſis or Poſition following; Exomologeſin Primitivæ Eccleſiæ eſſe Diſciplinam piam, ejuſque reſtitutionem eſſe maxime optandam. That is, That the Method of impoſing Penance and reſtoring Penitents in the primitive Church was a godly Diſcipline, and that it is much to be wiſh'd it were reſtored. —— And this * Diſſertation of his having merited the Praiſe of his learned Auditors, who were the beſt Judges, I was not willing that even ſo ſmall a Remain of this excellent Perſon ſhould be loſt. Indeed it was chiefly for the ſake of this Piece, little as it is, that (being deſired by ſome of the moſt religious and moſt learned Governours of the Church to take Care to preſerve it) I reſolved to write the Author's Life in Latin, &c.

A Letter of the reverend Mr. James Sharp to his chief Correſondent at Edinburg, Mr. Douglas, dated from Weſtminſter, June 21, 1660. telling him, That the Courſe of Prelacy is carrying on without any Oppoſition; ſo that they that were for the Moderation thereof, apprehend they have loſt their Game. No Man knows what this over-driving will come to, the Parliament complain of his Majeſty's Moderation, and that he does not preſs the ſettling all ſicut ante. God only knows what Temptations and Tryals are abiding us. —— Our Taſk is to wait upon God, who hath done great Things we looked not for, and can make thoſe Mountains Plains.

Letter of Mr. Sharp to Mr. Douglas.

A Letter of the reverend Mr. James Sharp, Sollicitor for the Preſbyterians of Scotland, to his Friend the reverend Mr. Douglas at Edinburgh, dated June 23, 1660.

Complaining that all is wrong in Church Affairs:

And that Biſhops are already named for Ireland.

Dr. Bramhall.

—— All is wrong here as to Church Affairs. Epiſcopacy will be ſettled here to the Height, their Lands will be all reſtored. None of the Preſbyterian Way here oppoſe this, or do any thing but mourn in ſecret. We know not the Temper of this People to have any thing to do with them. —— All the Biſhops in Ireland are nominated. Dr. Bramble is Archbiſhop of Armagh, and they are to ſit down next Seſſions of Parliament.

Another Letter of Mr. Sharp.

Complaining of Petitions come up for Epiſcopacy and Liturgy.

And of great Liberty taken by Dr. Crofts in a late Sermon before the King.

As if God was wroth with him, for the Guilt he had contracted in Scotland, by favouring his Enemies the Preſbyterians.

Another of the ſame Hand, to the ſame Perſon, dated June 26, 1660.

—— Dr. Gauden hath written againſt the Covenant. Petitions come up from Counties for Epiſcopacy and Liturgy. The Lord's Anger is not turned away. The Generality of the People are doting after Prelacy and the Service-Book. Dr. Crofts preaching before the King the laſt Sabbath, ſaid, that for the Guilt he had contracted in Scotland, and the Injuries he was brought to do againſt the Church of England, God had defeated him at Worceſter, and purſued his Controverſy with a nine Year's Exile, and yet he would further purſue him, if he did cloſe with his Enemies; meaning thoſe of the Preſbyterian Perſuaſion, who are of the Privy-Council. The King expreſſed his Diſlike after Sermon, calling him a paſſionate Preacher. The epiſcopal Party take all Methods to ſtrengthen themſelves: They have reprinted Mr. Jenkins's Petition in the Tower, and Recantation Sermon. Some Miniſters of the City tell me, they are endeavouring to promote a Petition, that Religion may be ſettled with Moderation; yet for avoiding Offence, they will not take Notice of the Covenant or Preſbyterian Government.

Dugdale's Chron. Ser. ſub Anno 1660.

On this Day, June 23. Edward Atkins, Serjeant at Law, was made ſecond Baron in the Court of Exchequer, and Chriſtopher Turner, Serjeant at Law, third Baron in the ſame Court on the 7th of July following.

A third Letter of Mr. Sharp, dated June 28, 1660.

The very foreign Proteſtant Divines were writing for Epiſcopacy, and the Aſſembly in Charenton would give their Approbation of it.

—— I ſaw this Day a Letter from one in Paris, that ſome learned Proteſtants in France, and of the Profeſſors of Leyden, were writing for the Lawfulneſs of Epiſcopacy: And if the King would write to the Aſſembly in Charenton July next, there would be no Doubt of their approving his Purpoſe to ſettle Epiſcopacy in England.

Complaining that the Epiſcopal Men have the Wind of the Preſbyterians.

Woodrow's Introduction, p. 40.

Another Letter of the ſame Date, June 26, Mr. Sharp tells Mr. Douglas. —— The Preſbyterian Miniſters are now buſie to get Terms of Moderation from the Epiſcopalians. There are Diſcontents and Grumblings, but the epiſcopal Men have the Wind of them, and know how to make uſe of it. —— Dr. Reynold, Mr. Manton, and Baxter were this Day with the King. Mr. Calamy is ill of the Gout. Mr. Aſh tells me, they will write an Anſwer to yours. The King, after the General and Chamberlain had ſpoke to him of endeavouring Reconciliation betwixt epiſcopal Men and others, ſaid, He would make them agree. The calling of a Synod is put off, &c.

Nothing remaining for the Scots Preſbyterians, but Prayer and Patience.

The King with great Moderation and Sweetneſs, had deſired the Preſbyterian Divines to draw up in Writing the Lengths they could go, and would order the Prelates to draw up their Condeſcenſions, and ſo bring them to agree in Spite of all Oppoſition.

Mr. Calamy had acquainted him with the Proceedings, but he would not meddle, becauſe they were on a wrong Bottom, of moderate Epiſcopacy and reformed Liturgy.

Ibid.

Another Letter of Mr. Sharp, dated June 28, telling Mr. Douglas of Edinburgh. Yeſterday I aſked our Friends, honeſt Mr. Godfrey and Mr. Swinton, what they thought was fit for us to do at preſent: They anſwered, they ſaw nothing remaining, but Prayer and waiting on God. The other Day Mr. Calamy, Dr. Reynolds, Mr. Baxter, and Mr. Aſh had a Conference with the King, whoſe Moderation and Sweetneſs much ſatisfied them. It iſſued in this, That the King deſired them to draw up in Writing the Lengths they could go for meeting thoſe of the epiſcopal Way; and promiſed he would order the Prelates and their Adherents to draw their Condeſcenſions; and after he had ſeen both, he would bring them to an Accommodation, in ſpite of all who would oppoſe it. —— Mr. Calamy ſent to me Yeſterday, to tell me of their Proceedings; but I told him and others, I would not meddle in thoſe Matters; that their Accommodation, and falling into moderate Epiſcopacy and reformed Liturgy was deſtructive to the Settlement among us. Next Week they are to have Meetings on theſe Heads; but I ſee not through them, and expect no Good of them.

A Letter of the ſame Date, June 28, tells Mr. Douglas, no Good will follow on the Accommodation with the epiſcopal Party; for theſe who profeſs the Preſbyterian Way reſolve to admit moderate Epiſcopacy: And the managing this Buſineſs by Papers will undo them. The epiſcopal Men will catch at any Advantage they get by their Conceſſions, and after all reſolve to carry their own way, thoſe Motions about putting in Writing what they would deſire in point of Accommodation are but to gain Time, and prevent Petitionings, and ſmooth over Matters, 'till the epiſcopal Men are more ſtrengthened.

SUNDAY June 24.

Mr. Baxter's Account of the Preſbyterian Divines introduced to the King by the Earl of Mancheſter.

Life of Mr. Baxter, Fol. Lib. I. Part II.

Mr. Calamy, Dr. Reynolds, Dr. Wallis, Dr. Manton, Dr. Spurſtow. Mr. Baxter, and Mr. Aſh, as the chief Preſbyterian Divines, had by the Earl of Mancheſter been introduced to the King. —— And either at this Time or ſhortly after, the King required us to draw up and offer him ſuch Propoſals as we thought meet, in order to Agreement about Church Government; for that was the main Difference; if that were agreed, there would be little Danger of differing in the reſt: And he deſired us to ſet down the moſt we could yield to.

The main Difference about Church Government.

The Miniſters Excuſe.

His Majeſty's wiſe Anſwer.

We told him, firſt, that we were but a few Men, and had no Commiſſion from any of our Brethren to expreſs their Minds: And therefore deſired that his Majeſty would give us Leave to acquaint our Brethren in the Country with it, and take them with us. The King anſwered, that that would be too long, and make too much Noiſe, and therefore we ſhould do what we would ourſelves only, with ſuch of the City as we would take with us. And when we then profeſſed, that we preſumed not to give the Senſe of others, nor oblige them; and that what we did muſt ſignify but the Minds of ſo many Men as were preſent: He anſwered, that it ſhould ſignify no more; and that he did not intend to call an Aſſembly of the other Party, but would bring a few ſuch as he thought meet; and that if he thought good to adviſe with a few of each Side, for his own Satiſfaction, none had Cauſe to be offended at it.

Alſo we craved, that at the ſame Time when we offered our Conceſſions to the King, the Brethren on the other Side might bring in theirs, containing alſo the uttermoſt that they could abate and yield to us for Concord, that ſeeing both together, we might ſee what Probability of Succeſs we had. And the King promiſed that it ſhould be ſo.

The Conſults at Sion College, by the City Miniſters, and ſome out of the Country.

See Sunday July 1.

Hereupon we departed, and appointed to meet from Day to Day at Sion College, and to conſult there openly with any of our Brethen that would pleaſe to join with us, that none might ſay they were excluded. Some City Miniſters came among us, and ſome came not, and divers Country Miniſters who were in the City came alſo to us, as Dr. Worth (ſince a Biſhop in Ireland) Mr. Fullwood wood (since Archdeacon of Totneſs) &c. But Mr. Matthew Newcomen was moſt conſtant in aſſiſting us.

A Day of publick Joy and Thankſgiving to be obſerved at Heydelburg and thro' the Dominions of the Palatinate, for the happy Reſtoration of his Majeſty of Great-Britain.

Publick Intelligence, 4to.

Letters from Heydelberg intimate, that on Tueſday the 13th of July, a Day of Prayer and Thankſgiving will be kept in Heydelberg, Wormes, Frankendale, Heylbron, and through all his Electoral Highneſs's Dominions of the Palatinate, for the happy Reſtauration of his ſacred Majeſty of Great-Britain. In the great Church at Heydelberg will be a Sermon, the Text to be taken out of the Second Book of Samuel, the 19th Chapter, and 14, 15th Verſes, And he bowed the Heart of all the Men of Judah, even as the Heart of one Man, ſo that they ſent this Word unto the King, Return thou and all thy Servants. So the King returned and came to Jordan; and Judah came to Gilgal to go to meet the King, to conduct the King over Jordan. Before the Town-Houſe therein, there is erected a ſtately Fountain, adorned with all ſorts of Fruits and Flowers, from whence ſhall ſpring ſeveral ſorts of Wine; the reſt of the Day after the Sermon is to be ſpent in Feaſting and Jollity, with ſounding of Drums and Trumpets, and at Night many curious Fireworks are to be performed.

A Letter of Mr. Humphrey Auſtin to the reverend Dr. Coſins, Dean of Peterborough, in London, dated Peterborough, June 25, 1660.

Reverend Sir,

Sending up the Dean's Collection of the Church Leaſes, and a Collection of his Majeſty's Letters

He had preſerved all the Church Plate, except the Candleſticks.

Enquiries after the Copes delivered to the Lady Gerard.

Leaſe Book and Court Rolls had been delivered to the Committee for Sale of Dean and Chapters Lands.

According to my Promiſe, I have ſent you by Mr. Rowell your own Book of Collection of all Leaſes belonging to the Dean and Chapter; and with it a true Copy of the King's Majeſty's Letter. In which Book is plain to be underſtood, when every Leaſe commenced, and alſo their annual Rents. —— I have preſerved all the Plate except the Candleſticks. I make no Queſtion but your Worſhip knows where the Copes are (they being delivered by Mr. Rowell to my Lady Garret your Daughter) moſt of the other Ornaments are ſafe and kept private; and ſo are moſt of the Quire Books. The Leaſe-Book and all the Court-Rolls that were left unto me (and preſerved by my Wife in my Abſence, when the Chapter Houſe was broke open) were delivered into the Committee for Sale of Dean and Chapters Lands by Order of Parliament. I have a Note of all Things then delivered, which I hope (if Things go on) will be returned again to the Church, &c.

Caſe of Oliver St. John, Eſq; of Longthorp near Peterborough.

Printed at London, 1660.

The Caſe of Oliver Saint John, Eſq; concerning his Actions during the late Troubles. Written by himſelf. ——Wherein he has this Paſſage about ſaving the Fabrick of the Cathedral Church at Peterborough. —— As to my Embaſſy into Holland with Mr. Strickland, I had no Advantage by it. The Plate, Furniture, Beds, and other Things claimed formerly by Ambaſſadors were by us returned to the Wardrobe. The States at our Farewell as a Gratuity promiſed to return to each of us here in England a thouſand Pounds in Gold, which I refuſed. All the Reward of that Embaſſy was, that whereas the Minſter of Peterborough, being an ancient and goodly Fabrick, was propounded to be ſold and demoliſhed, I begg'd it to be granted to the Citizens of Peterborough, who at that preſent and ever ſince have made uſe of it.

Wherein he gives Account of his ſaving the noble Fabrick of that Church.

An Act concerning the Minſter in Peterborough.

There is a Report that the ſaving of the Minſter was really owing to a Competition for it between Oliver Cromwell and Oliver St. John, both ſolliciting for that Fabrick as a Reward of their publick Services And that when St. John found that Cromwell would be too hard for him, he ſet on the Town to petition for the ſtanding Uſe of it; and ſo in Cromwell*'s Abſence got the Matter of the Petition to be paſs'd into an Ordinance: For which good Office he obtain'd the Chapel of* St. Mary adjoining to the Minſter.

Hiſtory of the Church of Peterborough by Mr. Gunton and Dr. Patrick, Fol. p. 113.

Be it Enacted by the Parliament now aſſembled, and it is Enacted by Authority of the ſame, that the great Church called the Minster, within the City and Borough of Peterborough, and the Church-yard thereunto belonging, ſhall be employed and made uſe of by the Inhabitants of the ſaid City and Borough in all Time to come for the publick Worſhip and Service of God, and for a Work-houſe to employ the poorer ſort of People in Manufactures, the ſaid Inhabitants at their own Coſts and Charges repairing and maintaining the ſame.

London, by John Bill and Chriſtopher Barker, in two Sheets, 1660.

CHARLES, R.

Whereas John Milton, late of Weſtminſter in the County of Middleſex, hath publiſhed in Print two ſeveral Books, the one intituled, Johannis Miltoni Angli pro Populo Anglicano Defenſio, contra Claudii Anonymi alias Salmaſii Defenſionem Regiam. And the other in Anſwer to a Book, intituled, The Pourtraicture of his ſacred Majeſty in his Solitude and Sufferings. In both which are contained ſundry treaſonable Paſſages againſt us and our Government, and moſt impious Endeavours to juſtify the horrid and unmatchable Murder of our late dear Father of glorious Memory.

The Authors had fled or did abſcond.

And whereas J. Goodwin, late of Coleman-ſtreet, London, Clerk, hath alſo publiſhed in Print a Book intituled, The Obſtructors of Juſtice, written in Defence of the Murder of his late Majeſty. And whereas the ſaid John Milton and John Goodwin are ſo fled or ſo obſcure themſelves, that no Endeavours uſed for their Apprehenſion can take Effect, whereby they might be brought to legal Tryal, and deſervedly receive condign Puniſhment for their Treaſons and Offences.

The Books to be delivered up to the next Magiſtrate.

Now to the end that our good Subjects may not be corrupted in their Judgments, with ſuch wicked and traiterous Principles, as are diſperſed and ſcattered throughout the before mentioned Books, we upon the Motion of the Commons in Parliament now Aſſembled, do hereby ſtraitly charge and command all and every Perſon and Perſons whatſoever, who live in any City, Borough, or Town incorporate, within this our Kingdom of England, the Dominion of Wales, and the Town of Berwick upon Tweed, in whoſe Hands any of thoſe books are, or hereafter ſhall be, that they, upon Pain of our high Diſpleaſure, and the Conſequence thereof, do forthwith upon Publication of this our Command, or within ten Days immediately following, deliver or cauſe the ſame to be delivered to the Mayor, Bayliffs, or other chief Officer or Magiſtrate, in any of the ſaid Cities, Boroughs or Towns incorporate, where ſuch Perſon or Perſons ſo live; or if living out of any City, Borough, or Town incorporate, then to the next Juſtice of Peace adjoining to his or their Dwelling or Place of Abode; or if living in either of our Univerſities, then to the Vice-Chancellor of that Univerſity where he or they do reſide.

Or the Magiſtrates to ſeize all Copies of them.

And in default of ſuch voluntary Delivery, which we do expect in Obſervance of our ſaid Command, that then and after the Time before limited expired, the ſaid chief Magiſtrate of all and every the ſaid Cities, Boroughs, &c. the Juſtices of the Peace in their ſeveral Counties, and the Vice-Chancellors of our ſaid Univerſities reſpectively, are hereby commanded to ſeize and take all and every the Books aforeſaid, in whoſe Hands or Poſſeſſion ſoever they ſhall be found, and certifie the Names of the Offenders unto our Privy-Council.

To be delivered to the Sheriffs and burnt by them at the next Aſſizes.

And we do hereby alſo give ſpecial Charge and Command to the ſaid chief Magiſtrates, Juſtices of the Peace, and Vice-Chancellors reſpectively, that they cauſe the ſaid Books which ſhall be ſo brought unto any of their Hands, or ſeized or taken as aforeſaid, by Virtue of this our Proclamation, to be delivered unto the reſpective Sheriffs of thoſe Counties where they reſpectively live, the firſt or next Aſſizes that ſhall hereafter happen. And the ſaid Sheriffs are hereby alſo required, in Times of holding ſuch Aſſizes, to cauſe the ſame to be publickly burnt by the Hand of the common Hangman.

And that no Person presume to print the same.

And we do further strictly charge and command, that no Man hereafter presume to print, vend, sell, or disperse any the foresaid Books, upon Pain of our heavy Displeasure, and of such further Punishment, as for their Presumption in that behalf, may any way be inflicted upon them by the Laws of this Realm.

M. John Durel his View of the Government and Worship of Reformed Churches, 1662. 4to. p. 18.

A Letter giving Testimony of the foreign Reformed Churches approving the Settlement of the Church of England, sent from a Man of great Worth and Fame amongst them, the learned and eloquent Monsieur Martel, Minister in the Church of Mont-Alban, and Divinity Reader in the University, which I received from him about a Year ago, wherein after he had testified his Joy, for the most happy Restauration of his Majesty, being sollicitous also for our Church, hath these very Words, Miramur autem si, quod fertur, utique reperiantur in Anglia, qui prorsus abhorreant ab omni exemplari Liturgiæ formâ, quæ una sit & eadem apud omnes in eodem regno. Nobis sanè nullibi par est illius usum abjicere quæ à Calvino fuit adornata, &c. which I translate thus, I wonder to hear that some are found in England, that are altogether averse from any set Form of Liturgy to be observed generally one and the same in all the Kingdom. Among us it is no where permitted to reject the Use of that Liturgy which was made by Calvin, &c.

A Sermon Preached before the KING at Whitehall, on the 28th of June 1660. Being the Day of solemn Thanksgiving for the happy Return of his Majesty. By GILBERT SHELDON, D. D. Published by his Majesty's Command.

Works of Bp. Reynolds, Fol. p. 1010. Sermon XXII.

Divine Efficacy without humane Power. Opened in a Sermon preached at St. Margaret's Church in Westminster, before the Right Honourable the House of COMMONS June 28. 1660. Being the Day of solemn Thanksgiving for the happy Return of the KING'S MAJESTY. By Edward Reynolds, D. D.

Zechariah iv. 6. Then he answered and spake unto me, saying, This is the Word of the Lord unto Zerubbabel, saying, Not by Might, nor by Power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts.

The Church suffering in the late miserable Confusions.

——— The Church of God amongst us hath in our late miserable and licentious Confusions, suffered great Dilapidations in the Holy Truths, and in the Unity and Peace thereof. I shall not pollute the Solemnity of this Day's Joy, with giving you in (which is hardly possible) a Catalogue of them. Unto you, right honourable, and the other Orders of the Kingdom, it belongeth to be the Repairers of our Breaches, and the Restorers of Paths to dwell in. Do this as it ought to be done, and certainly there will be nothing more conducent to the settling of our Tranquillity, to the establishing of Government, to the Re-uniting of the shattered and divided Hearts of the People, to the Edification of the Church, which it infinitely more concerneth all wise and good Men to look after, than any single, domestical, or separated Interest.

Good Character of the King.

Concluding.] And now that the Lord hath brought these Kingdoms upon the Basis of their ancient and fundamental Constitution, and hath restored into your Bosoms a Prince of the greatest Sincerity and Meekness of Spirit (one of the best Tempers in the World for Government) that ever swayed these Scepters; whom he hath trained up like David in a School of Affliction to sit upon a Throne, and fitted by a Crown of Thorns to wear a royal Diadem; and by the bitter Cup of his own Sufferings, to provide against the Sufferings, and to heal the Wounds of his poor exhausted People.

What remaineth but these two Things, 1. To fill our Hearts and Mouths with the Praises of God for these divinely contrived Mercies, without the Effusion of one Drop of Blood, beyond the View of humane Council to have effected; to ascribe all to the Spirit and Grace of God, Not unto us, Not unto us, but unto thy Name give the Glory. To bless him for this first fundamental Step to Settlement, without which we should ever have been in Danger of Flames and Blood. To bless the Lord for inclining the Heart of his Majesty, to dedicate his Government with so religious a publick Testimony against Prophaneness, than which there is nothing which doth more loudly call upon you to second the Zeal of his Majesty in. To bless the Lord for that Christian Meekness of his Majesty, in anticipating and preventing the very Petitions of his People for Pardon, and hastening the Means of their Security therein. To bless the Lord for his Majesty's Firmness in and zealous Care of the Protestant Religion, and notwithstanding all Temptations which would have drawn him from it. To bless the Lord for his tender Indulgence towards Men of sober, peaceable, and pious Affections, who cannot in every thing come up to the Judgment, or Practice of other of their Brethren. To bless the Lord for his Christian Prudence and healing Moderation; in endeavouring such a fraternal Condescension amongst Brethren, as may bury all past Animosities, prevent all further Distempers, and reduce Things unto an equal and amicable Temperament.

His Zeal against Prophaneness.

His Christian Meekness.

His Firmness in the Protestant Religion.

His Indulgence, Prudence and Moderation.

2. To conſider how to uſe theſe Mercies unto the Glory of God that gave them, and to the good of the whole Body, and not the particular divided Intereſt of any one Party alone. It is a diſtinct Virtue, as the Hiſtorian tells us, to get Victories, and to uſe them. And ſo likewiſe it is to receive Mercies, and to improve them.

The Uſe and Improvement of theſe great Mercies.

Conſider, I beſeech you, what it is which the Lord calls for at your Hands in ſuch a Time as this. Whether after ſuch Earthquakes and Concuſſions, ſuch Afflictions and Temptations, ſuch little leſs than miraculous Viciſſitudes of Divine Providence, which we have ſeen, after the Effuſion of ſo many thouſand Mens Blood, after the Expence of ſo many Millions of Treaſure, whether he doth not juſtly expect, that now you ſhould be more zealous for his Glory, more tender of his Church, and the Souls of Men therein, more ſevere againſt all Impiety and Prophaneneſs; more careful of the Power of Godlineſs, and the powerful Preachers and Preaching thereof, and Purity of Divine Ordinances; more active and ſollicitous to cloſe up Breaches, to remove Offences; and by the moſt ſatisfactory Proviſions that may be, to prevent the Danger of any further Diſtempers, than ever any Parliaments have done before you. That it may be recorded amongſt the Memorials of this Nation, as was of Joſiah, like unto this King and this Parliament (who have been ſo obliged with ſuch a Series of Mercies and of Wonders) that there was no King nor Parliament before them that turned to the Lord with all their Heart, and with all their Soul, and with all their Might, according to all the Law of God. This ſhall be written for the Generation to come; and the People that ſhall be created, ſhall praiſe the Lord.

—— I preſent this Sermon to your Lordſhip, not for any Confidence I have of the Worth of it (for I know my own Size well enough) but to account with your Lordſhip for that Duty I owe you as your Curate of Souls. I have this then to add to the greatning of your Joy in the Day of Recompences, that as I have by the Grace of God, through all the Intrigues of the late Julian Days, faithfully kept the depoſitum down to theſe very Times of the Reſtitution of all Things; ſo was it the good Pleaſure of God to pitch upon that little Flock, for ſuch Sacrifices as were ready to be offered up for the Teſtimony of a good Conſcience.

My Lord, The Inſolence of this Addreſs will hereafter receive an Alloy, even in your Lordſhip's own Judgment, when you ſhall be inform'd of your Lordſhip's more individual Concernments upon this Author, who is my Lord, ——— It was impoſſible to live without our King, but as Slaves live, that is, ſuch as are civilly dead, and Perſons condemn'd to Metals. We lived to the Luſts and Inſolencies of others, but not at all to ourſelves, to our own civil or religious Comforts. But now our Joys are mere and unmix'd: For that we may do our Duty and have our Reward at once. God hath ſent your Majeſty among us, that we may feel the Pleaſures of Obedience, and reap the Fruits of that Government which God loves and uſes, which he hath conſtituted and adorned, which he hath reſtored to us by a Conjugation of Miracles, by the Work of his Hand and the Light of his Countenance.

Epiſt. Ded. to the King.

Epiſt. Ded. To the King's moſt excellent Majeſty.

The Loyalty of the Preſbyterians.

The Wandrings of the King from Place to Place.

Beyond the Flittings of King David.

There was a Contention (moſt illuſtrious Sovereign) amongſt the Tribes of Iſrael, who ſhould make greateſt Haſte to bring home David the King, 2 Sam. xix. 9, 10. Such a Strife hath been in your Land of late concerning your gracious Majeſty. —— We have not been wanting in our Prayers for this. The Violence indeed of former Innovations drove ſome from their Affection to Epiſcopacy; and the Neceſſity of later Times inclined them to the Government of other Churches reformed: But neither of theſe hath, nor ſhall any thing elſe ever ſtir up in them any diſloyal Thoughts towards your Majeſty. —— Many were David's Flittings from Place to Place when he was hunted by Saul. —— More frequent and ſtrange have your Majeſty's Flittings been, and moſt marvellous your Deliverances, from the Lord Hopton's Armies in the Scillies, thence to the Hague, after into France, a Voyage then you had to the Iſle of Jerſey, afterwards to Breda, then into Scotland, where the Ceremonies of your Coronation were performed, and your Birth-day celebrated. You marched then through England to Worceſter, never to be forgotten Worceſter for your Majeſty's manifold and miraculous Preſervations there. —— You went into France, thence into Germany and Flanders, and Spain; in all theſe and all other your removings, you had many multiplied Deliverances. —— In the Numbers of Dangers and Years of Suffering you have ſurmounted David, and in one Thing more, which muſt for ever be recorded, to the Glory of God, your own Honour and the Comfort of your good Subjects. —— You were with ſpecious, ſubtle, deceived and deceiving Chriſtians, who made it their grand Deſign to entangle you in the Matters of your God, but moſt gracious hath the Lord been to your Majeſty and to your People, who pulled you out of the Net which they laid privily for you. Your Dangers were in a ſtrange Land, in the Days of your Youth, and in Seaſons when you were otherwiſe ſurrounded with innumerable Difficulties, Inconveniences, and Neceſſities; but bleſſed be the Lord to all Generations, who conſidered your Trouble, and hath known your Soul in Adverſity, and did not ſhut you up into the Hands of your Enemies, &c.

The King's Stedfaſtneſs in Religion amidſt great Temptations.

Commending to his Majeſty the Propagation of the Goſpel in America.

I humbly beg leave to commend another Mercy to your Majeſty, a Mercy to your Subjects in America, and the Indians there, in promoting and encouraging the former to the Converſion of the latter to Chriſtianity, &c. O let your Majeſty's Face ſhine upon them and their Endeavours, and the Face of God will ſhine upon you and your Ways, &c.

There was no Beauty in the Holy Temple, 'twas converted into a Den of Thieves, nay, which is worse, if possible, into a Stable for Horses. —— Rents and Schisms crept into the Church; every Pulpit hung with a blew Apron; not a Cobler but was an Enthusiast, and durst challenge St. Paul himself (were he upon Earth) to pray by the Spirit. —— These Things (beyond all Controversy) had never dropt from the Pen of so pious, learned, and reverend a Bishop, had not his Conscience and the Truth of the Matter guided his Quill: In all which Treatise nothing is to be found of Virulency, all Things being couched with so much Moderation, Meekness, and Christianity, as may well become so divine a Christian, and so christianiz'd a Divine; whose Method is all along sweet and pleasant, Sentence pithy and weighty, Arguments solid and irrefragable, &c. Subscribed J. Mr. Baxter's Account of the Meetings of the Presbyterian Divines at* Sion-College.

Life of Mr. Baxter written by himſelf, Fol.

[In the ſeveral Meetings of the Preſbyterian Divines in Sion College, ſays Mr. Baxter] In theſe Debates we found the great Inconvenience of too many Actors (though there cannot be too many Conſenters to what is well done) for that which ſeemed the moſt convenient Expreſſion to one, ſeemed inconvenient to another, and that we that all agreed in Matter, had much ado to agree in Words. But after two or three Weeks Time, we drew up the following Paper of Propoſals, which with Archbiſhop Uſher's Form of Government (called his Reduction, &c.) we ſhould offer to the King.

The chief Pen-men of the Papers there drawn up.

Mr. Calamy drew up moſt with Dr. Reynolds; Dr. Reynolds and Dr. Worth drew up that which is againſt the Ceremonies. I only prevailed with them to premiſe the four firſt Particulars, for the countenancing Godlineſs, the Miniſtry, perſonal Profeſſion, and the Lord's Day: They were backward, becauſe they were not the Points in Controverſy, but yielded at laſt on the Reaſons offered them. About Diſcipline, we deſignedly adher'd to Biſhop Uſher's Model, without a Word of Alteration; that ſo they might have leſs to ſay againſt our Offers as being our own; and that the World might ſee that it was Epiſcopacy itſelf which they refuſed; and that they contended againſt the Archbiſhop as well as againſt us; and that we pleaded not at all with them for Preſbytery, unleſs a moderate Epiſcopacy be Preſbytery: Yet was there a Faction that called this Offer of Biſhop Uſher's Epiſcopacy by the Name of the Preſbyterians impudent Expectations. I alſo prevailed with our Brethren to offer an Abſtract of our larger Papers, leſt the Reading of the larger ſhould ſeem tedious to the King. Which Abſtract verbatim, as followeth, at their Deſire I drew up, and have hereafter adjoined.

They gloried much in Archbiſhop Uſher*'s Model, to which the true old Preſbyterians paid no Regard, in the Extirpation of Epiſcopacy Root and Branch.*

The firſt Addreſs and Propoſals, as drawn up by Mr. Baxter.

The firſt Addreſs and Propoſals of the Miniſters.

May it pleaſe your moſt excellent Majeſty,

Commending his Majeſty for his good Endeavours to compoſe the Differences and heal the Breaches in the Church.

And praying he may be the Inſtrument of ſo happy a Work.

The Union of Hearts in Religion.

We your Majeſty's moſt loyal Subjects cannot but acknowledge it as a very great Mercy of God, that immediately after your ſo wonderful and peaceable Reſtoration unto your Throne and Government (for which we bleſs his Name) he hath ſtirred up your royal Heart, as to a zealous Teſtimony againſt all Profaneneſs in the People, ſo to endeavour an happy compoſing of the Differences, and healing of the ſad Breaches which are in the Church. And we ſhall, according to our bounden Duty, become humble Suitors at the Throne of Grace, that the God of Peace, who hath put ſuch a Thing as this into your Majeſty's Heart, will by his heavenly Wiſdom and holy Spirit aſſiſt you therein, and bring your Reſolutions unto ſo perfect an Effect and Iſſue, that all the good People of theſe Kingdoms may have abundant Cauſe to riſe up and bleſs you, and to bleſs God who hath delighted in you to make you his Inſtrument in ſo happy a Work. That as your glorious Progenitor Henry VII. was happy in uniting the Houſes of York and Lancaſter; and your Grandfather King James of bleſſed Memory, in uniting the Kingdoms of England and Scotland, ſo this Honour may be reſerved for your Majeſty as a radiant Jewel in your Crown, that by your princely Wiſdom and chriſtian Moderation, the Hearts of all your People may be united, and the unhappy Differences and Miſunderſtandings amongſt Brethren in Matters eccleſiaſtical ſo compoſed, that the Lord may be one, and his Name one in the midſt of your Dominions.

They declare a perfect Agreement between their Brethren and them, in the Truth and Subſtance of Doctrine and Worſhip.

What Alterations they deſire.

In an humble Conformity to this your Majeſty's chriſtian Deſign, we taking it for granted that there is a firm Agreement between our Brethren and us in the Doctrinal Truths of the reformed Religion, and in the ſubſtantial Parts of divine Worſhip, and that the Differences are only in ſome various Conceptions about the ancient Form of Church Government, and ſome Particulars about Liturgy and Ceremonies, do in all humble Obedience to your Majeſty repreſent, that in as much as the ultimate End of Church-Government and Miniſtry is, that Holineſs of Life and Salvation of Souls may be effectually promoted; we humbly deſire in the firſt Place, that we may be ſecured of thoſe Things in practice, of which we ſeem to be agreed in Principles, &c.

In Church Government.

Againſt Hierarchy or Prelacy, not againſt the ancient primitive Preſidency.

I. For Church Goverment. That although upon juſt Reaſons we do diſſent from that eccleſiaſtical Hierarchy or Prelacy diſclaimed in the Covenant, as it was ſtated and exerciſed in theſe Kingdoms; yet we do not, nor ever did renounce the true ancient and primitive Preſidency, as it was ballanced and managed by a due Commixtion of Preſbyters therewith, as a fit Means to avoid Corruptions, Partiality, Tyranny and other Evils which may be incident to the Adminiſtration of one ſingle Perſon, &c.

In the Liturgy.

A Form of publick Worſhip lawful;
But the Liturgy was too tedious, and too rigorouſly impoſed, and no room for the Gifts of Prayer and Exhortation.

II. Concerning the Liturgy. We are ſatisfied in our Judgments concerning the Lawfulneſs of a Liturgy, or Form of publick Worſhip; provided that it be for the Matter agreeable to the Word of God, and fitly ſuited to the Nature of the ſeveral Ordinances, and the Neceſſity of the Church; neither too tedious in the whole, nor compoſed of too ſhort Prayers, unmeet Repetitions or Reſponſals, nor too diſſonant from the Liturgies of other Reformed Churches; nor too rigorouſly impoſed; nor the Miniſter ſo confined thereunto, but that he may alſo make uſe of thoſe Gifts for Prayer and Exhortation which Chriſt hath given him for the Service and Edification of the Church, &c.

In Ceremonies.

They are willing to obſerve Decency and Order; but according to the general Rules of the Word of God.

Concerning Ceremonies. We humbly repreſent that we hold ourſelves obliged in every Part of divine Worſhip to do all Things decently, in Order, and to Edification; and are willing therein to be determined by Authority in ſuch Things, as being meerly circumſtantial, are common to human Actions and Societies, and are to be ordered by the Light of Nature and Chriſtian Prudence, according to the general Rules of the Word which are always to be obſerved, &c.

This Draught of Mr. Baxter not agreed to by the reſt of the Brethren,

For Fear of granting too much to Epiſcopacy.

This following Paper I drew up at this Time, and offered to the Brethren to have been preſented to the King as the Summary of our Judgment, that he might ſee in a few plain Words what it was that we indeed deſired. But it was not conſented to, both becauſe that all of us were not agreed among ourſelves in granting ſo much of Epiſcopacy, and becauſe we would not hinder our Succeſs by adding any more to Biſhop Uſher's Model, hoping that his Authority might have facilitated the Reception of it; to which Reaſons I conſented.

The brief Sum of our Judgment and Deſires about Church Government.

Power is, 1. Imperial and Coercive, by Mulcts and Penalties, or, 2. Doctoral and Suaſory: The firſt belongeth only to the Magiſtrate; the ſecond to the Paſtors of the Church, &c.

Archbiſhop Uſher's Model of Church Government.

The Reduction of Epiſcopacy under the Form of a Synodical Government received in the ancient Church, propoſed in the Year 1641. as an Expedient for the Prevention of thoſe Troubles which did afterwards ariſe about the Matter of Church Government.

They wait on his Majeſty with theſe Papers, expecting the Conceſſions of the Epiſcopal Party.

When we went with theſe 'foreſaid Papers to the King, and expected there to meet the Divines of the other Party, according to Promiſe, with their Propoſals alſo, containing the loweſt Terms which they could yield to for Peace: We ſaw not a Man of them, nor any Papers from them of that Nature, no not to this Day; but it was not fit for us to expoſtulate or complain.

The King receiv'd them very graciouſly, as well pleas'd they were for a Liturgy, and for the Eſſence of Epiſcopacy.

But his Majeſty very graciouſly renewed his Profeſſions (I muſt not call them Promiſes) that he would bring us together, and ſee that the Biſhops ſhould come down and yield on their Parts: And when he heard our Papers read, he ſeemed well pleaſed with them; and told us he was glad, that we were for a Liturgy, and yielded to the Eſſence of Epiſcopacy, and therefore he doubted not of our Agreement with much more. Yet was not Biſhop Uſher's Model the ſame in all Points that we could wiſh: But it was the beſt that we could have the leaſt Hope (I ſay not to obtain, but) acceptably to make any Offers of. For had we propoſed any thing below Biſhops and Archbiſhops, we ſhould but ſuddenly have furniſhed them with plauſible Reaſons for the rejecting of all further Attempts of Concord, or any other Favour from them.

See Tueſday July 3.

Raphael Throckmorton, A. On the 7th of Auguſt following, being then of Chriſt Church, Oxon. he was created Doctor of Divinity by Virtue of the King's Letters, which ſay, We are well aſſured of his particular and eminent Sufferings for us and the Church, &c. Mr. Baxter complains of the Reſtitution of Miniſters to their ſequeſtred Livings.

Mr. Baxter's Life. Fol. Lib I Part II. p. 241.

Before this Time, by the King's Return, many hundred worthy Miniſters were diſplaced, and caſt out of their Charges, becauſe they were in Sequeſtrations, where others had by the Parliament been caſt out. Our earneſt Deſires had been, that all ſuch ſhould be caſt out as were in any Benefice belonging formerly to a Man that was not groſly inſufficient or debauched; but that all that ſucceeded ſuch as theſe ſcandalous Ones ſhould hold their Places. But theſe Wiſhes being vain, and all the old ones reſtored, the King promiſed, that the Places where any of the old Ones were dead ſhould be confirmed to the Poſſeſſors: But many got the Broad Seal for them, and the Matter was not great; for we were all of us to be endured but a little longer. However, we agreed to offer theſe five Requeſts to the King, which he received.

Agreed to be verbally requeſted of the King:

The verbal Requeſts of the Preſbyterian Miniſters to the King.

I. That with all convenient Speed we may ſee his Majeſty's Concluſions upon the Propoſals of the mutual Condeſcenſions, before they paſs into Reſolves; and if it be thought meet our Brethrens Propoſals alſo.

II. That his Majeſty will publickly declare his Pleaſure for the Suſpenſion of Proceedings upon the Act of Uniformity, againſt Nonconformiſts in Caſe of Liturgy and Ceremonies, till our hoped for Agreement.

III. That his Majeſty will be pleaſed to publiſh his Pleaſure (at leaſt to thoſe that are concerned in the Execution) that till the ſaid expected Settlement, no Oath of canonical Obedience, nor Subſcription to the Liturgy, Diſcipline, Ceremonies, &c. nor Renuntiation of their Ordination by meer Preſbyters, or confeſſing it to be ſinful, be impoſed on, or required of any, as neceſſary to their Ordination, Inſtitution, Induction, or Confirmation by the Seals.

IV. That his Majeſty will cauſe the revoking of the Broad Seal that is granted to all thoſe Perſons, that by it are put into Places, where others have Poſſeſſion, to which none before could claim a Right, that is, ſuch as they call dead Places.

V. That his Majeſty will be pleaſed to provide ſome Remedy againſt the Return or Settlement of notoriouſly inſufficient or ſcandalous Miniſters, into the Places from which they were caſt out, or into any other.

A Letter of his Majeſty to the Sub-warden and Fellows of Merton College in Oxon. dated July 3, 1660. the Tenour whereof was as followeth, That the Wardenſhip of Merton College being vacant by the Death of Sir Nathaniel Brent, and the Proviſion for Supplying that Headſhip belonging to the Crown in the Vacancy of the See of Canterbury, his Majeſty doth therefore appoint Dr. Edward Reynolds, one of his Chaplains, to be Warden, and requireth the Fellows to elect and admit him as ſuch.

He promiſed that none of them ſhould be preſſed to Conformity, until a Synod determined that Point: And that all who had entred into Livings whoſe Incumbents are dead, ſhould be continued; and others before they were outed ſhould be provided for. They have had ſeveral Meetings ſince. At their firſt they voted, they would treat with the epiſcopal Party upon Biſhop Uſher's Reduction. Upon reading the Petition of John Rawlinſon, Rector of Lambeth, deſiring to be heard touching the Order lately made and granted to Dr. Wild, being made as is alledged upon Miſinformation. Ordered by the Lords, that the Petitioner ſhall be heard on Friday next.

The Lord Chancellour acquainted the Houſe, that the King intends to go into the City of London to-morrow to Dinner in his Coach, and the City intends with their own Guards to attend his Majeſty from Whitehall into London, and his Majeſty leaves it to the Lords how they will go, &c.

A Letter of Mr. Durie to the Lord Chancellor, giving Account of his good Deſigns and Labours to reconcile the Lutherans and Calviniſts abroad.

Orig. in the Hands of Jo. Worthington, M. A.

My Lord,

In the Application which I made to your Honour when you were at the Hague, I offered the Fruit of my thirty Years Labours towards the Deſign of Healing the Breaches of Proteſtants, and this I did as one who never have ſerved the Turn of any Party, or have been byaſſed by particular Intereſts for any Advantage to myſelf; but walking in the Light by Rules and Principles, have ſtood free from all in Matters of Strife to be able to ſerve all through Love. My Way hath been and is to ſollicit the Means of Peace and Truth amongſt the diſſenting Parties, to do good Offices, and to quiet their Diſcontents, and I muſt ſtill continue in this Way if I ſhould be uſeful.

But not being rightly underſtood in my Aim and Principles, I have been conſtrained to give this brief Account thereof, as well to rectifie the Miſconſtruction of former Actings, as to prevent further Mistakes concerning my Way; that such as love not to foment Prejudices, may be clear in their Thoughts concerning me; and may know where to find me, if they would discern me or any of the Talents which God hath bestowed upon me for the publick Welfare of his Churches, which is my whole Aim; and wherein I hope to persevere unto the End, as the Lord shall enable me, to be without Offence unto all, with a sincere Purpose to approve myself under his Majesty in all Faithfulness,

Your Lordship's

Right Honourable,

Give me Leave to acquaint your Lordship with that which I conceive to be a ſpecial Concernment of the Publick, wherein the Reputation of our Sincerity, as to Matters of Religion, doth lye at the Stake, and will ſuffer if it be not minded.

Upon Letters of the Wirtemberg Divines to the Miniſters of London and the two Univerſities, for Advice how to reconcile thoſe Differences.

Be pleaſed then to take Notice, that about the Time, when his Majeſty was at Breda, and that there was a great Expectation raiſed that his Majeſty would be called home, I received ſome Letters out of the Dukedom of Wirtemberg, written in the Name of a Princeſs of our Religion, of the Houſe of Chaſtillon, married to one of the Dukes who hath moved the other Dukes of Wirtemberg, to ſet on foot a Conſultation, how to compoſe the Difference of Religion, between the Lutherans and the reformed Party; and becauſe they who were employed firſt were at ſome ſtand, how to proceed in that Work: Letters have been written hither with the Knowledge and Approbation of the Princes, directed to the Miniſtry of London and to both the Univerſities to ſeek our Advice in that weighty Buſineſs: Which being recommended to my Care, I did ſend to the Univerſities the Letters inſcribed to them; and delivered the other to a full Aſſembly of the Miniſters of London; who did appoint a Committee to conſider of an Anſwer to be given thereunto; this Committee met and hath prepared a Report to be made of the Advice to be given them, which is put into my Hand, as being one of that Committee.

But I have deferr'd to procure a Meeting of the Miniſtry to make that Report unto them, till I thought it ſeaſonable to acquaint his Majeſty with the Buſineſs, that with his Knowledge and Approbation it might be done. And becauſe I found nothing hitherto preſſing to offer it to his Majeſty, therefore I did not move in it; but now of late a Letter coming from the Antiſtes of Zurich hither, wherein the Progreſs of that Negotiation is mentioned, and I am called upon to mind it, I have judged it my Duty thus to apply myſelf unto your Honour, to entreat your Lordſhip to acquaint the King with it, and to move his Majeſty that he would be pleaſed to let me know his Pleaſure, what in this Matter it is fit for me to do further. For upon the firſt Receipt of thoſe Letters, and the Delivery thereof to thoſe to whom they were inſcribed, I did write back to thoſe from whom they came that their Letters were received and delivered, and that the Miniſters of London had reſolved to conſider of the Matter offered unto them. Now it will be, as I humbly conceive, very expedient for his Majeſty's Intereſt both at Home and Abroad to countenance this Deſign of giving them an Anſwer, either by permitting the Miniſters of London to ſend their Advice as it is deſired from abroad and expected; or by putting it into ſome other Way to be done, as his Majeſty ſhall ſee Cauſe. All which I humbly ſubmit to your Lordſhip's pious and prudent Judgment, as it becometh

Your Honour's

This 29th July, 1660.

moſt humble and obedient Servant in Chriſt,

John Durie.

Addresses and Presents to his Majesty from several Corporations.

The People were very forward to manifest their Duty and Allegiance to his Majesty by congratulatory Addresses from all Parts of the Kingdom; also those Towns and Corporations that had bought out their several Fee-farm Rents belonging formerly to the Crown, and by the late Common-wealth alienated from it, sent their Deputies to his Majesty to make a voluntary Surrender of them back again to him. Others presented him with Sums of Gold and other Gifts according to their Abilities. But the City of London as being the first, the richest and most honourable, and the Seat of Kings for many Ages, judg'd themselves obliged in Point of Duty and Reputation, to exceed all the rest in the Glory of their Performances towards their Sovereign, and therefore to the Splendour of their former Preparations at his Reception and triumphal Entrance, they added the Cost of a most magnificent Entertainment at Guild-hall (which was for that very Purpose richly beautified and adorned) to which the King, the two Princes his Brothers, the Lords of the Privy Council, the two Houses of Parliament, and the chief Officers of State being solemnly invited, were on Thursday the 5th of July conducted thither in very great Pomp by the Lord-Mayor and the Grandees of the City, where they were treated in a royal Manner, with the choicest of Delicacies, with excellent Musick, and whatever else could be thought on, delightful for so illustrious an Assembly.

No speaking against Episcopacy in the House of Commons

The Bishops were never outed by Law.

The Presbyterians betwixt two Millstones.

Woodrow's Introduction to the Hist. of Scotland, p. xlv.

—— The Ministers have had several Meetings at Sion College since my last; they have many Debates, and are not all of one Mind: Yet they have all agreed to Bishop Usher's Model, to Set Forms, and an Amended Liturgy. They desire Freedom from the Ceremonies. Some yesterday spoke in the House for Episcopacy, and Mr. Bamfield speaking against it was hissed down. The English Lawyers have given in Papers to shew, that the Bishops have not been outed by Law. The Cloud is more dark than was apprehended. —— The Presbyterians are like to be ground betwixt two Millstones: The Papists and Phanaticks are busie. Argyle is this Day come to Town, and he will not be welcome.

SUNDAY July 8.

Mr. Baxter's Account of the Bishop's Answer to the Proposals of the Presbyterian London Ministers.

Life of Mr. Baxter, Fol. Lib. 1. Part II. p. 242.

While we waited (says Mr. Baxter) for the promised Condescensions of the episcopal Divines, there came nothing to us but a Paper of bitter Oppositions, by Way of Confutation of our former Proposals. We were not insensible of the Unworthiness of the Dealing, and the Brethren at first desired me to write an Answer to it. But afterward they considered that this would but provoke them, aud turn a Treaty for Concord.

Call'd by Mr. Baxter no Answer, but a Contradiction.

The Bishop's Answer to the first Proposals of the London Ministers, who attempted the Work of Reconcilement; which was brought them afterward instead of their Concessions before expected and promised. When we looked to see how much they would abate of their former Impositions, for the attaining of Unity and Peace, we received nothing but this Contradiction.

Tho' indeed a plain and full Answer under all the particular Heads of their Proposals, and Preamble to them.

Concerning the Preamble.

We first observe, that they take it for granted, that there is a firm Agreement between them and us in the doctrinal Truths of the reformed Religion, and in the substantial Parts of divine Worship; and that the Differences are only in some various Conceptions about the ancient Forms of Church Government, and some Particulars about Liturgy and Ceremonies; which maketh all that follows the less considerable and the less reasonable to be stood upon to the Hazard and Disturbance of the Peace of the Church, &c.

Concerning Church Government.

The ecclesiastical Hierarchy or Prelacy, is in the main primitive Episcopacy.

They do not suggest, nor did we ever hear any just Reasons given for their Dissent from the ecclesiastical Hierarchy or Prelacy, as it was stated and established in this Kingdom; which we believe to be for the main the true, ancient, primitive Episcopacy, and that to be more than a meer Presidency of Order. Neither do we find that the same was in any Time ballanced or managed by any authoritative Commixtion of Presbyters therewith. Though it hath been then, and in all Times since usually exercised with the Assistance and Counsel of Presbyters in Subordination to the Bishops, &c.

As to the four particular Instances of Things amiss.

Answer to their several Complaints and Objections.

1. Against the Largeness of Dioceses.

I. We cannot grant that the Extent of any Diocese is so great, but that the Bishop may well perform that, wherein the proper Office and Duty of a Bishop doth consist, which is not the personal Inspection of every Man's Soul under his Government (which is the Work of every parochial Minister in his Cure) but the pastoral Charge of overseeing, directing, and taking Care, that the Ministers and other ecclesiastical Officers within his Diocese do their several respective Duties in their several Stations as they ought to do. And if some Dioceses shall be thought of too large Extent, the Bishops may have suffragan Bishops to assist them, as the Laws allow, &c.

2. Againſt Lay Chancellors, &c.

II. We confeſs the Biſhops did, (as by the Law they were enabled) depute Part of the Adminiſtration of their eccleſiaſtical Juriſdictions to Chancellors, Commiſſaries, and Officials, as Men better ſkilled in the Civil and Canon Laws. But as for Matters of more ſpiritual Concernment, viz. the Sentences of Excommunication and Abſolution, with other Cenſures of the Church, we conceive they belong properly to the Biſhop of the Church to decree and pronounce, either by himſelf where for the preſent he reſideth, or by ſome grave eccleſiaſtical Perſon by him ſurrogated for that Purpoſe, in ſuch Places where he cannot be perſonally preſent, &c.

3. Againſt the ſole Power of Ordination in the Biſhop.

III. Whether a Biſhop be a diſtinct Order from Preſbyter or not, or whether they have Power of ſole Ordination or no? is not now the Queſtion. But we affirm that the Biſhops of this Realm have conſtantly (for ought we know, or have heard to the contrary) ordained with the Aſſiſtance of Preſbyters, and the Impoſition of their Hands together with the Biſhops, &c.

As to Archbiſhop Uſher's Model of Church Government.

4. Againſt refuſing Archbiſhop Uſher's Model.

The Primate's Reduction, though not publiſhed in his Life-time, was formed many Years before his Death, and ſhewed to ſome Perſons (ready to atteſt the ſame) in 1640. but it is not conſiſtent with the two other Diſcourſes of the ſame learned Primate, (viz. the one of the Original of Epiſcopacy, and the other of the Original of Metropolitans) both printed in the Year 1641. and written with great Diligence and much Variety of ancient Learning. In neither of which is to be found any Mention of the Reduction aforeſaid.

Concerning Liturgy.

5. Againſt the eſtabliſh'd Liturgy.

A Liturgy or Form of publick Worſhip being not only by them acknowledged lawful, but by us alſo (for the Preſervation of Unity and Uniformity) deemed neceſſary, we eſteem the Liturgy of the Church of England, contained in the Book of Common-Prayer, and by Law eſtabliſhed, to be ſuch a one as is by them deſired, according to the Qualifications here mentioned, &c. —— The Diſcontinuance thereof we are ſure was not our Fault. But we find by Experience that the Uſe of it is very much deſired, where it is not; and the People generally are very well ſatisfy'd with it where it is uſed; which we believe to be a great Conſervatory of the chief Heads of Chriſtian Religion, and of Piety, Charity, and Loyalty in the Hearts of the People. We believe that the Diſuſe thereof for ſundry late Years hath been one of the great Cauſes of the ſad Diviſions in the Church; and that the Reſtoring the ſame will be (by God's Bleſſing) a ſpecial Means of making up the Breach. There being (as we have great Cauſe to believe) many thouſands more in the Nation that deſire it, than diſlike it. Nevertheleſs, we are not againſt Reviſing of the Liturgy by ſuch diſcreet Perſons as his Majeſty ſhall think fit to employ therein.

Of Ceremonies.

6. Againſt the Ceremonies impoſed.

We conceived that there needs no more to be ſaid for juſtifying the Impoſition of the Ceremonies by Law eſtabliſhed, than what is contained in the Beginning of this Section; which giveth a full and ſatisfactory Anſwer to all that is alledged or objected in the following Diſcourſe, which is rather rhetorical than argumentative. In as much as lawful Authority hath already determined the Ceremonies in Queſtion to be decent and orderly, and to ſerve to Edification; and conſequently to be agreeable to the general Rules of the Word, &c.

As we are no Way againſt ſuch tender and religious Compaſſion in Things of this Nature, as his Majeſty's Piety and Wiſdom ſhall think fit to extend; ſo we cannot think that the Satisfaction of ſome private Perſons is to be laid in the Balance againſt the publick Peace and Uniformity of the Church.

Concerning particular Ceremonies.

7. And eſpecially againſt kneeling at the Lord's Supper, and obſerving of Holy Days.

It being moſt convenient that in the Act of receiving the Lord's Supper one and the ſame Geſture ſhould be uniformly uſed by all the Members of this Church: And Kneeling having been formerly enjoined and uſed therein, as a Geſture of greateſt Reverence and Devotion, and ſo moſt agreeable to that holy Service: And holy Days of human Inſtitution having been obſerved by the People of God in the Old Teſtament, and by our bleſſed Saviour himſelf in the Goſpel, and by all the Churches of Chriſt in primitive and following Times, as apt Means to preſerve the Memorials of the chief Myſteries of the Chriſtian Religion: And ſuch holy Days being alſo fit Times for the honeſt Recreation of Servants, Labourers, and the meaner ſort of People: For theſe Reaſons, and the great Satisfaction of far the greateſt Part of the People, we humbly deſire (as a Thing in our Judgment very expedient) that they may both be ſtill continued in the Church.

So likewiſe againſt the Surplice, the Croſs in Baptiſm, and Bowing at the Name of Jeſus.

As for the other three Ceremonies, viz. The Surplice, the Croſs after Baptiſm, and Bowing at the Name of Jeſus; although we find not here any ſufficient Reaſon alledged why they ſhould be utterly aboliſhed: Nevertheleſs how far forth, in regard of tender Conſciences, a Liberty may be thought fit to be indulged to any, his Majeſty according to his great Wiſdom and Goodneſs is beſt able to judge, &c.

Concluſion, that his Majeſty's condeſcending to thoſe Demands

[Concluding] We are ſo far from believing that his Majeſty's condeſcending to theſe Demands will take away not only Differences, but the Roots and Cauſes of them, mands would but create new Differences, and diſsatisfy the greateſt Part of his Subjects, and give Diſſenters Encouragement to make further Demands.

them, that we are confident it will prove the Seminary of new Differences, both by giving Diſſatisfaction to thoſe that are well pleaſed with what is already eſtabliſhed, who are much the greateſt Part of his Majeſty's Subjects; and by encouraging unquiet Spirits when theſe Things ſhall be granted to make further Demands. There being no Aſſurance by them given, what will content all Diſſenters, than which nothing is more neceſſary for the ſettling of a firm Peace in the Church.

Reverend Sir,

Mr. Sharp's Letter to Mr. Douglas of the State of eccleſiaſtical Affairs in London

A Letter of the reverend Mr. James Sharp, the Scots Agent at Weſtminſter, to Mr. Douglas at Edinburgh, dated July 10, 1660. ——— telling him, That Crofts is diſcharged the Court; the epiſcopal Men are bowing a little; the Presbyterians have finiſhed their Conceſſions; the Iſſue will be the emitting of a Declaration by the King about moderate Epiſcopacy, amended Liturgy, and diſpenſing with the Ceremonies. They will ſubject to any Epiſcopacy; they will act under moderate Epiſcopacy, and own Biſhops may be acknowledged as civil Officers impoſed by the King.

Commitment of the Marquis of Argyle for High-Treaſon.

The Marquis of Argyle was ſent to the Tower the laſt Lord's Day. —— You'll have many Letters as to the Manner of Argyle's Commitment, and I ſay nothing of it. His Warrant mentions the Cauſe to be High Treaſon, whether for paſt Actings, or what he may do at this Time againſt the King's Intereſt, I know not. This Day the Lord Lorn was permitted to ſee his Father.

His Neceſſity for getting acquainted with the epiſcopal Party and the Courtiers.

—— There is a Neceſſity I get and keep Acquaintance with the epiſcopal Party, as well as Presbyterians, and with thoſe about Court, who manage the King's Affairs, (though they be no Friends to Presbyterians) though I will hereby be expoſed to the Conſtructions of Men.

The greateſt Fear is that of Eraſtianiſm.

I am confident the King hath no Purpoſe to wrong our Church in her Settlement; my greateſt Fear is their introducing Eraſtianiſm. Chancellour Hyde and thoſe of that Party will have Middleton Commiſſioner, and ſome of our Noblemen have told the King, it is their Deſire he be the Man. 'Tis probable Lauderdale will be Secretary.

Death of Lord Culpeper.

Publick Intelligence, 4to. No. 29.

This Day died that eminent Servant of his Majeſty John Lord Culpeper, Maſter of the Rolls, and one of his Majeſty's moſt honourable Privy-Council; whoſe incomparable Abilities and Readineſs at all great Debates, are ſufficiently known to all that ever heard him, or had Diſcourſe with him; who for his Loyalty, Courage, and Wiſdom, more particularly in the Battle at Edge-Hill, had the Honour to be ſtyled by his late Majeſty, when he made him a Peer of England, Præcipuum Coronæ noſtræ Fulcimentum.

His Life and Death.

Dugdale's Bar. Tom. II. p. 472.

Sir John Culpeper, Knight, a Perſon of great Abilities, and perfectly loyal to our late Sovereign King Charles I. was by him firſt conſtituted Chancellour of the Exchequer, afterwards Maſter of the Rolls, and one of his Majeſty's Privy-Council: And not forſaking him in the Time of his greateſt Diſtreſſes and Troubles, adventured his Life couragiouſly on his Behalf in the Battels of Kineton, Newberry, and divers other ſharp Encounters. In Conſideration whereof he was by Letters Patents bearing Date at Oxford October 21, Regni 20, advanced to the Dignity of a Baron of this Realm, by the Title of Lord Culpeper of Thoreſway in Com. Linc. And after the Loſs of all, attending King Charles II. during the greateſt Part of his Abode beyond the Sea, being alſo one of the Lords of his Privy-Council, departed this Life upon the 11th Day of July, 1660. and was buried at Hollingburne in Kent, leaving his eldeſt Son Thomas by Judith, Daughter to Sir Thomas Colepeper of Hollingburne, to ſucceed him in his Honour.

Three of the Regicides committed to the Tower. Hacker, Axtell, and Scot.

Publick Intelligence, 4to. No. 29.

Colonel Hacker who carried a Partizan and commanded the Guards, and was on the Scaffold when our late Sovereign was put to death, was for High Treaſon committed to the Tower, with Colonel Axtell, and Mr. Thomas Scot (not long ſince called Secretary Scot) who was ſent Priſoner out of Flanders, being one of thoſe who are excepted from Pardon.

A Letter of the ill Behaviour of Colonel Axtell towards his late Majeſty.

A Letter out of Ireland dated Kilkenny June 30, 1660. concerning Colonel Axtell.

—— His Deportment to his late Majeſty when he was brought before the pretended High Court of Juſtice: For I (then having the Honour to attend his Majeſty as being one of his menial Servants) heard the ſaid Colonel Axtell, adviſe and earneſtly incite the Soldiers then in Weſtminſter-Hall in a barbarous Manner to cry out for Juſtice (as he termed it) againſt his ſaid Majeſty; and on the Day when that pretended Court pronounced Sentence againſt his then Majeſty, I heard him then ſay to his Soldiers, Cry out for Execution, Execution, which they did accordingly; what I have now written I am ready to aver upon Oath, &c.

Wood's Faſti Oxon. Vol. II. Col. 848.

For the better Entertainment of his Majeſty and the Court at the City Feaſt, Benj. Rogers, Organiſt, being then eſteemed the prime Compoſer of the Nation, was deſir'd to compoſe a Song of ſeveral Parts to be performed at Dinner. Whereupon, in order to it, Dr. Ingelo made Hymnus Euchariſticus the Beginning of the Prelude, to which is Exultate Juſti in Domino, &c. This he alſo tranſlated into Engliſh, and both were printed in ſingle Papers. Theſe Things being done, B. Rogers compoſed a Song of four Parts to that Hymn. And at Dinner in the Guild-hall the ſaid printed Papers in Latin and Engliſh being delivered to the King, the two Dukes of York and Glouceſter, and diſperſed among the Nobility, purpoſely that they might look on them while the Performance was in doing; the Song was begun and carried on in Latin by twelve Voices, twelve Inſtruments, and an Organ, moſtly performed by his Majeſty's Servants. Which being admirably well done, it gave very great Content, and Mr. Rogers the Author being preſent, he obtained a great Name for his Compoſition and a plentiful Reward.

FRIDAY July 13.

Report of the Caſe of the Rectory of Lambeth.

Journal of the Houſe of Lords.

The Marquis of Dorcheſter reported from the Committee of Petitions the Caſe between John Rawlinſon and Dr. Wilde, concerning the Rectory of Lambeth, it did appear that the ſaid Dr. Wilde had the Benefit of the general Order of this Houſe for Sequeſtration and Ejection; but he was not ſequeſtred, yet it was conceived by ſome of the Lords Committees that he was ejected, becauſe a lawful Poſſeſſion by Grant from the King is good by reaſon of Inſtitution and Induction. There being different Opinions, ordered that both Parties be heard by Council.

General Monk, Duke of Albemarle.

The Lord Chancellour acquainted the Houſe, that his Majeſty hath conferred the Honour and Title of Duke of Albemarle on the Lord General Monk, upon which the Houſe appointed he ſhould be inducted, &c.

Ordered, that the Lord great Chamberlain and the Lord Berkley ſhall wait upon his Majeſty to give him Thanks from this Houſe for the Honour he hath been pleaſed to confer upon the Duke of Albemarle.

SATURDAY July 14.

Dugdale's Bar. Tom. II. p. 445.

Edward Mountague of Hinchinbroke Com' Huntingdon, Eſq; being ſingularly ſkilled in Mathematical Learning, whereby he arrived to very great Knowledge in Maritime Affairs, having by his prudent Deportment in the Time of the late Uſurpation, obtained the ſole Command of the Engliſh Navy, (till then divided and diſpoſed of under ſundry petty Officers) made ſuch uſe of his Power and Intereſt with the Mariners, in that happy Juncture of Time, when the Tyranny of thoſe Uſurpers, who then ruled, had cauſed moſt Men to be weary of their Dominion, and inclined the Hearts of the People generally to an obedient Submiſſion to their lawful Sovereign; as that without Bloodſhed or any hazardous Conteſts, he ſo wrought upon them, that they peacefully delivered up the whole Fleet unto his Majeſty King Charles the Second. For which happy Service and exemplary Fidelity, he was firſt made Choice of for one of the Knights Companions of the moſt noble Order of the Garter, and ſhortly after, viz. 12 Julii 12 Car. II. advanced to the Dignity of a Baron of this Realm, by the Title of Lord Mountague of St. Neots in Com' Huntingdon, Viſcount Hinchinbrooke, and Earl of Sandwich.

Biſhop Burnet gives no Character of the Earl of Sandwich, and a very bad one of the Duke of Albemarle, contrary to the high Opinion the King, the Court, and the Country had of him, nor did he ever become uſeleſt till his Diſtemper of Body made him ſo; and the King, who call'd him Father, did rather fear him, than deſpiſe him.

Burnet's Hiſtory of his own Times, Fol. p. 98.

At the King's firſt coming over, Monk and Mountague were the moſt conſider'd, they both had the Garter, the one was made Duke of Albemarle, and the other Earl of Sandwich, and had noble Eſtates given them. Monk was ravenous as well as his Wife, who was a mean contemptible Creature. They both aſked and ſold all that was within their reach, nothing being denied them for ſome Time; till he became ſo uſeleſs that little perſonal Regard could be paid him. But the King maintained ſtill the Appearances of it: For the Appearance of the Service he did him was ſuch, that the King thought it fit to treat him with great Diſtinction, even after he ſaw into him, and deſpiſed him.

Letter of Mr. Sharp to Mr. Douglas, giving Account of the Preſbyterian Divines delivering their Paper to the King.

Woodrow's Introduction to the Hiſtory of the Church of Scotland.

Hardly conſiſtent with their Covenant.

But they excuſe themſelves and ſay, they yield only (inſtead of Epiſcopacy and Common-Prayer) to a conſtant Precedency and a reformed Liturgy.

The Writer doth bleſs the Lord for ſo gracious a King.

A Letter of Mr. Sharp (afterwards Archbiſhop of St. Andrews) to Mr. Douglas in Edinburgh, dated July 14. 1660. —— That he had communicated his Thoughts upon the Accommodation to the Brethren of the City. They have ſome Senſe of the Inconveniences you mention, but they excuſe themſelves from the preſent Neceſſity they lye under, and the Duty they owe to the Peace of the Church. They gave in their Paper to the King on Tueſday laſt, which he ordered them not to communicate, till he made his Pleaſure known. After he heard them read it, he commended it, as ſavouring of Learning and Moderation, and hoped it might give a Beginning to a good Settlement in the Church. When I heard of the Contents of that Paper, I aſked if they thought it conſiſtent with their Covenant Engagements? They ſaid they judged ſo, for they had only yielded to a conſtant Precedency, and a reformed Liturgy. I fear they have hereby given a Knife to cut their own Throats, and do find the Epiſcopalians proſecute their own Way. This Morning the King called me to his Cloſet alone, where I had the Opportunity to give a full Information, as to all thoſe Particulars you by your former Letter did deſire; and I muſt ſay, we have cauſe to bleſs the Lord for ſo gracious a King. A Letter will be writ in a Day or two, and I will get off. E're long the Parliament will reſtore the Biſhops Lands. There are univerſal Complaints of the Ejection of many honeſt Miniſters throughout the Land, and the Re-admiſſion of many not well qualified.

SUNDAY July 15.

The Preſbyterian Divines Defence of their Propoſals to his Majeſty.

In Reply to an Anſwer from the epiſcopal Clergy,

Drawn up by Mr. Baxter.

Life of Mr. Baxter, Fol. Lib. I. Part II. p. 149.

A Defence of our Propoſals to his Majeſty for Agreement in Matters of Religion.

Concerning the Preamble.

We are not inſenſible of the great Danger of the Church, through the doctrinal Errors of many of thoſe with whom we are at Difference alſo about the Points of Government and Worſhip now before us. But yet we choſe to ſay of the Party, that we are agreed in Doctrinals, becauſe they ſubſcribe the ſame Holy Scriptures and Articles of Religion, and Books of Homilies, as we do. And the Contradictions to their own Confeſſions, which too many are guilty of, we thought not juſt to charge upon the Party, becauſe it is but perſonal Guilt, &c.

Concerning Church Government.

Wherein Writing and Diſputing are likely to ſet them at a greater Diſtance.

Had you well read but Gerſon, Bucer, Didoclavius, Parker, Baynes, Salmaſius, Blondell, &c. yea of the few Lines in Biſhop Uſher's Reduction, which we have offered you; or what I have written of it in Diſp. I. Of Church Government, you would have ſeen juſt Reaſon given for our Diſſent from the eccleſiaſtical Hierarchy as ſtated in England, &c.

Inſtances of Things amiſs.

The Dioceſes too large.

That which you cannot grant (that the Dioceſes are too great) you would quickly grant, if you had ever conſcionably tryed the Taſk which Dr. Hammond deſcribeth as the Biſhop's Work; yea but for one Pariſh; or had ever believed Ignatius and other ancient Deſcriptions of a Biſhop's Church. But is it a faithful Dealing with your Brethren or your Conſciences (pardon our Freedom in ſo weighty a Cauſe) to diſpute as though you made a Biſhop but an Archbiſhop, to ſee by a general Inſpection of the Pariſh Paſtors that they do their Office, and as if they only ruled the Rulers of the particular Flocks (which you know we never ſtrove againſt) when as no knowing Engliſhman can be ignorant that our Biſhops have the ſole Government of Paſtors and People, having taken all Juriſdiction or proper Government (or next all) from the particular Paſtors of the Pariſhes to themſelves alone, &c.

They conclude the Biſhops Counſels to be againſt Peace.

And uſe ſome Bitterneſs of Language.

In Concluſion we perceive your Counſels againſt Peace are not likely to be fruſtrated: Your Deſires concerning us are like to be accompliſhed: You are like to be gratified with our Silence and Ejection, and the Excommunication and conſequent Sufferings of Diſſenters. And yet we will believe, that bleſſed are the Peace-Makers, and tho' Deceit be in the Heart of them that imagine Evil, yet there is Joy to the Councellors of Peace, Prov. xii. 20. And though we are ſtopt by you in our following of Peace, and are never like thus publickly to ſee it more, (becauſe you think that we muſt hold our Tongues that you may hold your Peace) yet are we reſolved by the Help of God, if it be poſſible, and as much as in us lieth, to live peaceably with all Men.

The Parliaments in Time of Uſurpation needed Guards about 'em, but all ſuch Forces were now diſmiſs'd.

Publick Intelligence, 4to. No. 29.

The Guards are at laſt diſcharged from their Attendance on the two Houſes of Parliament, who being now upon the Performance of their Duty to his Majeſty as loyal Subjects, and the true Service of their Country in their Repreſentatives, need no other Security, than the Hearts and Affections of the People.

Upon Complaint made that one John Rivett a Brazier, refuſeth to deliver to the Earl of Portland a Statue of Braſs of the late King on Horſe-back, according to an Order of this Houſe, it is ordered, that the ſaid John Rivett ſhall permit and ſuffer the Sheriff of London to ſerve a Replevin upon the ſaid Statue and Horſe of Braſs that are now in his Cuſtody and Poſſeſſion.

Relief given to the Miniſter of Fringford Com' Oxon.

Upon Report of Bayley's Caſe, late Miniſter of Fringford, that there is no Sequeſtration nor Ejection in the Caſe; it is ordered, that the Order appointed for ſequeſtring the Profits thereof is hereby diſcharged and vacated, and Poſſeſſion continued to John Bayley.

A noble Preſent from the Borough of Plymouth to the King.

Publick Intelligence, 4to. No. 30.

This Day the Borough of Plymouth, as an Expreſſion of their unfeigned Joy for his Majeſty's happy Reſtauration, preſented by the Hands of the Right Honourable Sir William Morris, one of his Majeſty's principal Secretaries of State and Governour of Plymouth, Serjeant Maynard, Recorder, &c. an honorable Preſent of Plate, which for the Largeneſs of the Pieces, and Curioſity of the Work was a noble Preſent, and was received very graciouſly by his Majeſty. Amongſt the reſt was a Fountain carved with rare Art and curious Figures, out of which perfumed Water was caſt up twenty Foot high, and had at the Top thereof a curious perfuming Box, which at the ſame Time iſſued forth perfumed Fire.

And from the City of Exeter.

At the ſame Time the City of Exeter by the ſaid Sir William Morris, Thomas Bampfield, Eſq; Recorder, &c. as a Pledge of their Congratulation of his Majeſty's bleſſed Reſtauration, and an earneſt of their hearty Affections, did preſent his Majeſty with ſeveral Parcels of rich Plate to a very conſiderable Value for the Maſs thereof.

With a Speech by Mr. Serjeant Maynard, who had pleaded in the Houſe of Commons againſt Cromwell and the other horrid Regicides.

Serjeant Maynard having declared the Affection of the ſaid City and Borough in a moſt elegant pithy Speech, to which his Majeſty manifeſted a particular Application, the Serjeant being better heard here, than when he forced his Entrance into the Houſe of Commons (after two Months Secluſion) when thoſe horrid Regicides fell upon that bloody Debate, where the Serjeant by Cromwell was divers Times demanded to the Bar, as unable to bear the Strength and Force of the Serjeant's Arguments, when he pleaded ſo admirably for the Life of the King.

The University of Cambridge reſtore to his Majeſty the Fee-Farm Rents, which by Neceſſity they had purchas'd in the late unhappy Times.

Ex Notis MSS.

A Grace was granted in the Univerſity of Cambridge, that whereas in the Danger of the late unhappy Times, when the King's Exchequer and the Revenues thereof were wholly diſordered, and no Probability or Poſſibility for this Univerſity to obtain from thence thoſe yearly Penſions which were thence due unto the Univerſity, and conſtantly paid till then; it was found neceſſary to make Purchaſe of ſo many Fee-Farm Rents payable into the ſaid Exchequer, as might make good the foreſaid Penſions to this Univerſity; and that Dr. Love was therein employed by the Senate of this Univerſity accordingly to procure, and did thereupon make Purchaſe, the Conveyances of which ſaid Purchaſe are now in the Poſſeſſion of this Univerſity: Seeing that it hath pleaſed Almighty God to reſtore our gracious Sovereign to his Throne, that his royal Exchequer may be enabled to the Payment of the ſaid Penſions to the Univerſity as formerly in the Days of our gracious Sovereigns: Therefore it pleaſeth, that the ſaid Dr. Love may make tender of the ſaid Conveyances unto his ſacred Majeſty, expreſſing the tender Care and loyal Affection of this Univerſity in the whole Proceeding of this Buſineſs: And that the ſaid Dr. Love, by the Advice of ſuch Council in Law as in his Judgment and Prudence ſhall be requiſite, ſhall be enabled as in the Name of the Univerſity to make ſuch Addreſſes and Petitions to his ſacred Majeſty as by his ſaid Council ſhall be thought fit, for the Expreſſion of the preſent Loyalty of this Univerſity, and the Security of the ſaid Payments for the Future. And that Mr. Thomas Buck, who was formerly Aſſiſtant to the ſaid Dr. Love in the Procurement of the ſaid Purchaſe may now go along with the ſaid Doctor, and that all the Expences upon this Employment may be upon the Univerſity Account. —— *Lect. & Conceſſ. Advancement of James Marquis of Ormond.

Dugdale's Bar. Tom. II. p. 478.

James Marquis of Ormond and Earl of Oſſory in Ireland, of his Majeſty's Privy-Council, both in England and that Realm, Lord Steward of his Houſhold, one of the Gentlemen of his royal Bed-Chamber, and Knight of the moſt noble Order of the Garter; having been Lieutenant of Ireland in the Time of King Charles I. where he performed great Things, and afterwards conſtantly adhered to his Majeſty that now is, throughout that tedious Time of his calamitous Expulſion, meriting much for his moſt loyal Actings and Sufferings, was by Letters Patents bearing Date at Weſtminſter upon the 20th of July, in the twelfth of his Reign, advanced by his Majeſty to the State and Degree of a Baron of this Realm, by the Title of Lord Butler of Lanthony (his noble Anceſtor Bohun Earl of Hereford and Eſſex having divers Ages paſt, been the pious Founder of a great Abbey there) as alſo Earl of Brecknock, and to the Heirs Male of his Body. And the next enſuing Year by other Letters Patents, dated at Weſtminſter on the 13th of March, 13 Car. II. created Duke of Ormond in the Realm of Ireland, and ſhortly after, again Lord Lieutenant of that Realm.

Character of the Duke of Ormond given by Biſhop Burnet.

Bp. Burnet's Hiſtory of his own Times, Fol. p. 95.

The next Man to Clarendon in favour with the King was the Duke of Ormond; a Man every Way fitted for a Court: Of a graceful Appearance, a lively Wit, and a chearful Temper: A Man of great Expence, decent even in his Vices, for he always kept up the Form of Religion. He had gone thro' many Tranſactions in Ireland with more Fidelity than Succeſs. He had made a Treaty with the Iriſh, which was broke by the great Body of them, though ſome few of them adher'd ſtill to him. But the whole Iriſh Nation did ſtill pretend, that though they had broke the Agreement firſt, yet he, or rather the King in whoſe Name he had treated with them, was bound to perform all the Articles of the Treaty. He had miſcarried ſo in the Siege of Dublin, that it very much leſſened the Opinion of his military Conduct. Yet his conſtant Attendance on his Maſter, his Eaſineſs to him, and his great Sufferings for him, raiſed him to be Lord Steward of the Houſhold, and Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. He was firm to the Proteſtant Religion, and ſo far firm to the Laws, that he always gave good Advices; but when bad ones were followed, he was not for complaining too much of them.

Sir John Swintoun ſent to be tried in Scotland, but brought off by the popiſh Intereſt, profeſſing himſelf a Quaker.

July 20. Sir John Swintoun, a Scot, one of the Judges under Cromwell, and called the Lord Swintoun, was taken out of his Bed in a Quaker's Houſe in King-ſtreet, London, and ſent in Fetters to the Gate-houſe. He was afterwards ſent down to Scotland with the Marquis of Argyle. He had been once a zealous Profeſſor of Reformation, and a Covenanter; but falling in with the Uſurper and Engliſh Sectaries, he firſt turned lax, and of late took on the Maſk of Quakeriſm. It is ſaid, the Queen Mother and Papiſts took a Care of him and brought him off. And indeed Quakeriſm is but a ſmall Remove from Popery and Jeſuitiſm.

Debate of the Houſe of Commons upon Religion.

On Monday July 23, there was a hot and long Debate in the Houſe of Commons about Religion. The high epiſcopal Men laboured to put to the Queſtion the whole complex Buſineſs about Doctrine, Worſhip, Diſcipline, and Government of the Church of England; that none other ſhould take Place. The other ſide conſiſting of Preſbyterians, i. e. for the moſt part moderate epiſcopal Men, urged, that the Particular about Doctrine might only at that Time be put to the Queſtion. After Debates till Night, it came to this Iſſue, that the Houſe ſhould adjourn the taking the Matter of Religion into their Conſideration until the 23d of October.

Addreſs of the Clergy of the County of Lincoln, preſented by the excellent Dr. Saunderſon, as Rector of Boothby-Pagnell.

Publick Intelligence, 4°, Numb. 30.

This Day ſome of the Clergy of the County of Lincoln, in the Name of the reſt, being brought into the royal Preſence by the Earl of Mancheſter, preſented an Addreſs to the King's moſt excellent Majeſty by the Hands of the reverend and moſt learned Doctor Saunderſon, his Majeſty's Profeſſor of Divinity at Oxon, accompanied by that worthy Gentleman Sir Thomas Meers; and ſeveral of the orthodox and loyal Clergy.

To the King's moſt excellent Majeſty:

The moſt humble Addreſs of the Miniſters in the County of Lincoln.

Moſt dread Sovereign!

Againſt the barbarous Inhumanity acted upon his royal Father,

And the Jeſuitical Principles that tended to it,

Among all the great Calamities which God moſt juſtly for our Sins hath brought upon us, ſince the firſt Commencing of our national Diſtractions, none have made ſo deep Impreſſions of real Sorrow upon our Hearts, as the barbarous Inhumanity acted upon your Royal Father of bleſſed Memory, by certain wicked and deceitful Men: The Remembrance of which, as it doth renew our utmoſt Abhorrency of the Act, ſo of all thoſe Jeſuitical Principles, which under any Pretence whatſoever, have any Tendency to the Depoſing, and much more the Murdering of Kings.

And the forced Exile of his Majeſty.

After the Loſs of the beſt deſerving King the World could then boaſt of, which was attended with the Voice of Blaſphemy, uttered by our Enemies againſt our true Religion, becauſe ſome who did profeſs it, had ſtained her Beauty with their bloody Hands: Gall was added to our Wormwood by the forced Exile of your Majeſty, during whoſe Abſence abroad we could hardly think ourſelves to be at home.

They congratulate his Majeſty's Preſervation at Worceſter,

And his holding faſt amidſt all Temptations the true, ancient, Catholick, and Apoſtolick Faith.

But God, who comforteth thoſe who are caſt down, gave us Hope in the wonderful Preſervation of your Majeſty at Worceſter, in many Supplications made for you by your faithful People, and Eſtabliſhment of your royal Heart with his Grace, to reſiſt and overcome a great Crowd of Temptations both on the right Hand and on the left, by holding faſt the true, ancient, Catholick, and Apoſtolical Faith once delivered unto the Saints.

They expreſs their Joy for his Majeſty's Return;

And portend his happy Reign,

Theſe Things were to us as the Dawning of the Day of Salvation, which God, after a dark Night of Confuſion, hath now (not by an ordinary working of Providence) cauſed to ſhine upon us. And we have Cauſe to believe, that he, who hath ſubdued the Power of the Enemy, will alſo ſubdue their Hearts: That as your Majeſty's Return hath been accompanied with the cordial Deſire and Joy of moſt of your Subjects, ſo your Reign will be with the great Love and full Satisfaction of all.

Which began with a healing Declaration, and was followed by a Proclamation againſt Vice and Profaneneſs.

And this our Confidence is more increaſed by your Majeſty's gracious, charitable, and healing Declaration of the firſt of May, and your early Proclamation iſſued againſt vitious, debauched, and prophane Perſons: For which, as we are always bound to praiſe God, ſo we do with all humble Thankfulneſs acknowledge your Majeſty's ſpecial Grace and princely Favour.

They promiſe all dutiful Subjection,

And offer up their Prayers.

And whatſoever our earneſt Prayers to God, Exhortations to our Hearers, and dutiful Subjection may poſſibly contribute to the Happineſs of your ſacred Perſon and Government, we ſhall with all Alacrity perform; beſeeching him by whom Kings reign, to increaſe your Graces, preſerve your Health, prolong your Days, and eſtabliſh the Crown upon your Head.

This Addreſs his Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed to accept, with ſeveral Expreſſions of Favour to the Preſenters, giving them alſo the Honour of kiſſing his Hand.

Biſhop Morley's Character of Dr. Saunderſon, who preſented this Addreſs.

A Calumny of Father Creſſy upon the loyal Clergy refuted.

Biſhop Morley's Tracts, publiſh'd 1683. 4to.

Certainly never any Church, under ſo great and general a Perſecution as ours was, had fewer of her Children fell away from her, than ours had: Neither is that which he [Father Creſſey] takes for granted true, namely, that none did, or could keep their Livings, without renouncing the Proteſtant Religion and their Loyalty. For many Livings were ſo poor, that the haughty Preſbyterians diſdained to ſtoop to them, and therefore ſuffered thoſe that were Owners of them to continue in them, though they read the Liturgy, and profeſſed and preached for Loyalty: And of theſe I know and can name divers, as I can ſome others likewiſe, whoſe Intereſt and Reputation for Piety and Learning was ſo great in the Countries wherein they lived, that their Enemies thought it better to expect their Deaths, than by depriving them of their Benefices, to contract ſo much Hatred, as they ſhould have done unto themſelves. And of theſe I will name but one for all, viz. the reverend, learned, and pious Dr. Sanderſon (now Biſhop of Lincoln) who notwithſtanding he was for the aforeſaid Reaſon ſuffered to keep his Benefice, yet I think no Man will be ſo impudently malicious, as to ſay, that he renounced either his Religion or his Loyalty by ſo doing. For he never took the Covenant, nor Engagement, nor uſed the Directory, but officiated always as he ought to do, and always maintained both the Doctrine and Diſcipline of our Church, as well publickly in Print, as privately in his Pulpit; witneſs his Judicium Oxonienſe, his Lectures touching the Obligation of Oaths, and that excellent Volume of Sermons, all printed, or re-printed, and owned by him, during the Time of the Rebellion, together with that learned, judicious, and reſolute Preface before his Book of Sermons, wherein the Authority, Government, and Diſcipline of the Church of England is unanſwerably aſſerted againſt the Preſbyterians, and all other Sects and Sectaries, who then domineered in and over the whole Kingdom.

The Loyalty of the City of Norwich in reſtoring the Fee-Farm Rents, and making a Preſent of one thouſand Pounds in Gold to his Majeſty.

Publick Intelligence, 4to.

This Day, July 24, Joſeph Payne, Eſq; Major of the City of Norwich, Thomas Rant and William Barnham, Eſqs. Members of Parliament for the ſaid City; Chriſtopher Jay, Eſq; Alderman, Thomas Wiſe, one of the Sheriffs, Thomas Johnſon, Alderman, Francis Norris, Robert Bendiſh, Gentlemen, Thomas Beleſton, Town Clerk, and divers other Citizens of the ſaid City, were brought into the Preſence of his Majeſty by the Lord Howard and Sir Horatio Townſhend, accompanied with Sir John Holland, Sir Philip Woodhouſe, Sir Ralph Hare, and Sir William Doyley, with divers other Eſquires and Gentlemen in the County of Norfolk; where the Major and the reſt of the Citizens preſented his Majeſty with the Reſignation of the Fee-Farm Rents of the ſaid City, under the Common Seal of the ſaid City, amounting to one hundred thirty and two Pounds, eighteen Shillings, and three Pence yearly; and one thouſand Pounds in Gold, as a Teſtimony of their Thankfulneſs to God for his Majeſty's Safe Return to the Government of his Kingdom; and of their Loyalty and Faithfulneſs to his Majeſty.

Thomas Rant and Joſeph Payne knighted.

And his Majeſty gave them a gracious Reception, and was pleaſed to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon the ſaid Thomas Rant and Joſeph Payne, and gave the Honour of his Hand to all that Company; and promiſed his conſtant Favour and Protection to the ſaid City.

Order of Council for a Proclamation againſt Duels.

Council Book, MS.

At the Council-Board in Whitehall. Upon the Reading his Majeſty's Declaration againſt Duels, publiſhed in his Majeſty's Chapel upon Sunday the 24th of November, 1658. It was ordered by this Board, that a Copy thereof ſhould be ſent to his Majeſty's Attorney-General, who is forthwith to prepare a Proclamation againſt Duells, and to inſert therein all ſuch Changes as ſhall be neceſſary, and particularly that his Majeſty will not extend his Pardon to any Perſon that ſhall offend againſt this his Proclamation.

According to a Declaration publiſhed by his Majeſty at Bruſſels.

A Proclamation ſignifying that his Majeſty having formerly in a Declaration publiſhed at Bruſſels November the 24th, 1658. manifeſted his Diſlike of impious and unlawful Duels, ſtrictly commanding all his Subjects whatſoever, that they do not by themſelves, or any others, either by Meſſage, Word, Writing, or other Ways or Means, challenge or cauſe to be challenged, any Perſon or Perſons to fight in Duel, nor to carry, accept, or conceal any Challenge, nor actually to fight, or to be a Second to any therein.

Purport of the ſaid Proclamation.

His Majeſty doth hereby further declare, that every Perſon that ſhall offend againſt the ſaid Command, ſhall not only incur his Majeſty's higheſt Diſpleaſure, but ſhall be incapable of holding any Office in his Majeſty's Service, and never after be permitted to come to Court, or be preferred; beſides the Suffering of ſuch Puniſhments as the Law ſhall inflict on ſuch Offenders. All Perſons likewiſe that accept or know of ſuch Challenges, and do not reveal the ſame to one of his Majeſty's Privy-Council, or the next Juſtice of Peace, ſhall be liable to the ſame Penalties, and to be proceeded againſt according to Law. And finally, his Majeſty doth forbid any Interceſſion to be made for ſuch Offenders, and doth further declare, that his Pardon ſhall not extend to them.

No Pardon to ſuch Offenders.

The Preſbyterians in Ireland had addreſſed his Majeſty to be their Covenanting King, againſt Popery and Prelacy.

—— In that ſeveral of our Countrymen are not ſatisfied with the King's gracious Declaration as to the preſerving our Government, I am adviſed to put off my Journey two or three Days, that I may take Care, that by Inſtructions to the Committee of Eſtates, the King's Aſſurance in his Letter may be made good. —— The Proceedings to ſettle Epiſcopacy in England and Ireland go on apace: The Biſhops will be ſpeedily nominated for England, as they are moſtly already for Ireland. The Brethren from Ireland are at a great Stand what to do [the Preſbyterian Miniſters in the North of Ireland, who come over to addreſs the King to be their Covenanting King, and to engage againſt Error and Schiſm, Popery and Prelacy; and pray, that Reformation may be ſettled according to the Covenant] The General, Mancheſter, or any Perſon of Intereſt, refuſe to introduce them to the King, if they preſent their Addreſs. The moſt they can expect will be a Forbearance a little in the Exerciſe of their Miniſtry, but they will not be permitted to meet in Preſbyteries or a Synod: I give them all the Aſſiſtance I can, though they get none from the City Miniſters.

George Fox the leading Quaker committed to Priſon in Lancaſter, with a Vindication of himſelf.

Journal of George Fox, 8^vo^. Vol. I. p. 540.

A Vindication of the Innocency of George Fox, Priſoner at Lancaſter.

The Matters charged againſt me were: That I was a Perſon generally ſuſpected to be a common Diſturber of the Peace of the Nation, an Enemy to the King, and a chief Upholder of the Quaker's Sect: And that I, together with others of my Fanatick Opinion, have of late endeavoured to raiſe Inſurrections in theſe Parts of the Country, and to embroil the whole Kingdom in Blood. Wherefore the Gaoler was commanded to keep me in ſafe Cuſtody, till I ſhould be releaſed by Order from the King and Parliament.

I writ a plain downright Anſwer in Vindication of my Innocency to each Particular, as followeth:

He had foreſeen the bringing down thoſe who had been unrighteouſly ſet up three Years before the King came in.

I am a Priſoner at Lancaſter, committed by Juſtice Porter. A Copy of the Mittimus I cannot get: But ſuch like Expreſſions I am told are in it, which are very untrue. As that I am generally ſuſpected to be a common Diſturber of the Nation's Peace, an Enemy to the King, and that I with others ſhould endeavour to raiſe Inſurrections, to embroil the Nation in Blood. All which is utterly falſe; and I do in every Part thereof deny it. —— Whereas Major Porter ſaith, I am an Enemy to the King, this is falſe: For my Love is to him, and to all Men, though they be Enemies to God, to themſelves, and to me. And I can ſay it is of the Lord, that he is come in to bring down many unrighteouſly ſet up, of which I had a Sight three Years before he came in. It is much, he ſhould ſay I am an Enemy to the King, for I have no Reaſon ſo to be, he having done nothing againſt me, &c. Subſcribed, From an innocent Sufferer in Bonds, and cloſe Priſoner in Lancaſter Caſtle, called Upon my being taken, and forcibly carried away from Margaret Fell's Houſe, and charged with Things of ſo high a Nature, ſhe was concerned, as looking upon it to be an Injury offered to her. Whereupon ſhe writ the following Lines, and ſent them abroad directed thus:

And her Requeſt to him being to ſend for me up and hear the Cauſe himſelf, he promiſed he would, and commanded his Secretary to ſend down an Order for bringing me up, &c.

His Majeſty's Speech to the Houſe of Peers, to quicken the Paſſing of the Bill of Indemnity.

London, for the King's Printers, 1660.

His Majeſty's gracious Speech to the Houſe of Peers the 27th of July, 1660. concerning the ſpeedy paſſing of the Bill of Indemnity and Oblivion. Ordered by the Lords to be forthwith printed and publiſhed.

Die Veneris 27 Julii, 1660.

My Lords,

Repeating his frequent Motions for diſpatch of that important Act.

When I came firſt hither to you, which was within two or three Days after I came to Whitehall, I did, with as much Earneſtneſs as I could, both by myſelf and the Chancellour, recommend to you and the Houſe of Commons, the ſpeedy Diſpatch of the Act of Indemnity, as a neceſſary Foundation of that Security we all pray for. I did ſince, by a particular Meſſage to the Houſe of Commons, again preſs them to haſten that important Work, and did likewiſe by a Proclamation publiſh to all the Kingdom, that I did with Impatience expect that that Act ſhould be preſented to me for my Aſſent, as the moſt reaſonable and ſolid Foundation of that Peace, Happineſs, and Security I hope and pray for to myſelf and all my Dominions. I will not deny it to you, I thought the Houſe of Commons too long about that Work, and therefore, now it comes up to you, I would not have you guilty of the ſame Delay. I thank God I have the ſame Intentions and Reſolutions now I am here with you, which I had at Breda, and believe that I owe my being here to God's Bleſſing upon the Intentions and Reſolutions I then expreſſed to have, I will read to you what I then ſaid.

And reading that Part of his Declaration from Breda.

And to the End that the Fear of Puniſhment may not engage any, conſcious to themſelves of what is paſſed, to a Perſeverance in Guilt for the Future, by oppoſing the Quiet and Happineſs of their Country in the Reſtauration of King, Peers, and People to their juſt, ancient, and fundamental Rights: We do by theſe Preſents declare, that we do grant a free and general Pardon, which we are ready upon Demand to paſs under our Great Seal of England, to all our Subjects, of what Degree or Quality ſoever, who within forty Days after the publiſhing hereof, ſhall lay hold on this our Grace and Favour, and ſhall by any publick Act declare their doing ſo; and that they return to the Loyalty and Obedience of good Subjects; excepting only ſuch Perſons as ſhall hereafter be excepted by Parliament: Thoſe only excepted, let all our loving Subjects, how faulty ſoever, rely upon the Word of a King, ſolemnly given by this preſent Declaration, that no Crime whatſoever committed againſt us or our Royal Father, before the Publication of this, ſhall ever riſe in Judgment, or be brought in Queſtion againſt any of them, to the leaſt Endamagement of them, either in their Lives, Liberties, or Eſtates, or (as far forth as lies in our Power) ſo much as to the Prejudice of their Reputations, by any Reproach or Term of Diſtinction from the reſt of our beſt Subjects. We deſiring and ordaining, that henceforward all Notes of Diſcord, Separation, and Difference of Parties be utterly aboliſhed among all our Subjects, whom we invite and conjure to a perfect Union among themſelves under our Protection, for the Re-ſettlement of our juſt Rights, and theirs in a free Parliament: By which upon the Word of a King, we will be adviſed.

And deſires them not to keep him from performing his Promiſes.

He Thanks them for the Juſtice of excepting his Father's Murderers; and he never thought of excepting any other.

Hoping Mercy and Indulgence will bring all others to Repentance.

My Lords, if you do not join with me in extinguiſhing this Fear, which keeps the Hearts of Men awake, and apprehenſive of Safety and Security; you keep me from performing my Promiſe, which if I had not made, I am perſuaded neither I nor you had been now here; I pray let us not deceive thoſe who brought or permitted us to come together. I knew well there were ſome Men who could neither forgive themſelves, or be forgiven by us, and I thank you for your Juſtice towards thoſe, the immediate Murderers of my Father, and I will deal truly with you, I never thought of excepting any other. I pray think well upon what I have offer'd, and the Benefit you and I have received from that Offer, and encourage and oblige all other Perſons, by not excluding them from the Benefit of this Act. This Mercy and Indulgence is the beſt Way to bring them to a true Repentance, and to make them more ſevere to themſelves, when they find we are not ſo to them. It will make them good Subjects to me, and good Friends and Neighbours to you; and we have then all our End, and you ſhall find this the ſecureſt Expedient to prevent future Miſchief: Therefore I do earneſtly deſire and conjure you to depart from all particular Animoſities and Revenge, or Memory of paſt Provocations, and that you will paſs this Act without other Exceptions, then of thoſe who were immediately guilty of that Murther of my Father. My Lords, I have told you my Opinion, and I hope you will be of the ſame. If any Perſons appear of ſuch dangerous and obſtinate Principles, that the Peace of the Kingdom cannot be preſerved whilſt they have Liberty in it, ſome other Courſe may be taken, that they ſhall not be able to do hurt; and I aſſure you, there is nothing can enable them to do ſo much Harm, as the deferring the Paſſing this Act.

And therefore again earneſtly deſires, that the Act may paſs without any Exception but of thoſe immediate Murderers.

I hope I need ſay nothing of Ireland, and that they alone ſhall not be without the Benefit of my Mercy: They have ſhewed much Affection to me abroad, and you will have a Care of my Honour, and of what I have promiſed to them. I do again conjure you, that you will uſe all Expedition in diſpatch of this Bill.

Journal of the Houſe of Lords, and Commons

Die Sabbati Julii 28, 1660. This Day his Majeſty being preſent gave Order to the Gentleman Uſher to give Notice to the Houſe of Commons that they preſently wait upon him, who being come, they by their Speaker preſented his Majeſty with two Bills, one of Tonnage and Poundage, the other concerning the Exciſe; with a ſhort Speech to this Effect;

With a ſhort Speech by the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons.

That it was never the Courſe of Parliaments to charge the People with Payments, until their Liberties and Grievances were firſt confirmed and redreſſed; yet out of the greateſt Truſt and Confidence that ever Subjects had in a Prince, the Houſe of Commons do now go out of their old Way, and have now ſupplied his Majeſty's Neceſſities with the greateſt Gift that ever Prince of this Kingdom had given by his People, which they humbly preſented to his Majeſty. —— The Clerk pronounced the Royal Aſſent.

I. An Act for continuing the Exciſe until the 20th of Auguſt, 1660.

II. A Subſidy granted to the King of Tonnage and Poundage, and other Sums of Money payable upon Merchandizes exported and imported.

IV. An Act for reſtoring unto James Marquis of Ormond all his Honours, Mannors, Lands, and Tenements in Ireland whereof he was in Poſſeſſion on the 23d of October, 1641. or at any Time ſince.

Woodrow's Introduction, p. 49.

A Letter of Mr. Sharp at Weſtminſter, to Mr. Douglas at Edinburgh, dated July 28, 1660. telling him, that Argyle will be ſent down to the Parliament to be tried; his Friends wiſh rather he were tried before the King. No Petition from the Proteſters will be acceptable to the King. I wonder how they expect you ſhould, by a Conjunction with them, involve yourſelf in their Guilt and Hazard. Their Remonſtrance will be cenſured. Yeſterday the King went to the Houſe, and in an excellent Speech preſſed an Indemnity to all, who had not an immediate Hand in his Father's Murder. I ſpoke this Day with our Brethren from Ireland, who tell me, by the Advice of their beſt Friends here, they are reſolved to expunge out of their Addreſs the Expreſſions which might be moſt offenſive, and to tender a ſmooth one to his Majeſty, without mentioning their Exception againſt Prelacy, or craving Reformation according to the Covenant.

SUNDAY July 29.
The Preſbyterian Miniſters diſpleaſed at the Anſwer given to their Propoſals, murmur at the Attempt of Reconciliation.

Life of Mr. Baxter, Fol. Lib. I. Part II. p. 258.

The Preſbyterian Miniſters were diſpleaſed at the Anſwer that had been lately given to their Propoſals; and Mr. Baxter had replied in a Defence of thoſe Propoſals. Hereupon (ſays Mr. Baxter) ſome very learned godly Men renewed their former Speeches. That it was a vain Attempt to endeavour a Reconciliation with ſuch Men: That their Minds were exaſperated, and they were reſolved to monopolize the Favour of our Prince, and all Honours and Preferments to themſelves: That there was no hope they would do any thing for the promoting of ſtrict ſerious Godlineſs, or any thing that deſerved the Name of Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline: That undoubtedly they do draw us on, partly to ſpin out the Time till they are ready to perſecute us without any Danger to themſelves, and partly to ſet us together by the Ears and otherwiſe abuſe us, by drawing us to grant them that which they know our Brethren cannot grant.

Mr. Baxter has no Expectation of this Conference.

Yet is for a Continuation of it,

For ſeveral Reaſons.

Eſpecially becauſe they are not ſo formidable to the Biſhops,

As are the Anabaptiſts, Millenaries or Levellers.

To all this, I anſwered for my own Part, that though Charity commanded me to hope that there were ſome Men among them better than this Deſcription doth import, yet my Reaſon forced me, all Things conſidered, to have as low Expectations of this Conference as they had; and that I made no doubt but that the End would verify much what was ſaid; that for my own Part I looked e're long to be ſilenced by them, with many hundreds more, and that all this was but to quiet Men till the Time. But yet for all that I was fully convinced that it was our Duty not only to yield to an offered Treaty, but to be the Seekers of it, and follow it on till we ſee the Iſſue. 1. Becauſe we are commanded, if poſſible, as much as in us lyeth, to live peaceably with all Men. 2. Becauſe though we have too great a Probability of ſuch an Iſſue as they deſcribe, yet we are not certain of it, and the leaſt Poſſiblity of a better Iſſue may ſhew us, that we ſhould wait on God in the Uſe of the Means, till we are diſappointed. 3. Becauſe we have no other Means at all to uſe; to keep our Flocks and publick Work we cannot: For the old Laws will be in Force again, if we ſay nothing; and new ones will further enforce them, if there be need. And for our Parts we are not formidable to the Biſhops at all, were our Numbers ſix Times as great as theirs: For we abhor all Thoughts of Sedition and Rebellion, and they know that this is our Judgment, and therefore how ſhould they be afraid of Men, whoſe Conſciences bind them to make no Reſiſtance to the legal Exerciſe of a lawful Authority. If it were the Anabaptiſts, Millenaries, or Levellers, they would fear them. But for my Part, I thought it very unmeet that ſuch a Word as intimated any Formidableneſs in us, ſhould ever come out of our Mouths, either to them, or to our People, or among ourſelves, for it ſeemeth to intimate either that we would reſiſt, or would have them think ſo, &c.

About this Time came forth a Book call'd, A Battle-door for Teachers and Profeſſors to learn Singular and Plural, mark'd in every Page with the Form and Figure of a penny Horn-Book. The Work was neatly done by John Stubs and Benjamin Furly. But Fox, who beſides his Engliſh Tongue knew none of the Languages therein (being thirty in Number, as Latin, Greek, Hebrew, Chaldee, Italick, Syriack, Arabick, &c.) was ſo deſirous to ſeem to be the Author of this Book and that, whatever it contained of Induſtry and Praiſe-worthineſs, had its Original from him, that he even here and there ſubſcribed his Name to every Page, and by him confirmed Page 240. The ſaid George Fox ſent a Letter to John III. King of Poland, written Originally in Engliſh, and ſent into Holland, and there tranſlated into the German Tongue. This Epiſtle was ſo learnedly done, that it looked not like the Work of a ſingle Perſon; yet ſo, as that they left it to Fox, an ignorant Fellow, who ſubſcribed it only Geo. Fox.

This was ſet forth in Examples or Inſtances taken out of the Scriptures, and out of Books of Teaching in about thirty Languages. John Stubbs and Benjamin Furly took great Pains in the Compiling of it, which I put them upon, and ſome Things I added. When it was finiſhed, ſome of them were preſented to the King and Council, to the Biſhops of Canterbury and London, and to the two Univerſities one a-piece, &c.

The Author had been Tutor to the young Lord Sunderland, and preſented by his Mother the Lady Dowager Counteſs, to the Rectory of Brington in the Dioceſe of Peterborough.

Epiſt. Ded. To the right honourable and my noble Lady Dorothy Counteſs of Sunderland.

——— It is by your Ladyſhip's Donation, that I enjoy a good Portion, and which is more a good People, whoſe more than uſual Integrity, and more than ordinary Affection (as I am apt to believe when I look abroad) have made me much more happy in my Contentment, than all their Poſſeſſions put together can make me rich. And as they were a Treaſure which (under the Providence of God) was by your Ladyſhip's Care as well as Favour committed to my Charge, ſo I am able with ſome Comfort to give your Ladyſhip this Account, that how few ſoever I may have gained, I have not loſt ſo much as one. Were it not for this Comfort, I ſhould think my preſent Poſſeſſion (though moſt freely conferred by your Ladyſhip) had been bought by me at too dear a Rate; it having coſt me a Sequeſtration from your Ladyſhip's Preſence, and from the immediate Pleaſure which I enjoy'd in the Education of your Son, whoſe choice Endowments of Nature having been happily ſeaſon'd and crown'd with Grace, gave him at once ſuch a Willingneſs and ſuch an Aptneſs to be taught as reconciled my greateſt Pains with Eaſe and Pleaſure. —— So as the Education of my dear Lord was not ſo much my Employment as it was my Recreation and my Reward. ——

He gives a great Character of his young Pupil.

But now after his Majeſty's Reſtauration, *Benj. Thomas Wren, ſecond Son of Matthew Biſhop of Ely, and ſometimes a Student of Cambridge, was created Doctor of Phyſick, by Virtue of the Chancellour's Letters, which ſay, that by Force of the late unhappy Times, he was conſtrained to leave the Univerſity of Cambridge (in divers Colleges whereof his Father was Viſitor) and for his Proficiency in Studies he was fain to ſettle himſelf within the Verge of the Univerſity of Oxon. —— That the Preſſures under which his Father lay for ſeventeen Years together were ſuch, that he could not (his Eſtate being taken away) allow his Children Bread, much leſs ſupply their Expences for living in Colleges, and the taking of their Degrees, only to have the Benefit of the publick Library, &c. This Perſon who was much addicted to Muſick, while he ſtudied in Oxon, (which was about eight Years) was made Archdeacon of Ely by his Father after his Majeſty's Reſtauration, had other Spiritualities as I conceive conferr'd upon him, and became a Member of the Royal Society. He died in 1679. being then of Wilberton in the Iſle of Ely, and whether he was Doctor of the Laws at Cambridge I cannot tell.

The Doctor of Law created the ſame Day at Oxon, was William Fuller ſome Time of St. Edmund-Hall. —He was afterward Biſhop of Limerick and at length of Lincoln.

Dr. Manſell's Infirmities being great, and the Decays of Age, eſpecially of Sight, preſſing hard upon him, he would not be perſuaded to act longer in that Station; and had for the ſame Reaſon juſt before twice refuſed the Dignity of a Biſhop. The beſt he thought he could do for the Society was, to give Way to a more buſie and active Succeſſor, that would ſtudy the Intereſt of the College, with the ſame Concern as he had done: Accordingly having by new Conveyances ſettled the Remains of his Eſtate, which the Civil War had left him, upon the College, he reſigned his Principalſhip, and recommended to them Dr. William Baſſet, Fellow of All-Souls, a Man of conſiderable Intereſt in his own Country of Glamorganſhire, whom he thought would have added to the Reputation of the College by his Government, and to the Revenues of it, in all Probability, by his generous Mind and ample Fortune. But Dr. Baſſet's want of Health not allowing him to accept of ſo great a Burthen, Dr. Jenkins was looked upon as the next Perſon among them capable of retrieving the Credit and Diſcipline of the College, and therefore was at a free Election of the Fellows, March 1, 1660. unanimouſly choſen in his Stead.

Tho. White or de Albiis a Roman Prieſt, had in the late Uſurpation maintain'd all the Principles of Rebellion and Anarchy, to oppoſe the Reſtauration of the King.
In favour of Oliver Cromwell, then Protector.

Dr. P. du Moulin's Anſwer to Philanax Angl. 4to. 1664. p. 61.

In the Height of Oliver's Tyranny, Thomas White, Gentleman, a Prieſt, and a right Jeſuit in all his Principles about Obedience, ſet out a Book, entitled, The Grounds of Obedience and Government; wherein he maintains, that if the People by any Circumſtance be devolved to the State of Anarchy, their Promiſe made (to their expelled Governour) binds no more. That the People are remitted by the civil managing or inſufficiency of their Governour to the Force of Nature to provide for themſelves, and not bound by any Promiſe made to their Governour. That the Magiſtrate by his Miſcarriages abdicateth himſelf from being a Magiſtrate, and proveth a Brigand or Robber inſtead of a Defender. That Word Defender he writes with a great D, that the Reader may take Notice whom he means. If the Magiſtrate (ſaith he) have truly deſerved to be diſpoſſeſſed, or if it be rationally doubted, that he hath deſerved it, and be be actually out of Poſſeſſion: In the former Caſe, it is certain the Subject hath no Obligation to hazard for his Reſtitution, but rather to hinder it. —— The next Caſe is, if he be innocent and wrongfully depoſed, and totally diſpoſſeſſed, it were better for the common Good to ſtay as they are, than to venture the Reſtoring him, becauſe of the publick Hazard. —— Nay, he maintaineth, That a diſpoſſeſſed Prince, whether by Right or Wrong, is obliged abſolutely to renounce all Right and Claim to Government, and if he does not, he is worſe than an Infidel. He tells us that Pope Urban VIII. publiſhed a Deciſion, That after five Years quiet Poſſeſſion of an Eſtate, the Church was not bound to take Notice whether the Title were lawful or no; but acknowledge the Poſſeſſor. —— And concludes, That the Right of the old Magiſtate is transferred from him to his Rival by the Title of Quiet Poſſeſſion.

This was the Philoſophy of that contemplative Gentleman, when the King lived in Exile, and Oliver ſate on the Throne. Having ſo well deſerved of the King, he was not long since highly recommended to his Majesty by a Man of great Note: But the King, who hath a royal Insight into Persons and Businesses, stopp'd him with this short Answer, No more of that, I know what Man he is.

And yet this seditious Writer was highly recommended to his Majesty, by a Man of great Note. But his Majesty knew the Man.

Mr. Wood's Character of Mr. White.

He sometimes styled himself Thomas Anglus ex Albiis East Saxonum.

Thomas White, second Son of Richard White of Hatton in Essex, Esq; by Mary his Wife, Daughter of Edmund Plowden the great Lawyer, became a secular Priest and a most noted Philosopher, as his published Writings much sought after and admired by many, shew. He died in his Lodgings in Drury-lane, between the Hours of two and three in the Afternoon of the sixth Day of July, An. 1676. aged 94 Years, and was buried almost under the Pulpit in the Church of St. Martin in the Fields, on the ninth of the same Month. By his Death the Roman Catholicks lost an eminent Ornament from among them, and it hath been a Question among some of them, whether ever any secular Priest of England went beyond him in philosophical Matters.

Epist. Ded. To the right honourable Sir Edward Hyde, Knight, Chancellour and Under-Treasurer of his Majesty's Exchequer, Lord Chancellour of England, and one of his Majesty's most honourable Privy-Council.

My Lord,

Rejoicing in the Blessing of the best of Kings.

And applauding his Lordship for being the great Instrument in it.

It is a Sin as great to be insensible of our Mercies, as to turn them into Wantonness. The best of Kings is the Blessing of our Nations. —— To this over-ruling Providence therefore in the first and chiefest Place belongs the Sacrifice of our Praise: And in the next Place to his Instruments: Among these, how much your Lordship hath merited by your constant Attendance, your faithful Counsels, and such unshaken Allegiance, as hath neither been tainted with Suspicion, nor tired by Calamities. —— The King hath entrusted you with the Jewel of his Conscience. —— He hath entrusted you with the great Seal of his Indulgences and Pardons. —— He hath entrusted you with many Encouragements and Rewards for the loyaler and sounder Clergy; yea, and with a Conquest of the Erring by the Streams of his Munificence. And who more fit to be entrusted with Conscience, Mercy, and Bounty, than a Person religious, gentle, and noble. —— You have learned of Elisha so to favour the Sons of the Prophets and their Relations, as instead of rendring them but a poor Moiety of the Tythe of their Tythes, (which was the pia Fraus and reforming Sacrilege of our late Lay-Preachers and Black Saints): You make it much of your Business to fill their empty Vessels with Oyl of Gladness. —— Your noble Virtues encourage me in the Dedication of this little Book, and the rather, both because the Author (my best of Unkles) was not, I presume, unknown to your Lordship, and because myself had the Honour to be your Lordship's Contemporanean in our renowned University of Oxford. —— Full fifteen Years hath this Book continued a private and close Mourner for the Death of the Author, and the Heresies of the later Times. —— Mine it was by the Right of an Executor, and your's it is by the Right of Dedication. ——

London, August
4, 1660.

The humblest of all your Servants,
JOHN FAIRECLOUGH vulgo FEATLEY.

The Publisher's Introduction to the ensuing Book.

A Description of the Iniquity and Misery of the late Times.

—— The Misery of our last and wasting Maladies we have not forgotten: For our Land was surfeited with Blood, and our Garments were rolled in Blood: We carried our Lives in our Hands, and our Estates were exposed to Rapine:

Hereſies and Schiſms did eat like a Gangrene, and Religion was near loſt in the Atheiſm, Blaſphemy, Epicuriſm, and Liberty of thoſe looſer Times. —— The chief Cauſe was the Solemn League and Covenant, but was it lawful or proper? If we truly deſire a ſober, judicious, and ſolid Reſolution, I preſume that the enſuing Book will anſwer our Doubts, and inform our Conſciences.

And of the Diſcontents and Ingratitude of the preſent Times.

I confeſs that this Book might have ſlept ſtill in private, and ſhould not have grown publick (eſpecially at this Time) if the Spirit of Contradiction were not now ſo prevalent, and Malice ſo induſtrious. —— Alas! alas! the Moth endeavours to eat into our Garments again, and the Canker into our pureſt Gold. We daily ſee, how theſe Diſcontents of ungrateful and irreligious Spirits endeavour to blaſt our faireſt Hopes, by diſturbing our Peace and renewing our Contentions. The Ambitious are diſcontented and want Promotion: The Malicious are troubled and want Revenge: The needy Sufferers are impatient and want Preferment: The Heretical are vexed and fear a Curb: And the Schiſmatical are unquiet and ſuſpect a Settlement. Too many forget the Miſeries of War; too few are thankful for Peace and Truth.

Yet many of the learned and conſcientious Covenanters do already retract their Errors.

——— Yet we ſee and rejoice that many learned and conſcientious Covenanters retract their Errours: Some there are whoſe Judgments are convinced by the Syllogyſm of Conſcience: Some who are charmed by the Gentleneſs of Remiſſion; and ſome alſo who are reclaimed by the Royal Care and indulgent Tenderneſs of our moſt gracious Sovereign, who maketh the Children of the Bond-woman Heirs with thoſe of the Free-woman.

While an inflexible Obſtinacy remains in ſome few diſſenting Brethren.

——— But I greatly ſuſpect the Inflexibility and pertinacious Obſtinacy of ſome few of our diſſenting Brethren, whom peradventure nothing will content but an unlimited Power to lord it in their Pariſhes, and (aſſiſted with their Confederates) to make their Conſiſtories as well the Benches for ſecular Cauſes, as the Tribunals for Eccleſiaſtical, and all under a Notion of the Power of the Keys. To theſe in particular, (if ſuch there are) I do friendly recommend this following Work, hoping that when they feel the Force of Argument in their ſtrong Convictions, they will not be aſhamed to confeſs their Miſtakes, and ſtudy to be quiet, &c.

THURSDAY Aug. 9. The King's Letters to Biſhops, Deans, and ſole Prebendaries, for their augmenting the Vicarages and inſufficient Curacies in Livings belonging to them.

The King's Majeſty's moſt gracious Letter and Declaration to the Biſhops, Deans, and Prebends for the Augmentation of Vicarages and Stipends of Curates in Livings impropriated to Biſhops, Deans, and Chapters.

London, printed for John Jones, 1660. in a broad Sheet.

CHARLES R.

As nothing is more in our Deſires than to provide that the Church of England under our Reign might be furniſhed with a religious, learned, ſober, modeſt, and prudent Clergy; ſo we are ready to give Encouragement to their Labours and Study in their ſeveral Degrees and Stations; that they may give Check to all Profaneneſs and Superſtition, and as zealouſly affect to remove all Scandals and Reproach from them and their Callings: Conceiving therefore a competent Maintenance to be a neceſſary Encouragement; and that all other Perſons who have Power to diſpoſe of Tythes, may be invited to cheriſh a learned and godly Miniſtry: We do Reſolve, that where Tythes have been appointed for the Support of Biſhops, Deans and Chapters, collegiate Churches and Colleges, and other ſingle Perſons, that have not taken due Care to provide and ordain ſufficient Maintenance for the Vicars of their reſpective Places, or for the Curates where Vicarages were not endow'd, to ſettle for the future ſome good Addition and Encreaſe on ſuch Vicarages and Curates Places.

Our Will therefore is, that forthwith Proviſion be made for the Augmentation of all ſuch Vicarages and Cures, where the Tythes and Profits are appropriated to you and your Succeſſors, in ſuch manner, that they who immediately attend upon the Performance of miniſterial Offices in every Pariſh, may have a competent Portion out of every Rectory impropriate to your See, or to any of you or your Succeſſors.

No Leaſes to be granted of ſuch impropriate Rectories or Tythes, till a Proviſion of 100 l. or 80 l. per Ann. be made for the Vicar or Curate.

And to this End our farther Will is, that no Leaſe be granted of any Rectories or Parſonages belonging to your See, or belonging to you or your Succeſſors, until you ſhall provide that the reſpective Vicarages or Curates Places, where are no Vicarages endow'd, have ſo much Revenue in Glebe, Tythes, or other Emoluments, as commonly will amount to one hundred or eighty Pounds a Year, or more if it will bear it, and in good Form of Law ſettle it upon them and their Succeſſors; and where the Rectories are of ſmall Value, and cannot permit of ſuch Proportions to the Vicar and Curate, our Will is that one half of the Profit of ſuch a Rectory be reſerved for the Maintenance of the Vicar or Curate. And if any Leaſes or Grants of ſuch forenamed Rectories have been made by you ſince the firſt Day of June laſt paſt, and you did not ordain competent Augmentation of the Vicarages or Cures in their reſpective Places; our Will is, that out of the Fines which you have received, or are to receive, you do add ſuch Encreaſe to the Vicar or Curate as is agreeable to the Rates and Proportions formerly mentioned.

And that every Biſhop or other Ordinary, ſhall employ his Authority and Power for the Augmentation of all other poor Livings.

The Dean and Chapter to compell the ſole Prebendary.

And the Biſhop to interpoſe his Authority.

Or the Archbiſhop upon Complaint made to him.

And our further Will is, that you do employ your Authority and Power, which by Law belongeth to you as Ordinary for the Augmentation of Vicarages and Stipends of Curates, and that you with Diligence proceed in due Form of Law, for the raiſing and eſtabliſhing convenient Maintenance of thoſe who do attend holy Duties in Pariſh Churches: And if any Prebendary in any Church (the Corps of whoſe Prebend conſiſts of Tythes) ſhall not obſerve theſe our Commands, then we require you or the Dean of the Church, to uſe all due Means in Law, where you or he hath Power to compel them: Or that otherwiſe you report to the Biſhop of the Dioceſe, where the ſaid Corps doth lye, that he may interpoſe his Authority for fulfilling this our Order. And if any Dean, or Dean and Chapter, or any that holdeth any Dignity or Prebend in the Cathedral Church, do not obſerve theſe our Commands, that you call them before you, and ſee this our Will be obeyed. And if you or any Biſhop do not your Duty, either in your own Grants, or in ſeeing others to do it, then we will upon that Complaint, that the Archbiſhop of the Province ſee all performed according to this our Declaration, Will and Pleaſure. And whereas there are divers rural Prebends, where the Vicarages are not ſufficiently endow'd, we require you to ſee thoſe our Commands be fully obſerved by them.

They who refuſe or omit to obey theſe Commands, are to be judged unworthy of his Majeſty's future Favours.

And we do declare our Will and Pleaſure in all Particulars before-cited to be, that if you or any of your Succeſſors, or any Dean, or Dean and Chapter of that our Cathedral Church, or any other Perſon holding any Office, Benefice, or Prebend in the ſame, do or ſhall refuſe or omit to obſerve theſe our Commands, we ſhall judge them unworthy of our future Favour, whenſoever any Preferment Eccleſiaſtical ſhall be deſired by them from us.

The Biſhops to give an Account to the Archbiſhop, and he to the King.

And laſtly our Will and Command is, that you and your Succeſſors do at or before the firſt Day of October in every Year, render an Account to the Archbiſhop of the Province, how theſe our Orders and Commands are obſerved, that the Archbiſhop afterwards may repreſent the ſame unto us.

Given at our Court at Whitehall, the ninth Day of Auguſt, in the twelfth Year of our Reign.

By his Majeſty's Command,

Edward Nicholas.

The following Addreſs was preſented to his Majeſty in the Cloſet at Whitehall, on Friday the tenth of Auguſt 1660, by George Wild, Doctor of Divinity, accompanied with Sir William Hayward, Knt. Gentleman in Ordinary of his Majeſty's Privy Chamber, and theſe of the Clergy, Dr. Pearſon, Richard Randall, Thomas Mulcaſter, Thomas Packenham, Edward Lorkin, and Jo. Worthington.

To the King's moſt excellent Majeſty. The moſt humble and joyful congratulatory Addreſs of divers Rectors, Vicars, and other of the Clergy, in the County of Surrey.

May it pleaſe your moſt Excellent Majeſty,

The preſent Mercies we enjoy through the infinite Goodneſs and Bounty of our God are wonderful in our Eyes. No Power but Omnipotency could extricate us out of thoſe woful Confuſions, and lamentable Labyrinths of Ruin, into which our national and perſonal Sins had ſo deeply and deſervedly plunged us. For whereas we were not long ſince deſpairing of ever beholding your Majeſty's bleſſed Face in Peace, and our troubled Thoughts were, that there was no Path for your Majeſty to walk unto your Royal Throne, but Blood and Fire and Pillars of Smoke; lo now to our very Amazement, it hath pleaſed the great King of Heaven and Earth (of whom your Majeſty's Perſon is an expreſs Image, and lively Character in your kingly Power and Sovereign Authority) to make Way thereunto without ſhedding in the Field one Drop of precious chriſtian Blood. Nay he hath cauſed thoſe very Swords, which were lately unnaturally and violently drawn againſt the Life of your moſt Excellent Majeſty, to be ready and willing to be now drawn for you, and hath conſtrained your moſt implacable Enemies to ſubmit to your Majeſty's Mercy.

And now we hope that as the Lord hath ſweetly inclined your Majeſty's Heart, like your Father of ever bleſſed Memory, to paſs by every Inſolency committed againſt your princely ſacred Perſon: So he will give every miſled and undutiful Subject a relenting Spirit, to mourn heavily for their wicked Diſloyalties, and to ſupplicate as for God's infinite Mercy, ſo likewiſe for your Majeſty's moſt gracious Pardon, which as we humbly begg'd by the late Act of the Commons in Parliament, ſo we do by this our Addreſs ſignify our joyful Acceptance thereof at your Majeſty's moſt clement and gracious Hands. And henceforth we ſhall ſtrive in our Prayers with the moſt high God, to grant to every Soul within your Majeſty's Dominions true Grace to manifeſt their Fear of him, by their Honour and Obedience towards you.

And as we heartily deſire to ſhew ourſelves your dutiful Subjects, ſo we do not doubt of finding your Majeſty an indulgent nurſing Father, to carry us in your Boſom, to cover us with your Wings of Protection, to rule us with your Scepter of Righteouſneſs, to defend us with your Sword of Might, to lead us by your moſt holy princely Example to all Piety and Virtue, that we may be a happy People under a moſt bleſſed and glorious KING.

And now the mighty Councellor from above inſpire your Majeſty's Royal Heart, and make you as wiſe as a glorious Angel, that you may diſcern between Good and Evil, and be able with your great Wiſdom to heal the Sores, and cure the Wounds of theſe your diſtracted Kingdoms; that you may with an invincible Courage under God, inſtrumentally finiſh the great and miraculous Work that he hath begun for your Majeſty and your People, in reſtoring your Royal Perſon to all your hereditary and due Rights; your Parliaments to their known Privileges; your Subjects to their Charters and juſt Liberties; the Church and Government to their ancient legal Government, Order, Beauty, Dignity, and Splendor; that all Poſterities to come, as well as this preſent Generation, may riſe up to call you CHARLES the BLESSED KING.

They conclude with a fervent Prayer for the King,

Now the Lord love you, delight in you, give you length of Days, with an uninterrupted Proſperity, protect your ſacred Perſon from all ſecret Conſpiracies, diſcover and convert your Enemies, increaſe and multiply your Friends, ſet your Throne in the Hearts of all your People, bleſs your Government, and when your Majeſty's long and moſt happy Reign ſhall expire, grant that there may not be wanting one of the Royal Line to ſit on the Throne after you, and receive your immortal Soul into his heavenly Kingdom, there to wear an immarceſſible Crown of Glory.

This is and ſhall be the continual hearty, zealous, fervent, loyal Prayer of us,

Your Majeſty's moſt faithful,
moſt obedient and moſt loving Subjects,

And ſubſcribe their Names.

A Letter of the reverend Mr. Sharp to Mr. Douglas at Edinburgh, dated Auguſt 11, 1660. ſignifying to him, That the Apprehenſions of Scotchmen here are much alter'd ſince his Majeſty hath been pleaſed to yield to what I humbly offer'd, by his Condeſcenſions in that Letter. I thought it was not amiſs to acquaint ſeveral here with it, and their Expreſſions about the Government of our Church are much moderated. The Letter of the Miniſters of London, in Anſwer to yours, is after much Belabouring ſigned by them, and I am to have it to Morrow. The Engliſh Preſbyterians Letter to their Brethren in Scotland.

Woodrow's Introduction, Appendix No. 10.

A Letter ſigned by Edmund Calamy, Simeon Aſh, Thomas Manton, directed to our reverend and highly eſteemed Brethren Mr. David Dickſon, Mr. Robert Douglas, Mr. James Hamilton, Mr. John Smith, and Mr. George Hutchinſon at Edinburg, dated London Auguſt 10, 1660.

In Anſwer to a Letter from them.

Reverend and beloved Brethren,

They rejoice in the King's Return.

And think they have broken the formidable Power of Sectaries.

And have been reſtored to their ancient, i. e. Preſbyterial Government.

And will wait upon the Lord for an Eſtabliſhment of it.

We had ſooner returned our Thanks to you for your brotherly Salutation and Remembrance of us, but that we expected the Convenience of Mr. Sharp's Return, hoping by that Time Things would grow to ſuch a Conſiſtency, that we might be able to give you a ſatisfactory Account of the State of Religion among us. We do with you heartily rejoice in the Return of our Sovereign unto the Exerciſe of Government over theſe his Kingdoms; and as we cannot but own much of God in the Way of bringing it about, ſo we look upon the Thing itſelf as the Fruit of Prayers, and a Mercy not to be forgotten. Hitherto our God hath helped us, in breaking the formidable Power of Sectaries, cauſing them to fall by the Violence of their own Attempts, and in reſtoring us to our ancient Government after ſo many Shakings, the only proper Baſis to ſupport the Happineſs and juſt Liberties of theſe Nations, and freeing us from the many Snares and Dangers to which we were expoſed by the former Confuſions and Uſurpations. Therefore we will yet wait upon the Lord, who hath in part heard us, until all thoſe Things, concerning which we have humbly ſought to him, be accompliſhed and brought about. We heartily thank you for your kind and brotherly Encouragements, and ſhall in our Places endeavour the

They will endeavour an advancing of the Covenanted Reformation,

To bring the Foundations of Preſbytery to a perfect Building.

the advancing of the Covenanted Reformation, according to the Bonds yet remaining upon our own Conſciences, and our renowned Profeſſions before God and Man; and though we cannot but foreſee potent Oppoſitions and ſad Diſcouragements in the Work, yet we hope our GOD will carry us through all Difficulties and Hazards, at length cauſe the Foundations now laid to increaſe into a perfect Building, that the top Stone may be brought forth with Shoutings, and his People cry, Grace, Grace unto it.

They bleſs God for the good Eſtate of the Kirk of Scotland.

Beg their Prayers and their Advice and Counſel what to do, being uncertain whether to be rigid or to comply.

We bleſs God on your Behalf, that your Warfare is in a great Meaſure accompliſhed, and the Church of Chriſt, and the Intereſts thereof, ſo far owned in Scotland, as to be ſecured, not only by the uniform Submiſſion of the People, but alſo by Laws, and thoſe confirmed by the Royal Aſſent, a Complication of Bleſſings, which yet the Kingdom of England hath not obtained, and (though we promiſe ourſelves much from the Wiſdom, Piety, and Clemency of his Royal Majeſty) through our manifold Deſtructions, Diſtances, and Prejudices, not like ſuddenly to obtain. Therefore we earneſtly beg the Continuance of your Prayers for us, in this Day of our Conflicts, Fears, and Temptations, as alſo your Advice and Counſel, that on the one Side, we may neither by any Forwardneſs, and rigid Counſels of our own, hazard the Peace and Safety of a late ſadly diſtempered, and not yet healed Nation; and on the other Side, by undue Compliances, deſtroy the Hopes of a begun Reformation. We have to do with Men of different Humours and Principles; the general Stream and Current is for the old Prelacy in all its Pomp and Height, and therefore it cannot be hoped for, that the Preſbyterial Government ſhould be owned as the publick Eſtabliſhment of this Nation, while the Tide runneth ſo ſtrongly that Way; and the bare Toleration of it will certainly produce a Miſchief, whilſt Papiſts, and Sectaries of all Sorts, will wind in themſelves under the Covert of ſuch a Favour: Therefore no Courſe ſeemeth likely to us to ſecure Religion, and the Intereſts of Chriſt Jeſus our Lord, but by making Preſbytery a Part of the publick Eſtabliſhment; which will not be effected, but by moderating and reducing Epiſcopacy to the Form of Synodical Government, and a mutual Condeſcendency of both Parties in ſome leſſer Things, which fully come within the Latitude of allowable Differences in the Church. This is all we can for the preſent hope for; and if we could obtain it, we ſhould account it a Mercy, and the beſt Expedient to eaſe his Majeſty, in his great Difficulties about the Matter of Religion: And, we hope, none that fear GOD, and ſeek the Peace of Sion, conſidering the perplexed Poſture of our Affairs, will interpret this to be any Tergiverſation from our Principles, or Apoſtacy from the Covenant; but if we cannot obtain this, we muſt be content, with Prayers and Tears, to commend our Cauſe to GOD, and, by meek and humble Sufferings, to wait upon him, until he be pleaſed to prepare the Hearts of the People for his beautiful Work, and to bring his Ways (at which they are now ſo much ſcandalized) into Requeſt with them.

The general Stream of the People is for old Prelacy.

No making Preſbytery a Part of the Eſtabliſhment.

And the bare Toleration of it would cover Papiſts and all ſort of Sectaries.

Therefore the beſt Way will be to moderate and reduce Epiſcopacy.

Thus we have, with all Plainneſs and Simplicity of Heart, laid forth our Straits before you, who again beg your Advice and Prayers, and heartily recommend you to the Lord's Grace, in whom we are,

Your loving Brethren,
and Fellow-labourers in the Work of the Goſpel,

And ſo much under the Pope's Diſpleaſure, that he is ſaid to be ſtill lying in the Inquiſition.

To the Reader.] Friend, I was put upon the Enquiry after the Manuſcript of this moderate Romaniſt our Countryman F. Barnes, by the double Reference Dr. Baſire makes to it in his marginal Annotations; with ſome Difficulty I at laſt recovered a Copy of it, the ſame as I remember the Doctor himſelf uſed at the Compoſure of his Diatribe, which then was with much Secrecy convey'd from Hand to Hand, none of us daring to own the having it, upon Apprehenſion of ſome Queſtion or Inconvenience from the Pope's Nuncio in Paris, the Author himſelf being under his Holineſs's high Diſpleaſure, and, as was ſaid, ſtill is in the ſevere Diſcipline of the Inquiſition for it. ——

Account of Dr. Coſin holding a Chapter at Peterborough.

He had been inſtalled Dean, Nov. 1. 1640.

Act Book of Dean Coſin and Chapter of Peterborough.

The reverend Dr. Coſin Dean of Peterborough returning from a long Exile came lately down to Peterborough, and held a Chapter for reſtoring and regulating the Affairs of that Church; by ſeveral Orders then made.

Mr. Standiſh in his fair and punctual Narrative at the End of the printed Hiſtory of that Church tells us: At the King's Return, Dr. Coſin the ancient Dean of this Church after almoſt twenty Years Exile in France, returned and reaſſumed his Right. Again in the Year 1660. about the End of July, he then after ſo long an Interval renew'd the ancient Uſage, and read Divine Service firſt himſelf, and cauſed it to be read every Day afterward, according to the old laudable Uſe and Cuſtom, and ſettled the Church and Quire in that Order wherein it now (1685.) continues.

Auguſt 1, 1660. Whereas during the late Troubles the ancient and common Chapter Seal of this Church hath been taken away or loſt, whereupon there hath ariſen a Neceſſity of making a new Seal for the Uſe of the ſaid Church, the Sculpture of which Seal is the croſs Daggers betwixt four Croſſes Pattee, with theſe Latin Words written about the ſame, viz. Sigillum Capitulare Eccleſiæ Cathedralis Petriburgenſis. It is now therefore ordered, that the new Seal from henceforth (until another Seal ſhall be agreed upon and made) ſhall be taken and uſed for the Common and Chapter Seal of the ſaid Church, &c.

Agreed, that according to the Tenor of his late Majeſty's Letters concerning Caſtor and Sutton Manours, the old Leaſe whereof expired divers Years ſince, there ſhall be now an Addition of Rent made upon the new Leaſing of thoſe Manours to the Sum of three hundred and ten Pounds per Ann. more than was reſerved upon them before, for the Augmentation of the ſeveral Stipends belonging to the Dean and Prebendaries, with other Officers and Uſes of this Church, as in the Letters Royal is mentioned, &c.

Agreed, that the white Tythes of the Pariſh of Peterborough ſhall be leaſed to the Vicar of the Town for the Time being, or his Truſtees towards the Augmentation of his Vicarage, and the Leaſe to be renewed at every ſeven Years gratis, if he requireth it.

See the Occaſion of calling this Audit, in a Paper of Dr Coſin, when Biſhop of Durham, March 2. 1660.

A very worthy new Vicar Mr. Gunton.

Memoran. The preſent Vicar is Mr. Simon Gunton Prebendary of the Cathedral Church, who lately ſucceeded Mr. Panke. When the Quire defaced by the Parliament Soldiers had been fitted up by the Townſmen, to whom it was given by an Ordinance; and the Devaſtations which the ſaid Soldiers and Cromwell had made, were in ſome Meaſure repaired; one Mr. Samuel Wilſon, School-Maſter of the Charter-Houſe in London, was ſent down by the Committee of plunder'd Miniſters, as they were then called, to be Preacher in the Minſter, with a Salary of 160 l. per Ann. in which Employment he continued until the King's Return.

An eminent Inſtance in the Father of Archbiſhop Teniſon.

That ſome Papiſts in Diſguiſe had thruſt themſelves into the Livings of our Clergy ſequeſtred in the late Times of Confuſion, appears by the undoubted Teſtimony of Archbiſhop Teniſon, in the Caſe of his own Father. It may be (ſaith Dr. Tho. Teniſon, in the Dedication of his True Account of a Conference with Mr. A. Pulton, Jeſuit) I have a Motive to ſevere Language to that ſort of Men, which few have beſides me. My Father being turn'd out of his Living of Mondeſley in Norfolk, as an Adherer to King Charles the Martyr, a Perſon, one of whoſe Names was Gubbard, recommending himſelf to the Committee at Norwich, as a Man who had a Zeal for the ſame Cauſe in which they were engaged, took Poſſeſſion of the Living, and received all Profits, but reſtored nothing: And with Modeſty he held the Living of Knapton alſo. After a few Years he began to throw off part of his Diſguiſe, and he preach'd up Purgatory and other ſuch Points in ſo open a Manner, that the ſame Committee who had put him in, turn'd him out again, and in a little Time he (as it were) vaniſh'd away.

He declar'd, that he verily believed the King was betray'd; that many of his Favours were ſurreptitiouſly obtained, and others abuſed and miſapply'd by ſecond Hands, that were entruſted to diſpoſe of them better. He ſaid, "He that ſaw Cromwell's, Bradſhaw's, and St. John's Creatures, nay, and the meaneſt of them, laden with "Offices and Honours, might give himſelf a ſecond Thought to underſtand "the Meaning of it: Eſpecially conſidering how many Thouſands of loyal Sub-"jects were ready to periſh for want of that, which was ſuperfluouſly ſcatter'd "among ſcarce ſo many ſingle Perſons on the other Side." He then laid down one general Rule for his Majeſty to obſerve, The Prince who pinches his Subjects Bellies, will loſe their Hearts. And Sir Francis Bacon obſerv'd, That the Multiplying of the Nobility, and other Degrees of Quality, doth ſpeedily bring a State to Neceſſity. Which becomes yet more dangerous, where it happens that the ancient Nobility is ſhrunk into Nothing, and the new Nobility are raiſed out of Nothing. In other Places he tells us, "The Court was dangerouſly throng'd "with Paraſites; Knaves repreſented to the King for honeſt Men, and honeſt "Men for Villains; a Watch upon the King's Ear to keep out better Informa-"tion; ſeditious Miniſters protected and encouraged; Libels againſt the King's "Authority and Perſon diſpers'd even by his Majeſty's ſworn Servants; and to "diſcover Treaſon was in ſome Reſpects more hazardous than to commit it." Afterward ſpeaking of the Act of Indemnity, he declar'd, "That Act made the "Enemies to the Conſtitution Maſters in Effect of the Booty of three Nations; "bating the Crown and Church Lands, all which they might now call their "own; while thoſe who ſtood up for the Laws were abandoned to the Comfort "of an irreparable but honourable Ruin." Then ſpeaking of the preſent Preachers, and the Non-Conformiſts in general, he ſays, "As to their Numbers, up-"on a moderate Calculation, there would ariſe at leaſt thirty againſt one in "the Nation, even in Covent-Garden, a Pariſh of the Geneva Stamp, the Odds "was little leſs, betwixt the late Petitioners for the Common Prayer and the Op-"poſers of it. And yet ſtill the Pulpits were profaned by unqualify'd and ſedi-"tious Lecturers, and thoſe too out of the rankeſt of the old Separatiſts, both "Preſbyterian and Independent, the better to advance the common Work of "ſtirring up the Rabble againſt his ſacred Majeſty, whom they more than "covertly aſperſe with Rottenneſs of Heart, preſſing the Calamities of the Na-"tion, and the Danger of Perſecution, ſo cloſe and home to the People, as "if the Knife were already at their Throats. They pray for the King's Con-"verſion rather than his Eſtabliſhment." Hancock prays, Give the King another, a new Heart, Lord. Mead ſeconds him with a Word of Conſolation, Ye do not know what a YEAR, yea, what a MONTH may bring forth: This laſt was repeated ſo often, and with ſuch an Accent, that it looked more like the timing of a Plot, than preſſing of a Duty. Theſe Lecturers, he ſaid, were increaſed both in Number and Boldneſs, to a moſt ſcandalous and prodigious Degree, ever ſince the laſt Receſs of the Parliament, not only to the Hazard of the publick Peace, but to the Diſhonour of the Engliſh Church. In ſumme, he very freely declar'd his Thoughts, and let his Majeſty know, that Miſplaced Mercy was his Father's Ruin.

With great Liberty, that would hardly be thought Decency.

A Sermon preached in the Cathedral Church at Winchester, on Sunday August 19, 1660. at the first Return of the Dean and Chapter to that Church, on Psalm xiv. 7. By Edward Stanley, D. D. Prebendary of the said Church.

The Presbyterian Ministers forc'd by Law to give Place to the rightful Church Incumbents.

After a printed Plea for their illegal Possession.

To which a short Answer was afterward given by the Author of the Friendly Debate.

London, 1660.

The Presbyterians who had continued in all Livings, unless where they had been supplanted by the Independent Teachers, were now constrained to give Way to the surviving Incumbents, who had been illegally ejected or sequestred from them. Yet they murmured at this Restitution of the rightful Owners, and had lately published their Plea for Ministers in Sequestrations. To which Plea the Author of the third Part of the Friendly Debate, 1670. p. 147. hath given this short Answer. The episcopal sequestred Clergy had been most grievously persecuted by the Usurpers. Not only stripp'd of their legal Maintenance, but made incapable to earn their Bread in any Way of their own Profession, by a Declaration of the late Protector, dated November 24, 1655. —— A marvellous Honeſty there is in ſome Mens Principles, their Removal from other Mens Freeholds they reckon for a Part of their hard Uſage; and tell us, they were caſt out of that which they ought freely to have reſtored. Yet they writ a Book called, A Plea for Miniſters in Sequeſtrations, An. 1660. where they boaſt of their not wanting what they unjuſtly detained. It is well known (ſay they) many of us need not, nor did need their Eſtates for a Subſiſtence. The greater Number of us (through the Mercy of God) could boaſt of as great Birth, Eſtates, Friends, and Offers of Preferment, as they: We having many of us ourſelves Livings, and Preferments to beſtow, and ſome beſtowed upon deſerving Men, &c. p. 248.

MONDAY Aug. 20. Mr. Will. Prynne, a great Enemy to Biſhops, as thinking he owed his hard Uſage to Archbiſhop Laud, &c. re-prints his Un-biſhoping of Timothy and Titus: With Additions and Appendix full of Bitterneſs of Spirit.

The Un-Biſhoping of Timothy and Titus and of the Angel of the Church of Epheſus. Or a brief elaborate Diſcourſe, proving Timothy and the Angel to be no firſt ſole or Dioceſan Biſhop of Epheſus, nor Titus of Crete: And that the Power of Ordination or Impoſition of Hands, belongs, Jure Divino, to Preſbyters as well as to Biſhops; who by Divine Inſtitution are evidenced to be one and the ſame with Preſbyters; and many over one City Church, not one over many Cities and Churches. Wherein all Objections, Pretences to the contrary, are fully anſwered; and the pretended Superiority of Biſhops over other Miniſters and Preſbyters, and their ſole Right of Ordination, Jure Divino (now much contended for) are utterly ſubverted in a moſt conſpicuous Manner. By William Prynne, Eſq; Bencher of Lincolns-Inn, a Well-wiſher to God's Truth, the King's juſt Prerogative, the People's Liberties, and the Church's Peace; firſt compiled and printed in the Year 1636. re-printed with Additions for publick Good and Satisfaction, Anno 1660.

London, for Edw. Thomas, 1660. 4to. p. 144.

An Appendix touching the Occaſions and Ends of Re-printing this Treatiſe, to prevent all Miſconſtructions.

He tells the Occaſion and End of reprinting this Tract.

The Occaſions inducing me to re-print this Treatiſe (which I compiled above twenty four Years ſince, whilſt impriſoned in the Tower by the cauſleſs Malice of ſome ſwaying Prelates) were theſe:

The Boldneſs of a popiſh Prieſt.

Firſt, The Boldneſs of a Popiſh Prieſt (under the Diſguiſe of a Sectary) in re-printing a pernicious Pamphlet, entitled, Eraſtus Junior, London, 1660. fitting this Parliament, with his Name prefixed to it, (Printed without a Name ſome few Months before) wherein he endeavours to prove, the Miniſters of the Church of England, whether epiſcopal or preſbyterian, to be no Miniſters, and their Ordination no legal Ordination, and thence infers our Church to be no Church, our Sacraments to be no Sacraments, becauſe our Miniſters are not lawfully ordained Miniſters.

The Extravagancies of ſome Epiſcopal Men.

Secondly, The Extravagancies of ſome of our reviving Engliſh Biſhops and epiſcopal Clergymen, who ſhaking Hands with the Council of Trent, Bellarmine, Janſenius, Eraſtus Junior, and our Romiſh Adverſaries —— diſown all Ordinations made by Preſbyters, during our long laſting Troubles, pronouncing them null and void, and refuſing to admit Miniſters ordained by Preſbyters to Benefices or Fellowſhips, unleſs they will renounce their Orders, and receive a Re-ordination by Biſhops; whereby they un-church all Preſbyterian Proteſtant Churches both at home and abroad.

The warm Motions in the Houſe of Commons.

Thirdly, The late unreaſonable Motions of ſome Members in the Commons Houſe itſelf, (Auguſt 15 and 17, 1660.) that all Miniſters ordained by Preſbyters during our late Troubles, ſhould be put from their Livings and Miniſtry, unleſs they were re-ordained by Biſhops within one Month. Since all Serjeants at Law made in thoſe Times were recalled, and made Serjeants by new Writs from the King.

—— I have ever readily conformed to that Church Government, which the King and Parliament have eſtabliſhed, ſo far forth as it was warranted by our Laws, never oppoſing our Biſhops eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction ſo far as it was juſtly claimed and exerciſed by Regal and Legal Authority. ——

He himſelf will ſubmit to a legal Church Government, with juſt Liberty to truly tender Conſciences.

But among the Ends of re-publiſhing this Diſcourſe, the chief is, patiently to expect and chearfully to ſubmit to that Model of Church Government (with juſt Liberty to truly tender Conſciences, in Points not fundamental, and conſiſtent with publick Peace) which we all hope will e're long be ſettled by his Majeſty's pious Endeavours and royal Authority, (according to the Miniſters and Commons Houſe Addreſſes to his Majeſty, in purſuance of his own royal Letters and Declarations ſent from Breda) with the Advice of moderate, learned and pious Divines of all formerly diſſenting Parties, and both Houſes of Parliament, for the future Tranquillity and Proſperity both of our Churches and Kingdoms, over which God long preſerve and proſper his Majeſty's moſt gracious and pious Reign.

Lincoln's-Inn, Aug. 20. 1660. WILLIAM PRYNNE.

The Wiſdom of the Government not to prefer any hot violent Men.

It was obſerved to be one Point of great Wiſdom in the King and his Miniſters, to place their Favours and Preferments upon the moſt ſober and moderate Men, not upon thoſe who had diſtinguiſh'd themſelves by a high and a bitter Spirit. This the Reaſon why Mr. Prynne, tho' very laborious in the Laws, and very Inſtrumental in his Majeſty's Reſtoration, was not advanc'd to be a Judge, tho' a very active Parliament Man; but inſtead of being made one of the Barons of the Exchequer, which, as 'tis ſaid, he ſought after, he was made chief Keeper of See Aug. 16. Athen. Oxon. Vol. II. col. 314.

Yet Judge Jenkins was rather stout than hot.

The like Neglect put upon Dr. Heylyn, Dr. Sibthorp and Dr. Griffith, Who rose no higher in the Church.

of his Majesty's Records in the Tower of London, with [illegible] Salary (but afterwards much lessen'd) purposely to [illegible] his Hand from [illegible] against the State and Bishops. This was suppos'd to be the Case of Judge Jenkins and others of the long Robe. So again in the Church, some of the noblest Divines, tho' great Sufferers, and of great Names, were passed by in the Designation to Bishopricks. An Instance in Dr. Peter Heylyn, who in 1660. upon his Majesty's Return to his Kingdoms, was restored to his Spiritualties, but never rose higher than Sub-Dean of Westminster, which was a Wonder to many, and a great Discontent to him and his: But the Reason being manifest to those that well know the Temper of the Person, I shall forbear to make mention of that Matter any further. Such was the Case of Dr. Sibthorpe, who had suffered very great Calamities in his Majesty's Cause: Yet upon the Return of King Charles II. he was only restored to the small Preferments from which he had been violently ejected. So with poor Dr. Matthew Griffith, sequestred, plundred, suffering seven violent Assaults, and five Imprisonments, and even committed to Newgate by General Monk for preaching up the King too soon; yet at the King's Return he was only restored to his Rectory, made Preacher to the honourable Societies of the Temples, and Rector of Bladon near Woodstock in Oxfordshire, but whether he was made a Prebend of a Church, or a Dean, which he much deserved, I know not.

Tuesday Aug. 21. Bill of Indemnity sent down to the Commons, who did not approve of the Lords Amendments in it.

And besides the King's Murderers, thought none unpardonable but Haslerigg, Vane and Lambert.

Yet after some Debates agreed in the main with the Lords.

The Act of Indemnity was sent from the Lords to the Commons with several Alterations, to which the Commons were very unwilling to agree; for they had subjected Twenty that were not the King's Judges to be liable to such Pains and Penalties not extending to Life, as should be inflicted by another Act to be passed in this Parliament: Whereas the Lords finding the King's Inclinations to tend towards the pardoning of all but such as were his Father's Judges, or otherwise Actors in his Murder, they disagreed to that Part of the Act, as to all those named by the Commons, except Sir Arthur Haslerig, Sir Henry Vane, and Colonel John Lambert, who were esteemed to be so maliciously active in Opposition to his Majesty's Government, as to be excepted from any Conditions of Pardon. The Commons for some Time adhered to their first Resolution, but after several Conferences, they agreed with the Lords in all Things except some little Alterations in the Frame of the Act; Vane and Lambert were excepted, but Hasterigg remained liable to such Pains, Penalties, and Forfeitures, as should be inflicted on him, not extending to Life; and the rest of those put under the same Qualifications by the Commons that were not of the King's Judges, were made only with others incapable of Offices.

Philips's Continuat. of the Hist. of Ch.II. Fol. p. 739.

The Commons thank his Majesty for the Defence he had made of the Parliament and People of England, that the horrid Murder of his Father was not their Act, but the Act of a wretched little Company of Miscreants in this Kingdom.

At this last Conference of the Lords and Commons, the Lord Chancellor took Occasion to speak of the King's Affection to his People, by a very remarkable Instance, saying, that he being employ'd in an Embassy to Spain, had it strictly given him in Charge by his Majesty, to avow and declare, that the horrid Murder of his Royal Father was not the Act of the Parliament or People of England, but of a very wretched and little Company of Miscreants in the Kingdom. Which was so pleasing to the House of Commons, that upon the Report of it to them, they ordered such of the Privy Council, as were Members of that House, to present to his Majesty the humble and thankful Sense they had of his Justice and Favour, for that just Defence he had been graciously pleased to make in Behalf of the Parliament and People of England.

His Grace the Duke of Albemarle is by the special Favour of his Majesty, declared Lord Lieutenant of the Kingdom of Ireland.

Among the loyal Clergy some of the greatest Sufferers were least considered; and that chiefly owing to their own Modesty.

As in the Case of an excellent Man Dr. Henry Byam.

Henry Byam, D. D. Rector of Luckham and of Selworthy in Somersetshire, and Prebendary of Exeter, had raised Men and Horse for his Majesty, engaged his five Sons in the King's Service, and exposed all his Estate to Rapine, Plunder, and Sequestration, his Children to Distress and Danger, and himself to many grievous Shifts and Exigencies; his Wife and Daughter drowned in flying from the Rebels. ——When the Prince of Wales fled from England, this Doctor went with him, first to the Island of Scilly, and afterwards to that of Jersey, where the Prince left him as his Chaplain, to preach in his Chapel in the Castle called Elizabeth, and there he remained till that Castle was taken by the Parliament Forces. From which Time till the King's Return, he lived in a poor and obscure Condition; and was now only made Canon of Exeter and Prebendary of Wells. He might have obtained what he would have asked, but contented himself only with what his Majesty was pleased freely to bestow upon him. However, had not his own Modesty stood in the Way, 'tis well known his Majesty's Bounty towards him had not rested here, but he must have died a Bishop.

Dr. Stillingfleet's Unreaſonableneſs of Separation, 4to. Pref. p. 20.

The Letter of Advice and Inſtructions given to Father Young, an Engliſh Miſſionary, by Signior Bellarini, an Italian Miniſter, concerning the beſt Way of managing and promoting the Catholick Intereſt in England upon his Majeſty's Reſtauration.

To obſtruct a full legal Settlement.

I. To make the Obſtruction of Settlement their great Deſign, eſpecially upon the fundamental Conſtitutions of the Kingdom, whereunto if Things ſhould fall, they would be more firm than ever.

To let Papiſts and Proteſtant Factions agree in creating Jealouſies between the King and Biſhops.

II. To remove the Jealouſies raiſed by Prin, Baxter, &c. of the Catholicks Deſign upon the late Factions, and to ſet up the proſperous Way of Fears and Jealouſies of the King and Biſhops.

To make the People believe there is no great Difference between the Church of Rome and the Church of England, the Common-Prayer and the Maſs Book.

III. To make it appear under hand, how near the Doctrine, Diſcipline, and Worſhip of the Church of England comes to us; at how little Diſtance their Common-Prayer is from our Maſs; and that the ableſt and wiſeſt Men of that Way are ſo moderate, that they would willingly come over to us, or at leaſt meet us half way. Hereby the more ſtayed Men will become more odious, and others will run out of all Religion for Fear of Popery.

To promote a general Indulgence.

IV. Let there be an Indulgence promoted by the Factions, and ſeconded by you.

To get the Trade of the Nation into the Hands of the Faction.

V. That the Trade and Treaſure of the Nation may be engroſſed between themſelves, and other diſcontented Parties.

To aſperſe the Biſhops in order to remove them.

VI. That the Biſhops and Miniſters of the Church of England be aſperſed, as either worldly and careleſs on the one hand, or ſo factious on the other, that it were well they were removed.

The juſt Reflections upon this Letter made by Dr. Stillingfleet.

The Quakers confeſs that the Papiſts deſign'd to make Tools of them.

G. Fox his Journal 1661. 8vo. Part I. p. 583.

About this Time many Papiſts and Jeſuits began to fawn upon Friends, and talk'd up and down where they came, that of all the Sects the Quakers were the beſt and moſt ſelf-denying People; and ſaid, It was great Pity, that they did not return to the Holy Mother Church. Thus they made a Buz among the People, and ſaid, They would willingly diſcourſe with Friends. But Friends were loth to meddle dle with them becauſe they were Jeſuits, looking upon it to be both dangerous and ſcandalous. But when I underſtood it, I ſaid to Friends, Let us diſcourſe with them be they what they will. So a Time being appointed at Gerrard Roberts his Houſe, there came two of them like Courtiers. When we were come together, they aſked our Names, which we told them: But we did not aſk their Names, for we underſtood they were called Papiſts, and they knew we were called Quakers. I aſked them the ſame Queſtion, that I had formerly aſked a Jeſuit, namely, Whether the Church of Rome was not degenerated from the Church in the primitive Times, from the Spirit, and Power, and Practice that they were in, in the Apoſtles Time? He to whom I put the Queſtion being ſubtile, ſaid, He would not anſwer it. I aſked him why? but he would ſhew no Reaſon. His Companion ſaid, he would anſwer me; and he ſaid, They were not degenerated from the Church in the primitive Times. I aſked the other, Whether he was of the ſame Mind? And he ſaid Yes. Then I told them, that for the better underſtanding one another, and that there might be no Miſtake, I would repeat the Queſtion over again in this Manner; Whether the Church of Rome now was in the ſame Purity, Practice, Power, and Spirit, that the Church in the Apoſtles Time was in? When they ſaw we would be exact with them, they flew off and denied that, ſaying; It was Preſumption in any to ſay, they had the ſame Power and Spirit which the Apoſtles had. But I told them, it was a Preſumption in them, to meddle with the Words of Chriſt and his Apoſtles, and make People believe, they ſucceeded the Apoſtles, and yet be forced to confeſs, they were not in the ſame Power and Spirit, that the Apoſtles were in: This, ſaid I, is a Spirit of Preſumption, and rebuked by the Apoſtles Spirit. Then I ſhewed them, how different their Fruits and Practices were from the Fruits and Practices of the Apoſtles. Then got up one of them, and ſaid, Ye are a Company of Dreamers. Nay, ſaid I, Ye are the filthy Dreamers who dream ye are the Apoſtles Succeſſors, and yet confeſs, Ye have not the ſame Power and Spirit, which the Apoſtles were in, &c. They were ſoon weary of this Diſcourſe, and went their Way; and gave a Charge (as we heard) to the Papiſts, that they ſhould not diſpute with us, nor read any of our Books. So we were rid of them.

And aſk'd them a Queſtion which they were not willing to anſwer.

And yet were caught in it, and prov'd to be filthy Dreamers.

Three ſurviving Prebendaries in the Cathedral of Peterborough.

Among the Dignitaries in the Cathedral Church of Peterborough, there were but three Prebendaries (and they all great Sufferers) who ſurvived the general Shipwrack; and were now re-poſſeſſed of their Stalls, though they could not yet gain Poſſeſſion of their Houſes.

1. William Towers, Preſbyter, A. B. of Chriſt Church, Oxon, collated by his Father the Biſhop to the fourth Prebend of the Cathedral Church, void by the Statute of Deprivation of Dr. John Pocklington, April 20, 1641.

2. Simon Gunton, A. M. a Native of the Town, and an eminent Preacher in the Cathedral Church, collated by Biſhop Towers to the firſt Prebend (then meerly nominal) November 12, 1646. in the Place of Tho. Swift, B. D.

3. William Souch or Zouch, M. A. of Oxford, collated to the third Prebend by the ſame Biſhop March 30, 1646. void (as it ſeemeth) by the Death of Mr. Abraham Jackſon. —— There was one William Souch or Zouch [probably Father of our William] of Chriſt Church, Oxon, who proceeded Doctor of Divinity, July 5, 1582. and on the 14th of February, 1583. became Chantor of the Church of Saliſbury on the Reſignation of Tobias Matthews, D. And to let you see how sensible his Majesty's good Subjects are of the Preservation of our gracious Sovereign, and the execrable Murder of his now glorious Father, we are ascertain'd by divers Letters, that the Judges in several Circuits giving their Charge upon mention of those Persons excepted from Pardon by Act of Parliament, the People cried out, Why are they not hang'd? Why are they not hang'd? We mention not this, as if we rejoiced at the Miseries of Malefactors (how wicked soever) but the Voice of the People, touching a Fact of universal Concernment, must not be concealed.

WEDNESDAY Aug. 29.
The King came to pass the Bills.

The King having Notice, that there were five Acts prepared for his Royal Assent, repaired to the Lords House, and sent for the Commons, when the Speaker said thus of the Bill of Indemnity and Pardon.

Part of the Speaker's Speech upon the Bill of Indemnity.

—— There is another Bill, intituled, An Act of Free and General Pardon, Indemnity and Oblivion. It may well be called A Free Pardon, for your Majesty was pleas'd to offer it, before we had Confidence enough to ask it, and at a time when your People had most need of it: And it may as truly be called A General Pardon, in respect of the Extensiveness of it. But looking over a long black prodigious dismal Roll and Catalogue of Malefactors, we there meet not with Men, but with Monsters, guilty of Blood, precious Blood, precious Royal Blood, never to be remembred without Tears: Incomparable in all kinds of Villanies that ever were acted by the worst of Miscreants, Perverters of Religion, Subverters of the Government, false to God, disloyal to the best of Kings, and perfidious to their Country. And therefore we find an absolute and indispensable Necessity incumbent on us to except and set some apart, for an Antidote to expel the Poison of Sin and Rebellion out of others, and that they may be made Sacrifices to appease God's Wrath, and satisfie Divine Vengeance.

Against the Regicides.

Foraſmuch as Almighty God, the King of Kings, and ſole Diſpoſer of all Earthly Crowns and Kingdoms, hath by his all-ſwaying Providence and Power, miraculouſly demonſtrated, in the view of all the World, his tranſcendent Mercy, Love and Graciouſneſs towards his moſt excellent Majeſty Charles II. by his eſpecial Grace of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the true Faith, and all his Majeſty's loyal Subjects of this his Kingdom of England, and the Dominions thereunto annex'd, by his Majeſty's late moſt wonderful, glorious, peaceable and joyful Reſtauration, to the actual Poſſeſſion and Exerciſe of his undoubted Hereditary Sovereign and Regal Authority over them, (after ſundry Years forced Extermination into Foreign Parts, by the moſt traiterous Conſpiracies, and armed Power of uſurping Tyrants, and execrable perfidious Traytors) and that without the leaſt Oppoſition or Effuſion of Blood, through the unanimous, cordial, loyal Votes of the Lords and Commons in this preſent Parliament aſſembled, and paſſionate Deſires of all other his Majeſty's Subjects: Which unexpreſſible Bleſſing (by God's own moſt wonderful Diſpenſation) was compleated on the twenty ninth Day of May laſt paſt, being the moſt memorable Birth-Day, not only of his Majeſty, both as a Man and Prince, but likewiſe as an actual King, and of this and other his Majeſty's Kingdoms, all in a great Meaſure new born, and raiſed from the Dead, on this moſt joyful Day, land returned thither from their Foreign Conqueſts: And both his Majeſty's Houſes of Parliament, with all dutiful and loyal Demonſtrations of their Allegiance, publickly received, and cordially congratulated his Majeſty's moſt happy Arrival and Inveſtiture in his Royal Throne at his Palace at Whitehall: Upon all which Conſiderations, this being the Day which the Lord himſelf hath made, and crowned with ſo many publick Bleſſings and ſignal Deliverances, both of his Majeſty and his People, from all their late moſt deplorable Confuſions, Diviſions, Wars, Devaſtations and Oppreſſions; to the end that it may be kept in perpetual Remembrance in all Ages to come; and that his ſacred Majeſty, with all his Subjects of this Realm, and the Dominions thereof, and their Poſterities after them, might annually celebrate the perpetual Memory thereof, by ſacrificing their unfeigned hearty publick Thanks thereon to Almighty God, with one Heart and Voice, in a moſt devout and Chriſtian Manner, for all theſe publick Benefits received and conferred on them, upon this moſt joyful Day: Be it therefore enacted, &c.

And triumphal Entry into the Cities of London and Weſtminſter.

Private Act for reſtoring James Duke of Ormond to his former Eſtate.

A private Act for reſtoring unto James Marquis of Ormond, all his Honours, Mannors, Lands, and Tenements in Ireland, whereof he was in Poſſeſſion on the 23^d^ Day of October 1641, or any Time ſince.

After the paſſing of theſe Acts his Majeſty made the following Speech:

The King's Speech.

My Lords, and Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

Shewing great Goodneſs and Clemency.

I have been here ſometimes before with you, but never with more Willingneſs, than I am at this Time. And there be few Men in the Kingdom, who have longed more impatiently to have thoſe Bills paſſed, than I have done to paſs them; and I hope they will be the Foundation of much Security and Happineſs to us all. I do very willingly pardon all that is pardoned by this Act of Indemnity, to that Time which is mentioned in the Bill: Nay, I will tell you, that from that Time to this Day, I will not uſe great Severity, except in ſuch Caſes where the Malice is notorious, and the publick Peace exceedingly concern'd: But for the Time to come, the ſame Diſcretion and Conſcience which diſpoſed me to the Clemency I have expreſſed, which is moſt agreeable to my Nature, will oblige me to all Rigour and Severity, how contrary ſoever it be to my Nature, towards thoſe who ſhall not now acquieſce, but continue to manifeſt their Sedition and Diſlike of the Government either by Action or Words.

With a Concern for the publick Peace.

To be preſerved (if not otherwiſe) by Rigour and Severity.

And I muſt conjure you all (my Lords and Gentlemen) to concur with me in this juſt and neceſſary Severity; and that you will in your ſeveral Stations be ſo jealous of the publick Peace, and of my particular Honour, that you will cauſe exemplary Juſtice to be done upon thoſe who are guilty of ſeditious Speeches or Writings, as well as thoſe who break out into ſeditious Actions: And that you will believe thoſe who delight in reproaching and traducing my Perſon, not to be well affected to you and the publick Peace.

Eſpecially upon ſeditious Writers and Actors.

Never King valued himſelf more upon the Affections of his People than I do; nor do I know a better Way to make my ſelf ſure of your Affections, than by being juſt and kind to you all: And whilſt I am ſo, I pray let the World ſee that I am poſſeſſed of your Affections.

The King thanks them for the Pole-Bill, as much as if the Money were to come into his own Coffers.

For your Pole-Bill, I do thank you as much as if the Money were to come into my own Coffers: And wiſh with all my Heart that it may amount to as great a Sum as you reckon upon. If the Work be well and orderly done to which it is deſigned, I am ſure I ſhall be the richer by it in the End: And upon my Word, if I had wherewithal, I would myſelf help you, ſo much I deſire the Buſineſs done.

And prays it may be applied to the proper Uſes of diſbanding, &c.

And in the mean Time no free Quarter.

I pray very earneſtly, as faſt as Money comes in, diſcharge that great Burthen of the Navy, and diſband the Army as faſt as you can; and till you can diſband the reſt, make a Proviſion for their Support. I do conjure you, as you love me, let me not hear the Noiſe of free Quarter, which will be imputed to my want of Care and Government how innocent ſoever I am; and therefore be ſure you prevent it.

He pleaſantly puts them in Mind of his own Want of Money, even for Houſe-keeping.

I am ſo confident of your Affections, that I will not move you in any Thing that immediately relates to myſelf, and yet I muſt tell you, that I am not richer, that is, I have not ſo much Money in my Purſe, as when I came to you: The Truth is, I have lived principally ever ſince upon what I brought with me; which was indeed your Money, for you ſent it to me, and I thank you for it. The weekly Expence of the Navy eats up all you have given me by the Bill of Tonnage and Poundage: Nor have I been able to give my Brothers one Shilling ſince I came into England, nor to keep any Table in my Houſe but what I eat at myſelf: And that which troubles me moſt is, to ſee ſo many of you come to me at Whitehall, and to think you muſt go ſomewhere elſe to ſeek your Dinner.

But gives them their own Time to conſider of it.

I do not mention this to you as any Thing that troubles me, do but take care of the Publick, and for what is neceſſary for the Peace and Quiet of the Kingdom, and take your own Time for my own particular, which I am ſure you will provide for with as much Affection and Frankneſs as I can deſire.

He was a Perſon of good natural Parts, but a grand Schiſmatick, a buſy Body, pragmatical, bold, and an indefatigable Enemy to Monarchy and Epiſcopacy. What his Religion was, I cannot juſtly tell you: Some held him to be an Anabaptiſt, others a fifth Monarchy Man and a Millenary: Sure it is, he was neither Preſbyterian nor Independent, but a moſt dangerous and peſtilent Man, and one that did more Miſchief to his native Country of Wales, than can be imagined. —— He died in the Fleet-Priſon, October 27, 1670.

Chap. I. Of the Lord's ſtrange Hand at Oxford by ſudden Death of ſeveral Perſons, Actors in a Play againſt Puritans, and others.

This Book begins with certain Matters relating to Oxon, which being very falſe, the Reader cannot but judge the other ſo to be. Anno 1661. came out an Impoſture of a moſt damnable Deſign called Mirabilis Annus: Or the Year of Prodigies and Wonders, &c and in 1662. the firſt and ſecond Part of Annus Mirabilis ſecundus. When theſe came out, which were advanced by ſeveral Hands, it was verily ſuppoſed that Henry Jeſſy had a principal Share in them. Faſti Oxon. Vol. I. col. 857.

I ſhall now acquaint you with ſome remarkable Things fallen out here with us. As firſt, the firſt Man that read Prayers in this Univerſity ſince this Change, the Lord hath cut him off, and alſo he was the laſt that read Prayers in the Univerſity in the Time of War. The firſt Man alſo that read Prayers at Wadham College is alſo cut off, a very notorious Man.

Alſo there was a Play acted by Scholars, wherein one acted the Old Puritan; he that acted that Part came in with a narrow Band, ſhort Hair, and a broad Hat; a boiſterous Fellow comes after him, and trips up his Heels calling him Puritan Rogue; at which Words he ſhook off the Dirt off his Feet againſt him. Two of theſe Actors are alſo cut off; and he that acted the Old Puritan broke a Vein and vomited ſo much Blood in the Place, that they thought he would have died in the Room, but he now lieth deſperately ſick. A Woman that joined with them in the Play is alſo dead.

This Author died the 4th of September 1663. being then accounted the Oracle and Idol of the Faction, &c. ibid.

Alſo a Scholar of Pembroke College, who ſaid he came purpoſely to Town to ſee Dr. Langly outed, and then he would give a Plate to the College. He was invited to Dinner by a Scholar, and never went out of the Room more, but died there.

Alſo from another in Oxford it was thus written July 30. We had a Play acted in the Univerſity againſt the Puritans, the chief Actors therein were Mr. Ball of Wadham who died yeſternight, and one Glendal of Brazen-Noſe, who is ſince dead, &c.

A Defence of Preſbyterial Ordination, by G. F.

London, printed for Nathan Webb 1660. 4to. p. 48.

Preſbyterial Ordination vindicated, in a brief and ſober Diſcourſe concerning Epiſcopacy, as claiming greater Power and more eminent Offices by divine Right than Preſbytery. The Arguments of the Reverend Biſhop Dr. Davenant in his Determination for ſuch Epiſcopacy are modeſtly examined: And Arguments for the Validity of Preſbyterial Ordination added. With a brief Diſ-words concerning impoſed Forms of Prayer and Ceremonies. By G. F. Miniſter of the Goſpel, in Defence of his own Ordination, being queſtioned becauſe it was performed by Presbyters.

The Presbyterians for the King's Reſtauration.

And eſpecially the Author.

Otherwiſe had they join'd the Army, the King had not come in.

He is willing to confeſs there are ſome good Things in the Common-Prayer Book.

The Preface.] The Ways of the Lord towards our King in his Affliction, Preſervation, and Reſtauration were ſuch, as upon them all we may write wonderful. Prayers were poured out for him in his Affliction, and for his Reſtauration Praiſes were not ſilent. Some of us were ſo imprudent to pray publickly for him in his loweſt Condition, the Priſon had witneſſed it, had I not a Friend who delivered me: And this Year had not his Majeſty been reſtored, it had been proved, being threaten'd to my Face, and the Threats often repeated, that as ſure as God was in Heaven, I ſhould be called into Queſtion, only for praying for the afflicted Royal Family. Such Subjects had his Majeſty among the now deſpiſed Presbyterians, who if they had not been faithful and loyal to his Majeſty, but would have cloſed with the Army, doubtleſs they could have carried ſuch a Party with them, that I believe as yet our King had not ſate upon his Engliſh Throne, nor had the Voice of Thankſgiving for his Reſtoring been heard in our Iſland. —— For the Common-Prayer Book I ever ſaid, there were ſome Things in it good, nor did I ever condemn ſober and godly Men who uſed it, &c.

A Copy of the King's Declaration before the publiſhing of it delivered to Mr. Baxter and other Preſbyterian Divines, to peruſe and alter.

The Copy of his Majeſty's Declaration concerning eccleſiaſtical Affairs (afterwards publiſhed and dated October 25, 1660.) according to Promiſe, was delivered by the Lord Chancellour to Mr. Baxter and other Preſbyterian Divines, for them to ſee it, and have Liberty to give Notice of what they liked not ——

Life of Mr. Baxter, Fol.

ſent us to peruſe and alter before it were publiſhed, that it might ſatisfie our Deſires. Received on Sept. 4.

The two Papers that had given Offence to his Majeſty, were, 1. The Declaration extorted from him in Scotland at his Coronation there,

Note, That the two Papers which the King's Declaration publiſheth his Offence againſt, were 1. A Declaration which the Scots drew the King to publiſh when they crowned him in Scotland, diſclaiming his Father's Wars and Actions, in Language ſo little tender of his Father's Honour, that it was no Wonder that the King was hardly drawn to it then, nor that Cromwell derided their Doings as hypocritical, nor that the King was angry with thoſe raſh People, whoever they were, who now re-printed it.

And 2. The Book of Cornelius Burgeſs, who inſiſted on the Neceſſity of reforming the Doctrine as well as Diſcipline and Worſhip of the Church.

For tho' moſt part of the Biſhops were Arminians, yet the 39 Articles were ſound and good.

A Book of Dr. Cornelius Burges, who (though he was for a moderate Epiſcopacy) had written to prove the Neceſſity of a Reformation in Doctrine, Diſcipline, and Worſhip; whereas in all our Treaty we had never meddled with the Doctrine of the Church: Becauſe, though the moſt Part of the Biſhops were taken to be Arminians, (as they are called) yet the Articles of Religion we took to be ſound and moderate, however Men do variouſly interpret them.

The Preſbyterians unſatisfied were to draw up their Thoughts in Writing.

And Mr. Baxter undertakes that Work.

But overdoes it ſo much, that his Brethren diſlike it.

And deſire him to leave out ſeveral hard Things.

The Earl of Mancheſter was their ſure Friend.

And Earl of Angleſey and Lord Hollis well diſpoſed to them.

Mr. Baxter at laſt condeſcends to ſome Alterations in his Paper.

When we had received this Copy of the Declaration, we ſaw that it would not ſerve to heal our Differences; therefore we told the Lord Chancellour (with whom we were to do all our Buſineſs ſtill before it came as from us to the King) that our Endeavours as to Concord would all be fruſtrate, if much were not altered in the Declaration (I paſs over all our Conferences with him, both now and at other Times;) In Concluſion, we were to draw up our Thoughts of it in Writing; which the Brethren impoſed on me to do. My Judgment was, that all the Fruit of this our Treaty (beſides a little Reprival from intended Ejection) would be but the ſatisfying our Conſciences and Poſterity, that we had done our Duty, and that it was not our Fault, that we came not to the deſired Concord or Coalition, and therefore ſeeing we had no (conſiderable) higher Hopes, we ſhould ſpeak as plainly as Honeſty and Conſcience did require us. But when Mr. Calamy and Dr. Reynolds had read my Paper, they were troubled at the Plainneſs of it, and thought it would never be endured, and therefore deſired ſome Alteration; eſpecially that I might leave out, 1. The Prediction of the Evils which would follow our Non-Agreement, which the Court would interpret as a Threatning. 2. The mentioning the Aggravations of Covenant-breaking and Perjury. I gave them my Reaſons for paſſing it as it was. To bring this to paſs more effectually, they told the Earl of Mancheſter (with whom as our ſure Friend we ſtill conſulted, and whom the Court uſed to communicate to us what they deſired): And he called the Earl of Angleſey and the Lord Hollis to the Conſultation as our Friends: And theſe three Lords, with Mr. Calamy and Dr. Reynolds, peruſed all the Writing, and all with Earneſtneſs perſuaded me to the ſaid Alterations. I confeſs I thought thoſe two Points material, which they excepted againſt, and would not have had them left out, and thereby made them think me too plain and unpleaſing, as never uſed to the Language or Converſe of a Court: But it was not my Unſkilfulneſs in a more pleaſing Language, but my Reaſon and Conſcience (upon Foreſight of the Iſſue) which was the Cauſe. But when they told me that it would not ſo much as be received, and that I muſt go with it my ſelf, for no Body elſe would, I yielded to ſuch an Alteration as here followeth. It was only in the Preface that the Alteration was deſired. I ſhall therefore, that you may ſee what it was, give it you as firſt drawn up, and afterwards altered.

The firſt Draught of their Petition to the King for amending his Declaration.

Our Petition to the King upon our Sight of the firſt Draught of his Declaration.

May it pleaſe your Majeſty,

So great was the Comfort created in our Minds by your Majeſty's oft-expreſſed Reſolution to become the effectual Moderator in our Differences, and yourſelf to bring us together by procuring ſuch mutual Condeſcenſions as are neceſſary thereto; and alſo by your gracious Acceptance of our Propoſals, which your Majeſty heard and received not only without Blame, but with Acknowledgment of their Moderation, and as ſuch would infer a Reconciliation between the differing Parties; that we muſt needs ſay, the leaſt Abatement of our Hopes, is much the more unwelcome and grievous to us: And it is no ſmall Grief that ſurpriſeth our Hearts, &c.——

The Abatement of their Hopes is very grievous to them.

Mr. Baxter inſerts this in his printed Copy, tho' rejected by his Friends; and only ſays, all this encloſed Part was left out of the Petition as preſented to his Majeſty: This only being inſerted in the Room of it. [And on the contrary ſhould we loſe the Opportunity of our deſired Reconciliation and Union, it aſtoniſheth us to foreſee what doleful Effects our Diviſions would produce, which we will not ſo much as mention in Particulars, leſt our Words ſhould be miſunderſtood: And ſeeing all this may ſafely and eaſily be now prevented, we humbly beſeech the Lord in Mercy to vouchſafe to your Majeſty an Heart to diſcern aright of Time and Judgment.]

[It aſtoniſheth us to foreſee the doleful Conſequents that would follow if (which God forbid) your Majeſty ſhould refuſe the moſt neceſſary moderate Ways of Concord, and be engaged by a Party to exalt them by the Suppreſſion of the reſt: How woful a Day would it prove to your Majeſty and your Dominions, in which you ſhould thus eſpouſe a Cauſe and Intereſt injurious to the Intereſt of Chriſt, and the Cauſe of Unity and Love, and contrary to your Majeſty's gracious Inclinations be engaged unawares in a ſeeming Neceſſity to deal hardly with the Miniſters and Servants of the Lord! How conſiderable a Part of the three Nations for Number, Wiſdom, Piety, and Intereſt, you would be drawn to govern with a grievous Hand, and to lay them under the greateſt Sorrow, who reſtored and received your Majeſty with Joy. How the Diſſent of Miniſters from the Government and Ceremonies of the Church, were it expreſſed by their Groans and Tears, and moderate Complaints to God, or not praying for that Church Government which they dare not pray for, would be reckoned as Diſcontent and Sedition, and it would be adjudged a Crime to feel when they are hurt. What Occaſion this would give to irreligious Tempers to arrogate the Name of your Majeſty's beſt Subjects, and to let out their Malice againſt the

Upright,

Doleful Preſages of ſad and miſerable Conſequences.

The Biſhops will be thought Wolves.

And the People will fly from them into ſeparate Aſſemblies, &c.

There were other ſevere Paſſages in Mr. Baxter*'s firſt Draught, and ſtanding in his printed Copy, that were altered into milder Words by his Friends, Dr.* Reynolds, Mr. Calamy, &c.

Upright, and make Religion a Reproach! And then what a Hindrance that would be to the Converſion and ſaving of the Peoples Souls! And what a fruitful Nurſery of all Vice! How grievouſly Charity would be overthrown, while the People are engaged in the hardeſt Thoughts and Speeches of each other! What a Temptation it would be to the afflicted Part, to abate their Honour and due Reſpect to thoſe they ſuffer by, when they are deprived of that which is deareſt to them in the World; and when the Groans and Cries of afflicted Innocents arrive at Heaven, and have awakened the Juſtice of the King of Kings, the Greateſt cannot ſtand before him. And what a Snare and Grief will it be to the Biſhops and Paſtors of the Church to be eſteemed Wolves, and to be engaged to ſuppreſs them as their Adverſaries, that elſe might be the Honour of their Miniſtry, and the Comfort of their Lives? And when Diviſions and ſeparated Aſſemblies are thus multiplied (the People being driven from the publick Congregations) either it will bring them under Trouble, or let in Papiſts and others that are intolerable into an equal Toleration, and ſuch Diſcontents and Diſtractions in the Church, will not be without their Influence on the State. And by all this how much will Satan and the Enemies of our Religion be gratify'd, and God diſhonoured and diſpleaſed. And ſeeing all this may ſafely and eaſily be now prevented, we humbly beſeech the Lord in Mercy to vouchſafe to your Majeſty a Heart to diſcern of Time and Judgment, &c.

A Meſſage was brought from the Commons by Mr. Anneſley, who brought up a Bill for confirming Miniſters in their Livings: And which the Houſe of Commons looks upon as a Bill of publick Concernment, for quieting Men in their Poſſeſſions, for preventing of Suits.

Ordered by the Commons, that the Members of this Houſe who are of his Majeſty's Privy-Council do return to his Majeſty the humble Thanks of this Houſe for his Majeſty's gracious Meſſage communicated to this Houſe by Mr. Secretary Morris, whereby his Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed to ſignify his Intentions to take Care and provide for ſuch Miniſters as are worthy and every Way qualified for the Work of the Miniſtry, and ſhall be removed from their reſpective Livings by Virtue of the Act for Confirming and Reſtoring of Miniſters: And alſo that they preſent to his Majeſty the humble Addreſs of this Houſe, that his Majeſty will pleaſe to take Care of them accordingly.

A good Account of a pious Sufferer now reſtored to his Living, Mr. Barnaby Oley,

A very devout and exemplary Man.

He was born at Kirkthorp in Yorkſhire, near to Wakefield, Son of the Vicar, and a great Benefactor to the poor Vicarage by a good Augmentation to it.

Yet upon Condition, 1. That the Vicar ſhould not ſmoak Tobacco. 2. That he ſhould not wear a Perriwig. 3. That he ſhould not go often to the Town of Wakefield.

Notes of the Editor of the Engliſh Life of Dr. John Barwick, 8vo. p. 26.

Mr. Barnaby Oley, who had been Preſident of Clare Hall in Cambridge, (which Univerſity never bred a Perſon of more Learning, accompanied with ſo great Modeſty, and ſuch an exemplary Holineſs of Life) and had been made choice of to conduct the Expedition of conveying the Univerſity Plate to the King at Nottingham in Auguſt 1642. was Vicar of Great Grantſden in Huntingdonſhire fifty three Years, and a conſiderable Benefactor to that Pariſh, as appears from an Inſcription in that Church. After ſuffering much by the Rebellion, he was in 1660. reſtored to his Fellowſhip and Vicarage, and September 4, that Year, inſtalled Prebendary of Worceſter. In 1679. he was promoted to the Archdeaconry of Ely, which Dignity he afterwards voluntarily reſigned, in his great Humility, not thinking himſelf ſufficient to diſcharge the Duty of it, which corrects a Miſtake of Mr. Wood's [Faſti Oxon. Vol. II. Col. 850. Edit. 1.] that Dr. Saywell ſucceeded in the Archdeaconry on Mr. Oley's Deceaſe, for it was on his Reſignation. He died February 20, 1685-6. not (as Dr. Walker thinks) about the Year 1684. Memorial of the Princeſs Royal to the States, in behalf of the Prince of Orange her Son.

Publick Intelligence, 4to. No. 37.

A Memorial preſented to the Lords States-General of the United Netherlands by the Princeſs Royal of Great-Britain.

The Princeſs Royal of Great-Britain, Dowager of Orange, hath thought fit to give your high and mighty Lordſhips Notice of her Intention of going for England with the firſt Convenience, with an affectionate Profer to do all manner of good Offices in Behalf of this State, with his Majeſty the King her Brother, if your Lordſhips ſhall think her capable of ſerving them in ought. But in regard her Highneſs is to be abſent for ſome Time out of this Country, ſhe finds herſelf obliged by a motherly Affection, and tender Care for her Son, to deſire your Lordſhips to take Care of his Intereſt. And although her Highneſs maketh no doubt but that it is the Intention of their Lordſhips to employ the Prince her Son, being come to his Years of Diſcretion; and in Conſideration of thoſe great Services done by his Anceſtors to this State in general, and to this Province in particular, to confer on him thoſe Charges and Dignities his Anceſtors enjoy'd; yet her Highneſs ſhould take it as a particular Favour if your Lordſhips would be pleaſed to give her now Aſſurance of it; her Highneſs engaging to take Care that the ſaid Prince ſhall be well educated for the Service of theſe Countries in the true Proteſtant Religion, in all Princely Virtues, and in the Knowledge of the Humours, Laws, and Cuſtoms of theſe Countries, to make him capable and fit for the Managing of the aforeſaid Charges and Imployments enjoy'd by his Anceſtors; not doubting but the Prince her Son will follow the renowned Footſteps and Virtues of his Forefathers, to ſerve his Country, and to let your Lordſhips reap the bleſſed Fruits thereof, for the beſt of your State. All which her Highneſs will take as a particular Favour done to herſelf, being ready upon all Occaſions to endeavour the Requiting of it, and to her Power to promote the Good and Concerns of this State.

Deſiring they would now declare their Intentions of conferring on her Son the Charges and Dignities his Anceſtors enjoy'd.

A Petition of the Univerſity of Oxon to his Majeſty.

To the King's most Excellent Majeſty, the humble Petition of the Univerſity of Oxford.

Shewing,

Congratulating his Reſtoration, and the delivering his Subjects from Miſery and Slavery.

That your Petitioners bleſſing God for his wonderful Goodneſs in reſtoring your Majeſty to your Royal Thrones, and freeing your Subjects from that Miſery and Slavery under which they have long groan'd, and beſeeching the ſame God to proſper your Reign, for the promoting his own Glory, and the Welfare of the three Nations.

And begging his Royal Favour to the Profeſſion of the Civil Law.

As of great Uſe and Service to the Church and Kingdom.

We beg Leave with all Humbleneſs to repreſent unto your Majeſty, that amongſt the moſt eminent Parts of Learning, for which this Univerſity hath been famous, the Profeſſion of the Civil Law hath not been the leaſt; and by the Statutes of divers Colleges, the Scholars and Fellows are bound to ſtudy and take Degrees therein; which Profeſſion, as it is of very high Eſteem in all other Countries in Europe, ſo it hath been ever acknowledged in theſe Nations, of publick Uſe and Concernment in Reference to Cauſes of Equity, to foreign Commerce, and Matters concerning Navigation and Trade by Sea, the Laws of Honour and Arms, to Embaſſies, Treaties with foreign States, Leagues, Wars, and Repriſals. And Perſons qualified in that Profeſſion, anciently have been admitted to Cognizance and Practice, in Cauſes of Marriage, of Wills and Teſtaments, of Legacies and Tythes, of Dilapidations, and other Eccleſiaſtical Matters; and by a gracious Order of your renown'd Grandfather King James, were declared only capable of Employment in that Way, and alſo fit to be Maſters of Chancery, and of the Court of Requeſts. And now we humbly conceiving that your Majeſty having a pious Intention to ſettle the Government and Affairs of the Church, and that the Profeſſion of the Civil Law may be concern'd therein:

And therefore they humbly requeſt, that his Majeſty would have reſpect to the Civilians, in beſtowing of Places of Judicature, &c.

We make it our moſt humble Suit and Requeſt unto your Majeſty, that out of your princely and prudent Conſideration, you would be pleaſed to have Reſpect to ſuch Perſons as are fit for Judicature, and Employment in Eccleſiaſtical Courts, whereby ſuch as have ſpent their Time in that Profeſſion may enjoy ſome reaſonable Means; and our younger Students be encouraged to endeavour the enabling of themſelves in the ſame Way. And we your Petitioners ſhall be ever bound to pray for your Majeſty's Health and Happineſs.

Inſtance of Mr. Lewis at Tottenham High-Croſs.

Some Perſons who had in the late Confuſions crept into the Livings of the ſequeſtred Clergy were very ill Men. A reverend and reputable Author hath left this Note of one Mr. Lewis. This Lewis was a ſtickling Preſbyterian, that had gotten the Sequeſtration of Tottenham High-Croſs from Mr. Wimpew, a loyal Miniſter of the Church of England. To this Lewis many Noblemen and Gentlemen ſent their Sons for Education; among whom was the late Lord Ruſſel. The Farce had all the Formalities of a High Court of Juſtice, Preſident, Sollicitor, Witneſſes, &c. The Criminal was an old ſhock Water Dog, whom he called Charles Stuart. This Dog was arraigned, tryed, condemned, and executed by cutting off his Head. The King intended to have made it a Seſſions by Prorogation, but upon Application made to him, to ſhew the Inconvenience thereof at that Time, becauſe of many Bills and other Matters of great Concernment depending, which would thereby be vacated, he conſented to an Adjournment.

The Speaker's Speech to the King on the Throne.

The King being on the Throne, and the Commons called up, their Speaker Sir Harbottle Grimſton made this Speech at preſenting the Money Bills.

SIR,

The Commons make up the King's Revenue twelve hundred thouſand Pounds per Annum.

The royal Favour and fatherly Kindneſs unto your People hath naturaliz'd their Affections to your Perſon, and their Obedience to your Precepts. And as it is their Duty, ſo it is their Deſire to manifeſt the Truth and Reality thereof, by ſupporting and upholding that Grandeur and Splendor which is due to the Majeſty of ſo meritorious a Prince as yourſelf. And therefore they have reſolved uno flatu and nemine contradicente, to make up your Majeſty's conſtant and ordinary Revenue twelve hundred thouſand Pounds per Annum.

SIR,

Bill for reſtoring Miniſters injuriouſly ejected, and confirming others in vacant Places, who had but crazy Titles.

If the laſt legal Incumbents were dead.

There is another Bill, entituled, An Act for reſtoring ſome Miniſters into their Places, out of which they have been long and injuriouſly ejected and expoſed; and for confirming others in vacant Places. Crazy Titles need your Majeſty's Help, as much as crazy Bodies need the Help of a Phyſician. And what your Majeſty hath already done of that kind to this Parliament, and what you are now about to do, and what you have ever expreſs'd your Readineſs in, if we could be as ready as your Majeſty is to give, we hope to baniſh all Fears and Jealouſies out of Mens Minds for the future, and teach them with much Confidence and Contentedneſs to reſt and wholly rely upon your Majeſty's Grace and Goodneſs, for what may be thought further neceſſary to be done hereafter, when a fitting Opportunity ſhall be offered at the next Meeting of your Houſes of Parliament, &c.

After which the Royal Aſſent was given to theſe publick Acts.

Philips's Continuat p. 746.

The King made a ſhort Speech to both Houſes of Parliament at the Paſſing of theſe Bills full of Sweetneſs, according to the affable Temper of his Nature.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

A very popular Speech of the King to his two Houſes of Parliament.

Thanking 'em more for what they had done for the Publick, than for what they had done for himſelf.

Eſpecially for preventing free Quarter.

If my Preſence here had not been requiſite for the Paſſing theſe many Bills, I did always intend to ſee you together before your Adjournment, that I might again thank you for the many good Things you have done for me and the Kingdom; and in Truth, I do thank you more for what you have done for the Publick, than what you have done for my own Particular, and yet I do thank you too for that with all my Heart: But I confeſs to you, I do thank you more for the Proviſion you have made to prevent free Quarter, during the Time the Army ſhall be diſbanding, which I take to be given for my Satisfaction, than I do for the other Preſent you have made me for my own particular Occaſions; and I do promiſe you, which is the beſt Way I can take to gratify you, I will not apply one Penny of that Money to my own particular Occaſions, what Shift ſoever I make, till it is evident to me, that the Publick will not ſtand in need of it; and if it do, every Penny of it ſhall be diſburſed that Way; and I dare ſay I ſhall not be the poorer for it.

And promiſes, that the Supply given for his particular Occaſions, ſhall be diſburs'd upon the Publick if Need require.

He makes an Apology for the Bill in favour of the Duke of Somerſet, of an extraordinary Nature, but for an extraordinary Perſon.

I cannot but take Notice of one particular Bill I have paſſed, which may ſeem of an extraordinary Nature, that concerning the Duke of Somerſet, but you all know it is for an extraordinary Perſon, who hath merited as much of the King my Father and myſelf, as a Subject can do; and I am none of thoſe, who think that Subjects by performing their Duties in an extraordinary Manner, do not oblige their Princes to reward them in an extraordinary Manner; there can be no Danger from ſuch a Precedent, and I hope no Man will envy him, becauſe I have done what a good Maſter ſhould do to ſuch a Servant.

He had intended to make this a Seſſion by proroguing the Parliament: But upon the Deſire of the Commons, he is willing the two Houſes ſhould adjourn to the 6th of November.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I will not deny to you that I had ſome Inclination, when I conſented upon your Deſire to your Receſs, to have made a Seſſion, which I thought moſt agreeable to the ancient Order of Parliaments, and I hope you will all joyn with me in reducing the Proceedings of Parliaments to the ancient Rules and Orders of Parliaments, the Deviation from which has done us no good; and I think there were never ſo many Bills paſſed together, as I have this Day given my Aſſent to, without a Seſſion: But upon the Deſire and Reaſons given by the Houſe of Commons, for an Adjournment without a Seſſion, I did very willingly depart from that Inclination, and do as willingly give you Leave and direct you that you adjourn yourſelves till the ſixth Day of November, when I hope you will all meet again, and in the mean Time that you will be all welcome to your Countries, and do me much Service there.

And leaves the reſt to the Lord Chancellor.

I have many other Particulars to ſay and recommend to you, in which I cannot enough truſt my own Memory, and therefore I ſhall command the Chancellour to ſay the reſt to you.

In this Interval ſome Doubts and Fears would ariſe about the Army and the Clergy and Liberty of Conſcience

Contin. of Sir Richard Baker.

Many other Things were to be recommended: For in this Time of their Receſs, the Army was to be diſbanding, whereof many Diſcourſes had been ſpread abroad by diſaffected Perſons. Some ſaid the King would keep them up; and others, that they would not ſuffer themſelves to be diſbanded. And though his Majeſty had paſſed an Act to confirm Miniſters, yet farther Order was to be taken in reference to Church Government, and particularly in reſpect to tender Conſciences; as likewiſe about Purchaſes and publick Sales, which had without any Iſſue much taken up the Time of both Houſes; and therefore ſince the Parliament adjourned before any thing in theſe Affairs was effected, it was expedient to ſatiſfy the People with the King's Intentions therein: Of which and many other Matters of great Concernment to the Good and Quiet of the Kingdom; the Chancellour in a moſt excellent Speech expreſſed himſelf as followeth:

And Purchaſes and Sales, &c.

To be quieted by a Speech from the Lord Chancellour, eloquent and wiſe.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

Under ſome Surprize to ſpeak to an Aſſembly for which the King himſelf has a kind of Reverence, as well as extraordinary Kindneſs.

The King tells you, that he hath commanded me to ſay many Particulars to you, and the Truth is, he hath charged me with ſo many, that I have great Reaſon to fear, that I ſhall ſtand in much need of his Mercy, for omitting many Things he hath given me in command, at leaſt for delivering them in more Diſorder and Confuſion, than Matters of ſuch Moment and Importance ought to be to ſuch an Aſſembly, for which the King himſelf hath even a kind of Reverence, as well as an extraordinary Kindneſs. I am to mention ſome Things he hath done already, and many Things he intends to do during this Receſs, that you may ſee, how well content ſoever he is, that you ſhould have Eaſe, and Pleaſure, and Refreſhment, he hath deſigned Work enough for himſelf.

No free Quarter while the Army is diſbanding

Some were jealous that the King would not diſband them.

And a rational Jealouſy it was, that he would not be willing to diſband ſuch an Army.

An Army that had Victory entail'd upon it, and could hardly fail of Conqueſt, wherever he ſhould lead it

And were he not out of Danger both at Home and from Abroad, he would not diſband this Army

Of ſuch Order and Diſcipline. ſuch Courage and Succeſs

The King hath thanked you for the Proviſion you have made, that there may be no free Quarter during the Time the Army ſhall be diſbanding, and hath told you what he will do with that Money you have given him, if there ſhould want wherewithal to diſband: And now I hope you will all believe, that his Majeſty will conſent to the Diſbanding: He will do ſo; and yet he does not take it unkindly at their Hands, who have thought that his Majeſty would not diſband this Army; it was a ſober and a rational Jealouſy; no other Prince in Europe would be willing to diſband ſuch an Army; an Army to which Victory is entailed, and which humanly ſpeaking could hardly fail of Conqueſt whitherſoever he ſhould lead it; and if God had not reſtored his Majeſty to that rare Felicity, as to be without Apprehenſion of Danger at home or from abroad, and without any Ambition of taking from his Neighbours what they are poſſeſſed of, himſelf would never diſband this Army; an Army whoſe Order and Diſcipline, whoſe Sobriety and Manners, whoſe Courage and Succeſs hath made it famous and terrible over the World; an Army of which the King and his two Royal Brothers may ſay, as the noble Grecian ſaid of Æneas, > ——— Stetimus tela aſpera contra,

> Contulimuſque manus, experto credite, quantus
> In clypeum aſſurgat, quo turbine torqueat haſtam.

The King and his two Brothers had had Experience of their Valour in the Field; and admir'd them when they were againſt them.

And had no Comfort but in ſeeing and rejoicing that the Engliſh had done the Work.

And that they themſelves could have done Wonders at the Head of ſuch an Army.

They have all three in ſeveral Countries found themſelves engaged in the Midſt of theſe Troops, in the Heat and Rage of Battle, and if any common Soldiers (as no doubt many may) will demand the old Romans Privilege for having encountred Princes ſingle, upon my Conſcience he will find both Favour and Preferment: They have all three obſerved the Diſcipline, and felt, and admired, and loved the Courage of this Army, when they were the worſe for it; and I have ſeen them in a Seaſon when there was little elſe of Comfort in their View, refreſh themſelves with Joy, that the Engliſh had done the great Work, the Engliſh had got the Day, and then pleaſe themſelves with the Imagination what Wonders they ſhould perform in the Head of ſuch an Army: And therefore when his Majeſty is ſo entirely poſſeſſed of the Affection and Obedience of this Army, and when it hath merited ſo much from him, can it be believed, The King cannot part with them, and for that Reaſon muſt diſband them that he may not lend them to his Neighbours and Allies.

No good Engliſhman can wiſh for a ſtanding Army.

Theſe Soldiers will make good Huſbandmen, and good Citizens.

And therefore the King parts with them, as Parents do with their Children, for their Improvement and their Intereſt.

When diſbanded they ſhall have the King's Countenance and Favour.

If upon diſbanding any ſhould incline to Mutiny, they would be as odious to their Fellow-Soldiers, as to any other honeſt Man.

or imagined, that he can without ſome Regret part with them? No: My Lords and Gentlemen, he will never part with them, and the only ſure Way never to part with them, is to diſband them; ſhould it be otherwiſe, they muſt be expoſed to the daily Importunity of his great Neighbours and Allies; and how could he refuſe to lend them his Troops, of which he hath no uſe himſelf? His Majeſty knows they are too good Engliſh Men, to wiſh that a ſtanding Army ſhould be kept up in the Bowels of their own Country; that they who did but in Bello Pacis gerere Negotium, and who whilſt an Army lived like good Huſbandmen in the Country, and good Citizens in the City, will now become really ſuch, and take Delight in the Benefit of that Peace they have ſo honeſtly and ſo wonderfully brought to paſs: The King will part with them, as the moſt indulgent Parents part with their Children for their Education, and for their Preferment; he will prefer them to diſbanding, and prefer them by diſbanding; and will always retain ſuch a Kindneſs for them, and ſuch a Memory of the Service they have done him, that both Officers and Soldiers, after they are diſbanded, ſhall always find ſuch Countenance, Favour, and Reward from his Majeſty, that he doubts not, but if he ſhould have Occaſion to uſe their Service, they will again reſort to him with the ſame Alacrity, as if they had never been diſbanded: And if there be any ſo ill amongſt them (as there can be but very few, if any) who will forfeit that Favour and Protection they may have from him, by any withſtanding his Majeſty's Commands, and the full and declared Senſe of the Kingdom; his Majeſty is confident they will be as odious to their Companions, as they can be to any other honeſt Man.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

He has the King's Command to put them in Mind of the Act of Indemnity.

And eſpecially of one Clauſe in it, for taking away the Names and Terms of Diſtinction.

I am in the next Place, by the King's Command, to put you in Mind of the Act of Indemnity, not of any Grants or Conceſſions, or Releaſes he made to you in that Act, I have nothing of that in Charge; no Prince hath ſo excellent a Memory to forget the Favours he doth; but of what he hath done againſt you in that Act, how you may be undone by that Act, if you are not very careful to perform the Obligations he hath laid upon you in it: The Clauſe I am to put you in Mind of, is this, And to the Intent and Purpoſe that all Names and Terms of Diſtinction may be likewiſe put into utter Oblivion, Be it further enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That if any Perſon or Perſons, within the Space of three Years next enſuing, ſhall preſume maliciouſly to call, or alledge, or object againſt any other Perſon or Perſons any Name or Names, or other Words of Reproach, any Way leading to revive the Memory of the late Differences, or the Occaſion thereof, that then every ſuch Perſon, ſo as aforeſaid offending ſhall forfeit, &c. It is no Matter for the Penalty, it is too cheap a one, the King wiſhes it had been greater, and therefore hath by his juſt Prerogative (and 'tis well for us he hath ſuch a Prerogative) added another Penalty more inſupportable, even his high Diſpleaſure againſt all who ſhall ſwerve from this Clauſe in the Act. Give me Leave to tell you, that as any Name or Names, or other Words of Reproach are expreſly againſt the Letter, and puniſhable accordingly, ſo evil and envious Looks, murmuring and diſcontented Hearts, are as directly againſt the Equity of this Statute, a direct Breach of the Act of Indemnity, and ought to be puniſhed too; and I believe they may be ſo. You know Kings are in ſome Senſe called Gods, and ſo they may in ſome Degree be able to look into Mens Hearts; and God hath given us a King who can look as far into Mens Hearts as any Prince alive; and he hath great Skill in Phyſiognomy too, you would wonder what Calculations he hath made from thence; and no doubt, if he be provoked by evil Looks, to make a further Enquiry into Mens Hearts, and finds thoſe corrupted with the Paſſions of Envy and Uncharitableneſs, he will never chuſe thoſe Hearts to truſt and rely upon. He hath given us a noble and princely Example by opening and ſtretching his Arms to all who are worthy to be his Subjects, worthy to be thought Engliſh Men, by extending his Heart with a pious and a grateful Joy to find all his Subjects at once in his Arms, and himſelf in theirs; and ſhall we fold our Arms towards one another, and contract our Hearts with Envy and Malice to each other, by any ſharp Memory of what hath been unneighbourly or unkindly done heretofore? What is this but to rebel againſt the Perſon of the King, againſt the excellent Example and Virtue of the King, againſt the known Law of the Land, this bleſſed Act of Oblivion?

A ſmall Penalty in the Act, but the King can add a greater, his own Diſpleaſure.

The Letter of the Statute can be only againſt Words, but the Equity of it is againſt evil Looks and Hearts.

The King can look as far into Mens Hearts as any Prince alive

And has great Skill in Phyſiognomy.

He would have all his Subjects in his Arms, and truſt himſelf in theirs.

To have a ſharp Memory of what is paſt, is to rebel againſt the King's Perſon and Example, and this bleſſed Act of Oblivion.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The King has a Suit to you, to join with him in reſtoring the good old Things, of good Manners, good Humour, good Nature.

Good Nature ſo entirely Engliſh, that it cannot be tranſlated into any other Language.

Learn the excellent Art of Forgetfulneſs.

The King is a Suitor to you, makes it his Suit very heartily, that you will join with him in reſtoring the whole Nation to its primitive Temper and Integrity, to its old good Manners, its old good Humour, and its old good Nature; good Nature, a Virtue ſo peculiar to you, ſo appropriated by God Almighty to this Nation, that it can be tranſlated into no other Language, hardly practiſed by any other People, and that you will by your Example, by the Candour of your Converſation, by your Precepts and by your Practice, and by all your Intereſt, teach your Neighbours and your Friends how to pay a full Obedience to this Clauſe of the Statute, how to learn this excellent Art of Forgetfulneſs.

It was Inſolence, Fierceneſs, and Brutiſhneſs, that made our Enemies to be blown away as in a Moment.

Let them remember, and let us all remember, how ungracious, how indecent, how ugly, the Inſolence, the Fierceneſs, the Brutiſhneſs of their Enemies appeared to them; and we may piouſly and reaſonably believe, that God's

We may fear their Fate, if we practiſe their Vices.

The Proceedings of the laſt twenty Years have been ſo unnatural, that ſome aſcribe 'em to a malignant Star.

Which Malignity is now expired, and the good Genius of the Kingdom will return.

Indignation againſt them, for their want of Bowels, for their not being Engliſh-Men, (for they had the Hearts of Pagans and Infidels) ſent a Whirlwind in a Moment to blow them out of the World, that is, out of a Capacity to do more Miſchief in the World, except we practiſe their Vices, and do that ourſelves which we pretend to deteſt them for: Let us not be too much aſhamed, as if what hath been done amiſs, proceeded from the Humour, and the Temper, and the Nature of our Nation. The Aſtrologers have made us a fair Excuſe, and truly I hope a true one; all the Motions of theſe laſt twenty Years have been unnatural, and have proceeded from the evil Influence of a malignant Star; and and let us not too much deſpiſe the Influence of the Stars: And the ſame Aſtrologers aſſure us, that the Malignity of that Star is expired; the good Genius of this Kingdom is become ſuperiour, and hath maſtered that Malignity, and our own good old Stars govern us again, and their Influence is ſo ſtrong, that with our Help, they will repair in a Year what hath been decaying in twenty; and they only ſhall have no Excuſe from the Star, who continue their Malignity, and own all the Ill that is paſt to be their own, by continuing and improving it for the Time to come.

If any value themſelves too highly upon what they have done or ſuffered, and will ſtill reproach their Enemies; let them remember the Story, the excellent Story of Nicephorus.

Who for refuſing to be reconcil'd to an Adverſary, was deſerted by God, and turn'd Apoſtate.

If any body here, or any where elſe, be too much exalted with what he hath done, or what he hath ſuffered, and from thence thinks himſelf warranted to reproach others, let him remember the Story of Nicephorus; it is an excellent Story, and very applicable to ſuch Diſtempers: He was a pious and religious Man, and for his Piety and Religion was condemned to the Fire; when he was led to Execution, and when an old Friend who had done him Injury enough, fell at his Feet and aſked his Pardon; the poor Man was ſo elated with the Triumph he was going unto, with the Glory of Martyrdom, that he refuſed to be reconciled unto him; upon which he was diſappointed of his End; and for this Uncharitableneſs, the Spirit of God immediately forſook him, and he apoſtatized from the Faith. Let all thoſe who are too proud of having been as they think leſs faulty than other Men, and ſo are unwilling to be reconciled to thoſe who have offended them, take heed of the Apoſtacy of Nicephorus, and that thoſe Fumes of Envy and Uncharitableneſs, and Murmuring, do not ſo far tranſport and intoxicate them, that they fall into thoſe very Crimes; they value themſelves for having hitherto declined.

But my Lords and Gentlemen,

Old Names of Diſtinction to be buried, and no new ones to be taken up.

Piety and Godlineſs not to be meaſured by Moroſity and odd affected Modes.

To be in the Heart, rather than in the Looks or Tongue.

Whilſt we conſpire together, to execute faithfully this Part of the Bill, to put all old Names and Terms of Diſtinction into utter Oblivion; let us not find new Names and Terms to keep up the ſame, or a worſe Diſtinction: If the old Reproaches of Cavalier, and Round-head, and Malignant, be committed to the Grave; let us not find more ſignificant and better Words, to ſignify worſe Things; let not Piety and Godlineſs grow into Terms of Reproach, and diſtinguiſh between the Court, and the City, and the Country; and let not Piety and Godlineſs be meaſured by a Moroſity in Manners, an Affectation of Geſture, a new Mode and Tone of Speaking; at leaſt, let not our Conſtitutions and Complexions make us be thought of a contrary Party; and becauſe we have not an affected Auſterity in our Looks, that we have not Piety in our Hearts. Very merry Men have been very godly Men; and if a good Conſcience be a continual Feaſt, there is no Reaſon but Men may be very merry at it.

A noble Preſent the Commons had made the King.

And that with a good Heart and chearful Countenance.

You, Mr. Speaker, have this Day made a noble preſent to the King. Do you think that if you and your worthy Companions had brought it up with folded Arms, down caſt Looks, with Sighs and other Inſtances of Deſperation, it would not have been a very melancholiek Preſent? Have not your frank and dutiful Expreſſions, that Chearfulneſs and Vivacity in your Looks, rendered it much more acceptable, much more valuable? No Prince in Chriſtendom loves a chearful Giver ſo well as God Almighty does, and he of all Gifts, a chearful Heart; and therefore, I pray, let not a cloudy and diſconſolate Face be the only, or the beſt Sign of Piety and Devotion in the Heart.

The Miniſters Bill.

They of all Men ſhould labour to remove the Marks of Diſtinction and Reproaches.

The King has been very tender to all Miniſters in Poſſeſſion, and has never denied to confirm them, if at all worthy of his favour.

Whereby he has obliged ſome worthy Men; and even gratified ſome that are ſtill his Enemies.

How elſe comes the ſeditious Sermons in City and Country,

To alienate the Affections of the People from his Mrjeſty

By their Talk of Popery and evil Counſello s.

I muſt aſk your Pardon for miſplacing much of this Diſcourſe, which I ſhould have mentioned, when I came to ſpeak of the Miniſters Bill; they, I hope, will endeavour to remove theſe new Marks of Diſtinction and Reproaches, and keep their Auditories from being impoſed upon by ſuch Characters and Deſcriptions. The King hath paſſed this Act very willingly, and done much to the End of this Act before; yet hath willingly admitted you to be Sharers and Partners with him in the Obligation: I may ſay confidently, his Majeſty hath never denied his Confirmation to any Man in Poſſeſſion who hath aſked it, and they have all had the Effect of it, except ſuch who upon Examination and Enquiry appeared not worthy of it, and ſuch who though they are pardoned, cannot yet think themſelves worthy to be preferred. His Majeſty well knows that by this Act he hath gratify'd and obliged many worthy and pious Men, who have contributed much to his Reſtauration, and who ſhall always receive freſh Evidence of his Majeſty's Favour and Kindneſs, but he is not ſure that he may not likewiſe have gratify'd ſome who did neither contribute to his coming in, nor are yet glad that he is in; how comes it elſe to paſs, that he receives ſuch frequent Information of ſeditious Sermons in the City and in the Country, in which all Induſtry is uſed to alienate the Affections of the People, and to infuſe Jealouſies into them of the King and his Government? They talk of Introducing Popery, of evil

Counſellors, and ſuch other old Calumnies as are pardoned by this Act of Indemnity.

No Severity can be too great againſt thoſe who would corrupt his Majeſty's Nature, and extinguiſh his Mercy.

His Majeſty told you when he was laſt here, what Rigour and Severity he will hereafter uſe, how contrary ſoever it is to his Nature, in theſe Caſes; and conjured you, My Lords and Gentlemen, to concur with him in this juſt and neceſſary Severity, which I am ſure you will do with your utmoſt Vigilance, and that you will believe that too much Ill cannot befall thoſe who do the beſt they can to corrupt his Majeſty's Nature, and to extinguiſh his Mercy.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I told you I was to acquaint you with ſome Things his Majeſty intends to do during this Receſs, that you may ſee he will give no Intermiſſion to his own Thoughts for the publick Good, though for a Time he diſpences with your Aſſiſtance.

His Majeſty's good Intention for eſtabliſhing a Council for Trade.

He doth conſider the infinite Importance the Improvement of Trade muſt be to this Kingdom, and therefore his Majeſty intends forthwith to eſtabliſh a Council for Trade, conſiſting of ſome principal Merchants of the ſeveral Companies; to which he will add ſome Gentlemen of Quality and Experience; and for their greater Honour and Encouragement, ſome of my Lords of his own Privy-Council.

And a Council for our foreign Plantations.

In the next Place, his Majeſty hopes that by a well ſettled Peace, and God's great Bleſſing upon him and you, this Nation will in a ſhort Time flouriſh to that Degree, that the Land of Canaan did when Eſau found it neceſſary to part from his Brother. —— For their Riches were more, than that they might dwell together, and the Land wherein they were could not bear them, becauſe of their Cattle. We have been ourſelves very near this Pinacle of Happineſs, and the Hope and Contemplation that we may be ſo again, diſpoſes the King to be very ſollicitous for the Improvement and Proſperity of his Plantations abroad, where there is ſuch large Room for the Induſtry and Reception of ſuch who ſhall deſire to go thither, and therefore his Majeſty likewiſe intends to erect and eſtabliſh a Council for thoſe Plantations, in which Perſons well qualified ſhall be wholly intent upon the Good and Advancement of thoſe Plantations.

Two other Particulars recommended, the Caſe of Sales, and of Diſtempers in Religion.

There are two other Particulars, which I am commanded to mention, which were both mentioned and recommended to you by his Majeſty in his Declaration from Breda; the one, for the Confirmation of Sales, or other Recompence for Purchaſers; the other for the compoſing thoſe Differences and Diſtempers in Religion, which have too much diſturbed the Peace of the Kingdom. Two very weighty Particulars, in which his Majeſty knows you have ſpent much Time, and concerning which he ſhould have heard from you before this Time if you had not met with great Difficulties in the Diſquiſition of either.

In the Caſe of Sales, his Majeſty hath done much and will do more before your next Meeting.

For the firſt, his Majeſty hath not been without much Thought upon the Argument, and hath done much towards the Accommodation of many particular Perſons, and you ſhall not be at your Journeys End, before his Majeſty will put that Buſineſs concerning Sales into ſuch a Way of Diſpatch, that he doubts not you will find a good Progreſs made in it before your coming together again, and I believe the Perſons concerned, will be very much to blame, if they receive not good Satisfaction; and ſome of you who ſtay in Town ſhall be adviſed and conſulted with in that Settlement.

The other of Religion a ſad Argument.

Turning the ſtrongeſt Obligations to Charity and Compaſſion into Animoſity, Hatred, &c.

A melancholy Conſideration

The other of Religion is a ſad Argument indeed; it is a Conſideration that muſt make every religious Heart to bleed, to ſee Religion, which ſhould be the ſtrongeſt Obligation and Cement of Affection, and brotherly Kindneſs and Compaſſion, made now by the perverſe Wranglings of paſſionate and froward Men, the Ground of all Animoſity, Hatred, Malice and Revenge: And this unruly and unmanly Paſſion (which no queſtion the divine Nature exceedingly abhors) ſometimes, and I fear too frequently, tranſports thoſe who are in the Right, as well as thoſe who are in the Wrong, and leaves the latter more excuſable than the former, when Men who find their Manners and Diſpoſitions very conformable in all the neceſſary Obligations of humane Nature, avoid one anothers Converſation and grow firſt unſociable, and then uncharitable to each other, becauſe one cannot think as the other doth. And from this Separation we intitle God to the Patronage of, and Concernment in our Fancies and Diſtinctions, and purely for his Sake hate one another heartily. It was not ſo of old, when one of the moſt ancient Fathers of the Church tells us, that Love and Charity was ſo ſignal and eminent in the primitive Chriſtians, that it even drew Admiration and Envy from their Adverſaries. Vide (inquiunt) ut invicem ſe diligunt! Their Adverſaries in that in which they moſt agreed, in their very Perſecution of them, had their Paſſions and Animoſities amongſt themſelves; they were only Chriſtians, that loved, and cheriſhed, and comforted, and were ready to die for one another; Quid nunc illi dicerent Chriſtiani, ſi noſtra viderent tempora? ſays the incomparable Grotius: How would they look upon our ſharp and virulent Contentions in the Debates of Chriſtian Religion, and the bloody Wars that have proceeded from thoſe Contentions, whilſt every one pretended to all the Marks which are to attend upon the true Church, except only that which is inſeparable from it, Charity to one another.

Not ſo among the primitive Chriſtians.

Who to Admiration loved one another.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

This hath coſt the King many a Sigh and ſad Hour.

undergone, from the Diviſions and Diſtractions which have been ſo notorious within this Kingdom. What Pains he hath taken to compoſe them, after ſeveral Diſcourſes with learned and pious Men of different Perſuaſions, you will ſhortly ſee, by a Declaration he will publiſh upon that Occaſion, by which you will ſee his great Indulgence to thoſe who can have any Protection from Conſcience to differ with their Brethren. And I hope God will ſo bleſs the Candour of his Majeſty in the Condeſcenſions he makes, that the Church as well as the State, will return to that Unity and Unanimity, which will make both King and People as happy as they can hope to be in this World.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

He concludes with his Majeſty's Thanks to the two Houſes.

I ſhall conclude with the King's hearty Thanks to you, not only for what you have done towards him, which hath been very ſignal, but for what you have done towards each other; for the excellent Correſpondence you have maintained; for the very ſeaſonable Deference and Condeſcenſion you have had for each other, which will reſtore Parliaments to the Veneration they ought to have. And ſince his Majeſty knows, that you all deſire to pleaſe him, you have given him ample Evidence that you do ſo; he hath appointed me to give you a ſure Receipt to attain that good End, it is a Receipt of his own preſcribing, and therefore is not like to fail.

Be but pleaſed your ſelves, and perſwade others to be ſo; contrive all the Ways imaginable for your own Happineſs, and you will make him the beſt pleaſed, and the moſt happy Prince in the World.

The Houſes adjourned to November 6.

Upon finiſhing this Speech the King retir'd, and both Houſes of Parliament adjourn'd themſelves to the ſixth Day of November next.

Account of Dr. William Creed.

Regius Profeſſor of Divinity at Oxford.

Wood's Ath. Oxon. Vol. II. col. 218.
See July 19. 1663.

William Creed, born at Reading, Fellow of St. John's College Oxon, who in the beginning of the Rebellion had adher'd to his Majeſty's Cauſe, and in 1646. had been actually created Batchelor of Divinity, for the Sermons he had preached at Oxon before the King and Parliament, and in the Time of Uſurpation became Rector of Eaſt-Codeford or Codeford St. Mary, Wiltſhire; now upon the King's Return was made Regius Profeſſor of Divinity at Oxford in June 1660. and in the beginning of July following Archdeacon of Wilts; and on this 13th of September Prebendary of Lyme and Halſtock in the Church of Saliſbury.

Libels more freely diſpers'd to inſinuate the King's Change of his Religion abroad.

After the Riſing of the Parliament ſome Libels were more freely ſcattered, to inſinuate the King's Change of his Proteſtant Religion; of which no Proof could be made; and the ſtrongeſt Suſpicion yet was, that ſeveral Attacks had been made upon him by the Romiſh Prieſts abroad, eſpecially in Germany, as by this well atteſted Relation.

Where he had been often attack'd by the Jeſuits, eſpecially in one remarkable Conference in Germany.

The Hiſtory of Popiſh Tranſubſtantiation, written by John Lord Biſhop of Durham: Tranſlated from Latin into Engliſh, by Luke de Beaulieu. Publiſhed and prefaced by Joen Durel, 8vo. 1676.

While his Majeſty was departing from Paris into Germany, by reaſon of a League newly made by the French King with our wicked Rebels, Dr. John Coſin Dean of Peterborough, was ordered to perform divine Offices in the Royal Chapel, and to endeavour to keep and confirm in the Proteſtant Religion profeſſed by the Church of England, his fellow Exiles, both of the Royal Family and others his Countrymen who then lived at that Place. Now when his gracious Majeſty had choſen Cologn for the Place of his Reſidence, being ſolemnly invited, he viſited a neighbouring potent Prince of the Empire, of the Roman Perſuaſion, where it fell out, as it doth uſually where Perſons of different Religions do meet, ſome Jeſuits began to diſcourſe of Controverſies with thoſe Noblemen and Worthies (who never forſook their Prince in his greateſt Straights, but were his conſtant Attendants, and Imitators of his ever conſtant Profeſſion of the reformed Religion) charging the Church of England with Hereſy, eſpecially in what concerns the bleſſed Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. They would have it, that our Church holds no real, but only a kind of imaginary Preſence of the Body and Blood of Chriſt; but that the Church of Rome retained ſtill the very ſame Faith concerning this ſacred Myſtery, which the Catholick Church conſtantly maintained in all Ages; to wit, that the whole Subſtance of the Bread and Wine is changed into the Subſtance of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, and right well called Tranſubſtantiation by the Council of Trent. This and much more to the ſame purpoſe was pronounced by the Jeſuits, in preſence of his Majeſty and the German Prince, with as much Poſitiveneſs and Confidence, as if it had been a clear and ſelf evident Truth owned by all the Learned.

The Jeſuits begin the Controverſy about the Real Preſence, which they confidently affirmed to be Tranſubſtantiation.

As aſſerted by the Council of Trent.

And had provided a Book pretending to prove all they had ſaid.

Which Manuſcript the German Prince deliver'd to the Engliſh Nobles.

And they ſent it to Dr. Coſin at Paris.

His ſacred Majeſty and his noble Attendants knew well enough, that the Jeſuits did ſhameleſly belye the Church of England, and that their Brags about Roman Tranſubſtantiation were equally falſe and vain: But the German Prince having recommended to the Peruſal of thoſe honourable Perſons that followed the King, a Manuſcript, wherein (as he ſaid) was proved by authentick Authors all that had been advanced by the Jeſuits; they thought fit to acquaint the reverend Dr. Coſin with the whole Buſineſs, and intreat him, that he would vindicate the Church of England from the Calumny, and plainly declare what is her avowed Doctrine and Belief about the true and real Preſence of Chriſt in the bleſſed Sacrament. Hereupon our worthy Doctor, who was ever ready and zealous to do Good, eſpecially when it might benefit the Church of God, fell preſently to work, and writ this excellent Treatiſe as an Anſwer to the Prince's Manuſcript, that if thoſe worthy Perſons pleaſed, they might repay his Highneſs kindneſs in kind: Yet notwithſtanding the Solicitations of thoſe that occaſioned it, and of others that had peruſed it, he would not yield to have it made publick while a few

He was a great Champion for the Protestant Cause at Paris, by this excellent Sermon, &c. So that whereas Mr. Richard Baxter in several of his publick Writings doth most uncharitably suggest, as if Dr. Steuart, when at Paris, had a Design to introduce the French Popery by his Preaching, it appears to the contrary, not only in that, but in another Sermon preached in a Defence of the Protestants against the Papists, in an Auditory of Prelatists there.

See Lord Clarendon's Defence of Dr. Stillingfleet against Mr. Cressey, 8vo. 1673 p. 186.

It is certain that Popery had gained Ground in the late Times of Usurpation and Confusion. Several of the Church of England Sufferers driven into Exile, despairing of the King's Restauration, were by their own Necessities and the Jesuits fair Promises tempted to revolt. And even many of the wild Sectaries after dancing through many Changes of Opinion, were naturally led to rest in the Pretensions of Infallibility.

This honestly confess'd by Mr. Baxter.

Epist. Ded. to his Saints everlasting Rest, as cited by Mr. Long in Mr. Baxter's Arguments for Conformity, 8vo. 1678.

Do not your Hearts bleed (said Mr. Baxter) to look upon the State of England, and to think how few Towns or Cities there be (where there is any Forwardness in Religion) that are not cut into Shreds, and crumbled as to Dust, by Separations and Divisions? To think what a Wound we have hereby given to the very Christian Name; how we have hardned the Ignorant, confirmed the Papists, and are ourselves become the Scorn of our Enemies, and the Grief of our Friends; and how many of our dearest best esteemed Friends have fallen to notorious Pride or Impiety, yea, some to be worse than open Infidels. These are Pillars of Salt, see that you remember them.

Mr. Baxter's Defence. p. 52. as cited by Mr. Long, ibid. p. 264.

Three Ways especially Popery will grow out of our Divisions. 1. By the Odium and Scorn of our Disagreements, Inconsistency, and multiplied Sects, they will persuade People, that we must either come for Unity to them, or else all run mad, and crumble into Dust and Individuals. Thousands have been drawn to Popery, or confirmed in it, by this Argument already. And I am persuaded, that all the Arguments else in Bellarmine, and all other Books that ever were written, have not done so much to make Papists in England, as the Multitude of Sects among ourselves. Some Professors of religious Strictness, and great Esteem for Godliness, having run from Sect to Sect, and finding no Consistency, turned Papists themselves. 2. Who knows not how fair a Game the Papists have to play by our Divisions? —— We have already served them unspeakably, both in this, and in abating the Odium of the Gun-Powder Plot, and other Treasons, &c.

Cure of Church Divisions as there cited, p. 273.

I have much ado to forbear naming some high Professors known lately at Worcester, Exeter, and other Places; who died apostate Infidels, deriding Christianity and the Immortality of the Soul, who once were Separatists. And I have heard of some Separatists, who when others of a contrary Judgment were going to the Churches at London, looked in at the Doors, saying, The Devil choak thee, art not thou out of thy Pottage yet.

FRIDAY Sept. 14.

Death of the hopeful Duke of Gloucester.

Whitehall, Council-Board.

Council Book.

Mr. Secretary Morrice, by his Majesty's Command, acquainted the Council with the sad Notice of the Death of his Royal Highness the most illustrious and hopeful Prince Henry Duke of Gloucester, who died of the Small-Pox the Evening before, about nine of the Clock. —— Ordered, the Body should be instantly embalmed, and this Evening to be sent privately to Somerset House.

The Account inserted in the Publick Intelligence by Order, 4to.

Publick Intell. No. 38.

This Character is given by Mr Philips in Hist. of Ch. II p. 752.

He was a Prince excellently accomplished, Religious, Learned, Valiant, Wise above his Years, a dutiful and affectionate Brother, a wise Counsellour, a good Master, and a true Friend.

An invaluable Loss befel this Kingdom, betwixt nine and ten on Thursday Evening, it pleased Almighty God to deprive this World of that incomparable Prince Henry Duke of Gloucester, the most perfect and accomplished Prince of his Years the Christian World could boast of, having as many and great Virtues as Mortality could receive. His Highness lay sick almost a Fortnight, some Days (too long) before his Disease was perfectly discovered, but afterwards it was found to be the Small-Pox, that fatal Enemy to all excellent Persons. And now it rather struck at a Nation than a Man, it being hard to imagine how precious his Highness was in the Eyes of all Men. For therc is nothing that affects good and great Minds that this Prince was not Master of: Whether we remember his Fortitude abroad, or his Wisdom at home (in the House of Peers) the Vastness of his Wit, the Largeness of his Understanding, and his Steddiness in Religion: If we compare his Valour with his Meekness, his Knowledge with his Innocence, and his Religion with his Youth; the Goodliness of his Person, and the Greatness of his Heart: How dutiful and affectionate a Brother, how good a Master, and how fast a Friend; whose Son he was, and whose Brother: Whoever remembers the last Farewel betwixt this heavenly Prince and that glorious Martyr King Charles I. how God struck his Enemies blind to send him out of England, and in twenty Years enabled him to conquer all these Virtues, must needs have a sad Heart and wet Eyes, since God is still so offended with this Nation, as to take him from us, and conclude with the Prophet, that we all must offer Sacrifice to the God of Heaven, and pray for the Life of the King and his Brother.

His Burial.

His Body was buried in the Royal Chapel of King Henry the Seventh at Westminster, under the Tomb of Mary Queen of Scotland, his Great Grandmother.

Dugdale's Bar. Vol. II. p. 477.

Attended with the Death of two other, Dukes of Richmond and Somerset.

There died much about the same Time (as if to bear him noble Company) two of the same Order with himself, and next him in Quality! 1. Esme Duke of Lenox and Richmond, who died in France about ten Years of Age, his Corps was brought over, and being accompanied with several of the Nobility and Gentry, in about 150 Coaches, was conducted to Westminster, where it was honourably interr'd in Duke Lodowick his Ancestor's Tomb: Succeeded by Charles Lord Stuart of Newbery and Earl of Litchfield. 2. William Marquis of Hertford, by special Act restored to the Title of Duke of Somerset, departed this Life the 24th of October following, and was buried at Great Bedwind in the County of Wilts, leaving Heir William his Grandson.

Dugdale's Bar. Vol. II.

A fuller Character of the Duke of Gloucester.

The Duke of Gloucester was not only lamented by his Royal Relations, but by all great and good Men; being a Prince excellently accomplish'd, religious, valiant, and wise above his Years, a dutiful and affectionate Brother, a just Counsellour, a good Master, and a faithful Friend. As to his Religion, he was an inviolable Observer of his dying Father's Instructions, and an invincible Asserter of the Protestant Faith against all the Errors of Popery; to preserve him from the Temptations of which, his pious Sister now coming to visit him, had for some Years parted with one half of her annual Income that was left to her own Disposal, as I learned from an unquestionable Hand.

The Proceedings of the Commissioners in disbanding the Army.

The twelve Commissioners, six Lords and six Commons, named in the Act for the speedy Disbanding of the Army and Garrisons, proceeded to execute their Powers; whereupon there were disbanded in England and Wales eighteen Regiments of Foot, consisting of a thousand Soldiers in each Regiment, besides Officers; and thirteen Regiments of Horse, having six hundred in each Regiment, besides Officers; together with the General's Life-Guard of Horse, consisting of two hundred: And about fifty Garrisons, which had not in them less than five thousand Soldiers, besides Officers. And in Scotland three Regiments and two Companies of Foot, and two Regiments (except one Troop) of Horse, and about thirteen Garrisons. The King out of his own Bounty gave a Week's Pay over and above their full Arrears to all the Troops and Companies disbanded, which was very thankfully accepted by them.

Philips's Continuat. Ch. II. Fol. p. 750.

The King's Bounty was a Weeks Pay above their Arrears.

The Soldiers submitted chearfully to this Act of Disbanding.

Advised from Westminster, it is not imaginable how ready and willing the Officers and Soldiers are to be disbanded, which though at first Sight it may seem strange, yet upon serious Thoughts it will be found, that it is not only the Soldier's Desire, but their Interest also, as Things now stand, &c. None can complain of Partiality, since the Parliament in their Wisdom do proceed to each Regiment by way of Lot, and not by Choice, the Lots and Classes being already prepared by the Committee of the Army.

Publick Intelligence, 4to. No. 37.

The Day of Adjournment, the Colonels and other chief Officers of the Army met and dined together in King-street Westminster, where after a grateful Commemoration of his Gracious Majesty and the Royal Line, they all freely and openly declared their Willingness to obey the Act of Parliament for their Disbanding, acknowledging high Satisfaction from that admirable Speech made that Morning by the Lord High Chancellor, all cheerfully answering and verifying his Lordship's Expression, That they would willingly disband, and as willingly take up Arms, or do whatsoever should best redound to his Majesty's Service.

The Papists were now industrious to spread about their plausible Books, and especially their higher devotional Flights to take and deceive the Women.

About this Time were given away and dispersed about Court and City, several printed Copies of a Book of Popish Devotions, of a new Edition, or at least of the first Doway Impression, entituled, Sancta Sophia: Or Directions for the Prayer of Contemplation, &c. extracted out of more than forty Treatises, written by the late Reverend Father Augustine Baker, a Monk of the English Congregation of the Holy Order of Saint Benedict; with certain Patterns of devout Exercises of immediate Acts and Affections of the Will.

The most judicious Observations of the wise Earl of Clarendon upon this Book.

It was very hard to be understood: Dr. Stillingfleet had justly reflected on the Darkness of it

Since Mr. Cressy appeals from the Doctor [E. Stillingfleet] to the indifferent Reader, upon his sharp Censure of some Expressions in Sancta Sophia, and takes much Pains to make Elucidations upon those difficult Places, which the Doctor thought hard to be understood, and which he seems to believe will, by the Pains he hath taken, appear very intelligible. I cannot but take my self to be one of those Animadversions on Mr. Cressy's Answer to Dr. Stillingfleet's Fanaticism of the Church of Rome, 1673. 8vo. p. 59.

Mr. Creſſy endeavoured to elucidate thoſe difficult Places in other Languages as unintelligible.

This Book had been preſented to Chancellour Hyde, and recommended by Father Creſſy.

Who was concern'd in methodizing of it.

After the Death of the Author Mr Baker, a ſtudious and contemplative Man,

The Chancellour then thought it to be very obſcure and difficult.

And ſo did other Readers.

thoſe indifferent Readers, who is not by any Prejudice to the Man, or to the Matter, uncapable of judging of the Senſe of what he reads: And I muſt confeſs, that by Mr. Creſſy's Favour and Direction, I had one of thoſe Books of Sancta Sophia preſented to me as ſoon as it was printed, which I was the more impatient to read, becauſe he had recommended it to me as a Book worthy to be read by all Chriſtians, ſince it meddled not with any Controverſies, but was the greateſt Help to Devotion in general that had been yet publiſhed; nor did he think himſelf concern'd in the Commendation, ſince he always profeſſed that he was not Author of any thing contained in the Book, but of the Method and Marſhalling the ſeveral Diſcourſes out of Papers and Notes, not enough digeſted by the Death of Mr. Baker, who was generally eſteemed a learned and devout Man. And truly I believe he might be ſo, and as I have heard (for I never ſaw him, nor did Mr. Creſſy, I think) ſpent more Time privately upon his own Thoughts than in Books or Converſation. I cannot deny but that I did then think that what was not very vulgarly ſaid, which was honeſt, was very obſcure and difficult to be underſtood; which I did really impute to want of Capacity in myſelf, until I read many of the Particulars to others much wiſer, and in all reſpects very competent Judges of ſuch Diſcourſes; and when upon a full Diſquiſition I found them of the ſame Opinion, and that they knew not how to make any thing that was ſaid applicable to heighten their own Devotions, I began to conclude too, that what Benefit ſoever others might attain by reading it (for I met with ſome Women who profeſſed to have received much Benefit by it) I ſhould get little in taking more Pains to comprehend it. I remember it came out much about the ſame Time that Sir Henry Vane publiſhed a Book of the ſame Subject, Of the Love of God, and the Union with God, which when I had read, and found nothing of his uſual Clearneſs and Ratiocination in his Diſcourſe, in which he uſed much to excel the beſt of the Company he kept, and that the Style thereof was very much like that of Sancta Sophia, and that in a Crowd of very eaſy Words, the Senſe was too hard to find out: I was of Opinion that the Subject Matter of it was of ſo delicate a Nature, that it required another kind of Preparation of Mind, and it may be another kind of Diet, than Men are ordinarily ſupply'd with: And I am now the more confirmed in that Judgment by finding all Mr. Creſſy's Gloſſes, which he hath taken the Pains to make, to inform his indifferent Reader of the Senſe of thoſe hard Places, do but make the Underſtanding thereof the more intricate, and that the Commentary is not leſs obſcure than the Text.

About the ſame Time Sir Henry Vane had publiſh'd a like myſtical Book; in a Style much like that of Sancta Sophia.

Popiſh and fanatical Enthuſiaſm being much the ſame.

And Mr. Creſſy's Gloſſes did not help the Underſtanding.

His Commentary being no leſs obſcure than the Text.

And whereas many Citizens of known Ability and Integrity, have during the late Troubles, rather ſubmitted to the cuſtomary Fines, than take upon them the Office and Place of Aldermen, leſt they might be engaged in Actions contrary to their Conſcience: We do likewiſe recommend it to your Care, as a Matter not only conducing to our Service, but to the Honour and Wellfare of the City, that you make Choice of ſuch principal Members of the City, who have ſo fined as aforeſaid, to ſupply ſuch Places of Aldermen, as are now or ſhall become vacant; and that thereupon you cauſe to be repaid to them ſuch Sums as they have heretofore paid; by which Means the City will be ſerved by able and worthy Men, and a right Underſtanding be eſtabliſhed among the Governours thereof. THURSDAY Sept. 20.
The Tranſlation of Biſhop Juxon from London to the See of Canterbury.

This Day was a Day of Rejoicing to all that love that (whereof God is the Author) Order in the Church. For this Morning that moſt Reverend Father William now Lord Archbiſhop was tranſlated from London to Canterbury. The Solemnization was in King Henry the Seventh's Chapel, where (beſides a great Confluence of the orthodox Clergy) many Perſons of Honour and Gentry gave God Thanks for the Mercy of this Day; there being ſcarce a Man whoſe Heart was not touch'd with the Sight of that holy Prelate, who (by the Confeſſion of all the World) is a Perſon of ſuch primitive Sanctity, ſuch Wiſdom, Piety, Learning, Patience, Charity and all Apoſtolical Vertues, that God hath now ſhewn he hath yet Mercy left for the diſtreſſed Church of England. Conſider how, where, and in what Times he was preſerved, was made Biſhop of the great City when 'twas moſt giddy, kept the King's Purſe when Neceſſities were deepeſt, and Clamours loudeſt, in higheſt Places, and greateſt Buſineſs, and yet univerſally beloved; always drawn and forc'd into Preferment. Remember his valiant Piety at the Death of Strafford, and of Strafford's Maſter; and then you'll grant (what our martyr'd Sovereign ſeal'd in his laſt Breath) that this is the GOOD MAN, whom God and the King have now plac'd at the Helm of the Church of England.

Account of the keeping Pariſh Regiſters.

Great Defect in the late Times.

The Reaſons of it.

The keeping of Pariſh Regiſters having been taken out of the Hands of every Pariſh Miniſter, and committed to ſome inferiour Fellow elected by the People, and confirmed by the Juſtices of Peace, had been much neglected, and was again reduced into better Order. And 'till this Year, the Account of Chriſtnings had been neglected more than that of Burials; one and the chief Cauſe whereof was a religious Opinion againſt the Baptizing of Infants, either as unlawful or unneceſſary. If this were the only Reaſon, we might, by our Defects of this kind, conclude the Growth of this Opinion, and pronounce, that not half the People of England between the Years 1650. and 1660. were convinced of the Need of Baptizing. — Obſervations of Mr. Graunt on the Bills of Mortality, 1665. 8vo.

A ſecond Reaſon was the Scruples which many publick Miniſters would make of the Worthineſs of Parents to have their Children baptized, which forced ſuch queſtioned Parents, who did alſo not believe the Neceſſity of having their Children baptized by ſuch Scruplers, to carry their Children unto ſuch other Miniſters, as having performed the Thing, had not the Authority or Command of the Regiſter to enter the Names of the Baptized.

And the great Inconveniencies occaſion'd by it.

A third Reaſon was, that a little Fee was to be paid for the Regiſtring. Upon the whole Matter it is moſt certain, that the Number of Heterodox Believers was very great between the ſaid Year 1650. and 1660. and ſo peeviſh were they, as not to have the Births of their Children regiſtred, although thereby the Time of their coming to Age might be known, in reſpect of ſuch Inheritances as might belong unto them; and withal by ſuch Regiſtring it would have appeared unto what Pariſh each Child had belonged, in caſe any of them ſhould happen to want its Relief.

The Diſſenſions and Miſchiefs attending the Interruption of Epiſcopacy.

For the want of Epiſcopacy, the Diſſenſions of Religion were ſo far increaſed, that it was the Wonder of all conſidering Men, how it was poſſible that ſo few Years could produce ſuch a prodigious Catalogue of Hereſies. All theſe alſo were carried on with the uſual Effects of Schiſm; the Independants faſtening Antichriſtianiſm to the Preſbyterians; the Anabaptiſts charging the Independants with ſome Relicks of the Men of Sin; the Seekers damning all for Apoſtates; the Anti-Trinitarians and Socinians daily belching out Blaſphemies againſt the Son and Holy Spirit of God; the Antinomians caſting off the Law of God, and the Quakers all Light to walk by but their own. How was every Houſe filled with Strifes and Contentions, and even the very Foundations of Unity and Society, which are Families, torn in Pieces? In every Town almoſt which was capable of two Preachers, one Preſbyterian and the other Independant were planted there, to diſpute and preach and ſtrive, one with the other for the greateſt Congregation. Hence became they the Sport of Atheiſts and Papiſts, &c.

Anſwer to the Long-Parliament revived.

The Long-Parliament twice defunct. Or an Anſwer to a ſeditious Pamphlet, entituled, The Long-Parliament revived: Wherein the Author's undeniable Arguments are denied, examined, confuted: And the Authority of this preſent Parliament aſſerted, vindicated, by a zealous yet moderate Oppugner of the Enemies of his Prince and Country. The Occaſion of writing this Anſwer.

To the Reader.] About a Week ſince I had the Happineſs to viſit ſome of my learned and judicious Friends: Their Diſcourſe was a while various, till it was fix'd on the Long Parliament revived. And therein (having no Learning in the Common Laws) their Judgments were fluctuating and uncertain. But the Novelty of the Queſtion, and the Confidence of the Author, had inclined them though not to an Aſſent, yet to a favourable Cenſure of his Opinion. A Stranger among them would needs prove it to be true, and produced only that it was the Senſe of the City for his Evidence. At length they demanded my Judgment, I diſcourſed the Queſtion at large, anſwered their Objections, refuted their Arguments, and in the End left them well ſatisfy'd that it was but a Paradox, &c.

Becauſe charged with Faction and Sedition.

See his Picture and Farewell Sermon among thoſe of the late London Miniſters, preached Auguſt 17, 1662.

P. 19. How many in this Hour of Temptation are caught in this enſnaring Trial? What ſay ſome? Come, let us rather conform to the Ceremonies, than loſe our Liberties; rather let us bow at the Name of Jeſus, than loſe all for the Sake of Jeſus; it is better to baptize with the Croſs than to bear the Croſs; and to wear a Surplice, than to pinch our Carkaſs. Thus many (it is to be feared) deſtroy their Conſciences, to keep their Places, and conform againſt their Judgments to preſerve their Profits: This is, as if a Man to ſave his Hat ſhould loſe his Head, or as if a Man ſhould ſink the Ship to avoid the Storm, &c.

Sir Abraham Reignardſon excus'd from the Mayoralty of London.

Sir Richard Brown elected Lord Mayor.

The Loyalty and Sufferings of Alderman Reignardſon.

Publick Intelligence, 4to. No. 41.

That loyal Citizen Sir Abraham Reignardſon, through Age and Weakneſs being unable to go through with his Mayoralty this Year, being already choſen, requeſted to get off, and the City (who ought to deny him nothing who hath ſo deeply obliged them) granted his Deſire, and have ſince choſen Major General Sir Richard Brown, who now hath an Opportunity to ſhew how highly he merits his Majeſty's and the City's Favour. It was the good Alderman Reignardſon's Reſolution to ſacrifice himſelf for the King and the City, when he burn'd all the Subſcriptions for and againſt a Perſonal Treaty, Anno 1648. (which ſaved many thouſand honeſt Mens Eſtates) and when the bloody Rumpers commanded him to proclaim the Aboliſhing of the Kingly Government and Houſe of Peers in April 1649. he told them to their Faces, that his Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance to the King and his Poſterity would not permit his Conſcience to obey their Order, for which they voted him out of his Mayoralty, fined him two thouſand Pound, ſent him Priſoner to the Tower, and for not paying his Fine, ordered his Goods, Houſhold-ſtuff, and very wearing Apparel to be ſequeſtred and ſold; and yet now he lives after all his Loſſes, to have the Comfort of his own good Conſcience, and Honour from all that love the King or the City.

The Spaniſh Ambaſſador takes Leave of the King.

The Conteſts betwixt the Spaniſh and French Ambaſſadors.

Philips's Char. II. Fol. p. 751.

This Day, Wedneſday October 3, the Prince de Ligne, Ambaſſadour extraordinary from the King of Spain, took Leave of his Majeſty at Whitehall. —— Many troubleſome Conteſts there had formerly been between the Ambaſſadors of the two Crowns of Spain and France in the Courts of Foreign Princes and States, when they chanced to meet at the ſame Place; but none more remarkable than that upon Tower Hill, at the Landing of an Ambaſſadour from Sweden on the 30th of September; which ſince it was ſo prepared and premeditated a Buſineſs on both Sides, that his Majeſty foreſeeing it would come to a Quarrel, and out of his accuſtomed Civility, willing to carry himſelf with an equal and impartial Indifference toward them both, and ſo far to gratify their Intentions, as to permit them to put their Retinue into ſuch a Poſture as they ſhould think fitteſt, and moſt becoming their reſpective Pretences: Yet in the mean Time taking Order for ſtrict Guards to be kept upon the Place, for the preventing as much as might be, of all Diſturbances; and ſeverely prohibiting any of his own

Subjects to intermeddle in the Difference, or to take Part with either Side, was pleased to command, that Mr. Evelyn should after a diligent Enquiry made concerning the Carriage and Success of that whole Affair, render him a particular Account thereof, by drawing up a full Narrative of every Circumstance of that Rencounter; which being a Matter of ſo rare a kind, and great Importance, we have here thought meet to inſert from that Gentleman's more ſedulous and ample Collection, as it was by him preſented to his Majeſty in this following Relation.

Entituled the Manner of the Encounter between the French and Spaniſh Embaſſadors at the Landing of the Swediſh Embaſſadour.

Upon Sunday laſt, being the 30th of September, about ten in the Morning, the Spaniſh Ambaſſadour's Coach (in which were his Chaplain, with ſome of his Gentlemen, attended by about forty more of his own Servants in Liveries) was ſent down to the Tower Wharf, &c.

THURSDAY Oct. 4.

On the Tranſlation of Biſhop Duppa to Wincheſter, Dr. Humph. Henchman was made Biſhop of Sarum.

After well providing for the two Metropolitan Sees of Canterbury and York, and for the See of London, the next Care was to fill up the See of Wincheſter, by the Tranſlation of Dr. Brian Duppa Biſhop of Saliſbury, who was confirmed Biſhop of Winton the fourth of October, 1660. And upon that Tranſlation, Dr. Humphrey Henchman was elected Biſhop of Sarum, confirmed the 23d, conſecrated the 28th inſtant.

The Solemnities of the Tranſlation of the moſt reverend Father in God Accepted now Lord Archbiſhop of York were performed on Thurſday October 4, to the great Satisfaction of all that had formerly known the Learning and Wiſdom of that worthy Prelate, not only when he was Biſhop of Litchfield and Coventry, Vice-Chancellour of Oxon, and Preſident of Magdalen College, but alſo during thoſe very many Years he ſerved his late Majeſty as Chaplain in Ordinary.

The Biſhoprick of Coventry and Litchfield offered firſt to Mr. Baxter, and then to Dr. Baylie, who both refuſing, it was afterward given to Dr. John Hacket an exemplary Prelate.

A. Wood's Faſti Oxon. Vol. II. col. 664.

Upon this Tranſlation of Biſhop Frewen, the See of Litchfield was not ſupplied for about the Space of a Year, in Expectation that Mr. Richard Baxter would take it, (for the King intended it for him conditionally he would conform) ſo as Dr. Frewen had the Benefit of that too, all the Fines for renewing, and for the filling up Lives, to his very great Profit, beſides what he got from York. At length Mr. Baxter, the Coryphæus of the Preſbyterian Party refuſing it, leſt he in a high manner ſhould diſpleaſe the Brethren; it was offer'd to Dr. Richard Baylie, Preſident of St. John's College and Dean of Sarum, who had been a very great Sufferer for the King's Cauſe, but he refuſing it, becauſe Dr. Frewen had ſkim'd it, it was thereupon conferr'd upon Dr. John Hacket.

Account of Mr. Nicholas Grey.

Wood's Athen. Oxon. Vol. II. col. 164.

Nicholas Grey, born in London, elected from Weſtminſter School to Chriſt-Church Oxon in 1606. under the Tuition of Mr. Samuel Fell, took the Degrees in Arts, and being noted for a pure Latiniſt and Græcian was made the firſt Maſter of Charter-Houſe, [illegible] against the Statutes, the Governours gave him a Benefice, ([illegible] in Cambridgeshire, I think) where for ſome Time he lived, as it were, out of his Element. On the 29th of January, 1624. he was made chief Master of Merchant-Taylors School, where continuing till 1631. he was made chief Master of the School in Eaton College, and at length Fellow of that House, B. D. in the Time of Rebellion turned out, and put to difficult Shifts. At length obtaining the Maſterſhip of Tunbridge School in Kent, continued there till the King's Return, and was then reſtored to his Parſonage and Fellowſhip. After the Publiſhing ſeveral Tracts, he gave way to Fate, in a poor Condition at Eaton, in 1660. and was buried in the Choir of the Church or Chapel there, near to the Stairs that go up to the Organ Loft, on the fifth Day of October.

Death of the reverend Mr. Edward Terry, born at Leigh near Penſhurſt in Kent, educated in Grammar in the Free-School at Rocheſter, entred into Chriſt-Church, Oxon in 1607. M. A. 1614. In the Year following he took a Voyage with certain Merchants into Eaſt-India, where after his Arrival he was ſent for by Sir Thomas Roe, Ambaſſadour from the King of England to the Great Mogul, with whom he lived as Chaplain in the Court of that mighty Emperour for more than two Years. At his return he retired to his College, and having ſome ſmall Cure beſtowed on him, became at length Rector of Great Greenford in Middleſex, which he enjoy'd about thirty Years, ſubmitting to the Men that bore Sway in the Time of Rebellion. He was an ingenious and polite Man, of a pious and exemplary Converſation, a good Preacher, and much reſpected by the Neighbourhood where he dwelt. He publiſh'd his Voyage to Eaſt-India: Wherein ſome Things are taken Notice of in his Paſſage thither, but many more in his abode there, within that rich and moſt ſpacious Empire of the Great Mogul, London, 1655. 8vo. with the Author's Picture before it —— by him dedicated and preſented in MS. to Prince Charles, Anno 1622. Indictment of the Regicides.

Charge of Sir Orlando Bridgman.

Publick Intelligence, 4to.

Many of the infamous Regicides were indicted at Hicks's Hall, and the Bill found by the Grand Jury of Knights and Gentlemen of Quality of the County of Middleſex: Such a Bench, and ſuch a Jury has rarely been ſeen in that Court; where that moſt learned Lord Chief Baron Sir Orlando Bridgman gave ſuch a Charge, as (if nothing before had been ſaid or written of that Matter) is ſufficient to teach all Subjects their whole Duty and Allegiance.

He told the Jury, —— That he muſt deliver to them for plain and true Law, that no Authority, no ſingle Perſon, no Community of Perſons, not the People collectively or repreſentatively, have any coercive Power over the King of England, who was not only the Head of the People, but the Head of the Commonwealth, the three Eſtates of the Realm: All which was agreeable to the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, which Oaths all Men that entred into the Parliament Houſe had been obliged to take. And therefore for a few Members of the Houſe of Commons, who had taken thoſe Oaths, and by them ſtood obliged to defend the King againſt all Attempts made againſt his Perſon, Crown, and Dignity; for a few Members (not an eighth Part of the Houſe) to aſſume to themſelves an Authority to make Laws, to erect an high Court of Juſtice, and to take away the Life of their Sovereign, a King that had not only redreſſed all Grievances in the Beginning of the Parliament, as the Star-Chamber, High Commiſſion Court, Ship Money, &c. but had afterwards made ſuch Conceſſions in the Iſle of Wight as were more than the People could deſire. —— And that theſe few Commons, not only without, but excluding the reſt of the Commons, and likewiſe rejecting all the Lords, ſhould take upon them this Authority, and by Colour of [illegible] Lord, and as King put him to Death [illegible] This was such an Aggravation of Wickedness [illegible] Story in any Romance, or invented Tragedy [illegible]. And therefore for any of these Criminals to shelter themselves under that pretended Mock-Authority, is so far from being an Excuse, that it is the highest of Aggravation.

A Teſtimonial or Certificate given by Dr. John Barwick, in Favour of Mr. Francis Creſſet.

Theſe are with all poſſible Duty and Submiſſion to acquaint the King's moſt excellent Majeſty, and to certify all others whom it may concern, that Mr. Francis Creſſet did with the utmoſt Fidelity ſerve the late King, while he was detain'd under the Government of the Army, and particularly that he lodged a Cypher with his Majeſty, when the Penalty of High Treaſon was denounced againſt any ſuch Attempt; by which Cypher I wrote to the King every Week, and gave him an Account of his Affairs then tranſacting both in England and Scotland. Theſe Letters Mr. Creſſet delivered to his Majeſty with all Secrecy and Faithfulneſs, and alſo ſent back his Majeſty's Orders and Commands in Anſwer thereunto. 28 Regicides brought to the Bar in the Old-Bailey.

Publick Intelligence, No. 41.

25. John Cook.
26. Hugh Peters.
27. Francis Hacker.
28. Daniel Axtell.

See Keling's Reports, p. 11. Confeſſion after Not-Guilty, pleaded by Sir Hardreſs Waller and Geo. Fleetwood, which was accordingly recorded by the Court, and agreed by all the Judges that it might be done, altho' the Clerk had recorded their Plea of Not-Guilty, for the Entry is, ſuch a one poſtea or relicta verificatione cognovit Indictamentum. Harriſon ſaid he would be try'd according to the Laws of the Lord, and when they told him the neceſſary Form was by God and the Country, he ſaid, they were vain Words.

These being called did all anſwer Not Guilty, except two, viz. Sir Hardreſs Waller, who confeſſed himſelf Guilty, and deſired his Petition might be preferred to his Majeſty for Mercy; and Mr. George Fleetwood who confeſſed his Guilt, but ſtood and pleaded his Majeſty's Proclamation for coming in within fourteen Days, which he ſaid he did, and then deſired his Petition might be received.

Thomas Harriſon at firſt refuſed to hold up his Hand, till the Lord Chief Baron, Judge Forſter, and other Judges told him his Duty in this particular: After which he ſaid, I perceive it is but a Formality, and therefore I'll do it, and ſo held up his Hand; but ſeveral Times offer'd to ſally out into Diſcourſes, refuſing to anſwer Guilty or Not Guilty, till the Judges declared the Neceſſity of anſwering one of the two, which they were forced to do divers Times before he would be brought to give an Anſwer, but at laſt he did, and ſaid, Not Guilty.

His Name in the Indictment was written Martyn, upon which he pleaded that his Name was Marten not Martyn, but the Court agreed, that he being known by that Name of Martyn, that was well enough in the Indictment tho' it be not ſpelled directly as he ſpelleth it. Keling's Reports, p. 11.

Mr. Henry Marten pleaded the Act of Indemnity, whereupon the Court told him, he was an excepted Perſon, but he ſaid he was not; for his Name was not in the Act: The Court then called for the Act, and bad him read his Name; he ſaid, that was not he, for he ſaid his Name was Marten not Martin; the Judges told him, that Miſnomer was not ſufficient, had it been greater than i for an e; but he replied, that he conceived all Penal Laws were to be taken literally: The Judges then ſhewed him his Error, after which he anſwer'd Not Guilty.

Character of Harry Marten.

Regicide. no Saints, 8vo. p. 85.

Harry Marten was a witty debonaire Companion, who made Drinking and Whoring the Delight of his Soul, one of the Levellers, who having ſquandred away an Eſtate of ſeveral Thouſand Pounds per Annum beſides Plunder and other Gratuities, Gamesters, could not think of a better Way to supply his Luxury, than out of other Mens Stocks; to which purpose he writ a Book call'd England's Troublers troubled, wherein all rich Men are declar'd Enemies to the Mean, and Lords and Gentry, Clergy and Lawyers are exhorted to come into one common Fund, &c. In fine there was not a more immoral prophane Wretch ever breath'd upon Earth, than this Marten —— who most undeservedly escap'd with his Life, for two or three waggish Evasions, which nothing but a Court of unwearied Temper would have born with. ——— In those familiar Epistles which this Devotee of Venus writ to his Lady of Pleasure, there is likewise a Letter in Justification of the King's Murder, penn'd it seems before he came in, and had it come out before his Tryal, we might have seen how witty he would have been upon the Gallows: For 'tis written in his usual buffooning Way, without any Thing of solid Argument, or real Thought.

Robert Tichbourne.

Robert Tichbourne, before he would answer Guilty or Not Guilty, complain'd how he had been kept close Prisoner, tho' he confessed no otherwise than he ought; (and sure with much more Civility than himself used Prisoners when he kept the Keys of the Tower) adding how unable he was to answer those most learned Gentlemen (the King's Council at Law) who stood ready to charge him: Therefore he desired he might have Council assigned to him, for that there would be Matter of Law in his Case. The Court replied, that when he had answered he might be heard; in the mean Time he had often seen by others, and knew by Experience, that neither Council nor any other Thing could be granted him, till he answered Guilty or Not Guilty, whereupon he said Not Guilty.

Robert Lilbourne.

Robert Lilbourne (Brother of John) though he had Examples before him yet refused to answer, pretending that there were Precedents that would excuse him from answering till Council was assigned him, and other Concessions granted. But the Court shew'd him how grosly he was mistaken, which forced him to answer Not Guilty.

Mr. Carew put himself upon his Tryal with this strange Salvo, Saving to our Lord Jesus Christ his Right to the Government of these Nations.

John Carew, as confidently as any, refused to answer, offering at Reasons drawn from the late Usurpers, but was quickly silenced by true Reasons indeed from the Court. Sir Heneage Finch, his Majesty's Solicitor General, moving on his Majesty's Behalf, that if Mr. Carew would not answer, he might be recorded for standing mute. Whereupon he answered Not Guilty.

Thomas Scot.

Thomas Scot also refused to answer, but sub Protestatione of reserving Power to plead Matter of Law by his Council, he answered Not Guilty.

Thomas Wayt refusing to answer, said his Case differed from others, and he feared if he answered to the Demand of Guilty or Not Guilty, he might exclude himself from the Benefit of what he had to say for himself, and therefore again and again desired to be heard: But he was told, that after he had answered he might be fully heard, but before the Law did not permit him; hereupon he answered Not Guilty.

Axtell justified his doing all as a Soldier, by the Command of his superior Officer, whom he must obey or dye. See Keling's Reports, p. 12.

Daniel Axtell would by no Means answer, though he heard the Judgment of the Court in that Particular, till he saw himself ready to be recorded for a Mute, and then he answered Not Guilty. When the Court had convinced him of the Danger of standing mute, and had put him upon the Form of being try'd by God and his Country, he said, that is not lawful, God is not locally here.

Hugh Peters.

All the rest upon the first Demand replied Not Guilty, and particularly Hugh Peters (when called to answer whether Guilty or Not Guilty) lift up his Hands and Eyes according to his Custom, and said, Guilty! No not for ten thousand Worlds; and would be try'd by the Word of God.

After this the Court adjourned till Seven of the Clock to Morrow, Thursday Morning.

John Bullivant Rector of Old.

Reg. Juxon Cant.

Die Octob. 10. 1660. Johannes Bullivant Clericus admiss. per D. Arepum Cant. (Sede Petriburg. vacante) ad Eccl. de Old alias Wold in Com. Northton.

Thursday Oct. 11.

Thomas Harrison.

He was a Butcher's Son of Newcastle under Line in Staffordshire, plac'd Clerk to an Attorney in Clifford's Inn, and when out of his Time became a kind of Pettifogger in that Practice, and was infamous enough for it, which might occasion him when the War broke out to exchange his Pen for the Sword —— When by his enthusiastical Preaching and great Pretences to Piety, he became admir'd by the Army, and advanc'd by Cromwell to a Major-General, and to be one of his chief Confidents to break the Presbyterian Junto, convey the King from Hurst-Castle to St. James's, and act in his Murder. Regicides no Saints, 8vo. p. 57.

Mr. Thomas Harrison was brought to the Bar, where after he had challenged full thirty five Jurors, he was try'd for imagining and compassing the late King's Death, which was proved by his consulting, sentencing to Death, then signing and sealing the Warrant for Execution, and that he particularly (speaking of his late Majesty) said to the Conspirators, We must needs blacken him, pray let us blacken him what we can. All which being proved by many Witnesses, he had the Face to justify by such Excuses, that what he did was by Authority of Parliament (meaning twenty five Commoners, Members of the Rump) but was told, that all the Commons and all the Lords, real and representative, could not take away the Life of the meanest Subject (without the King's Consent) much less the life of our Lord the King himself. To which he answered nothing material, but flew out into bold and wild Discourses, said, the Fact was notorious, it was not done in a Corner; he believed, God was with his Servants in those Days, however it seemed good to him to suffer this Turn to come upon them; that he had with Prayers and Tears desired to know the Mind of God in it, but he had received no Conviction of any Evil in it, but rather Assurance; that he follow'd his Conscience to the Lord, and that he had acted in the Fear of the Lord. Whereupon having no more to say, the Jury, without stirring one Foot from the Bar, found him Guilty, for which he received the Sentence of a Traytor; and then the Court adjourned till next Morning at Seven of the Clock.

Bp. Burnet's Hiſtory, Fol. p. 162.

Harriſon was a fierce and bloody Enthuſiaſt: And it was believed, that while the Army was in doubt, whether it was fitter to kill the King privately, or to bring him to an open Tryal, that he offered, that if a private Way was ſettled on, to be the Man that ſhould do it. So he was begun with, &c.

Rebels no Saints, 1661. 8vo. p. 2.

He made the Murder of the King to be the Act and Deed of God himſelf; when three Miniſters of the City endeavoured to convince him of being guilty of the King's Blood, he anſwered them, As to the Blood of the King, I have not in the leaſt any Guilt lying upon me; for I have many a Time ſought the Lord with Tears, to know whether I had done amiſs in it; but was rather confirmed that the Thing was more of God than of Men. And beſides, what I did was by Authority of Parliament, which was then the only lawful Authority, for God own'd it by pleading their Cause, and fighting their Battles for them.

Dr. William Lucy made Biſhop of St. Davids.

William Lucy, S. T. P. being nominated by the King to the Biſhoprick of St. David's, void from the Death of Dr. Roger Manwaring, July 1, 1653. was duly elected October 11, confirmed November 17, and conſecrated the Day following.

FRIDAY Oct. 12. Proceedings in the Trial of other of the Regicides.

This Morning Mr. Adrian Scroop, Mr. John Carew, Mr. Thomas Scot, Mr. Gregory Clement, and Mr. John Jones were ſucceſſively brought to the Bar, and charged for encompaſſing the late King's Death, which being fully proved by many Witneſſes againſt them, in their ſitting, ſentencing, and ſigning the Warrant for Execution of his Majeſty, they were all found Guilty by their ſeveral Juries without going from the Bar.

Adrian Scroop pleaded gentilely in theſe Words, directed to the Lord Chief Baron Bridgman —— But my Lord I ſay this, if I have been miſled, I am not a ſingle Perſon that have been miſled. My Lord, I could ſay, (but I think it doth not become me to ſay ſo) that I ſee a great many Faces at this Time, that were miſled as well as myſelf, but that I will not inſiſt upon, &c. The Faces he meant among thoſe who ſate as Judges, were Sir Anthony-Aſhley Cooper, Edward Earl of Mancheſter, William Viſcount Say and Seal, John Lord Roberts, Denzil Holles, Eſq; and Arthur Anneſley, Eſq; Ath. Oxon. Vol. II. col. 542.

Eachard's Ch. II. p. 22. Regicides no Saints, &c. 8vo. p. 71.

Mr. Scroop, by the Lord-Mayor elect, Sir Richard Brown's Teſtimony, was proved to have ſpoke Words ſince his Majeſty's Return tending to the Juſtification of the Murthering of the King, which Words made him excepted in the Houſe of Commons, and aggravated his Crime here. He was convicted of ſitting as Judge, and ſigning the Warrant of Execution. He proteſted he had no Malice againſt the King; that he really took the Parliament's Authority for valid, &c. He had more of the Port and Language of a Gentleman than any of the reſt of the King's Judges; and though he was found guilty, yet it is juſtly believed, he would have eſcap'd with Life, had not his Crime been aggravated by the particular Teſtimony of Sir Richard Brown. Mr. Carew carried himſelf much like Harriſon in his Arguments and Language. Mr. Scot was proved to have ſo glory'd in the Death of the King (and that publickly in the Houſe of Commons, and immediately before that Houſe laſt diſſolved) that he ſaid, He would have it written on his Tomb. His Plea was to juſtify the Rump Parliament's Authority, and himſelf as a Member of it. Mr. Gregory Clement wav'd his Plea of Not Guilty, and confeſſed the Indictment, tend'ring a Petition which was received. So did Mr. John Jones (after ſome ſeeming Denial) confeſs himſelf Guilty. They were condemned all together in the ſame Words as Harriſon. Before the paſſing Sentence, Sir Orlando Bridgman made an affecting Speech to the Priſoners and the Audience; in which, after he had enlarged upon the Virtues and Conceſſions of the late King, and the Peace and Proſperity that once flouriſh'd in his Reign, he more immediately apply'd to the Criminals. And becauſe Mr. Scot and others had alledg'd, that they had by Prayers and Tears often ſought the Lord, that if there were any Iniquity in it, he would ſhew it to them; he remembred them of our Saviour's Saying, The Time cometh that whoſoever killeth you, will think that he doth God Service. —— There is (ſays he) a ſpiritual Pride; Men may over-run themſelves by their own Holineſs, and may follow pretended Revelations: Men may ſay, I have pray'd about ſuch a Thing. A Man may commit a Robbery or Murder, meerly becauſe he will, and may come and ſay, I have pray'd againſt it and cannot underſtand it to be a Sin, as one in Shropſhire did, and yet notwithſtanding kill'd his own Father and Mother.

Account of John Jones.

Regicides no Saints, 8vo. p. 74.

The firſt Entrance of John Jones into the World, if common Report may be credited, was as Sir Thomas Middleton's Man, for that I find his Appellation in all the Prints of thoſe Times; and 'tis further ſaid, that by his Inducement Sir Thomas engaged on the Rebel Side: But his grand Advance was by marrying Cromwell's Siſter, who finding him withal a zealous Brother, made up of Faction, Sedition, and Inſolence, countenanced him accordingly in all his Deſigns; for he was not only Governour of Angleſey, but Comptroller General of all the honeſt Gentlemen in North-Wales. Afterwards he was removed into Ireland, where he behaved himſelf as Servants uſed to do when got into Dominion, with a moſt Tyrannical Arbitrarineſs, &c.

Account of Gregory Clement.

Ibid. p. 75.

Gregory Clement had been Apprentice to one Mr. Hukely, a Spaniſh Merchant, who when his Time was out, adviſ'd him to try his Fortune in the Eaſt-Indies, and for his Encouragement lent him 500 l. upon his ſingle Bond, perhaps he might have ſomething more of his own, but that was ſaid to be his principal Fund, which he ſo well manag'd, as to return about the Beginning of our Troubles with an Advance of 8 or 9000 l. which made him not only conſiderable upon the Exchange, but a Recruiter at Weſtminſter, when moſt honeſt Men were gone, or forc'd away. At what Time his Maſter dy'd I omitted to enquire, but leaving only two Daughters, the Gentleman who marry'd the Eldeſt engag'd on the King's Side, and ſo could not come to London till the War was over; then he addreſſed himſelf to Clement, and hop'd he would not demur to pay ſo juſt and fortunate Serjeant's Debt, which notwithſtanding he did continually ſhuffle, and put him off, and that with ſo much Inſolence, as once upon the Exchange to bid him kiſs his B——. When he came to lie in the Dungeon at Newgate in order to his Execution, the Gentleman apply'd himſelf to him there, where he found him at the common Cant, that he had made his Peace with God and the World, and deſir'd he would not diſturb him with any temporal Concerns. He told him how little true Peace could be expected with God, when ſo unjuſt to Man, with much more to the like, tho' very little purpoſe. For the obſtinate Wretch perſever'd in his vain Preſumptions, and even at the Gallows declar'd, what great Aſſurances he had, tho' the Gentleman mounted among the Guard, told him there of his unjuſt Dealing, which he car'd not to take any Notice of, and ſo went off an horrid Inſtance of Fanatick Deluſion.

Adjourn'd to Saturday Morning.

SATURDAY Oct. 13. Execution of Tho. Harriſon.

This Face toward the Banqueting Houſe, was by Ludlow or his Editor moſt impudently pretended, that the King might have the Pleaſure of the Spectacle, and inure himſelf to Blood.

This Morning about ten, according to the Sentence on Thurſday laſt, Mr. Thomas Harriſon was drawn upon an Hurdle from Newgate Gaol to the rail'd Place where Charing-Croſs ſtood, within which Rails a Gibbet was ſet up on purpoſe, whereon he was hanged with his Face towards the Banqueting Houſe at Whitehall, &c.

Publick Intell. 4to.

He had gloried in the Part he acted in the King's Murder, by writing and publiſhing King Charles his Caſe; or an Appeal to all rational Men concerning his Tryal at the High Court of Juſtice. Being for the moſt Part that which was intended to have been delivered at the Bar, if the King had pleaded to the Charge, and put himſelf to a fair Tryal. With an additional Opinion concerning the Death of King James, the Loſs of Rochel, and the Blood of Ireland, By John Cook of Gray's-Inn Barriſter. London, for Giles Calvert, 1649. 4to.

This Day Mr. John Cook was again brought to the Bar, who when his Jury was nam'd, challeng'd none at all, only ask'd what Profeſſion they were of, leſt (as he declar'd) he ſhould meet with any Butcher. ——— In his Defence, he urged much that he was drawn to it (for it was prov'd he had confeſs'd it was a baſe Thing) that what he did was within the Sphere of his own Profeſſion, being a Counſellor at Law, pretending he then wiſhed with all his Soul, the King had been acquitted: That for his demanding Juſtice, he ſaid, that Law was the Rule of Juſtice, and to demand Juſtice was no more than to demand Law; and if that Court had granted the King Juſtice, he had not now been queſtioned for demanding it; that though the Caſe was bad, yet the Counſel was not oblig'd to anſwer for the Matter of it: For he appeal'd to all the Long Robe, whether they had not very often pleaded in a Cauſe, when with all their Hearts they could have wiſh'd the Verdict had gone againſt them: That Tertullus pleaded againſt the Truth, but was not tax'd by St. Paul, becauſe it was Tertullus's Calling: That what he writ, and what he ſaid, was all done by and according to the Order of that Court, and the very Words put into his Mouth: That he had not the leaſt Malice, that what he did was rather avaritiæ cauſa than malitiæ; that he was not comprehended within any of the three Exceptions in the Act of Indemnity, for as he was neither Signer nor Sentencer, ſo he could not fairly be called Inſtrumental: That the Power he acted under was then in occupancy, and that Statute of 1 Hen. VII. protected all that aſſerted the Right of a King de Facto, and he humbly conceiv'd the Equity of that Statute might fairly be expounded to the Power in Poſſeſſion, at leaſt he then thought ſo when he acted under them: That the Words he was charged to ſay, that the King muſt dye and Monarchy with him, were but from a ſingle Witneſs, and he humbly conceiv'd their Lordſhips would give him leave to deny it. ——— After all his long Pleadings, he was anſwer'd by the Court, that he had been ſufficiently prov'd Inſtrumental in taking away the King's Life; therefore his alledging, that he was neither Witneſs, Jury, Judge nor Executioner, was no more than ſaying, Becauſe there are others worſe than myſelf I am innocent: That as no Man could have a lawful Calling to purſue the Life of his King, ſo for a private Perſon, tho' he only intends to beat a Man, yet if he dies thereupon, in Law it is Murder; and if a Man counſels another to commit Murder, he is guilty himſelf. —— And that for the Act of Parliament alledg'd, the Intent and Meaning of it was againſt him; it was to preſerve the King de Facto, how much more the King de Jure, eſpecially ſince he was both charg'd and ſentenc'd in the Court as King of England. The Jury (as other Juries the two Days before) without ſtirring from the Bar, readily gave in their Verdict Guilty.

Eachard's Ch. II. p. 24.

When Mr. Coke objected, that he did not draw up the Charge, but he only acted as a Counſellor, and did only ſpeak Words to have the Charge read, and demanded Judgment, and ſaid Words did not make Treaſon. It was reſolved by the Court, that if a Paper containing treaſonable Matter be indited by another, yet being known by Coke to contain treaſonable Matter, and being delivered by him as a Charge againſt the King to take away his Life, this is an Overt Act to prove that he compaſſed the King's Death: Approbation in High-Treaſon maketh Guilty; and Words are an Overt Act to prove Treaſon. See Keling's Reports, p. 12.

Mr. Cook had been Lord Chief Juſtice in Ireland, and continued in that Poſt under Cromwell. He very ingeniouſly urg'd many Things in his Defence, with ſo much Candor and Reſpect, as well as Law and Reaſon, as deſerv'd particular Anſwers. Indeed all the Gentlemen of the Long Robe knowing the Priſoner to be a Man of Parts, and for ſeveral Years vers'd in Buſineſs, ſeem'd to exert themſelves above their Performances at other Tryals, and let him ſee that the moſt artful Flouriſhes could not palliate ſo foul an Act, &c. —— Yet when he came to die, at his Execution he acted the proper Part of the Party, would be telling what a glorious Work the Lord had accompliſh'd upon his Spirit, which was to aſſure him he need not repent of any Thing he had done, but own it as the Cauſe of God and Chriſt, &c.

Hugh Peters.

The Writer of Regicides no Saints nor Martyrs, 8vo. does with Authority aſſure us, that he was at Cambridge ſo inſolent and lewd, as to be whipt in the Regents-Walk (a Puniſhment ſcarce ever inflicted upon any ſince, nor perhaps a long Time before) the moſt publick

Next, Hugh Peters was brought to the Bar, where, after the Indictment read, and Jury ſworn, he ſaw a whole Congregation of Witneſſes againſt him, who upon their Oaths teſtified him guilty of the moſt horrid Crimes that any Man (Lay or Clergy) could be guilty of. ——— That he not only took Arms, but was himſelf actually a Colonel, and gave out Commiſſions, that he met in private Conſultation (near the Time of the King's Tryal) at the Star in Coleman-ſtreet, with Cromwell, Pride, and others of the bloody Plot. That in December 1648. the head Quarters were at Windſor, where Cromwell, Ireton, Rich, and Peters would uſually ſit in Conſultation, 'till two or three of the Clock in the the Morning, after all [illegible] none should approach [illegible] to Tryal. That during [illegible] called his late Majesty Tyrant and Fool, [illegible] that the Kingly Office itself was dangerous, chargeable, and useless. [illegible] Time an ancient Gentleman, hearing his Majesty was removed from Carisbrook Castle, and his Life in Danger, pray'd in his Chamber after Meat, God save the King, and preserve him out of the Hands of his Enemies, Peters thereupon was offended, and said, Old Gentleman, your Idol will not stand long. That immediately after the Members were secluded, a Fast being at St. Margaret's Westminster, Peters did preach upon these Words, Not this Man but Barabbas, all along in his Sermon comparing his late Majesty to Barabbas, and blasphemously inciting his Auditory to kill the King; that God would bring every Tyrant to Justice, and that there was no Exception for the King, Prince, Prince Rupert, or any of that Rabble. That he rode next before the King, when he was brought from Windsor to his Tryal. That in the Painted Chamber, January 8, being the first Day the High Court of Justice sate, Hugh Peters and John Goodwin were with them, when all others, except the Judges and Officers of the Court, were kept out. That he was present at the making Proclamation in Westminster-Hall for the High Court of Justice, and did there openly say to Serjeant Dendy, All this you have done is worth nothing, unless you proclaim it in Cheapside and the Old Exchange.

That the said Hugh Peters was marshalling and encouraging the Soldiers that guarded the King in St. James's Park a little before his Tryal. That he was constantly in private Consultations at Bradshaw's House during the Tryal, with them that sate upon the King. That he bid Stubbs command his Soldiers, when the King came near the High Court to cry out, Justice! Justice! That being at the High Court of Justice, January 20, he was heard to say, This is a most glorious Beginning of the Work. That on Sunday, January 21, he preach'd at Whitehall, upon Psal. clix. 8. To bind their Kings in Chains, &c. applying his Text and Sermon to the late King, highly applauding the Proceedings of the Army, saying, This is a joyful Day, and I hope to see such another Day to Morrow. That the Sunday following, being the Day after his Majesty was sentenced to dye, he preached again upon the same Text at St. James's, saying, He intended to have preached upon another Text before the poor Wretch, (meaning the King) but that the poor Wretch refused to hear him; and the other Text he said was Isaiah xv. 18, 19, 20, 21. And all the Kings of the Nations, even all of them that lye in glory every one in his own house. But thou art cast out of thy grave like an abominable branch — as a Carcass trodden under feet, &c. adding further these Words, Look in your small Bibles, and over this Text you'll find THE TYRANT'S FALL. That in the Afternoon of the same Day, he preached again at St. Sepulchres, and repeated all his Parallel between his late Majesty and Barabbas, crying out, that none but Jews would let Barabbas go. That in the said Sermon he said, Those Soldiers that assisted in this great Work had Emanuel written on their Bridles.

That in the Painted Chamber (on one of the Days of the King's Tryal) Peters kneeled down and prayed for a Blessing, and amongst other Things said, O Lord, what a Mercy is it to see this great City fall down before us. That he was upon the Scaffold a little before the Execution, and then whisper'd to Tench the Carpenter, who thereupon did there knock and fasten four Staples, pulling a Cord out of his Pocket. That after the King was murder'd, Peters said, Lord, now lettest thou thy Servant depart in Peace, for mine eyes have seen thy Salvation. That a while after the Execution he said, I rejoice to think of that day, for to me it seemed like the great and last Day of Judgment, when the Saints shall judge the World.

To all which Evidence he made no Answer but in Cant and Impertinence.

To all these Particulars (sworn by so many Witnesses) Hugh Peters made not one Word of Answer, only said in general, that his Heart was right towards God; that he came into England, first for Religion, secondly for the Law, and thirdly for the Poor: That he hoped their Lordships would consider his Condition; though he had the Infirmities of a Man, yet he had done much Good to many of the King's Party, and offered to produce two Letters of Thanks to him. To whom the Lord Chief Baron reply'd, Mr. Peters, you are not questioned for any Good you have done, what say you for yourself? You have heard the Evidence which all these Witnesses have given in against you upon their Oaths. But Peters making no Answer, his Lordship said, Perhaps, Mr. Peters, you have forgot what they have sworn; and then his Lordship exactly repeated the whole Evidence. To which Peters reply'd, My Lord, 'tis impossible I should be able to answer it, I have no Skill in the Law. Whereupon his Lordship gave Directions to the Jury, who saw every Particular so clear, that without removing from the Bar, they gave their Verdict, Guilty.

Sir Heneage Finch told Mr. Peters at the Bar; your Tryal will convert more in old and new England, than your Preaching ever did, and your Death will be a better Sermon than your Life.

Mr. Cook call'd again to the Bar.

After which Mr. Cook being call'd forth again to the Bar, the Court ask'd him if he had any thing more to say for himself, before Judgment passed; he offered two Things, first, that there was no Averment that he was the same John Cook in the Indictment and in the Act of Indemnity; next, that he had laid hold in Ireland of his Majesty's Gracious Proclamation, and he hoped it could not be objected, that he came not in, because he was made Prisoner before. Both which the Court so fully answered, that he had no more to say; whereupon the same Judgment was pronounced upon him and Hugh Peters, as before upon the rest.

Mr. Cook's Behaviour after his Conviction.

Rebels no Saints, 1661. 8vo. p. 36.

After his Conviction Mr. Cook behav'd with great Inſolence. When he was adviſed by ſome Friends not to juſtify himſelf, but confeſs his Sins, particularly his heinous Crime againſt the Lord and his Anointed, and repent: he replied, I muſt needs tell you, that if my Repentance was now to do, I was in a ſad Condition, but I bleſs my God he hath enabled me to confeſs my Sin, and hath ſealed my Pardon in the Blood of his dear Son, and given ſuch Peace as none can give or take away. I have no Guilt nor Trouble upon my Spirit touching what is done, but ſuch ſweet Peace in God as I cannot expreſs, &c.

See Regicides no Saints nor Martyrs, in Anſwer to the Apologies made for them in the third Volume of Ludlow's Memoirs.

In the Execution of ten of theſe wretched Criminals, there appeared in them a prodigious Spirit of Deluſion and Enthuſiaſm. Harriſon was the firſt, who on the thirteenth of October ſuffer'd at Charing Croſs, the People loudly ſhouting at his exemplary Fall. He was firſt hang'd with his Face towards the Banqueting-Houſe, and then being cut down alive, his Body was quarter'd and plac'd upon the City Gates, and his Head upon Weſtminſter-Hall.

Yet the Fanaticks made Miracles attend his Execution.

The Day that Major-General Harriſon ſuffer'd, October 13, 1660. a Pantaloon Ruffianly Gentleman placed himſelf near Newgate to ſee the Major-General drawn to his Execution; one that ſtood near him obſerv'd him often to break forth into moſt execrable Curſing and Swearing; he would be frequently wiſhing, Oh! that the Rogue would come away, that I might ſee how like a Rogue he looks, now that he is going to be hang'd. At length Harriſon came, and as this Gentleman had fixed his Eye upon him, he was ſmitten immediately with ſuch a Trembling, that he was not able to hold a Joynt ſtill; his Companions got him into a Houſe that was near, and the Perſon that had obſerved him to curſe and ſwear as before, followed him into the Houſe, and endeavoured to lay the Judgment of God home to his Conſcience, but he ſeemed ſenſible of little, but cry'd out continually, Oh! I think my Heart will come out; he continued in that miſerable Condition in that Houſe for the Space of about two Hours, then he was convey'd away by his Friends, and what became of him ſince, we have not heard.

Eſpecially thoſe that were Tenants before the late Troubles.

His Majeſty's Letter to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

Carolus Rex,

Moſt reverend Father in God, we greet you well; being tender of our Engagement to have a Care, for the reaſonable Satisfaction of Tenants, and Purchaſers of Church Lands. Our Will and Pleaſure is, that you give Order to all Biſhops, Deans, and Chapters within your Province, that in letting the Lands and Revenues belonging to their reſpective Churches, they have Regard to ſuch as were Tenants before the late Troubles, where they have not parted with their Leaſes, giving them not only the Privilege of Præemption before any others, but uſing them with all Favour and Kindneſs; and you are forthwith to give ſuch Directions, that no Grant or Leaſe be made of Things purchaſed by any Officer or Soldier of the Army or others, unleſs it be the Purchaſer, or by his Conſent, until we take further Order, which we ſhall do ſpeedily, it being our Intention to be very careful of the Churches Intereſt.

Mr. Baxter's Account of the King's Declaration concerning Eccleſiaſtical Affairs.

Mr. Baxter in his own Life, Fol.

The Perſons who attended his Majeſty at this Meeting.

A Day was appointed for his Majeſty to peruſe the Declaration concerning Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, as it was drawn up by the Lord Chancellour, and to allow what he liked, and alter the reſt, upon hearing of what both Sides ſhould ſay. Accordingly he came to the Lord Chancellour's Houſe, and with him the Duke of Albemarle, and Duke of Ormond, (as I remember) the Earl of Mancheſter, the Earl of Angleſey, the Lord Hollis, &c. and Dr. Sheldon, then Biſhop of London, Dr. Morley, then Biſhop of Worceſter, Dr. Henchman, then Biſhop of Saliſbury, Dr. Coſins Biſhop of Durham, Dr. Gauden (after) Biſhop of Exeter and Worceſter, Dr. Barwick (after) Dean of Pauls, Dr. Hacket (after) Biſhop of Coventry and Lichfield, with divers others, among whom Dr. Gunning was moſt notable table. On the [illegible] Dr. [illegible] Dr. Manton, Dr. Spurſtow, myſelf, [illegible] the Presbyterians.

Each Party to ſpeak, and the King to determine.

The Buſineſs of the Day was not to diſpute, but as the Lord Chancellour read over the Declaration, each Party was to ſpeak to what they diſliked, and the King to determine how it ſhould be, as liked himſelf. While the Lord Chancellour read over the Preface, there was no Interruption, only he thought it beſt himſelf to blot out thoſe Words about the Declaration in Scotland for the Covenant [that we did from the Moment it paſſed our Hand, ask God Forgiveneſs for our Part in it.] The great Matter which we ſtopt at was, the Word [Conſent] where the Biſhop is to confirm by the Conſent of the Paſtor of that Church; and the King would by no means paſs the Word Conſent, either there or in the Point of Ordination or Cenſures, becauſe it gave the Miniſters a negative Voice: We urged him hard with a Paſſage in his Father's Book of Meditations, wherein he expreſsly granteth this Conſent of the Presbyters, but it would not prevail.

They would have no Confirmation by the Biſhop, without conſent of the Miniſter, which the King would not allow.

The moſt that I inſiſted on was from the End of our Endeavours, that we came not hither for a perſonal Agreement only with our Brethren of the other Way, but to procure ſuch gracious Conceſſions from his Majeſty, as would unite all the ſobereſt People of the Land; and we knew that on lower Terms it would not be done, though Conſent be but a little Word, it was neceſſary to a very deſirable End. If it were purpoſed that the Parties and Diviſions ſhould rather continue unhealed, then we had no more to ſay, there being no Remedy: But we were ſure, that Union would not be attained, if no Conſent were allowed Miniſters in any Part of the Government of their Flocks, and ſo they ſhould be only Teachers without any Participation in the Ruling of the People, whoſe Rectors they are called. And when I perceived ſome Offence at what I ſaid, I told them that we had not the Judgment of Men at our Command. We could not in reaſon ſuppoſe that our Conceſſions, or any thing we could do, would change the Judgments of any great Numbers; and therefore we muſt conſider what will unite us in caſe their Judgments be not changed.

But if no Remedy, they had no more to ſay.

Mr. Baxter gave Offence.

Anſwer of Biſhop Morley

But Biſhop Morley told them how great our Power was, and what we might do if we were willing; and he told the King, that no Man had written better of theſe Matters than I had done, and here my Five Diſputations of Church Government, &c. lay ready to be produced; and all was to intimate, as if I now contradicted what I had there written. I told him, that I had beſt Reaſon to know what I had written, and that I am ſtill of the ſame Mind, and ſtand to it all, and do not ſpeak any Thing againſt it.

Reply of Mr. Baxter.

A great many Words there were about Prelacy and Reordination: Dr. Gunning and Biſhop Morley ſpeaking almoſt all on one Side (and Dr. Henchman and Dr. Coſins ſometimes) and Mr. Calamy and myſelf moſt on the other Side: But I think neither Party doth value the rambling Diſcourſes of that Day ſo much, as to think them worthy of recording. Mr. Calamy anſwered Dr. Gunning from Scripture very well, againſt the divine Right of Prelacy as a diſtinct Order. And when Dr. Gunning told them, that Dr. Hammond had ſaid enough againſt the Presbyterians Cauſe and Ordination, and was yet unanſwered; I thought it meet to tell him, that I had anſwered the Subſtance of his Arguments: And ſaid enough moreover againſt the dioceſan Frame of Government, and to prove the Validity of the Engliſh Presbyters Ordination, which indeed was unanſwered, though I was very deſirous to have ſeen an Anſwer to it: Which I ſaid, becauſe they had got the Book by them, and becauſe I thought the Unreaſonableneſs of their Dealing might be evinced, who forced ſo many hundreds to be ordained, and will not any of them anſwer one Book which is written to prove the Validity of that Ordination which they would have nullified, though I provoked them purpoſely in ſuch a Preſence.

Their chief Speakers were Mr. Calamy and Mr. Baxter.

Rambling Diſcourſes.

Dr. Gunning did think that Dr. Hammond's Defence of Epiſcopacy was unanſwer'd: But Mr. Baxter ſaid he himſelf had given a ſufficient Anſwer to it.

The moſt of the Time being ſpent thus in ſpeaking to Particulars of the Declaration as it was read; when we came to the End, the Lord Chancellour drew out another Paper, and told us that the King had been petitioned alſo by the Independents and Anabaptiſts; and though he knew not what to think of it himſelf, and did not very well like it; yet ſomething he had drawn up, which he would read to us, and deſire us alſo to give our Advice about it. Thereupon he read, as an Addition to the Declaration, that others alſo be permitted to meet for religious Worſhip, ſo be it they do it not to the Diſturbance of the Peace; and that no Juſtice of Peace or Officer diſturb them. When he had read it, he again deſired them all to think of it, and give their Advice, but all were ſilent. The Presbyterians all perceived, as ſoon as they heard it, that it would ſecure the Liberty of the Papiſts: And one of them whiſpered me in the Ear, and intreated me to ſay nothing, for it was an odious Buſineſs, but let the Biſhops ſpeak to it. But the Biſhops would not ſpeak a Word, nor any one of the Presbyterians neither, and ſo we were like to have ended in that Silence. I knew if we conſented to it, it would be charged on us, that we ſpake for a Toleration of Papiſts and Sectaries; (but yet it might have lengthen'd out our own) and if we ſpake againſt it, all Sects and Parties would be ſet againſt us, as the Cauſers of their Sufferings, and as a partial People that would have Liberty ourſelves, but would have no others have it with us. At laſt ſeeing the Silence continue, I thought our very Silence would be charged on us as a Conſent, if it went on: And therefore I only ſaid this, that this Reverend Brother Dr. Gunning even now ſpeaking againſt Sects, had named the Papiſts and the Socinians: For our Parts we deſired not favour to ourſelves alone,

The Independents and Anabaptiſts had petitioned the King for a like Liberty.

And the Lord Chancellour read a Clauſe in favour of them.

And aſked their Advice upon it.

The Presbyterians were afraid to ſpeak, and Dr. Wallis deſired Mr. Baxter to ſay nothing, but he could not keep Silence,

Dr. Wallis.

Thinking the ſecret Intention of that Clauſe to have been in Favour of the Papiſts.

And was for Indulgence to all but the Papists and Socinians.

The King thought there were Laws enough against the Papists.

[illegible] Severity we desired against none. As we humbly thanked his Majesty for his Indulgence to our selves, so we distinguish the tolerable Parties from the intolerable. For the former we humbly crave just Lenity and Favour; but for the latter, such as the two sorts named before by that reverend Brother, for our Parts we cannot make their Toleration our Request. To which his Majesty said, That there were Laws enough against the Papists; and I reply'd, That we understood the Question to be, whether those Laws should be executed on them, or not. And so his Majesty brake up the Meeting of that Day.

Words in the Declaration to be alter'd by Consent of Parties.

Mr. Baxter was angry with the Earl of Anglesey, whom he thought a better Friend to their Party.

See Oct. 22.

Before the Meeting was dissolved, his Majesty had all along told what he would have fixed in the Declaration, and he named four Divines to determine of any Words in the Alteration, if there were any Difference, that is, Bishop Morley, Bishop Hinchman, Dr. Reynolds, and Mr. Calamy; and if they disagreed, that the Earl of Anglesey and the Lord Hollis should decide it. As they went out of the Room, I told the Earl of Anglesey, That we had no other Business there that Day, but the Churches Peace and Welfare, and I would not have been the Man that should have done so much against it as he had done that day, for more than he was like to get by it. For being called a Presbyterian, he had spoken more for Prelacy than we expected. And I think by the Consequent, that this Saying did some Good; for when I after found the Declaration amended, and asked him how it came to pass, he intimated to me that it was his doing.

A learned Defence of the Oath of Supremacy by Mr. Tombes.

Under six Heads.

London, printed by Henry Hills, 4^to^. p. 27.

A serious Consideration of the Oath of the King's Supremacy, wherein these six Propositions are asserted;

I. That some Swearing is lawful.

II. That some promissory Oaths are lawful.

III. That a promissory Oath of Allegiance and due Obedience to a King is lawful.

IV. That the King in his Realm is the only Supream Governour over all Persons.

V. That the King is the Governour of the Realm, as well in spiritual or ecclesiastical Things or Causes, as temporal.

VI. That the Jurisdictions, Privileges, Preheminences, and Authorities in that Oath may be assisted and defended. By John Tombes, B. D.

Many Persons scrupling the Oath of Supremacy, owing to the same Cause as the Scruples against the Common-Prayer, i. e. their Unacquaintance with it through the long Disuse of it.

To the Christian Reader.] Being by special Providence brought hither upon some Occasions of mine own, and finding many Persons of different Persuasions scrupling the taking the Oath of Supremacy now beginning to be urged, by Reason of their Unacquaintance with it through the long Disuse of it; by various Conferences I convinced sundry of them, that the End and Matter of the Oath was not such as they imagined. Whereupon some Persons tender of the publick Peace, and the Liberties of those doubting Persons, who still remained unsatisfied, earnestly pressed me to draw up something in Writing, &c.

London, October
13, 1660.

John Tombes.

The Refusal of this Oath was taught by the Papists to some of the Sectaries.

Concluding.] Out of all which I infer, that it was very presumptuously and unjustly made by Monsieur de la Militiere, the Crime of the Kings of England, which God chastised by the late Tragedy, that the Authority which God gave the King in temporal Matters was used by him for Governing Spiritual, in his tempting Epistle to his Majesty that now is, whom the Lord preserve and direct in the managing of this Power of so great Concernment to so many Millions of precious Souls as are within his Dominions. Amen.

Execution of Carew.

His Body was given to his Friends.

Mr. John Carew was executed within the Rails where Charing Cross stood. Before his Execution, he spake much like what he did at his Arraignment. He quoted several Places out of the Apocalyps, neither gave nor asked Forgiveness of any Friend or Enemy.

Account of Mr. Carew taking a Dose to fortifie him against Death.

Regicides no Saints, 8vo.

Some few Days after Carew suffer'd, I met a Person, who had been employ'd by his Nephew to get a Parcel of Papers out of his Hands, which related to an entailed Estate, and so not forfeited by his Treason, which though he had attended several Times, could not be obtained 'till the last Hour, which argued he had some Hopes. During this Stay, the Gentlemen said, a Fellow came to him, he presumed an Apothecary, and taking a Glass out of his Pocket, poured it into a Beaker, and gave it him with this Grace, The Lord strengthen you; and it produced the design'd Effect, for whereas he look'd wan and trembled before, this made him flush and sweat, with an answerable Alteration in his Discourse and Carriage; and this might occasion what he said at the End of his Prayer upon the Ladder, I am so exceeding dry, that my Tongue is ready to stick to my Mouth, but I would fain speak a little more. 'Twas then discours'd, that most of them took such intoxicating Doses, to be sure Peters had so large a Potion that he was stupidly drunk, &c.

His Rants of Enthusiasm.

Rebels no Saints, 1661. 8vo, p. 20.

Mr. Carew was full of interpreting the Revelations as a Seal of Prophecy on his Side; he said, This was the last Beast, and his Rage was great, because his Time was short. —— But let the Lord's People wait patiently, and he that shall come will come and will not tarry. —— The Lord will bring my Blood (said he) to cry with the rest of the Martyrs, How long, O Lord, holy and true, &c. —— and his last Word was full of Revelation Words and Phrases.

Tryal of Colonel Axtell.

Said to be the Lady Fairfax.

Col. Axtell said to a Gentleman going for Ireland, I pray remember me kindly to all Christian Friends there, and tell them, that for the good old Cause which we were engaged in under the Parliament, I am now going to be their Martyr: and again in his dying Speech, I must truly tell you, that before these late Wars it pleased the Lord to call me by his Grace through the Work of the Ministry, and afterwards keeping a Day of Humiliation in Fasting and Prayer with Mr. Simeon Ash, Mr. Love, Mr. Woodcock and other Ministers in Laurence-Lane, they did so clearly state the Cause of the Parliament, that I was fully convinc'd in my own Conscience of the Justness of the War, and thereupon engaged in the Parliament Service, which (as I did and do believe) was the Cause of the Lord, I ventured my Life freely for it, and now die for it. Rebels no Martyrs, 1661. 8vo. p. 125.

[illegible] in the [illegible] England, and a Lady from the Gallery [illegible]; Axtell then gave Command to his Soldiers, that if [illegible], they should shoot her; whereupon the Soldiers mounted the Muzzles of their Muskets towards that Place; that he struck his Soldiers for not crying out Justice against the King; and on the Day when his Majesty was sentenced, he incited his Soldiers to cry out, Execution, Execution; that he commanded Lieutenant Axtell to fetch the Executioner, and was very active about the King's Death. That he carried sixteen or seventeen Soldiers, who formerly had served the King, to be examined by Cook as Witnesses against his Majesty, compelling them to Examination, being strangely eager to find out Witnesses against the King: And that he was one of the five that manag'd the King's Execution.

To which Charge upon Oath, he answered, That he was a Commission Officer under the Lord Fairfax, as he had been before under the Earl of Essex, and by his Commission was to obey his superiour Officer (who commanded him that Day to Westminster-Hall) according to the Customs of War; so that if he had disobey'd his superiour Officer then he had died, and now must die for obeying him. But the Court told him, he might have refus'd without any Danger, as well as Colonel Hunckes; and that passive as well as active Obedience was required from every Man; and that neither his, nor his Superiour's Commission bid him kill his Father, much less the Father of his Country.

As for the Musquets mounted towards the Lady, he said, that if a Lady grew uncivil to disturb the Court, he could do no less than check her. That his striking the Soldiers for not crying Justice, was a Mistake, for he said, he struck them because they did it, saying, I'll give you Justice. That his inciting them at the Sentence to cry Execution, was the Execution of Justice, and that could do no hurt. With such like Evasions as these (repeated over and over) he took up three Hours, but received so full and satisfactory Answers from the Court, that the Jury stirred not from the Bar, where they brought him in Guilty.

Found Guilty.

Tryal of Col. Fr. Hacker.

Then Francis Hacker (usually called Colonel Hacker) was try'd, who without calling Witnesses confessed he signed a Warrant for the Execution of his late Majesty, but pretended he was no Lawyer, nor Contriver, but drawn in by the Art of Cromwell, and said, he liked not the Fact so well as to go about to excuse it. So as the Jury from his own Mouth gave in their Verdict, that he was Guilty.

Found Guilty.

William Howlett tried for being one of the Executioners in disguise upon the Scaffold.

Then came William Howlett alias Hulet, who was charg'd by his Majesty's Counsel, as one of those disguised Persons in a Frock on the Scaffold, which was prov'd by several Witnesses, who had heard it confessed out of his own Mouth, that he was the Man who had done that monstrous Fact; which though he with very much Boldness deny'd, the Jury after some little Consultation gave him in Guilty. Yet he was repriev'd and escap'd with Life: Having offer'd to make it appear, he was not upon the Scaffold that Day nor near it, for that he and other Serjeants were secur'd that Day for refusing to be there. This Act of Clemency had this Scandal put upon it by Ludlow, That the Court being sensible of an Injury done to Hewlett, in finding him Guilty, for that it was made appear the common Hangman cut off the King's Head, procur'd his Pardon.

Found Guilty.

Yet Repriev'd.

Regicides no Saints, 8vo, p. 83.

TUESDAY Oct. 16.

Execution of Mr. Cook.

Who express'd a Penitence and pray'd for his Majesty.

Hugh Peters not fit to dye.

This Day John Cook was executed at Charing Cross. He carried himself at his Execution, as well as at his Tryal, much better than could be expected from one that had acted such a Part in that horrid Arraignment of our late Sovereign. For he expressed exceeding much Penitence, and heartily pray'd for his Majesty that now is; and taking Notice of Hugh Peters that was executed next after him, wish'd he might be repriev'd, because at present, as he conceiv'd, he was not prepar'd to dye.

The Heads of Cook and Harrison, a Counsellor and Attorney, were set upon Poles on Westminster-hall.

Cook observ'd of Peters, Here is a poor Brother coming, I am afraid that he is not fit to dye at this Time. Though Cook had endeavoured to put what Courage he could into Peters, for they tell us he said, Come Brother Peters, let us knock at Heaven-Gate this Morning, God will open the Doors of Eternity to us before Twelve of the Clock, &c. but Peters could not bear up, &c. Regicides no Saints, p. 79.

And in earnest, Mr. Cook in that was not mistaken, for when Hugh Peters came to dye, he was as far to seek, as to answer at his Tryal. And without any Reflection on the Wickedness of the Man, there never was Person suffer'd Death so unpitied, and which is more, whose Execution was the Delight of the People, which they expressed by several Shouts and Acclamations, when they saw him go up the Ladder, and again when the Halter was putting about his Neck, but also when his Head was cut off, and held up aloft upon the End of a Spear, there was such a Shout as if the People of England had acquired a Victory.

At the same Time these two were executed, these one and twenty Persons were again brought to the Bar at the Old Bailey, viz. Sir Hardress Waller, William Heveningham, Isaac Pennington, Henry Marten, Gilbert Millington, Robert Tichbourne, Owen Rowe, Robert Lilburne, Henry Smith, Edmund Harvey, John Downes, Vincent Potter, Augustine Garland, George Fleetwood, Simon Meyne, James Temple, Peter Temple, Thomas Waite, Francis Hacker, Daniel Axtell, and William Howlett. All which Persons (except Mr. Heveningham) were condemned to be hang'd, drawn, and quartered: Seventeen whereof have their Execution suspended, until his Majesty by the Advice and Assent of the Lords and Commons in Parliament [illegible] other Things by Act of Parliament to be passed for [illegible]

[illegible] the King's Declaration concerning Ecclesiastical Affairs, Dr. [illegible] A while after the King's Restauration, [illegible] used in order to an Agreement between the Episcopal and [illegible] Ministers. For this End several of the Bishops Elect, and of the Ministers were called to attend the King at Worcester House. There was read to them a Declaration drawn up with great Wisdom and Moderation by the Lord Chancellour, the Earl of Clarendon. I shall only observe, that in reading the several Parts of the Declaration, Dr. Morley was the principal Manager of the Conference among the Bishops, and Mr. Baxter among the Ministers; and one Particular I cannot forget; it was desired by the Ministers, that the Bishops would exercise their Church Power with the Counsel and Consent of Presbyters. This limiting of their Authority was so displeasing, that Dr. Cosins then Elect of Durham said, If your Majesty grants this you will unbishop your Bishops. Dr. Reynolds upon this produced the Book, entitled, The Pourtraicture of his sacred Majesty in his Solitude and Sufferings, and read the following Passage, Not that I am against the managing of this Presidency and Authority in one Man by the joint Counsel and Consent of many Presbyters: I have offer'd to restore that as a fit Means to avoid those Errors, which are incident to any one Man; also to avoid Tyranny, which becomes no Christians, least of all Churchmen. Besides, it will be a Means to take away that Burden and Odium of Affairs, which may be too heavy on one Man's Shoulders, as indeed I think it formerly did on the Bishops here. The good Doctor thought, that the Judgment of the King's afflicted and enquiring Father would have been of great Moment to incline him to that Temperament. But the King presently reply'd, All that is in that Book is not Gospel. My Lord Chancellour prudently moderated in that Matter, that the Bishops weighty Causes should have the Assistance of the Presbyters.

[illegible] the King's Declaration.

Funeral Sermon for Mr. Rich. Baxter, 8vo. p. 92.

Wherein his Majesty is said to have slighted the Authority of his Father's Book; tho' Mr. Baxter in his large Report doth not mention that Matter.

The same Morning Mr. Peters suffer'd at Charing Cross, October 16, 1660. a Poulterer in East-Cheap rejoicing at the Death of that Man, came cross the Street to a Butcher's Shop, railing most bitterly against Mr. Peters, saying, Now the Rogue Peters was gone to be hang'd, and would preach no more: While the Words were yet in his Mouth, a great Dog, that lay under the Butcher's Stall, came violently upon him without any Provocation at all, bit him and tore him extremely, and drew him under the Butcher's Stall, and could not be gotten off him, 'till he had bitten, as we are informed, eighteen or nineteen dangerous Holes in his Body; he was in great Hazard of his Life by it, and kept his Bed for some Weeks after, but, as we hear, he is since recovered, &c.

A Miracle of a Butcher's Dog falling upon an Enemy of Hugh Peters.

Mirabilis Annus, or the Year of Prodigies, 4to. 1661. p. 79.

It was remarkable that Peters, a sort of an enthusiastical buffoon Preacher, though a very vitious Man, who had been of great Use to Cromwell, and had been outragious in pressing the King's Death with the Cruelty and Rudeness of an Inquisitor, was the Man of them all, that was the most sunk in his Spirit, and could not in any sort bear his Punishment. He had neither the Honesty to repent of it, nor the Strength of Mind to suffer for it as all the rest of them did. He was observed all the while to be drinking some cordial Liquors to keep him from fainting.

Bishop Burnet's Account of Peters.

Bishop Burnet's History of his own Times, Fol. p. 162.

Mr. Cook in his last Farewel to his Wife, was full of Revelation Rants and Raptures. Farewell (writes he) my dear Lamb, I am now going to the Souls under the Altar, that cry, how long O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge my Blood on them that dwell on the Earth? And when I am gone my Blood will cry, and do them more hurt than if I had lived.

Mr. Cook at his Execution said, I do confess I am not convinced of any thing I have done amiss as to that I have been charged with; I desire never to repent of any thing I have done therein, but I desire to own the Cause of God and of Christ, and am here to bear Witness of it. I believe that an Army of Martyrs would willingly come from Heaven to suffer in such a Cause as I suffer for. Rebels no Saints, 8vo. p. 38.

WEDNESDAY Oct. 17.

This Morning Thomas Scot, Gregory Clement, Adrian Scroop and John Jones were executed at Charing-Cross.

Thomas Scot died, as he lived, in a desperate Way.

It was affirm'd by the Friends of Scot, that he desir'd it might be written on his Tomb; Here lies Tho. Scot who adjudg'd the late King to die.

Some of the last Words of Tho. Scot were, that God had engaged him in a Cause not to be repented of, I say not to be repented of. Rebels no Saints, 1660. 8vo. p. 47.

Gregory Clement at his Death express'd a great deal of Sorrow and Penitence, confessing that he most justly suffer'd both from God and Man; and that his Judges had done nothing but according to Law, begging the Prayers of all Spectators.

Adrian Scroop of a noble ancient Family, behaved himself at his Tryal, as well as any guilty of so foul a Fact, for he confess'd, &c. he died somewhat pitied, as well in regard he was a comely Person, as because he begg'd the Prayers of all good People.

Yet when Mr Scroop's own Nephew came into the Dungeon to him the Night before he dyed and said, Unkle I am sorry to see you in this Condition and would desire you to repent of the Fact for which you are brought hither, he only put forth his Hand and thrust him from him, using these Words, avoid Satan. Rebels no Saints, &c.

John Jones, all along as he was drawn upon the Hurdle, as well as at the Place of Execution, lifted up his Hands, and turn'd his Head to all that beheld him to gain their Prayers; expressing very much Sense of the Horror of his Fact; nor did he offer to justify it at his Tryal. He formerly in Ireland declar'd against Oliver Cromwell; whereby he saw his own Destruction design'd, so as for Atonement he chose to marry Oliver's own Sister, said to be not like her Brother.

Some of the Party made a Miracle in favour of them. Mirabilis Annus 1661. has this Story at Shenley in Hertfordshire, Octob. 17. 1660. being the Day wherein Col. Scroop, Col. Jones, and some others were executed at Charing-Cross, was seen in the Air towards the Evening, the Sky being very clear, the Appearance of five naked Men exceeding bright and glorious, moving very swiftly, and after a little Time a great Hill intercepted the Sight of them.

John Jones was a pretended Gentleman of Wales, a Recruiter of the Long Parliament, and a Colonel, afterwards one of the King's Judges, Governour of the Isle of Anglesey, one of the Commissioners of Parliament for the Government of Ireland (in which Office he acted tyrannically) and one of the other House, i. e. House of Lords belonging to Cromwell, whose Sister he had married, she being then the Relict of Roger Whetstone, an Officer in the Parliament Army.

A further Account of Adrian Scroop.

Adrian Scroop of Wormesley in Oxfordshire, was for sometime a Gentleman Commoner of Hart Hall in Oxon, and afterwards a noted Puritan, which made him take up Arms for the blessed Cause in the Beginning of the Presbyterian Rebellion, in which being first a Captain, he was at length a Colonel of a Regiment of Horse. He sate one of the Judges of Charles I. and signed the Warrant for his Execution. The Words witnessed against him at his Tryal by Sir Richard Brown, Lord Mayor of London Elect, were the chief Cause of his Execution; otherwise, as it was then thought, he would only have suffer'd perpetual Imprisonment and the Loss of his Estate, as many others of the same Gang did. However his Quarters were not hanged up, as others were, but given to his Relations to be buried. His Death was then much pitied by many, because he was a comely Person, begg'd the Prayers of all good People, and was of a noble and ancient Family, being descended from the Scroops Barons of Bolton. After his Death were printed under his Name, his Speech and Prayer spoken at the Gallows. —— He had a younger Son Robert Scroope made Fellow of Lincoln College by the Parliament Visitors of the University of Oxford, and created Batchelor of Arts in the same Convocation wherein Fairfax and Cromwell were created Doctors of the Civil Law May 19, 1649.

Dr. Barwick and Dr. Dolben sent by the King to visit the condemn'd Regicides.

And particularly to confer with Hugh Peters, and urge him to Confession.

Life of Dr. Barwick, Engl. 8vo, p. 296.

After the Trial of the Regicides and their Condemnation, by the Command of the King and of the Bishops, Dr. Barwick and Dr. Dolben were sent to these condemn'd Wretches, to try to persuade them to testify an unfeigned Repentance before God, both of that horrid Crime, and of their other impious Deeds: And that they might employ their pious Endeavours to better Purpose with others, their first Care was to solicite Hugh Peters, the Principal and Ring-leader of all the rest. The wild Prophecies uttered by his impure Mouth, were still received by the People, with the same Veneration as if they had been Oracles, tho' he was known to be infamous for more than one kind of Wickedness: A Fact which Milton himself (a very good Advocate for a very bad Cause) did not dare to deny, when he purposely wrote his Apology for this very End, to defend even by Name (as far as was possible) the very blackest of the Conspirators, and Hugh Peters among the Chief of them, who were by Name accus'd of manifest Impieties by their Adversaries. The same Day that this Office was order'd to be discharg'd by these holy Men, one Hulet was brought to the Bar, suspected to be one of the two mask'd Executioners hired to murder the King, and on that Account arraigned of High-Treason. Hugh Peters also among his other Crimes, was upon no slight Grounds accused to have been one of those Murtherers in Disguise, though it could not be sufficiently prov'd against him. Therefore Dr. Barwick and Dr. Dolben were commanded by his Majesty to use all their Endeavours to prevail with him, that if he knew any thing of that Matter, he would make no Scruple to confess it, in favour of an innocent Person, and thereby deliver as he ought, that Hulet or any one else, perhaps undeservedly suspected of that atrocious Crime, from suffering Death for it. When Dr. Barwick came to him first, commiserating his sad Condition, though what he had very justly deserv'd, he thought it most proper to address himself to him, in Terms neither menacing nor any way severe: He therefore condescended to intreat him to make no Difficulty of admitting him and Dr. Dolben, both Ministers of the Gospel, and no less solicitous for his Salvation than for their own, to a friendly Conversation with him. But to all that was said to him, though with the utmost Candour, he answered with so much Surliness, Negligence and Stupidity, and so little to the Purpose, that Dr. Dolben perceiving how little that gentle Method avail'd, was of Opinion, and that justly, that he ought to be treated with more Sharpness, to rouse him, if it were possible, from this lethargick Unconcernedness for his better Part. He therefore advis'd him to remember, that he had but a few Hours left to discharge himself before God (who is always present and merciful to the Penitent) of that immense Load of Wickedness wherewith he had burden'd his Conscience, drowsy and harden'd as it was: That those precious Minutes were not by any means to be wasted in shuffling and saying what was nothing to the Purpose; and that he ought to think it a Matter of no little Moment, in what Manner he intended the next Day to transmit his Soul into an unfathomable Abyss of Eternity. But he was deaf to all that either of them could say, and had so stopt his Ears against the Admonitions not only

And to declare whether Hulett was one of the King's Executioners; or what he knew of that Matter.

Dr. Barwick applied to him with great Softness.

And Dr. Dolben in a severer Way.

But both to no purpose.

[illegible] longer Time.

Dr. Gunning had used the like Endeavours with Mr. Peters, but was only reproach'd for it by Mr. Cook.

[illegible] Persons, but of those also who were his Accompli[illegible] and were to suffer with him; and had so perfectly shook off [illegible] and Religion (if ever he had any) that they earnestly requested [illegible] to intercede with his Majesty, that a Person so deaf to all [illegible] and so [illegible] to their sacred Ministration, might not be hurried into another World, 'till he were brought (if possible) to a better Sense of his Condition.

The chief of these was John Cook, who yet had made no Scruple that very Day to vindicate and defend this Wretch, in reality, the Scandal and Reproach of the Pulpit, against that incomparable Divine Dr. Gunning, when he was admonishing him friendly of the Heinousneſs of the Crimes he had committed; and to extoll him as the brighteſt Example of true Holineſs, by whom more Souls had been gain'd to Chriſt, than by any other Perſon in this Age. ——The next Day together with Cook, he was drawn upon a Sledge to Execution, ſtill ſhewing the utmoſt Averſion to all good Counſel, and even to the Advice of Cook himſelf, ſeeming to believe but very little in that God whom he had ſo often invok'd to patronize his impious Rebellion.

Mr. Heveningham brought to Sentence.

Tryal of the Regicides, 4to.

Mr. Heveningham was again this Day brought to the Bar before his Majeſty's Juſtices of Oyer and Terminer at the Old Bailey, where he received the Sentence of Condemnation, which all the other twenty eight had received before, after which the Court adjourn'd 'till Wedneſday next.

Execution of Hacker and Axtell.

He read a Paper of ten or twelve Lines; and then deſir'd that Axtell would be both their Mouths to God in Prayer.

Mr. Francis Hacker and Mr. Daniel Axtell (heretofore called Colonels) were drawn upon a Hurdle from the Gaol of Newgate to Tyburn. Mr. Hacker before his Execution ſpake but little. He had a Paper in his Hand containing what he had a Mind to deliver, which was very ſhort and to this Purpoſe, That he was an Officer employ'd in the Service, and endeavoured to diſcharge his Truſt. He read the ſaid Paper of ten or twelve Lines, and then deſir'd that Axtell would be both their Mouths to God in Prayer.

Speech of Colonel Axtell.

Mr. Axtel ſaid, That he was called out at the Beginning of the War, and went not out into Arms without Advice; for he had Conference with a Miniſter in Lawrence-Lane, (we give you his very Words) who told him, it was the Cauſe of God. That after he had engaged in England, he was called into Ireland, where he endeavoured to do his Work.

SUNDAY Oct. 21.

The Papists were about the Court in great Numbers, but happily in great Feuds and Divisions.

Dr. Leybun's Encycl. Epistle printed at Doway, 1661. 4to.

Dr. George Leyburn, President of Doway College, was now in London, soliciting the Roman Catholick Interest against another Party, the Dean and Chapter of the Catholick Clergy in England; and boasted of Victories obtain'd over them.

Complaint made by Dr. Geo. Leyburne, President of the English College at Doway.

That he obtain'd three Victories over his Adversaries.

I do not value any slandering Aspersion as proceeding from Mr. Blackloe [alias Mr. Thomas White] and his Adherents, having often afore frustrated, to their Shame, the unhandsome Endeavours they have used to ruin my Reputation; and three remarkable Victories I have obtained. The first happen'd soon after I engaged in the Management of our old Mother's [College of Doway] Affairs; for one half Year was hardly expired, when I was summon'd to encounter with a little Army of false Accusations (forged by Mr. Blackloe and his Adherents) and exhibited against me to the Nuncio of Brussels, unto whose Jurisdiction I was subject: And his Lordship after diligent Inquisition, and mature Examination of my Answers to all the said Accusations, was evidently convinc'd of the inordinate Proceeding used by my Adversaries; insomuch that he was pleased to call the Aspersions cast upon me, the Bowes of the Wicked, and styled my Adversaries malicious Men, &c.

One before the Pope's Nuncio at Brussels.

A second over Sir Kenelme Digby this Month at London.

Who had accus'd him to the Lord Almoner Mountague of many indirect Practices to the Prejudice of the Roman Catholick Party.

The second Victory I obtain'd at my last being in London in October 1660. which happen'd thus; Sir Kenelme Digby, Mr. Blackloe's Mecænas, accused me to our Queen's Grand Almoner, the Lord Abbot Mountague, in the Presence of Mr. Carre, that I had inform'd the honourable Mr. Secretary Morris, that there was come over a Bail of Books (Mr. Blackloe's Statera Morum) directed to Mr. Holland (Secretary of the Chapter) under the Name of Smith; and likewise that I had told his Honour, that it was a Work of dangerous Consequence to the State, and therefore required a Warrant to intercept the said Books; also that I had acquainted his Honour, Mr. Secretary, with private Affairs concerning Catholicks: Again, that I had intercepted his to the Chapters Secretary, and the Chapters Secretary's Letters to him, and opened them. After Sir Kenelme had finish'd this formidable Charge, my Lord Almoner asked of him, if what he related were certain? Certain! reply'd Sir Kenelme Digby, my Lord, I come now from Secretary Morris, who told it me. The next Day my Lord Grand Almoner acquainted me with the 'foresaid Charge, and giving Credence to what Sir Kenelme had uttered, seem'd much troubled that I should carry myself so unhandsomely as to that Proceeding. I made Answer, saying, surely Sir Kenelme will never attest such a Passage, and father it upon me. Surely, reply'd his Lordship, he hath attested it, and being a Matter of Fact, it is easily proved or disproved: To which I answered, saying, 'tis very true, and therefore beseeched his Lordship that Sir Kenelme and myself might meet, and dispute the Business Face to Face. His Lordship approved my Proposition, and promised to go with me to Sir Kenelme. In the mean while I assured his Lordship in the

The Charge of Sir Kenelme Digby;

Utterly denied by Dr. Leyburne.

[illegible] a Priest, that neither had I ever spoken with, or been in the Company of his Honour, Secretary Morris; neither had I ever made Addresses to him directly or indirectly; neither had I ever in any Course of my Life intercepted or opened any Letter or Letters directed to Sir Kenelme, or his Friend Mr. Holland, Secretary to the Chapter. This my Protestation amaz'd the Grand Almoner, inasmuch that his Lordship told me, that of necessity I ought to go to Sir Kenelme. In the Interim, his Lordship meeting with Sir Kenelme, said unto him, Sir Kenelme, doubtless there is a Mistake as to the Information you gave me against Dr. Leyburn, for he will depose, that he never spake with Secretary Morris, or ever made Addresses unto him, he knows not the Man, &c. Sir Kenelme reply'd in these Words (as my Lord Almoner told my own self) truly I confess Secretary Morris did not Name Dr. Leyburn, but I gathered from the Secretary's Words, that Dr. Leyburn had so informed him. Thus I carried the second Victory.

Mr. Secretary Morris had receiv'd false Intelligence, but did not name the Person to Sir Kenelm, who guess'd it to be Dr. Leyburn.

A third Victory over a false Report, that the Doctor in his late Sickness intended to give away the College of Doway from the secular Clergy.

Which he denied and disprov'd.

The third Victory was got thus: Being come to London I was informed, that my Chapter Adversaries there had persuaded sundry of our Brethren, how in my last great Sickness I had an Intent to give our College away from the Clergy, which was only a crafty Enterprize of the said Adversaries to render me more odious to all my Brethren. For the Report was so false, that as God knows, I had no thought of any such Design. Besides, it was no more in my Power to dispose of Doway College, than it was within my Reach the last Summer to hinder Mr. Holland the Chapter Secretary from his secret Journey to Roterdam, where he continued about two Months with Mr. Blacklow, who was then printing his Statera Morum: Or to prevent Dr. Ellis, and other Chapter Men, from reporting, that their Secretary, Mr. Holland, was in one or other County in England, when he was in the Town of Roterdam. Furthermore, as soon as I perceived that my Physicians despaired of my Recovery, I called unto me the Seniors, and counselled them to think of some one, that might succeed in my Room, as likewise to the end that a Person named by them might find something of Advantage by my Recommendation. I signed two Blanks with my own Hands, for Letters to the Pope, and Cardinal Francis Barbarin our Protector, and ordered Mr. Edward Robinson, Professor of Divinity (who will attest as much) to write the said Letters. Moreover, being desired by the said Seniors to nominate my Successor. I answered, that I should advise them to make Choice of Dr. Ellis: Such was the Opinion I had of him then.

Mr. Baxter's further Account of the King's Declaration, which was better than he expected.

Life of Mr. Baxter, Fol. Lib. I. Part II. p. 278.

When I went out from the Meeting on October 22, I went dejected, as being fully satisfied that the Form of Government in that Declaration would not be satisfactory, nor attain the Concord which was our End, because the Pastors had no Government of the Flocks; and I was resolved to meddle no more in the Business, but patiently suffer with other Dissenters. But two or three Days after, I met the King's Declaration cried about the Streets, and I presently stept into a House to read it, and seeing the Word Consent put in about Confirmation and Sacrament, though not as to Jurisdiction, and seeing the pastoral persuasive Power of Governing left all to the Ministers, with the rural Dean, and some other Amendments, I wonder'd at it, how it came to pass, but was exceeding glad of it; as perceiving that now the Terms were (though not such as we desir'd, yet) such as any sober honest Ministers might submit to: And I was presently resolved to do my best to persuade all, according to my Interest and Opportunity, to conform according to the Terms of this Declaration; and chearfully to promote the Concord of the Church, and brotherly Love, which this Concord doth bespeak.

And he confesses the Terms of Conformity to be such as any sober honest Ministers might submit to.

And resolves to persuade others to conform.

He thanks the Lord Chancellor, who in return offered him a Bishoprick.

Having frequent Business with the Lord Chancellour about other Matters, I was going to him when I met the King's Declaration in the Street, and I was so much pleased with it, that (having told him, why I was so earnest to have had it suited to the desired End) I gave him hearty Thanks for the Additions, and told him, that if, 1. The Liturgy may be but altered, as the Declaration promiseth. 2. And this may be settled and continued to us as a Law, and not reversed: I should take it to be my Duty to do my best to procure the full Consent of others, and promote our happy Concord on these Terms, and should rejoice to see the Day that Factions and Parties may all be swallowed up in Unity, and C[illegible] Bishopricks.

In about three Weeks Time from my coming out of Lancaster Prison, I came to London, Richard Hubberthorn and Robert Withers being with me. When we came to Charing-Cross, there were Multitudes of People gathered together to see the Burning of the Bowels of some of them that had been the old King's Judges. We went next Morning to Judge Mallet's Chamber.——— The next Day I appeared at the King's Bench Bar ——— the Charge against me was read openly, the People were moderate, and the Judges cool and loving, and the Lord's Mercy was to them. —— Then stood up he that was called Esquire Marsh, who was one of the King's Bed-Chamber; and told the Judges, it was the King's Pleasure that I should be set at Liberty, seeing no Accuser came up against me. Then they asked me, whether I would put it to the King and Council? I said Yes with a good Will. Thereupon they sent the Sheriff's Return which he made to the Writ of Habeas Corpus, containing the Matter charged against me in the Mittimus, to the King, that he might see for what I was committed. Upon perusal of this and Consideration of the whole Matter, the King being satisfied of my Innocency commanded his Secretary to send an Order to Judge Mallet for my Release, which the Secretary did thus:

And his Majesty's great Kindness to them.

It is his Majesty's Pleasure, that you give Order for the releasing and setting at full Liberty the Person of George Fox, late a Prisoner in Lancaster Gaol, and commanded hither by an Habeas Corpus. Printed Fol. 1660. by the King's Printers.

Charles R.

How much the Peace of the State is concern'd in the Peace of the Church, and how difficult a Thing it is to preſerve Order and Government in Civil, whilſt there is no Order or Government in Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, is evident to the World: And this little Part of the World our own Dominions, hath had ſo late Experience of it, that we may very well acquieſce in the Concluſion, without enlarging ourſelf in Diſcourſe upon it, it being a Subject we have had frequent Occaſion to contemplate upon, and to lament Abroad as well as at Home.

The King's Experience abroad makes him more willing to compoſe Differences at home.

In our Letter to the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons from Breda, we declared how much we deſired the Advancement and Propagation of the Proteſtant Religion, that neither the Unkindneſs of thoſe of the ſame Faith towards us, nor the Civilities and Obligations from thoſe of a contrary Profeſſion (of both which we have had abundant Evidence) could in the leaſt Degree ſtartle us, or make us ſwerve from it; and that nothing can be propoſed to manifeſt our Zeal and Affection for it, to which we will not readily conſent. And we ſaid then, that we did hope in due Time ourſelf to propoſe ſomewhat for the Propagation of it, that will ſatisfy the World, that we have always made it both our Care and our Study, and have enough obſerved what is moſt like to bring Diſadvantage to it. And the Truth is, we do think ourſelf more competent to propoſe, and with God's Aſſiſtance to determine many Things now in Difference, from the Time we have ſpent, and the Experience we have had, in moſt of the Reformed Churches abroad in France, in the Low-Countries, and in Germany, where we have had frequent Conferences with the moſt learned Men, who have unanimouſly lamented the great Reproach the Proteſtant Religion undergoes from the Diſtempers and too notorious Schiſms in Matters of Religion in England. And as the moſt Learned amongſt them have always with great Submiſſion and Reverence acknowledged and magnified the eſtabliſhed Government of the Church of England, and the great Countenance and Shelter the Proteſtant Religion received from it before theſe unhappy Times; ſo many of them have with great Ingenuity and Sorrow confeſs'd, that they were too eaſily miſled by Miſinformation and Prejudice into ſome Diſeſteem of it, as if it had too much complied with the Church of Rome; whereas they now acknowledge it to be the beſt Fence God hath yet raiſed againſt Popery in the World; and we are perſuaded they do with great Zeal wiſh it reſtored to its old Dignity and Veneration.

The foreign reformed Churches have magnified the Government of the Church of England.

Tho' they were ſometimes miſled into a Prejudice, as if it too much complied with the Church of Rome.

Now fully ſatisfied that our Church is the beſt Fence againſt Popery.

When we were in Holland, we were attended by many grave and learned Miniſters from hence, who were look'd upon as the moſt able and principal Aſſertors of the Preſbyterian Opinions, with whom we had as much Conference as the Multitude of Affairs which were then upon us would permit us to have; and to our great Satisfaction and Comfort found them Perſons full of Affection to us, of Zeal for the Peace of the Church and State, and neither Enemies (as they have been given out to be) to Epiſcopacy or Liturgy, but modeſtly to deſire ſuch Alterations in either, as without ſhaking Foundations might beſt allay the preſent Diſtempers, which the Indiſpoſition of the Times, and the Tenderneſs of ſome Mens Conſciences had contracted. For the better doing whereof we did intend upon our firſt Arrival in this Kingdom to call a Synod of Divines, as the moſt proper Expedient to provide a proper Remedy for all thoſe Differences and Diſſatiſfactions, which had or ſhould ariſe in Matters of Religion. And in the mean Time we publiſhed in our Declarations from Breda, a Liberty to tender Conſciences, and that no Man ſhould be diſquieted or called in queſtion for Differences of Opinion in Matters of Religion, which do not diſturb the Peace of the Kingdom, and that we ſhall be ready to conſent to ſuch an Act of Parliament as upon mature Deliberation ſhould be offer'd to us for the full granting that Indulgence.

The Preſbyterian Divines who had attended his Majeſty in Holland ſhew'd themſelves well affected to the King, and not Enemies to Epiſcopacy or Liturgy.

Only they modeſtly deſired ſome Alteration.

To which purpoſe the King had intended at his firſt coming to call a Synod of Divines.

And in the mean Time by Declaration at Breda had publiſh'd a Liberty to tender Conſciences.

Whilſt we continued in this Temper of Mind and Reſolution, and have ſo far complied with the Perſuaſion of particular Perſons, and the Diſtemper of the Time, as to be contented with the Exerciſe of our Religion in our own Chapel, according to the conſtant Practice and Laws eſtabliſhed, without enjoining that Practice, and the Obſervation of thoſe Laws in the Churches of this Kingdom; (in which we have undergone the Cenſure of many, as if we were without that Zeal for the Church which we ought to have, and which by God's Grace we ſhall always retain) we have found ourſelf not ſo candidly dealt with as we have deſerved; and that there are unquiet and reſtleſs Spirits, who (without abating any Thing of their own Diſtemper, in Recompence of the Moderation they find in us) continue their Bitterneſs againſt the Church, and endeavour to raiſe Jealouſies of us, and to leſſen our Reputation by their Reproaches, as if we were not true to the Profeſſions we have made. And in order thereunto, they have very unſea-

Content with the Exerciſe of our Religion in his own Chapel.

For which he had been cenſur'd on the one ſide for want of Zeal to the Church;

And on the other Hand had met with unquiet and reſtleſs Spirits, who continue their Bitterneſs againſt the Church.

And reproach his Majeſty by printing and publiſhing his former Declaration made in Scotland, by Force put upon him.

And therefore he deſerves not to be reproached with it.

unſeaſonably [illegible] Kingdom, a Declaration [illegible] we ſhall ſay no more [illegible] enforced to ſign that Declaration [illegible] the wor-thieſt and greateſt Part of that Nation did even then [illegible] Uſage of us in that Particular, when [illegible] the Power of a few ill Men, which at that Time had ſpread [illegible] Kingdom; and therefore we had no Reaſon to expect, that we ſhould at this Seaſon (when we are doing all we can to wipe out the Memory of all that hath been done amiſs by other Men, and we thank God, have wiped it out of our own Remembrance) have been ourſelf aſſaulted with thoſe Reproaches which we will likewiſe forget.

His Majeſty complains of other ſeditious Pamphlets.

Mr. L'Eſtrange in his Holy Cheat ſoon after publiſhed, ſaith, p. 32. Theſe very Pamphlets whereof his Majeſty complains in this Declaration, were by myſelf, at their firſt coming forth delivered to ſeveral Members of that Seſſion, which notwithſtanding they were ſtill ſold in the Hall, all the Intereſt I had being too little to get them ſuppreſſed

Since the Printing of this Declaration, ſeveral ſeditious Pamphlets and Queries have been publiſhed and ſcattered abroad, to infuſe Diſlike and Jealouſies into the Hearts of the People and of the Army: And ſome, who ought rather to have repented the former Miſchief they have wrought, than to have endeavoured to improve it, have had the Hardineſs to publiſh, that the Doctrine of the Church, againſt which no Man with whom we have conferred hath excepted, ought to be reformed as well as the Diſcipline.

His Majeſty will give ſome Determination 'till a Synod may be called.

This over-paſſionate and turbulent Way of Proceeding, and the Impatience we find in many for ſome ſpeedy Determination in theſe Matters, whereby the Minds of Men may be compoſed, and the Peace of the Church eſtabliſhed, hath prevail'd with us to invert the Method we had propoſed to ourſelf, and even in order to the better calling and compoſing a Synod (which the preſent Jealouſies will hardly agree upon) by the Aſſiſtance of God's bleſſed Spirit, which we daily invoke and ſupplicate, to give ſome Determination ourſelf to the Matters in Difference, until ſuch a Synod may be called, as may without Paſſion or Prejudice give us ſuch farther Aſſiſtance towards a perfect Union of Affections, as well as Submiſſion to Authority, as is neceſſary.

The Miſchiefs ariſe from the Paſſion, Appetite, and Intereſt of particular Perſons.

And we are the rather induced to take this upon us, by finding upon the full Conference we have had with the learned Men of ſeveral Perſuaſions, that the Miſchiefs under which the Church and State do at preſent ſuffer, do not reſult from any formed Doctrine or Concluſion, which either Party maintains or avows; but from the Paſſion and Appetite, and Intereſt of particular Perſons, who contract greater Prejudice to each other from thoſe Affections, than would naturally riſe from their Opinions. And thoſe Diſtempers muſt be in ſome Degree allay'd, before the Meeting in a Synod can be attended with better Succeſs than their Meetings in other Places, and their Diſcourſes in Pulpits have hitherto been: And 'till all Thoughts of Victory are laid aſide, the humble and neceſſary Thoughts for the Vindication of Truth cannot be enough entertained.

They all approve Epiſcopacy and Liturgy,

And all diſlike Sacrilege, and Alienation of the Revenue of the Church.

Charity the vital Part of Chriſtian Religion.

We muſt, for the Honour of all thoſe of either Perſuaſion, with whom we have conferr'd, declare, that the Profeſſions and Deſires of all for the Advancement of Piety and true Godlineſs, are the ſame; their Profeſſions of Zeal for the Peace of the Church, the ſame; of Affection and Duty to us, the ſame; they all approve Epiſcopacy; they all approve a ſet Form of Liturgy; and they all diſprove and diſlike the Sin of Sacrilege, and the Alienation of the Revenue of the Church; and if upon theſe excellent Foundations, in Submiſſion to which there is ſuch a Harmony of Affections, any Superſtructures ſhould be raiſed to the ſhaking thoſe Foundations, and to the contracting and leſſening the bleſſed Gift of Charity, which is a vital Part of Chriſtian Religion, we ſhall think ourſelf very unfortunate, and even ſuſpect that we are defective in that Adminiſtration of Government with which God hath entruſted us.

The King's Affection and Eſteem for the Church of England not leſſened by his Condeſcenſions.

Some Particulars of Ceremony to be diſpenſed with.

The Support of Epiſcopacy the beſt Support of our Religion.

Eccleſiaſtical Power ſubordinate to the Civil.

We need not profeſs the high Affection and Eſteem we have for the Church of England as it is eſtabliſhed by Law; the Reverence to which hath ſupported us, with God's Bleſſing, againſt many Temptations; nor do we think that Reverence in the leaſt Degree diminiſhed by our Condeſcenſions, not peremptorily to inſiſt on ſome Particulars of Ceremony, which, however introduced by the Piety and Devotion, and Order of former Times may not be ſo agreeable to the preſent, but may even leſſen that Piety and Devotion, for the Improvement whereof they might happily be firſt introduced, and conſequently may well be diſpenſed with; and we hope this charitable Compliance of ours will diſpoſe the Minds of all Men to a chearful Submiſſion to that Authority, the Preſervation whereof is ſo neceſſary for the Unity and Peace of the Church; and that they will acknowledge the Support of the epiſcopal Authority, to be the beſt Support of Religion, by being the beſt Means to contain the Minds of Men within the Rules of Government: And they who would reſtrain the Exerciſe of that holy Function within the Rules which were obſerved in the primitive Times, muſt remember and conſider that the eccleſiaſtical Power being in thoſe bleſſed Times always ſubordinate and ſubject to the civil; it was likewiſe proportioned to ſuch an Extent of Juriſdiction as was moſt agreeable to that; and as the Sanctity and Simplicity, and Reſignation of that Age, did then refer many Things to the Biſhops, which the Policy of ſucceeding Ages would not admit, at leaſt did otherwiſe provide for; ſo it can be no Reproach to primitive Epiſcopacy, if where there have been great Alterations in the civil Government from what was then, there have been likewiſe ſome Difference and Alteration in the eccleſiaſtical, the Eſſence and Foundation being ſtill preſerved.

And

Epiſcopal Government moſt agreeable to Monarchy, and eſtabliſhed by Law.

As ancient in this Iſland as the Chriſtian Monarchy.

The preſent Biſhops will conſent to the preſent Conceſſions.

And upon this Ground without taking upon us to cenſure the Government of the Church in other Countries, where the Government of the State is different from what it is here, or enlarging ourſelf upon the Reaſons why, whilſt there was an Imagination of erecting a Democratical Government here in the State, they ſhould be willing to continue an Ariſtocratical Government in the Church; it ſhall ſuffice to ſay, that ſince, by the wonderful Bleſſing of God, the Hearts of this whole Nation are returned to an Obedience to Monarchique Government in the State, it muſt be very reaſonable to ſupport that Government in the Church which is eſtabliſhed by Law, and with which the Monarchy hath flouriſhed through ſo many Ages, and which is, in Truth, as ancient in this Iſland as the Chriſtian Monarchy thereof; and which hath always in ſome Reſpects or Degrees been enlarged or reſtrained, as hath been thought moſt conducing to the Peace and Happineſs of the Kingdom; and therefore we have not the leaſt doubt but that the preſent Biſhops will think the preſent Conceſſions now made by us to allay the preſent Diſtempers, very juſt and reaſonable, and will very chearfully conform themſelves thereunto.

To encourage the Exerciſes of Religion, and the holy Obſervance of the Lord's Day.

As the preſent Set of Biſhops are of great and exemplary Piety and Learning;

So none ſhall be promoted to that Dignity, but Men of Learning, Virtue, and Piety,

And ſuch as ſhall be frequent Preachers.

I. We do in the firſt Place declare, our Purpoſe and Reſolution is and ſhall be, to promote the Power of Godlineſs, to encourage the Exerciſes of Religion both publick and private, and to take Care that the Lord's Day be applied to holy Exerciſes, without unneceſſary Divertiſements; and that inſufficient, negligent, and ſcandalous Miniſters be not permitted in the Church; and that as the preſent Biſhops are known to be Men of great and exemplary Piety in their Lives, which they have manifeſted in their notorious and unexampled Sufferings during theſe late Diſtempers; and of great and known Sufficiency of Learning; ſo we ſhall take ſpecial Care, by the Aſſiſtance of God, to prefer no Men to that Office and Charge, but Men of Learning, Virtue, and Piety, who may be themſelves the beſt Examples to thoſe who are to be governed by them; and we ſhall expect, and provide the beſt we can that the Biſhops be frequent Preachers, and that they do very often preach themſelves in ſome Church of their Dioceſe, except they be hinder'd by Sickneſs, or other bodily Infirmities, or ſome other juſtifiable Occaſion, which ſhall not be thought juſtifiable if it be frequent.

Suffragan Biſhops to be appointed in the larger Dioceſes.

II. Becauſe the Dioceſes, eſpecially ſome of them, are thought to be of too large Extent: We will appoint ſuch a Number of ſuffragan Biſhops in every Dioceſe, as ſhall be ſufficient for the due Performance of their Work.

The Cenſures of the Church not to be inflicted without the Advice and Aſſiſtance of Preſbyters.

No Chancellor to excommunicate or abſolve Miniſters without the Biſhop.

Nor Archdeacons to exerciſe Juriſdiction without the Advice and Aſſiſtance of ſix Miniſters.

III. No Biſhop ſhall ordain, or exerciſe any Part of Juriſdiction which appertains to the Cenſures of the Church, without the Advice and Aſſiſtance of the Preſbyters; and no Chancellors, Commiſſaries, or Officials, as ſuch, ſhall exerciſe any Act of ſpiritual Juriſdiction in theſe Caſes, (viz) Excommunication, Abſolution, or wherein any of the Miniſtry are concerned, with reference to their paſtoral Charge. However, our Intent and Meaning is to uphold and maintain the Profeſſion of the Civil Law ſo far and in ſuch Matters as it hath been of Uſe and Practice within our Kingdoms and Dominions: Albeit as to Excommunication, our Will and Pleaſure is, that no Chancellor, Commiſſary, or Official ſhall decree any Sentence of Excommunication or Abſolution, or be Judges in thoſe Things wherein any of the Miniſtry are concerned as is aforeſaid. Nor ſhall the Archdeacon exerciſe any Juriſdiction without the Advice and Aſſiſtance of ſix Miniſters of his Archdeaconry, whereof three to be nominated by the Biſhop, and three by the Election of the major Part of the Preſbyters within the Archdeaconry.

The Preferments of Dean and Chapter to be given to learned and pious Preſbyters of the Dioceſe.

To be aſſiſted by an equal Number of pious and diſcreet Miniſters to be choſen by the Preſbyters of the Dioceſe.

Nor any ſuffragan Biſhop to ordain or exerciſe any ſpiritual Juriſdiction without Advice and Aſſiſtance of the Preſbyters.

And all Ordinations by the Biſhop and his Preſbytery.

IV. To the End that the Deans and Chapters may be the better fitted to afford Counſel and Aſſiſtance to the Biſhops, both in Ordination and the other Offices mentioned before: We will take Care that thoſe Preferments be given to the moſt learned and pious Preſbyters of the Dioceſe; and moreover that an equal Number (to thoſe of the Chapter) of the moſt learned, pious, and diſcreet Preſbyters of the ſame Dioceſe, annually choſen by the major Vote of all the Preſbyters of that Dioceſe preſent at ſuch Elections, ſhall be always adviſing and aſſiſting, together with thoſe of the Chapter, in all Ordinations, and in every Part of Juriſdiction which appertains to the Cenſures of the Church, and at all other ſolemn and important Actions in the Exerciſe of the eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, wherein any of the Miniſtry are concerned: Provided that at all ſuch Meetings the Number of the Miniſters ſo elected, and thoſe preſent of the Chapter ſhall be equal, and not exceed one the other, and that to make the Numbers equal, the Juniors of the exceeding Number be withdrawn that the moſt ancient may take Place: Nor ſhall any ſuffragan Biſhop ordain, or exerciſe the 'fore-mentioned Offices and Acts of ſpiritual Juriſdiction, but with the Advice and Aſſiſtance of a ſufficient Number of the moſt judicious and pious Preſbyters annually choſen as aforeſaid within his Precincts: And our Will is, that the great Work of Ordination be conſtantly and ſolemnly performed by the Biſhop and his aforeſaid Preſbytery, at the four ſet Times and Seaſons appointed by the Church for that Purpoſe.

Confirmation by Information and with Conſent of the Miniſter of the Place.

Admiſſion to the Lord's Supper upon Profeſſion of Faith and Promiſe of Obedience.

V. We will take Care that Confirmation be rightly and ſolemnly performed, by the Information and with the Conſent of the Miniſter of the Place, who ſhall admit none to the Lord's Supper 'till they have made a credible Profeſſion of their Faith, and promiſed Obedience to the Will of God; according as is expreſſed in the Conſiderations of the Rubrick before the Catechiſm; and that all poſſible Diligence be uſed for the Inſtruction and Reformation of ſcandalous

With Appeal to the ſuperior Powers.

The rural Dean and Miniſters to meet once a Month.

The rural Dean and his Aſſiſtants to take Care of the younger Sort to be catechized and brought to the Biſhop to be confirmed.

Offenders, whom the Miniſter ſhall not ſuffer to partake of the Lord's Table, until they have openly declared themſelves to have truly repented and amended their former naughty Lives; as it is partly expreſſed in the Rubrick, and more fully in the Canons; Provided, there be Place for due Appeals to ſuperior Powers. But beſides the Suffragans and their Preſbytery, every rural Dean (thoſe Deans, as heretofore, to be nominated by the Biſhop of the Dioceſe) together with three or four Miniſters of that Deanery, choſen by the major Part of all the Miniſters within the ſame, ſhall meet once in every Month, to receive ſuch Complaints as ſhall be preſented to them by the Miniſters or Church-wardens of the reſpective Pariſhes; and alſo to compoſe all ſuch Differences betwixt Party and Party, as ſhall be referred unto them by Way of Arbitration; and to convince Offenders, and reform all ſuch Things as they find amiſs by their paſtoral Reproofs and Admonitions, if they may be ſo reformed: And ſuch Matters as they cannot by this paſtoral and perſuaſive Way compoſe and reform, are by them to be prepared for and preſented to the Biſhop; at which Meeting any other Miniſters of that Deanery, may, if they pleaſe, be preſent and aſſiſt. Moreover, the rural Dean and his Aſſiſtants are in their reſpective Diviſions to ſee that the Children and younger Sort be carefully inſtructed by the reſpective Miniſters of every Pariſh, in the Grounds of Chriſtian Religion, and be able to give a good Account of their Faith and Knowledge, and alſo of their Chriſtian Converſation conformable thereunto, before they be confirmed by the Biſhop, or admitted to the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

No Biſhop to exerciſe arbitrary Power, but according to the Law of the Land.

VI. No Biſhop ſhall exerciſe any arbitrary Power, or do or impoſe any Thing upon the Clergy, or to the People, but what is according to the known Law of the Land.

A Liturgy is lawful and neceſſary.

The Liturgy of the Church of England the beſt of any.

Yet ſince ſome Exceptions are made againſt it, his Majeſty will appoint an equal Number of learned Divines to review it, and to make neceſſary Alterations in it,

And ſome additional Forms:

In the mean Time it is to be hoped, that no Miniſters will totally lay aſide the Uſe of it,

But to read thoſe Parts of it, againſt which there is no Exception.

VII. We are very glad to find that all with whom we have conferred, do in their Judgments approve a Liturgy, or ſet Form of publick Worſhip to be lawful; which in our Judgment, for the Preſervation of Unity and Uniformity, we conceive to be very neceſſary: And though we do eſteem the Liturgy of the Church of England, contained in the Book of Common Prayer, and by Law eſtabliſhed, to be the beſt we have ſeen; and we believe that we have ſeen all that are extant and uſed in this Part of the World, and well known what Reverence moſt of the Reformed Churches, or at leaſt the moſt learned Men in thoſe Churches have for it; yet ſince we find ſome Exceptions made againſt ſeveral Things therein, we will appoint an equal Number of learned Divines of both Perſuaſions, to review the ſame, and to make ſuch Alterations as ſhall be thought moſt neceſſary; and ſome additional Forms (in the Scripture Phraſe, as near as may be) ſuited unto the Nature of the ſeveral Parts of Worſhip, and that it be left to the Miniſter's Choice to uſe one or other at his Diſcretion. In the mean Time, and 'till this be done, although we do heartily wiſh and deſire, that the Miniſters in their ſeveral Churches, becauſe they diſlike ſome Clauſes and Expreſſions, would not totally lay aſide the Uſe of the Book of Common Prayer, but read thoſe Parts againſt which there can be no Exception; which would be the beſt Inſtance of declining thoſe Marks of Diſtinction, which we ſo much labour and deſire to remove; yet in Compaſſion to divers of our good Subjects who ſcruple the Uſe of it as now it is, our Will and Pleaſure is, that none be puniſhed or troubled for not uſing it, until it be reviewed, and effectually reformed, as aforeſaid.

Concerning Ceremonies.

As the univerſal Church cannot introduce one Ceremony contrary to the Word of God;

So every national Church with conſent of the ſovereign Power, may order ſuch Ceremonies as are for Ediſication, and in themſelves indifferent;

Which ceaſe to be indifferent, when eſtabliſhed by Law.

Other arbitrary Ceremonies to ceaſe.

But thoſe eſtabliſhed by Law not to be aboliſhed.

Kneeling at the Sacrament the moſt agreeable Poſture,

If any are otherwiſe minded.

The Deciſion to be left to a national Synod.

VIII. Laſtly, Concerning Ceremonies, which have adminiſtred ſo much Matter of Difference and Contention, and which have been introduced by the Wiſdom and Authority of the Church, for Edification, and the Improvement of Piety: We ſhall ſay no more, but that we have the more Eſteem of all, and Reverence for many of them, by having been preſent in many of thoſe Churches where they are moſt aboliſhed or diſcountenanced; and it cannot be doubted, but that, as the univerſal Church cannot introduce one Ceremony in the Worſhip of God that is contrray to God's Word expreſſed in the Scripture: So every national Church, with the Approbation and Conſent of the ſovereign Power, may, and hath always introduced ſuch particular Ceremonies, as in that Juncture of Time are thought moſt proper for Edification, and the neceſſary Improvement of Piety and Devotion in the People; though the neceſſary Practice thereof cannot be deduced from Scripture; and that which before was, and in itſelf is indifferent, ceaſes to be indifferent, after it is once eſtabliſhed by Law: And therefore our preſent Conſideration and Work is, to gratify the private Conſciences of thoſe who are grieved with the Uſe of ſome Ceremonies, by indulging to, and diſpenſing with their omitting thoſe Ceremonies; not utterly to aboliſh any which are eſtabliſhed by Law, (if any are practiſed contrary to Law, the ſame ſhall ceaſe) which would be unjuſt, and of ill Example; and to impoſe upon the Conſcience of ſome, for the Satisfaction of the Conſcience of others, which is otherwiſe provided for. As it could not be reaſonable that Men ſhould expect, that we ſhould ourſelf decline, or enjoyn others to do ſo, to receive the bleſſed Sacrament upon our Knees, which in our Conſcience is the moſt humble, moſt devout, and moſt agreeable Poſture for that holy Duty, becauſe ſome other Men, upon Reaſons beſt, if not only known to themſelves, chooſe rather to do it ſitting or ſtanding: We ſhall leave all Deciſions and Determinations of that kind, if they ſhall be thought neceſſary for a perfect and entire Unity and Uniformity throughout the Nation, to the Advice of a national Synod, which ſhall be duly called, after a little Time, and a mutual Conver-

Laws to be eſtabliſhed for the Peace of Church and State.

And in the mean Time none to be compell'd to uſe the Croſs in Baptiſm.

Converſation between Perſons of different Perſuaſions, hath mollified thoſe Diſtempers, abated thoſe Sharpneſſes, and extinguiſhed thoſe Jealouſies which make Men unfit for thoſe Conſultations: And upon ſuch Advice, we ſhall uſe our beſt Endeavour that ſuch Laws may be eſtabliſhed, as may beſt provide for the Peace of the Church and State. Provided that none ſhall be denied the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, though they do not uſe the Geſture of kneeling in the Act of receiving. In the mean Time, out of Compaſſion and Compliance towards thoſe who would forbear the Croſs in Baptiſm, we are content that no Man ſhall be compelled to uſe the ſame, or ſuffer for not doing it: But if any Parent deſire to have his Child chriſtened according to the Form uſed, and the Miniſter will not uſe the Sign, it ſhall be lawful for that Parent to procure another Miniſter to do it: And if the proper Miniſter ſhall refuſe to omit that Ceremony of the Croſs, it ſhall be lawful for the Parent, who would not have his Child ſo baptized, to procure another Miniſter to do it, who will do it according to his Deſire.

Nor to be compell'd to bow at the Name of Jeſus.

No Man ſhall be compelled to bow at the Name of Jeſus, or ſuffer in any Degree for not doing it, without reproaching thoſe who out of their Devotion continue that ancient Ceremony of the Church.

The Uſe of the Surplice at preſent to be left at Liberty,

Except in the Royal Chapel and Cathedral and Collegiate Churches.

For the Uſe of the Surplice, we are contented that all Men be left to their Liberty to do as they ſhall think fit, without ſuffering in the leaſt Degree for wearing or not wearing it; provided, that this Liberty do not extend to our own Chapel, Cathedral, or Collegiate Churches, or to any College in either of our Univerſities; but that the ſeveral Statutes and Cuſtoms for the Uſe thereof in the ſaid Places, be there obſerved as formerly.

Subſcription and Oath of Canonical Obedience not at preſent to be required,

For Ordination, Inſtitution, or Induction;

Or for Academical Degrees.

None to forfeit a Preſentation, or be depriv'd of a Benefice for not declaring Aſſent to the 39 Articles.

No Man to be call'd in queſtion for Differences in Opinion, that do not diſturb the Peace of the Kingdom.

And becauſe ſome Men, otherwiſe pious and learned, ſay, they cannot conform unto the Subſcription required by the Canon, nor take the Oath of Canonical Obedience; we are content, and it is our Will and Pleaſure (ſo they take the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy) that they ſhall receive Ordination, Inſtitution, and Induction, and ſhall be permitted to exerciſe their Function, and to enjoy the Profits of their Livings, without the ſaid Subſcription or Oath of Canonical Obedience: And moreover, that no Perſons in the Univerſities ſhall, for the Want of ſuch Subſcription, be hindred in the taking of their Degrees. Laſtly, that none be judged to forfeit his Preſentation or Benefice, or be deprived of it, upon the Statute of the Thirteenth of Queen Elizabeth, Chapter the Twelfth, ſo he read and declare his Aſſent to all the Articles of Religion which only concern the Confeſſion of the true Chriſtian Faith, and the Doctrine of the Sacraments compriſed in the Book of Articles in the ſaid Statute mentioned. In a Word, we do again renew what we have formerly ſaid in our Declaration from Breda, for the Liberty of tender Conſciences, that no Man ſhall be diſquieted or called in queſtion for Differences of Opinion in Matters of Religion, which do not diſturb the Peace of the Kingdom; and if any have been diſturbed in that kind ſince our arrival here, it hath not proceeded from any Direction of ours.

The King hopeth in due Time to propoſe ſomewhat for the Propagation of the Proteſtant Religion.

If his Subjects will ſubmit to this his Declaration,

For making up thoſe Differences that have diſquieted the Nation, given offence to the Proteſtant Churches, and even reproach'd the Proteſtant Religion.

The Proteſtant Religion will be advanced abroad, by ſupporting the beſt Reformed Proteſtant Church at home.

Hopes that none will diſpoſe the People to an ill Opinion of the King and Government,

But all endeavour to preſerve the Peace of the Kingdom:

And then the Nation will enjoy as great a Felicity as ever they have done.

To conclude, and in this Place to explain what we mentioned before, and ſaid in our Letter to the Houſe of Commons from Breda, that we hoped in due Time, ourſelf to propoſe ſomewhat for the Propagation of the Proteſtant Religion, that will ſatisfy the World, that we have always made it both our Care and our Study, and have enough obſerved what is moſt like to bring Diſadvantage to it: We do conjure all our loving Subjects to acquieſce in and ſubmit to this our Declaration concerning thoſe Differences which have ſo much diſquieted the Nation at home, and given ſuch Offence to the Proteſtant Churches abroad, and brought ſuch Reproach upon the Proteſtant Religion in general, from the Enemies thereof; as if upon obſcure Notions of Faith and Fancy, it did admit the Practice of Chriſtian Duties and Obedience to be diſcountenanced and ſuſpended, and introduce a Licence in Opinions and Manners; to the Prejudice of the Chriſtian Faith. And let us all endeavour, and emulate each other in thoſe Endeavours, to countenance and advance the Proteſtant Religion abroad, which will be beſt done by ſupporting the Dignity and Reverence due to the beſt reformed Proteſtant Church at home, and which being once freed from the Calumnies and Reproaches it hath undergone from theſe late ill Times, will be the beſt Shelter for thoſe abroad, which will by that Countenance both be the better protected againſt their Enemies; and be the more eaſily induced to compoſe the Differences amongſt themſelves, which give their Enemies more Advantage againſt them: And we hope and expect, that all Men will henceforward forbear to vent any ſuch Doctrine in the Pulpit, or to endeavour to work in ſuch Manner upon the Affections of the People as may diſpoſe them to an ill Opinion of us and the Government, and to diſturb the Peace of the Kingdom. Which if all Men will in their ſeveral Vocations endeavour to preſerve with the ſame Affection and Zeal we our ſelf will do; all our good Subjects will by God's Bleſſing upon us enjoy as great a Meaſure of Felicity, as this Nation hath ever done, and which we ſhall conſtantly labour to procure for them, as the greateſt Bleſſing God can beſtow upon us in this World.

Given at our Court at Whitehall this twenty fifth Day of October 1660.

This Declaration not ſo pleaſing as that from Breda.

This Declaration did not ſo well pleaſe as that from Breda, of which a good Author writes thus: There is one myſterious Tranſaction of the Fanatick Party whereby by they endeavoured to impoſe upon the King before his Return; they had it ſeems drawn up ſome Heads in favour of Presbytery, and to the Prejudice of the Epiſcopal Government, which they deſired the King to publiſh in a Declaration; and the King in Compliance with the Exigency of the Times, and the Neceſſity of his own Affairs, did publiſh in a Declaration from Breda, but with a Reſervation expreſſed therein, that he would leave the Particulars therein mentioned to be conſidered and eſtabliſhed in a free Parliament. To this Declaration (ſaith Mr. Baxter, p. 87. Part II. of his third Plea) they would have conformed, on this Suppoſition that the Species of Prelacy was altered by it. And Mr. B. foreſeeing that the epiſcopal Party would be grieved by it, makes this Objection (againſt thoſe that extorted that Declaration) in the Name of the Biſhops. Object. You did but obtrude upon us your own Opinions, for when you had drawn up moſt of thoſe Words, his Majeſty was forced to ſeem for the preſent to grant them to you. To this Mr. B. anſwers; If we did offer ſuch Things, let the World judge what we ſought by them, viz. by your own Confeſſion to change the Species of the Epiſcopal Government. —— So that it is evident they did what they could to bring the King under their Chains, before he came to his Crown.

MS. Copy in the Hands of the Biſhop of Peterb.]

Reverend Sir,

You demand very ſtrange Conditions, a Leaſe of a Farm without Fine, that muſt be worth 40*l. per Ann.* and my Prebend of Durham, which is worth no leſs than 200*l. per Ann.* and which if it were in my Power to paſs it over to you, would on thoſe Terms bring you into the Compaſs of Simony, and Danger of the Law; beſides that Scandal that muſt needs follow amongſt all People that ſhould hear of ſuch Bargains. And truly it troubles me for your Sake, that you ſhould have ſuch undue and extravagant Thoughts in your Fancy, whereunto I neither can nor muſt any Way aſſent. And I pray conſider well with yourſelf what would be the Effect hereof, if thoſe Demands of yours ſhould be made known, and exhibited to the King, either in his own Perſon, or in his Parliament, or in his Council, or in his Court of Chancery, to which, or ſome of which Places this Matter between Mr. Pierpoint and you will be brought without Help, if you perſiſt in theſe your unreaſonable Demands and Reſolutions. —— The King my Maſter hath been pleaſed of his Royal Goodneſs and Grace to beſtow the Biſhoprick of Durham upon me, wherein upon another Score (not upon ſuch a one as you propoſe) I might eaſily have been brought to have been mindful of my Brethren of Peterborough, and eſpecially of Mr. Towers and yourſelf, both for your own Sakes, and in regard of the Memory of that Reverend Biſhop to whom you are related. But as I never did, ſo I never will be brought to truck and bargain for Eccleſiaſtical Preferments, and as for Temporal Farms, I know not any Power I have to leaſe them over other Mens Heads. I am, &c.

He ſcorn'd to truck and bargain for Eccleſiaſtical Preferments;

Or to grant a Leaſe over another Man's Head.

P. S. The Dean deſigned to ſucceed me in Peterborough is, I hear, very dangerouſly ſick.

Mr. Baxter's Account of his waiting on the Lord Chancellor.

Who again offer'd him a Biſhoprick, but he was in doubt, and deſir'd Time to conſider of it.

Life of Mr. Baxter, Fol.

The Day that the King's Declaration came out, when I was with the Lord Chancellor (who did all) he aſked me, whether I would accept of a Biſhoprick: I told him, that if he had aſked me the Queſtion the Day before, I could eaſily have anſwered him, that in Conſcience I could not do it; for tho' I would live peaceably under whatever Government the King ſhould ſet up, I could not have

He mov'd that the King's Declaration might be paſs'd into a Law.

have a Hand in executing it. But having, as I was coming to him, ſeen the King's Declaration, and finding that by it the Government is ſo far altered as it is, I take my ſelf for the Churches ſake exceedingly beholden to his Lordſhip for thoſe Moderations, and my Deſire to promote the Happineſs of the Church which that Moderation tendeth to, doth make me reſolve to take that Courſe, which tendeth moſt thereto: But whether to take a Biſhoprick be the Way I was in doubt, and deſired ſome farther Time of Conſideration. But if his Lordſhip would procure us the Settlement of the Matter of that Declaration, by paſſing it into a Law, I promiſed to take that Way, in which I might moſt ſerve the publick Peace.

The three chief Presbyterians thought a Biſhoprick might be accepted upon the Foot of the Declaration.

Mr. Calamy deſired, that they might all accept, or all refuſe.

Dr. Reynolds, Mr. Calamy, and myſelf had ſome Speeches oft together about it: And we all thought that a Biſhoprick might be accepted according to the Deſcription of the Declaration, without any Violation of the Covenant, or owning the ancient Prelacy; but all the Doubt was, whether this Declaration would be made a Law, (as was then expected) or whether it were but a temporary Means to draw us on, till we came up to all the Dioceſans deſired; and Mr. Calamy deſired, that we might all go together, and all refuſe, or all accept it.

The Voice of the City was for Dr. Reynolds and Mr Baxter to be Biſhops:

But not Mr. Calamy, leſt a Presbyterian ſhould never be again truſted.

Mr. Baxter reſolv'd againſt it for ſeveral Reaſons.

But by this Time, the Rumour of it fled abroad, and the Voice of the City made a Difference, for though they wiſh'd that none of us ſhould be Biſhops, yet they ſaid, Dr. Reynolds and Mr. Baxter being known to be for moderate Epiſcopacy, their Acceptance would be leſs ſcandalous: But if Mr. Calamy ſhould accept it, who had preached, and written and done ſo much againſt it, (which were then at large recited) never Presbyterian would be truſted for his Sake; ſo that the Clamour was very loud againſt his Acceptance of it. And Mr. Matthew Newcomen his Brother in law, wrote to me earneſtly to diſſuade him, and many more. For my own Part I reſolv'd againſt it at the firſt, but not as a Thing which I judg'd unlawful in itſelf, as deſcribed in the Declaration of the King, but 1. I knew that it would take me off my Writing. 2. I looked to have moſt of the godly Miniſters caſt out, and what good could be done upon ignorant, vile and uncapable Men. 3. I feared that this Declaration was but for a preſent Uſe, and that ſhortly it would be revok'd or nullified. 4. And if ſo, I doubted not, but the Laws would preſcribe ſuch Work for Biſhops, in ſilencing Miniſters, and troubling honeſt Chriſtians for their Conſciences, and ruling the vicious with greater Lenity, &c. as that I had rather have the meaneſt Employment amongſt Men. 5. And my Judgment was fully reſolved againſt the Lawfulneſs of the old Dioceſan Frame.

He would not counſel Mr. Calamy: But as to Dr. Reynolds he perſuaded him to accept it; yet upon the Terms of the King's Declaration.

But when Dr. Reynolds and Mr. Calamy aſk'd my Thoughts, I told them, that diſtinguiſhing between what is ſimply and what is by accident Evil, I thought that as Epiſcopacy is deſcribed in the King's Declaration, it is lawful when better cannot be had; but yet Scandal might make it unfit for ſome Men more than others: Therefore to Mr. Calamy I would give no Counſel, but for Dr. Reynolds I perſuaded him to accept it, ſo be it he would publickly declare that he took it but on the Terms of the King's Declaration, and would lay it down when he could no longer exerciſe it on thoſe Terms. Only I left it to his Conſideration, whether it be better to ſtay till we ſee what they do with the Declaration, and for myſelf I was confident, I ſhould ſee cauſe to refuſe it.

The Anſwer of Mr. L'Eſtrange on that Occaſion.

Intereſt Miſtaken by Mr. R. L'Eſtrange, 8vo. p. 31.

Complaining of their ſcandalous Invectives againſt the Church and Epiſcopal Clergy.

Not ſparing the King's Perſon.

[To which Paragraph Mr. L'Eſtrange anſwered] for fear his Majeſty's Conceſſions ſhould be taken for a pure Act of Grace, they are epitheted Juſt as well as Gracious, to leſſen the Favour by intimating the Duty. What Return gives the Presbyterian Party for this Indulgence? Are they not troubleſome as ever both in their Writings and Contrivements? That Declaration was no ſooner publick, but a Petition was exhibited from divers Miniſters in and about London for more Liberty, with ſome Formalities indeed of Gratitude for that. How many bold and ſcandalous Invectives ſince that Time, both from the Preſs and Pulpit, againſt the Rites of the Church, and the Epiſcopal Clergy? Nay and againſt the ſacred Majeſty of that very Perſon, to whoſe incomparable Clemency they owe their Heads and Fortunes!

While the Writers on the other ſide were only on the Defenſive.

Ibid. p. 40.

Truly I have a little watch'd the Preſs, and ſince his Majeſty's Return (nay a good while before) upon my Conſcience I have not met with one Syllable of Bitterneſs againſt that Party, but Defenſive: Yet I dare undertake to produce forty Presbyterian Pamphlets and Diſcourſes, of freſh Date, exceeding foul againſt the King and his Adherents.

Dr. Gilbert Ironſide nominated to the See of Briſtol.

Athen. Oxon. Vol II. col. 357.

Dr. Gilbert Ironſide, who had been Fellow of Trinity College, Oxon. and Batchelor of Divinity in 1619, Rector of Winterbourn-Stapleton and Winterbourn-Abbots (joining together) in Dorſetſhire, both which he kept till after the King's Reſtauration, and was made Prebendary of Thokerington in the Church of York within this Month of October 1660. and about this Time being nominated to the See of Briſtol, was conſecrated thereunto (being firſt created Doctor of Divinity) in St. Peter's Church at Weſtminſter on the 6th of January 1660. That which I am to take Notice further of him is, that tho' he was never Chaplain to any Spiritual or Temporal Lord, or to any King or Prince, or enjoyed any Dignity in the Church (except the little Prebend forementíon'd) he was looked upon as the fitteſt Perſon to enter upon that mean Biſhoprick.

SUNDAY Oct. 28. Consecration of five new Bishops.

The Consecration of [illegible] Humphry Henchman, Bishop [illegible] Dr. [illegible] Dr. George Morley, Bishop of Worcester, and Dr. George Griffith, [illegible] Asaph, in the Chapel of King Henry VII. at Westminster, [illegible] by Brian Bishop of Winton, assisted by [illegible] Bishop of [illegible] Matthew Ely, John Rochester, and Henry Chichester, [illegible] the Archbishop of Canterbury, directed to them for that Purpose, dated October 24. 1660.

They had been commended to the King by Dr. Sheldon.

And particularly Dr. Sanderson was importuned by Sheldon to accept that Dignity.

Dr. Sheldon, Bishop of London (than whom none knew, valued, or loved Dr. Sanderson more or better) was by his Majesty made a chief Trustee to commend to him fit Men, to supply the then vacant Bishopricks. And Dr. Sheldon knew none fitter than Dr. Sanderson, and therefore humbly desired the King that he would nominate him: And that done, he did as humbly desire Dr. Sanderson, that he would for God's and the Church's Sake take that Charge and Care upon him. Dr. Sanderson had, if not an Unwillingness, certainly no Forwardness to undertake it, and would often say, he had not led himself, but his Friend would now lead him into a Temptation, which he had daily pray'd against, and besought God, if he did undertake it, so to assist him with his Grace, that the Example of his Life and his earnest Endeavours might promote his Glory, and help forward the Salvation of others. —— At the Age of seventy three Years, he had fewer Faults to be pardoned by God or Man, than are apparent in others in these Days, in which (God knows) we fall so short of that visible Sanctity and Zeal to God's Glory, which was so apparent in the Days of primitive Christianity.

The Lord Chancellor was present, and desired the Sermon might be printed, which was therefore dedicated to his Lordship by the Preacher.

Epist. Ded. To the right honourable Edward Lord Hyde, Baron of Henden, Lord High Chancellour of England, &c.

Text. 1 Tim. iii. 1. This is a true saying if any Man desire the Office of a Bishop, he desireth a good Work.

MONDAY Oct. 29. The Quakers set at Liberty, with a Promise from the King, that they should not be molested while they lived peaceably.

Some of them went into the House of Lords, and bore Testimony against Tythes and Oaths, and Steeple-Houses.

After my Release on the 25th of October, Richard Hubberthorn had been with the King, and the King said, None should molest us, so long as we lived peaceably; and promised this to us upon the Word of a King, telling him, we might make Use of his Promise. Some Friends also were admitted to go into the House of Lords, before them and the Bishops, and had Liberty given them to declare their Reasons, why they could not pay Tythes, nor swear, nor go to the Steeple-House Worship, or join with others in Worship, and they heard them moderately. And there being about seven hundred Friends in Prison in the Nation, who had been committed under Oliver's and Richard's Government upon Contempts, (as they call them) when the King came in, he set them all at Liberty.

Journal of George Fox, 8vo. Vol. I. p. 555.

See Jan. 6, 1660.

One of them was moved of the Lord to go naked and barefoot, and besmear his Face with——

Which provok'd the People to whip him into Modesty.

The Mayor of Cambridge cover'd him with his Gown, &c.

William Sympson was moved of the Lord to go at several Times for three Years, naked and barefoot before them, as a Sign unto them in Markets, Courts, Towns, Cities, to Priests Houses, and to great Mens Houses, telling them, So shall they all be stripped naked, as he was stripped naked. And sometimes he was moved to put on hair Sackcloth, and to besmear his Face, and to tell them, So would the Lord God besmear all their Religion, as he was besmeared. Great Sufferings did that poor Man undergo, sore Whippings with Horse Whips and Coach Whips on his bare Body, grievous Stonings and Imprisonments in three Years Time before the King came in, that they might have taken Warning, but they would not, but rewarded his Love with cruel Usage. Only the Mayor of Cambridge did nobly to him, for he put his Gown about him, and took him into his House.

Ib. Journal of George Fox, Vol. I. p. 572.

Another of the Quaker's went into Carlisle Church in a white Sheet and a Halter, to signify the Surplice was coming up, and that some of them deserved to be hang'd.

Another Friend, one Robert Huntingdon, was moved of the Lord to go into Carlisle Steeple-House with a white Sheet about him, amongst the great Presbyterians and Independents there, to shew them that the Surplice was coming up again: And he put an Halter about his Neck, to shew them that an Halter was coming upon them; which was fulfilled upon some of our Persecutors not long after.

A third went into a Steeple-House with a Lanthorn and Candle to shew them they were all in the Dark.

Another whose Name was Richard Sale, living near West-Chester, was moved to go to the Steeple-House in the Time of their Worship, and to carry those persecuting Priests and People a Lanthorn and Candle as a Figure of their Darkness: But they cruelly abused him, and like dark Professors, as they were, they put him into their Prison, called Little Ease, and so squeezed his Body therein, that not long after he died.

The remaining Zeal for the Covenant, notwithſtanding the infinite Miſchief done by it.

The firſt Perſecution of Biſhops by their own Clergy and People,

Was the Effect, though not the Meaning of the Covenant.

For the taking whereof all ought to beg Pardon of God, and return to their Duty.

Letter of Dr. John Gauden to Sir Lawrence Bromfield, about the Senſe of the Covenant, London, 1660. 4to. p. 24.

The Dilapidations of the Church, after all the Covenanting, Complements, and Reformings, have been ten Times more in theſe laſt twenty Years under the Hands of bungling Reformers (who would needs do Church-Work without the Maſter Builders, Kings and Biſhops) than they were for fourſcore Years ſince the Reformation in England, yea, or the firſt four hundred Years of the Church, in the Midſt of Perſecution, when many godly Biſhops were perſecuted by Heathens and Hereticks: But this Age is the firſt Parent of that Prodigy, wherein orthodox and reformed Chriſtians, either Preſbyters or People did perſecute godly Biſhops, of the ſame Faith and Profeſſion, yea, Epiſcopacy itſelf, though never ſo regular and reformed; which could not juſtly be the Meaning of the Covenant; and if it were, it cannot thereby bind any Man that took it, further than to repent of his Raſhneſs, and to act contrary to ſo injurious, irreligious, irrational, and impolitick a Senſe; from which Snare the Lord doth undoubtedly deliver every good Man's Conſcience: For as God cannot tempt, ſo nor can any thing in his Name tye or bind Men to any thing that is a Sin. They that under any ſuch ſiniſter Notions and unjuſt Ends lifted up one of their Hands to the moſt high God, to profane his holy Name, had need bend both their Knees, and lift up both their Hands to Heaven, humbly to beg of God Pardon for their Folly, and Grace to return to that Duty, which they owe to God, to the King, to the Biſhops, to this Church, to their Country, and to their Conſciences.

Dedicated to Lord Chancellor, By James Parry.

To the right honourable the Lord High Chancellour, and prime Officer of the Crown of England.

The Book beginning.] Theſe two execrable Murthers, together with the Murtherers, as they agree and hold parallel in many Things, ſo they differ in ſome other, &c.

Concluding, p. 12.] Obſervable it is, that among thoſe Varieties of Puniſhments that were inflicted upon Ravaillac, there were two that followed him after Death: For an Edict or Act of Parliament paſs'd, that the Houſe he was born in ſhould be raz'd to the Ground, and not one Stone left on another, with a kind of Anathema, that none ſhould e'er build or dwell there again. Another Act paſſed, that all his Kindred ſhould take another Sirname, and call themſelves no more Ravaillac under Pain of being hang'd and ſtrangled.

Which two Particulars are humbly recommended to the great Council of England, viz. the two Houſes of Parliament upon their Re-acceſs.

THURSDAY Nov. 1.

Mr. Baxter at laſt refuſes a Biſhoprick,

When I came next to the Lord Chancellour, (the next Day ſave one) he asked me of my Reſolution [upon his Offer of a Biſhoprick] and put me to it ſo ſuddenly, that I was forced to delay no longer, but told him that I could not accept it, for ſeveral Reaſons; and it was not the leaſt that I thought I could better ſerve the Church without it, if he would but proſecute the Eſtabliſhment of the Terms granted: And becauſe I thought that it would be ill taken if I refuſed

Life of Mr. Baxter, Fol. Lib. I. Part II. p. 283.

And concealing moſt of his Reaſons, he gives the beſt in a Letter to the Lord Chancellour.

refuſed it on any but acceptable Reaſons, and alſo that Writing would ſerve beſt againſt Miſreports hereafter, I the next Day put this Letter into the Lord Chancellour's Hand, which he took in good Part; in which I concealed the moſt of my Reaſons, and gave the beſt, and uſed more Freedom in my farther Requeſts, than I expected ſhould have any good Succeſs.

My Lord,

He had at firſt reſolv'd againſt a Biſhoprick, but the King's Declaration had inclin'd him to accept;

Yet now again he muſt in Conſcience decline it,

And cannot but recommend ſome further Alterations towards an happy Union,

In ſix Particulars:

Eſpecially to put as many Preſbyterians as may be into Biſhopricks.

Your great Favour and Condeſcenſion encourages me to give you more of my Senſe of the Buſineſs which your Lordſhip was pleaſed to propound. I was, 'till I ſaw the Declaration, much dejected, and reſolved againſt a Biſhoprick as unlawful. But finding there more than on October 22, his Majeſty granted us (in the Paſtor's Conſent, &c. the rural Dean, with the whole Miniſtry, enabled to exerciſe as much perſuaſive paſtoral Power as I could deſire (who believe the Church hath no other kind of Power, unleſs communicated from the Magiſtrate) Subſcription abated in the Univerſities, &c.) and finding ſuch happy Conceſſions in the great Point of parochial Power and Diſcipline, and in the Liturgy and Ceremonies, &c. my Soul rejoyced in Thankfulneſs to God and his Inſtruments, and my Conſcience preſently told me it was my Duty, to do my beſt with myſelf and others as far as I had Intereſt and Opportunity, to ſuppreſs all ſinful Diſcontents; and having competent Materials now put into my Hands (without which I could have done nothing) to perſuade all my Brethren to Thankfulneſs, and obedient Submiſſion to the Government. And being raiſed to ſome joyful Hopes of ſeeing the Beginnings of a happy Union, I ſhall crave your Lordſhip's Pardon for preſuming to tell you what farther Endeavours will be neceſſary to accompliſh it: 1. If your Lordſhip will endeavour to get this Declaration paſs into an Act. 2. If you will ſpeedily procure a Commiſſion to the Perſons that are (equally) to be deputed to that Work, to review the Common-Prayer Book, according to the Declaration. 3. If you will further effectually the Reſtoration of able, faithful Miniſters, (who have and will have great Intereſt in the ſober Part of the People) to a ſettled Station of Service in the Church, who are lately removed. 4. If you will open ſome Way for the Ejection of the inſufficient, ſcandalous, and unable. 5. If you will put as many of our Perſuaſion as you can into Biſhopricks, (if it may be more than three). 6. If you will deſire the Biſhops to place ſome of them in inferiour Places of Truſt; eſpecially rural Deaneries, which is a Station ſuitable to us, in that it hath no Sallery or Maintenance, nor coercive Power, but that ſimple, paſtoral, perſuaſive Power which we deſire: This much will ſet us all in joynt.

But he himſelf is utterly againſt the being a Biſhop;

And hopes to do more Service to the Peace of the Church in a private Condition.

He now thinks that Dr Reynolds and Mr. Calamy may better accept, and he preſumes to recommend ſeveral others.

He would be in any other State or Relation wherein he might beſt ſerve the Church and his Majeſty;

And eſpecially would be Vicar of Kidderminſter, or even Curate there.

And for my own Part, I hope by Letters this very Week to diſperſe the Seeds of Satisfaction into many Countries of England. But my Conſcience commanding me to make this my very Work and Buſineſs (unleſs the Things granted ſhould be revers'd, which God forbid); I muſt profeſs to your Lordſhip that I am utterly againſt accepting of a Biſhoprick, (as becauſe I am conſcious that it will over-match my Sufficiency, and affright me with the Remembrance of my Account for ſo great an Undertaking, &c. ſo) ſpecially becauſe it will very much diſable me from an effectual promoting of the Churches Peace. As Men will queſtion all my Argumentations and Perſuaſives, when they ſee me in the Dignity which I plead for; but will take me to ſpeak my Conſcience impartially, when I am but as one of them, ſo I muſt profeſs to your Lordſhip that it will ſtop my own Mouth, ſo that I cannot for Shame ſpeak half ſo freely as now I can (and will, if God enable me) for Obedience and Peace, while I know that the Hearers will be thinking I am pleading for myſelf. Therefore I humbly crave, 1. That your Lordſhip will put ſome able Man of our Perſuaſion into the Place which you intend me (though I now think that Dr. Reignolds and Mr. Calamy may better accept of a Biſhoprick than I, which I hope your Lordſhip will promote). 1. I ſhall preſume to offer ſome Choice to your Conſideration; Dr. Francis Roberts of Wrington in Somerſetſhire (known by his Works), Mr. Froyzal of Clun in Shropſhire, and Hereford Dioceſe, (a Man of great Worth and good Intereſt), Mr. Daniel Cowdrey of Billing in Northamptonſhire, Mr. Anthony Burgeſs of Sutton-Coldfield in Warwickſhire, (all known by their printed Works); Mr. John Trap of Glouceſterſhire, Mr. Ford of Exetar, Mr. Hughes of Plymouth, Mr. Bampfield of Sherborne, Mr. Woodbridge of Newbury, Dr. Chambers, Dr. Bryan and Dr. Grew both of Coventry, Mr. Brinſley of Yarmouth, Mr. Porter of Whitchurch in Shropſhire, Mr. Gilpin of Cumberland, Mr. Bowles of York, Dr. Temple of Brampſton in Warwickſhire; I need name no more. 2. That you will believe that I as thankfully acknowledge your Lordſhip's Favour, as if I were by it poſſeſſed of a Biſhoprick: And if your Lordſhip continue in thoſe Intentions, I ſhall thankfully accept it in any other State or Relation that may further my Service to the Church and to his Majeſty. But I deſire for the 'forementioned Reaſons that it may be no Cathedral Relation. And whereas the Vicar of the Pariſh where I have lived will not reſign, but accept me only as his Curate; if your Lordſhip would procure him ſome Prebendary, or other Place of competent Profit (for I dare not motion him to any paſtoral Charge, or Place that requireth Preaching) that ſo he might reſign that Vicarage to me, without his Loſs, according to the late Act, before December, for the ſake of that Town (of Kidderminſter) I ſhould take it as a very great Favour. But if there be any great Inconvenience or Difficulties in the Way, I can well be content to be his Curate. I crave your Lordſhip's Pardon of this Trouble (which your own Condeſcenſion hath drawn upon you) and remain,

Your Lordſhip's
Nov. 1, 1660. much obliged Servant,
Rich. Baxter.

I have preſumed to tender you the incloſed Liſt of deſired Members of the Indian Corporation, ſuppoſing your Lordſhip will name what Perſons of higher Quality you ſee meet. And alſo the French Project with this of London for a Corporation for the Poor, that by ſuch Generals you may be prepared to receive the Londoners Petition when it is offered.

Mr. Calamy not pleaſed that Mr. Baxter had deny'd alone.

Mr. Calamy blamed me for giving in my Denial alone, before we had reſolved together what to do. But I told him the Truth, that being upon other neceſſary Buſineſs with the Lord Chancellour, he put me to it on the ſudden, ſo that I could not conveniently delay my Anſwer.

Dr. Reynolds ſoon accepted,

But with a Declaration of his own Senſe in it.

And Dr. Reynolds almoſt as ſuddenly accepted it, ſaying, that ſome of them had taken out the Conge d'Eſlire for him without his Knowledge. But he read to me a Profeſſion directed to the King, which he had written, wherein he profeſſed, that he took a Biſhop and Preſbyter to differ not ordine but gradu, and that a Biſhop was but the chief Preſbyter, and that he was not to ordain or govern, but with his Preſbyter's Aſſiſtance and Conſent, and that thus he accepted of the Place, and as deſcribed in the King's Declaration, and not as it ſtood before in England, and that he would no longer hold or exerciſe it than he could do it on theſe Terms:] To this Senſe it was, and he told me that he would offer it the King when he accepted of the Place; but whether he did or not I cannot tell. He died in the Biſhoprick of Norwich, An. 1676.

After long Suſpence Mr. Calamy refus'd a Biſhoprick,

As others did the Deaneries offer'd to them.

Mr. Calamy long ſuſpended his Anſwer, ſo that that Biſhoprick was long undiſpoſed of; 'till he ſaw the Iſſue of all our Treaty, which eaſily reſolved him. And Dr. Manton was offered the Deanery of Rocheſter, and Dr. Bates the Deanery of Coventry and Litchfield, which they both after ſome Time refuſed. And as I heard, Mr. Edward Bowles was offered the Deanery of York (at leaſt) which he refuſed, and not long after died of the Stone.

Mr. Wood had obſerv'd, that Mr. Tho. Manton became a Preacher, though not in Holy Orders, at Culliton in Devonſhire, and afterwards that he took Orders at Weſtminſter, from Thomas Biſhop of Gallway, in the Beginning of 1660. Yet the Writer of his Life ſays, he was ordained by Biſhop Hall before he was twenty, and though he was ordained only with Deacons Orders, he never would ſubmit to any other Ordination.

Life of Dr. Tho Manton, 8vo. *p.*27.

See Jan. 10, 1660.

Dr. Tho. Manton was offered at this Time the Deanery of Rocheſter, which Dr. Harding was in great Fear he would accept, and ply'd him with Letters to come to ſome Reſolution; having Reaſon to hope that upon his Refuſal, he ſhould obtain it, as he afterwards did. The Doctor kept it ſome Time in Suſpenſe, being willing to ſee whether the King's Declaration could be got to paſs into a Law; which they had great Encouragements given them to expect, and which would have gone a great Way towards uniting the principal Parties in the Nation, and laying the Foundations of a laſting Peace.

Life of Dr. Barwick, Eng. 8vo. p. 300.

When the right honourable the Counteſs Dowager of Derby deſired Dr. Barwick to give up the Right he had to the Biſhoprick of the Iſle of Man; ſince as ſhe ſaid, he might hope for better Preferment from his Majeſty, and her Ladyſhip was very deſirous, if he would give Way, to prefer her Chaplain Mr. Samuel Rutter to that Dioceſe, Dr. Barwick readily comply'd with her Requeſt, much rejoyced that it was in his Power to oblige ſo great a Perſon.

Note of the Editor of Dr. Barwick's Life in Engliſh, p. 300.

Mr. Sacheverel in his Account of the Iſle of Man (p. 118.) tells us, Mr. Rutter was ſworn Biſhop Anno 1661. That he had been Archdeacon of Man, and governed the Church with great Prudence during the late Wars: That he was a Man of exemplary Goodneſs and Moderation, and ſate Biſhop to the Year 1663. and was then ſucceeded by Dr. Iſaac Barrow, afterwards Biſhop of St. Aſaph, and thereupon obſerves Mr. Wood's Miſtake, who (Athen. Oxon. Vol. II. p. 658.) makes that See to have lain void from the Death of Biſhop Par (which happened in the Time of the Uſurpation, to the Year 1662. and Dr. Barrow to have been the firſt Biſhop there after the Reſtaurarion, [which Miſtake is follow'd by Mr. Le Neve.]

A great and good Example for the Deans of Cathedral Churches, in Piety, Charity, Hoſpitality, and all good Works.

And indeed that Cathedral ſtood in the utmoſt need of ſuch a Dean and Chapter; for beſides the common Sacrilege of the Engliſh Enthuſiaſts, whereby all the Churches, eſpecially the Cathedrals, were almoſt ruined; that of Durham had moreover frequently felt the deadly Hands of the Scots, and ſuffer'd more ſeverely from the Conquered than from the Conquerours: For by Cromwell's Order, the Scotch Priſoners taken at Dunbar Fight were confin'd in this auguſt

Dr. John Barwick, that uſeful Agent and frequent Sufferer for the Royal Cauſe, declining to accept the Biſhoprick of Carliſle, was by his Majeſty promoted to the Deanery of Durham (which had been vacant ſome Time on the Death of Dr. William Fuller, which happen'd May 12, 1659.) He took Poſſeſſion of this Deanery on the Feaſt of All-Saints 1660. reſerving to himſelf out of the late Biſhop's Munificence only the Rectory of Houghton, diſtant from Durham but four Miles, leſt he ſhould ſeem to be too much wanting to the Care of Souls, for which he was firſt initiated into Holy Orders. At Durham he enjoy'd a very large Revenue, wherewith he both repaired the publick Buildings ſacrilegiouſly ruin'd, and relieved the Poor, and kept Hoſpitality, entertaining Strangers of all Ranks, not delicately indeed (which he never affected) yet handſomely and generouſly. But above all Things his chief Care was, that God's moſt pure Worſhip ſhould be celebrated with the utmoſt Decency (which by the Rage of the Fanaticks had been long aboliſhed both at Durham and Houghton) and that a Biſhop ſhould be choſen for the Conſolation of the Widow Church. His next Concern was, that all the prebendal Houſes, and eſpecially the decay'd Fabrick of the Cathedral, ſhould not only be every Way ſecur'd againſt the Injuries of the Weather, but alſo embelliſhed with ſuch Ornaments, as became the Houſe of God. He took Care likewiſe to erect a Grammar School from the Ground, and make it a Nurſery of good Literature. He brought auguſt Sanctuary, and to preſerve themſelves from the Cold of the Winter, they had been forc'd to make Fires of all the Wood-Work therein, which they were able to pull down, ibid. Life of Dr. Barwick, p. 304.

Col. Birch had perſuaded Mr Baxter to take the Biſhoprick of Hereford, with an ill Purpoſe for his own Intereſt.

brought Water into the College to ſupply the Occaſions of all the Prebendaries Houſes. He took upon himſelf with great Readineſs and Affection, and with a moſt holy Zeal, both to bring all the Officers of the Church under good Diſcipline, and to a regular Life, and to augment the Stipends and Salaries of the poorer Sort, not only of the Mother Church, but of all the Churches which depended upon it.

A little before the Meeting about the King's Declaration, Colonel Birch came to me as from the Lord Chancellor, to perſuade me to take the Biſhoprick of Hereford (for he had bought the Biſhop's Houſe at Whitbourne, and thought to make a better Bargain with me than with another, and therefore finding, that the Lord Chancellor intended me the Offer of one, he deſired it might be that) I thought it beſt to give them no poſitive Denial, till I ſaw the utmoſt of their Intents: And I perceived that Colonel Birch came privately, that a Biſhoprick might not be publickly refuſed, and to try whether I would accept it, that elſe it might not be offered me; for he told me, that they would not bear ſuch a Repulſe. I told him, that I was reſolved never to be Biſhop of Hereford, and that I did not think I ſhould ever ſee Cauſe to take any Biſhoprick, but I could give no poſitive Anſwer, till I ſaw the King's Reſolutions about the Way of Church Government: For if the old Dioceſan Frame continued, he knew we could never accept or own it. After this (having not a flat Denial) he came again and again to Dr. Reynolds, Mr. Calamy, and myſelf together, to importune us all to accept the Offer (for the Biſhoprick of Norwich was offered Dr. Reynolds, and Coventry and Lichfield to Mr. Calamy) but he had no poſitive Anſwer, but the ſame from me as before.

And yet when now by Right and Law reſtored, the Intruders were taught to cry out of Perſecution, only becauſe every honeſt Man had his own again.

Upon reſtoring the ſequeſtred loyal Clergy to their ſeveral Preferments, into which other irregular Men had intruded, and were now juſtly removed to make Way for the former Incumbents; Reference was had to a printed Letter of Godfrey Goodman, deprived Biſhop of Glocester, to his Excellency my Lord Oliver Cromwell, Lord General, &c. prefixed to his Diſcourſe of the two Myſteries of Chriſtian Religion, the ineffable Trinity, and the wonderful Incarnation, 1653. 4^to^.

——I have been now five Years petitioning, if at length by your Lordſhip's good Favour I might prevail, you ſhould for ever oblige me; that either I might know my Offence, or otherwiſe that I might have ſome Means (of mine own) to ſubſiſt.——And I will likewiſe make this Motion in behalf of my Brethren the Clergy, that what hath been violently taken from them, their Cauſe never heard, or what a Committee hath done, being no Court of Record, and their Power laſting only during the Parliament, that Men upon ſlight Pretences might not looſe their Freeholds, to the great Prejudice of the Liberties and Laws of this Nation; and that Sequeſtrations, which are but for a Time, might not be continued for ever, contrary to their own Nature; but that Men upon Submiſſion and Satisfaction might be reſtored to their own Poſſeſſions, until ſome juſt Cauſe be ſhewed to the Contrary in a legal Way. Hereby your Lordſhip ſhall do God good Service, and diſcharge your own Conſcience, you ſhall for ever engage them, and give an earneſt of your Juſtice and Compaſſion.

SATURDAY Nov. 3.
Inſtallation of Dr. Gilbert Sheldon, Lord Biſhop of London.

Publick Intelligence, N°. 45.

This Morning the Right Reverend Father in God Gilbert Lord Biſhop of London, was inſtall'd by Proxy in that famous Cathedral of St. Paul in London. The Inſtallation was perform'd (according to ancient Cuſtom) within the great Choir, by Virtue of a Mandate from the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, directed as of Courſe to Dr. George Hall, Archdeacon of Canterbury, (Son to Joſeph late Lord Biſhop of Norwich) who there attended the Solemnity, and inſtall'd that moſt reverend and worthy Doctor Nicholas Dean of St. Paul's, the Lord Biſhop's Proxy, and (which we cannot forget) the ſame ancient Chair or See, which ſo long had ſtood in this great Cathedral, till by the Iniquity of theſe Times it was pull'd down and thrown aſide, was preſerv'd to this Day for its ancient and ſacred Uſe, and reſtored to the Place where it formerly ſtood (when the Organs and reſt of that famous Choir were broken and imbezzell'd) ſo as the Chair itself seems to have been this Day inſtall'd, and the Biſhop preſerved to ſettle this buſy and populous Dioceſs, as his moſt reverend Predeceſſor the whole Province, and whoever conſiders the Archbiſhop, the Biſhop, the Dean, and the Archdeacon, muſt confeſs this was a moſt worthy Inſtallation.

Dr. Gauden Dean of Bocking.

Hollingworth's Defence againſt Dr. Walker, 4to.

Dr. Richard Hollingworth (who lived long in Eſſex) told the World, that Dr. Gauden was preſented to the Living of Bocking in 1641, and (ſays he) as I am well informed, he had his firſt Preſentation from the Parliament, but not looking upon it as a ſafe Hold for ſo great and reputable a Benefice, he by the Interceſſion of Friends at laſt procured a Preſentation from Archbiſhop Laud the rightful Patron to it, then in the Tower. [But in Truth he was not Dean of Bocking in 1641. nor till 1643. the more likely he came in by the Parliament Intereſt, nor does it appear his Title was ever confirm'd. One Richard Colebrand ſucceeded him at Bocking by Royal Preſentation, Decemb. 7. 1660.]

His ſeveral Writings publiſh'd in this one Year.

In this buſy Year he was the Author and Editor of a great many Tracts in Defence of the Church of England; as

I. A Sermon preached at the Funeral of Dr. Ralph Brownrig, Biſhop of Exeter, December 17. 1659. With Memoirs of his Life. — London, 1660, 8vo.

II, Slight healing of publick Hearts, &c. A Sermon in St. Paul's Cathedral before the Lord Mayor, &c. Feb. 26. 1659. being a Day of ſolemn Thankſgiving unto God for reſtoring of the ſecluded Members of Parliament to the Houſe of Commons. — London, 1660. 4to.

III. God's great Demonſtration and Demands of Juſtice, Mercy, &c. on Micah vi. 8. before the honourable Houſe of Commons, at their ſolemn Faſt before their firſt Sitting, Apr. 30. 1660. — London, 1660. 4to.

IV. Certain Scruples and Doubts of Conſcience about taking the ſolemn League and Covenant, tendered to the Conſideration of Sir Laurence Bromfield and Zach. Crofton. — Printed 1643. re-publiſh'd 1660. 4to.

V. Anti-Sacrilegus: Or a Defenſative againſt the Plauſibleneſs or gilded Poiſon of that nameleſs Paper (ſuppoſed to be the Plot of Dr. Cornelius Burgeſs and his Partners) which attempts the King's Majeſty by the Offer of five hundred thouſand Pounds, to make good by an Act of Parliament to the Purchaſers of Biſhops, &c. Lands, their illegal Bargain for ninety nine Years. — London, 1660. 4to.

VI. The Looſing of St. Peter's Bonds, ſetting forth the true Senſe and Solution of the Covenant in Point of Conſcience. — London, 1660. 4to.

VII. Analyſis of the Covenant, or reſolving it to Law and Juſtice, to Reaſon and Religion. — London, 1660, 4to.

VIII. Anti-Baal-Berith: Or the binding of the Covenant and all Covenanters to their good Behaviour. By a just Vindication of Dr. Gauden's Analysis, against the Calumny of a nameless and shameless Libeller the worthy Hyperaſpiſtes of Dr. Burges. Alſo againſt the pitiful Cavils and Objections of Mr. Zach. Crofton, a rigid Preſbyter. With an Anſwer to that monſtrous Paradox of no Sacrilege nor Sin to alienate Church Lands, without and againſt all Laws of God and Man.

London, 1660. 4to.

IX. Conſiderations touching the Liturgy of the Church of England in Reference to his Majeſty's late Declaration; and in Order to an happy Union in Church and State. By John Gauden, D. D. Biſhop elect of Exeter.

London, for J. Playford, 1660. 4to.

Biſhop Gauden commends the Candour of Mr. Baxter in approving the Common-Prayer.

—— P. 33. I cannot but commend the Candour, Juſtice and Ingenuity of Mr. Baxter, who lately profeſſed to me, that he ſaw nothing in the Liturgy which might not well bear a good Conſtruction if Men looked upon it as became Chriſtians with Eyes of Charity. —— P. 39. I have heard it from others, and find it myſelf, that many aged poor People being now aſked very eaſy Queſtions of their Faith, ſince the long Diſuſe of the Liturgy, the Catechiſm, and other plain Principles of Religion, as Creed, Commandments, and Lord's-Prayer, have confeſſed they had forgot what heretofore they could have given ſome good Account of, &c.

His Majeſty's late Declaration, was but a temporary Condeſcenſion.

The Conſiderations begin thus: It is not to be doubted by any but thoſe who are either ignorant of his Majeſty's native Clemency and Chriſtian Charity, or Enemies to his and all our Tranquillity, that his Majeſty's Deſign in that indulgent Declaration was not to ſhew any Diſaffection or Diſeſteem in his Majeſty toward the ancient and excellent Liturgy of the Church of England, which was his Companion and Comfort in all his Diſtreſſes, and which ſtill is the daily Rule and Meaſure of his Majeſty's publick Devotions. —— But this temporary Condeſcenſion was only in order to compoſe at preſent the Minds of all his good Subjects to ſome calm and chriſtian Temper, until ſuch further Expedients might be applied by his Majeſty's Wiſdom and Charity, as ſhould not only allay former civil Differences, but wholly remove the uncomfortable Diſſenſions of his loyal Subjects of the Church of England, in ſo great a Concern as that is of Religion, &c.

To which a rude Anſwer was given.

Rhetorick reſtrained: Or Dr. John Gauden, Lord Biſhop Elect of Exeter, his Conſiderations of the Liturgy of the Church of England conſidered and clouded. By Thomas Bolde, Exon. Atteſted by Zach. Crofton, Preſbyter.

London, for Tho. Parkhurſt, 1660. 4to.

Beginning.] Reverend Sir, For ſo I can and will call you in Point of good Manners, though Reverend Father in God, with a May it pleaſe your Grace, I decline as a Title which hath in it aliquid Antichriſti, &c.

X. Counſel delivered to forty four Preſbyters and Deacons after they had been ordained, by John Lord Biſhop of Exeter in his Cathedral Church, January 13. 1660.
